THE proposed amendment to the constitution to permit the national government to levy an income tax received another blow on April 7, when the Committee on Federal Relations of the Massachusetts Legislature voted against it. The committee stood eight to three against the amendment. The State thus reserves to itself the power of taxing incomes within its jurisdiction. Judging from the State newspapers the defeat of the amendment will be popular.

. . .

AN insurrection has broken out in the northern provinces of Turkey, the warlike Albanians having taken the field in considerable numbers and attacking exposed Turkish garrisons. At first they carried everything before them, but additional Turkish troops were rushed to the front and in a battle at Ipek the Albanians were defeated with heavy loss. What effect it will have on the other discontented races under Turkish rule can not be foreseen. The Albanians hope some day to have a mountain kingdom of their own and follow the example of Bulgaria. Turkey will probably be careful not to push its advantage too far, as at present it wishes to have peace in order to develop its resources and gain the respect of Europe.

. . .

—ONE of the most interesting banquets ever given with a literary flavor, took place in London when the people assembled around the tables were the children or relatives of famous British poets. Over two hundred were present. Lord Coleridge presided, and among those present were Lord Lytton, descendent of Bulwer Lytton, Lady Shelley, another name illustrious in British letters; Lady Lindsay and Mrs. Henry Reeves. The guests made interesting speeches and gave recitations. Quite a number of the guests have done work which is of more than ordinary merit, disposing of the idea that genius is never hereditary, or that the sons and descendents of great men never do anything to add to the family laurels.

. . .

—WHEN the flag was broken out on the staff of the battleship Delaware at the Norfolk Navy Yard, the most powerful vessel in our fleet was for the first time in commission. Captain Charles Gove, U.S.N., formally took command of the ship, reading his orders from Washington at the brief ceremony. The Delaware will not put to sea for some months as some alterations are to be made. She carries ten twelve-inch guns and will have a crew of nearly one thousand. Her displacement is five thousand tons greater than the battleship Michigan, the first of our "all-big-gun" ships. The Delaware is of the famous Dreadnought type which has caused so many changes in the navies of the world in the last few years. In fact, the Delaware is more powerful than the Dreadnought.

. . .

—GRIM-VISAGED war has awakened after a brief sleep in South America and will probably be the arbiter of the trouble now at an acute stage, unless something now unforeseen intervenes before the troops of two nations clash. Both countries are at a white heat of enthusiasm for war over the disputed boundary line which is the cause of the trouble. King Alfonso some time ago consented to act as arbitrator and the case is still before him, but the Ecuadorians are impatient at the delay in settlement and have been rioting before the consulate of Peru at Guayaquil, and the Peruvian consul was compelled to take refuge with the American consul. Later he escaped from the city, and the American consul took charge of Peruvian affairs. President Alfaro received an offer from General Bustamante, of Colombia, offering five thousand troops to assist Ecuador in a war with Peru. Chile has a dispute also over the boundary lines of two provinces, so that there is a prospect of three countries attacking Peru. The army of Peru is under arms at its full fighting strength. The small navies of Peru and Ecuador are preparing for action. The armies number about 4,000 each, but the militia of Ecuador is said to be larger than that of its antagonist.

. . .

—SUNNY ITALY with its smiling skies, its literary and artistic shrines, and its wonderful buildings of a by-gone day, is becoming more and more popular with wealthy Americans as a place of brief residence, while the tourists are numbered by the tens of thousands who feel they must see the Eternal City, wander over the bridges at Florence, and feed the pigeons of St. Mark's in Venice. The pigeons of St. Mark's are the aristocracy of birdland. They are not compelled to fly hither and thither about the countryside in search of food, for citizens and tourists alike love to scatter tidbits about the historic square and see the white and gray flock come soaring down from palace roofs and cathedral dome with a whirr of swiftly beating wings.

So tame are they that they will mount upon one's shoulder and take food from the stranger's hand; fear is not in their make-up, eradicated as it has been by kindness to countless generations of their ancestors. They add wonderfully to the old world picture and the place would lose much of its charm if they should fly away forever, as it would if the lion of St. Mark should jump into the lagoon, or the gondolas should give away entirely to the fussy little steam launches, which, modern as they are, seem strangely out of place; the only noise allowed to disturb the serenity of things should be the cooing of the pigeons, for the launches are new, while the birds have been in Venice since the days she was mistress of the Adriatic.

AMONG THE WORKERS

—GRACE HILDEBRAND, the Gospel Nightingale, has been singing the songs of salvation to great audiences in Massey Hall, Toronto, Can.

—A. H. LEO, of the Porto Rico Dispensary Association, writes: "The news of Dr. Klopsch's passing brings sorrow to all who are anxious for the coming Kingdom. He was certainly a master workman in God's vineyard."

CARTER'S
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
QUALITY KNIT
UNDERWEAR

Elegant fabrics with fine invisible ...s. Pure sterilized white garments ...de by no other manufacturer. ...perly designed, carefully made, ...quisitely finished. Garments which ...ll satisfy anyone in quality and price.

"Quality-Knit and Quality Fit"

Made in union and two-piece suits for women and children. Union suits for men. Also infants' shirts and bands; silk, wool and cotton.

For sale by nearly all first-class dealers. Refuse substitutes.

The William Carter Co.

...k for the "ARTER" ...de-Mark

78 Main Street
Needham Heights, Mass.

Note.—Would you like to see how we finish our garments for women, misses and children? If so, send us the name of this magazine, and your name and address, and we will send you some beautiful samples.

...hese Four Aprons $1
...rom Maker to You

All Charges Prepaid

We give you four very dainty aprons at less than the material would cost you. Even at the most sensational sales in the great New York department stores such apron value readily brings $2.00. They come to you direct from a large factory, less the jobber's and retailer's profit, at four for $1.00.

All 4 Aprons for $1

Fine Fast Color Gingham Mother Hubbard, 48 in. long, 50 in. wide, 1 pocket. Covers entire body.

Fine Fast Color Gingham Skirt Apron, 38 in. long, 54 in. wide, 1 pocket. Covers entire skirt.

White Lawn Apron, 38 in. long, 50 in. wide, hemstitched pocket and hem.

Round Dotted Swiss Tea Apron, hemstitched pocket and hem

These aprons are exactly as described and will be sent to you on an absolute guarantee of satisfaction or your money will be cheerfully refunded.

All Charges Prepaid

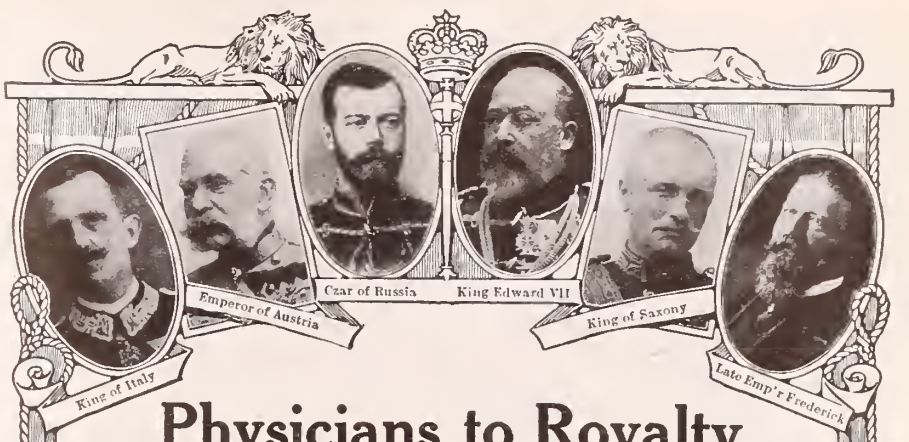
CONSUMER'S APRON CO.,
61 Clymer Street, Brooklyn, New York

HUSTLING AMBITIOUS SALESWOMEN WANTED

...clusive sale in your own territory of a newly ...signed adjustable petticoat, that sells on sight. ...is is a strictly business proposition from ...large manufacturing concern to women ...o want to earn big money. No others ...ed apply.

...e give and require first class references; write ...once for particulars to

...JZERNE SKIRT CO., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.



Physicians to Royalty Endorse the Sovereign Food Tonic

King Edward's Physician

Dr. Ernest Ott, Marienbad: "I have been using Sanatogen for a number of years in my practice with excellent results. These results have been notably good in the case of elderly people when it was desirable to build up the strength, to stimulate the bodily functions, and to improve the circulation of the blood."

The Czar of Russia's Private Physician

Dr. Ferchmin: "My daughter, who was very nervous and anaemic, has been greatly benefitted by the prolonged use of Sanatogen. Her appetite improved, her weight increased, and the color of her skin became healthier."

The King of Italy's Physician

Dr. G. Quirico: "I have used Sanatogen with marked benefit in the case of weakly children, and in convalescence after long illnesses. I consider Sanatogen a most excellent tonic food."

HEALTH of the monarch is of national—even universal—importance. His care is one of the nation's heaviest responsibilities. His medical advisor is always a man of highest scientific attainments and strictest integrity, who endorses only those preparations which, beyond a shadow of doubt are safe and beneficial.

Here is the written opinion of the physicians to six of Europe's most influential rulers upon that wonderful brain and body revitalizer—

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

These eminent authorities endorse Sanatogen because there investigations have satisfied them that it is the scientific and worthy preparation for tired, worn-out nerves and debilitated, overworked bodies—a wonderful source of strength and endurance. And their endorsement but voices the sentiments of more than 12,000 practising physicians the world over. Such proof must be conclusive that Sanatogen is the logical food tonic for you.

The King of Saxony's Private Physician

Surgeon General Prof. Dr. Tillmanns: "I am, and shall always be, a great admirer of Sanatogen."

The Late Emperor Frederic's Private Physician

Professor Tobold, M. D.: "My experience points to the fact that patients suffering from nervous exhaustion after influenza, a common occurrence, and who present the troublesome symptoms of neurasthenia, by using Sanatogen, in a comparatively short time regain strength and vitality."

Emperor of Austria's Private Physician

Surgeon General Dr. Kerzl, of Vienna: "I have been using Sanatogen with splendid results and recommended it continually and everywhere because I am thoroughly convinced that it is an excellent food-tonic."

Send for Dr. C. W. Saleeby's Book, "The Will To Do."

This internationally famous physician-writer has published an exceedingly interesting book, "The Will To Do," a copy of which we want to send you with our compliments. It tells some surprisingly new things about the strenuous life we lead and the important relation of the nervous system to our entire existence. It lays down some new rules for health and hygiene and will afford you an interesting and instructive half hour's reading. We will mail you a free copy on request.

Get Sanatogen from your druggist—if not obtainable from him, write

THE BAUER CHEMICAL CO., Everett Building, Fourth Ave., New York

EARN 5%

on your savings. They should yield as large a return as consistent with safety.

Deposited with our Company, they are free from speculation while earning 5 per cent. every day left in our care. The security back of them is of the very best—Selected mortgages upon New York and Suburban Real Estate. Earnings are remitted by check quarterly, semi-annually or compounded if desired. We have never paid less than 5 per cent for 17 years,

ASSETS over - $2,000,000
SURPLUS and PROFITS, 150,000
Under Supervision of New York Banking Dept.

The Industrial is a strong, progressive, carefully managed Savings Institution that merits your investigation. Write for booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings and Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d Street and Broadway
New York

OLD-MADE NEW

Old sewing machines run like new—new ones STAY new if oiled with 3-IN-ONE. It's the best sewing machine oil on earth—goes right into the mechanism—spreads evenly over all bearings—reduces friction—prevents wear—stops rattle—will not dry out, cake, gum or collect dust, contains no grease or acid—polishes wooden case and prevents rust on every metal part. 3-IN-ONE will save your machine, your nerves and your strength. Try it.

FREE Write us at once. Give name of your dealer. Get sample bottle and 3-IN-ONE dictionary FREE. A Library Slip in every package.

3-IN-ONE OIL COMPANY
54 Broadway New York City

...ngrain Tapestry Velvet RUGS Sizes 6x9 to 11x15 $1.90

Axminster, Body-Brussels, Wilton to $60.00

We have made rugs for a quarter-century, and sell direct to you at mill prices—no dealer's profit to pay on

Hancock Rugs

Beautiful designs, best materials, large variety. Money back if not satisfactory. Send today for catalogue showing the rugs in actual colors and telling how we pay the freight.

Hancock Rug Mills, Dept. E, Phila.

AGENTS—My Sanitary Coffee and Tea Maker produces a pure, sweet cup. Needs no ...ttler nor strainer and ...ever wears out. Saves tea ...nd coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight. New inventions. Send 15c for 50c size of either, postpaid, or will send sample of both for 25c. Without question the two best selling articles ever invented. Order both.

COFFEE MAKER

TEA MAKER

Dr. Lyons, 1480 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

Save Steps between kitchen and dining room. One trip with Wheel Tray sets table. Another clears it. Stands beside table for serving. Beside sink while washing dishes. Price $10, exp. paid. Circular

WHEEL TRAY CO., 435 C West 61st Place, Chicago, Ill

This Charming Lawn Dress

95c.

We prepay postage

A remarkable offering of a very pretty dress at a wonderfully low price. We want to send you our free Style Catalog No. 66; that is why we make this great offer.

One-Piece Dress

of striped lawn, white background with black stripes, or white background with light blue stripes; collar and cuffs are edged with plain colored lawn; a broad strap of plain lawn gives a pretty yoke effect and 6 self-covered buttons extend in two rows to a fastened belt of similar material; dress fastens invisibly in back; the wide skirt has two-inch hem.

Bust measure, 32 to 44 inches. All skirt lengths are 40 inches

If you do not think that this is the very finest dress ever sold at this price return to us at our expense and we will at once refund your money.

Send for our great free Catalog No. 66 to-day; it is full of wonderful values like the above.

A 472.—THIS DRESS IS 95 CENTS

Martin's Fulton St. Brooklyn NEW YORK CITY

Established 14 years

EAT JUNKET

THE greatest food in the world for children. Made with milk, flavored to taste, delights and nourishes the little ones.

AS A DESSERT

Served with Lady Fingers and Jelly, with Custard, Chocolates, or Whipped Cream.

It makes the finest Ice Cream.

Can be made in five minutes, and you are prepared for the unexpected guest.

Inexpensive—Convenient—Delicious.

10 JUNKET Tablets for 10 Desserts—10c

FREE Two JUNKET Tablets; two JUNKET Buttermilk Tablets; Book of Valuable Recipes and Treatise on JUNKET.

Write today. Mention your grocer, and above will be sent prepaid.

Chr. Hansen's Laboratory
200 Hansen Ave, Little Falls, New York

PENNANTS, 20c.

In your colors, size 9 x 18, four letters or figures; best quality felt—either of above styles. Postage 2c.

COLLEGE CAPS, 50c.

Best quality, satin lining. Black, blue, red, gray or in your college colors; any combination. Also one to four initials or numbers in colors.

SWEATERS, $1.00

Splendid-wearing, heavy-weight gray sweater coats with block letters or numbers in your colors. One letter free, additional letters 10c. each. state chest measurement, and we'll fit you.

Buy direct from us and save half. Agents Wanted.

Park Pennant Co., 1,500 Susquehanna Ave., Phila.

YOU CAN WRITE A SHORT STORY Beginners learn so thoroughly under our perfect method of training that many are able to sell their stories before they complete the course. We also help those who want a market for their stories. Write for particulars School of Short Story Writing, 44 Page Building, Chicago

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c. Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD. Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

What Science Says of Alcohol

By Rev. C. H. Mead, D.D., Editor "National Temperance Advocate"

THIS is an age in the history of the temperance reform when science comes to the front, turning her X-rays upon alcohol, and shows just what it is. With unerring certainty it seeks to focus the eyes of the world upon this poison, and proclaims it to be an enemy deserving nothing short of destruction and death. Up to within a few years men have looked upon the effects of drink, and turned away with disgust, while the State has built refuges in which to punish the victims and get them out of the public eye. Science now steps forward, calls the attention away from results and fixes it upon the cause, and says: "Behold in alcohol a deadly enemy. It has no redeeming feature. It strikes at every vital organ in the human body and leaves it worse than it found it. It creates an appetite for itself, that it may more surely do its work, and attacks the mental, moral and physical powers at one and the same time. It deceives its victim into believing that it will cool him in the heat of summer, and warm him in the cold of winter. It points the way from virtue to vice, and marks out the road to the jail, the workhouse, the prison, and the gallows. It breaks down the will power and laughs at its slave as he tries to break his chains."

Rev. C. H. Mead

Thus speaks science, and it is encouraging to note that many of the daily papers and most of the religious journals are giving voice and wings to the utterances of some of the leading scientists and physicians of the world. Many of the latter say alcohol has no virtue as a medicine, and have excluded it from their practice. In a recent article by Woods Hutchinson, A.M., M.D., he makes the following points worth heeding:

"No human being ever developed an instinct or natural liking for alcoholic drinks.

"Alcohol is a toxin or poison, produced by one germ to destroy another.

"The seeming improvement in one's physical condition that alcohol sometimes produces is wholly imaginary, and due merely to a deadening of the nerves.

"While the taking of true foods produces a sense of satiety, alcohol produces only an appetite with no natural or self-acting limitations.

"Is it reasonable to conceive that a drug which has an unvarying tendency to exaggerate and increase all that is worst in us, can possibly have an improving and strengthening influence upon our higher powers and tendencies?"

We could quote from hundreds of leading men, did space permit. Let the voice of science be heard and heeded. Let the truth be thundered from the pulpit, and in burning words taught to the youth in the Sunday and public schools. Draw the prohibitory line, not simply at the threshold of the saloon, the brewery and distillery, but also at the door of the "house beautiful."

The State commits a crime against herself when she legalizes the manufacture and sale of such a deadly foe. Let the voice of science be heard in Legislative Hall and Executive Chamber.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

—NINE bills have been introduced in the present session opening up Indian lands to settlement. In all these there is a paragraph providing that these lands shall be under prohibition for twenty-five years.

* * *

—THE Prohibition Zone Bill passed the Senate several weeks ago and is now in the Indian Affairs Committee of the House. It provides for a zone of twenty-five miles around Indian reservations, etc., to be under Federal prohibition against the introduction and sale of liquors.

* * *

—SENATOR GALLINGER introduced amendments to the Statehood Bill, providing for a plebiscite on the Prohibition question in Arizona and New Mexico. Upon the advent of Statehood, this guarantees this boon to those people without the trouble, time and expense of a campaign to secure it.

* * *

—SECRETARY OF WAR DICKINSON has followed the example of General Frederick Dent Grant in making a public declaration of total abstinence. He writes: "I believe in everything that encourages voluntary abstinence, both within and without the army. The man who abstains is better qualified to be a useful and law-abiding citizen and to promote his own happiness and that of his family and friends. One of the greatest burdens upon our country is that of crime which is the direct result of drink. When the Romans achieved their greatest success they were water-drinkers."

* * *

—A SCIENTIFIC test was recently made with a number of alcoholic families. Only 17 per cent. of the children proved normal as against 85.5 per cent. of the children of families who did not use alcoholic drinks. Epileptics, the feeble-minded, the blind and the deformed were found to be frequent results of alcoholic marriages. Fully 40 per cent. of the paupers in almshouses come there through drunkenness.

* * *

Famous Temperance Sayings

—TEMPERANCE is the universal medicine of life.—Sir W. Temple.

—TEMPERANCE is the parent of all noble qualities.—South.

—WHERE temperance fails, education fails.—Horace Mann.

—Do lions and cart-horses need ale to make them strong?—Sydney Smith.

—TEMPERANCE is the preservation of divine order in the body.—Theodore Parker.

—TEMPERANCE gives you command of your head, secures your health, and keeps you in condition for business.—Jeremy Collier.

"THE COLD STORAGE EG[G]"

It is Still Doing Business Notwithsting Investigation by Legislatures a Grand Juries and the Prices o Meats Are Higher Than Ever.

A New York grand jury has found t indictments against the cold storage con which is said to have "cornered" the s of poultry and eggs. But the "cold st egg" goes right on doing business jus same. Both houses of Congress are in gating the increased cost of foods, bu prices of meats continue to soar highe higher. Just a few days ago an advan 3½ cents a pound on the price of bee announced in Chicago, while the price of reached the highest point recorded sinc civil war.

The investigation has resulted in the merry-go-round so often depicted b newspaper cartoonists. Each one poi his neighbor and says "He is to blame.'

While all this is going on, the consur helpless. He is getting the worst of it. grocery and meat bills are soaring sky but his wages have not advanced along the increased cost of living. Fortunate him he can get along at this time of the without beef, pork, storage eggs or f poultry. The man who has a few hens own who are laying real eggs and has a supply of Shredded Wheat Biscuit i house is probably the most independen zen to be found in this free republic of It is a wise man who gets his own eggs his own hens and who knows the nut value of Shredded Wheat Biscuit. though he has no chickens or eggs, but k the nutritive value of Shredded Whea can be independent of the beef trust poultry trust, the cold storage eggs and a other food combines, for a Shredded W Biscuit actually contains more real b building nutriment than beef or eggs, is more wholesome, more easily digested of course, costs much less. It is alway same price, always clean, always whole and nourishing. Being made in biscuit it makes delicious combinations with fr preserved fruits or with creamed veget Persons who know Shredded Wheat B and the many nourishing and inexpe dishes that can be made with it will no it any hardship to do without meat o during the Spring or Summer months.

Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits heat the oven and served with hot milk and a cream will supply all the strength-g nutriment needed for a half day's work. it for ten days and notice the difference

ENDURING

AS THE

PYRAMIDS II MEMORIAL

TO PERPETUATE TH MEMORY OF THOS LOVED AND HONORED. EVERLASTING MONUMEI ARE PARTICULARLY PROPRIATE • MORE BEA FUL THAN MARBL MODERATE IN COST • DE IN A WIDE RANGE O SIZES AND DESIGN DELIVERED ANYWHE WRITE FOR DESIGNS, DESCRI AND PRICES • STATE APPR IMATE SIZE OR VALU REPRESENTATIVES WAN IN EVERY COMMUNIT

MONUMENTAL BRONZE COMPANY.
355 A HOWARD AVENUE-BRIDGEPORT, CONN

Don't Buy An Organ

too hastily. That is, don't bu til you have money enough t a good one. To buy a cheap o where a little more would g Estey would be almost like th ing money away. You'd hav whole thing to do over again

Address Estey Brattleboro

Bennett Portable Typewriter

Guaranteed One Year $18

SOLD ON APPROVAL

THIS wonderful new typewriter, at one-sixth the cost, with one-tenth the number of parts, does the same work as expensive machines with quickness, neatness and ease.

The Bennett is a portable, visible-writing, ink-ribbon typewriter; standard keyboard; light, simple, speedy, compact, strong. In neat case, size only 2x5x11 inches, weight only 4½ pounds. Made from best materials by experts.

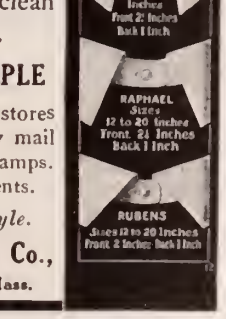
Send Name and Address for free illustrated catalog and sample of writing.

Don't pay more than $18 for a typewriter until you know the Bennett. Don't pay less than $100 unless you buy a Bennett.

Agents wanted for a few unfilled territories.

P. D. BENNETT TYPEWRITER COMPANY,
366 Broadway, New York, U. S. A.

"Linene" REVERSIBLE COLLARS CUFFS AND BOSOMS



Two in One

Linene collars have two wearing sides for the price of one collar. They can be reversed instantly, and a clean surface presented.

SEND FOR SAMPLE

10 collars at the stores for 25 cents, or by mail 30 cents in U. S. stamps. Sample by mail 6 cents.

State Size and Style.

Reversible Collar Co.,
Dept. T, Boston, Mass.

GET THIS BOOK

Send us your name and address and we will mail free, this absorbing treatise, "Electricity as a Remedy," written by a graduate physician of life-long experience. He tells what electricity does, its effects and offers the safest, cheapest, best method of home application, and cites many instances successfully treated by it.

Wizard Wireless

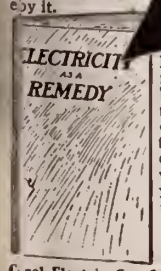
THIS BOOK WILL HELP YOU — IT'S FREE



Every person whether interested or not should read this enlightening book on so important and vital a subject as "Electricity as a Remedy." If afflicted in any way, or a friend to one afflicted, get this book and learn whether electricity can help. If it can you ought to know. You will read the book with profit in any case. Sent free, prepaid, anywhere. Write NOW, while you think of it. Don't delay until you forget.

Genesee Sales Co.
Suite 363, 211 Lake St., CHICAGO
General Electric Co., 36 Adelaide St. W., Toronto, Can.

AGENTS—$33.30 A WEEK

Why not make it? Jack Wood did it! He writes—"Harry up 100 more—sold first lot in 2 days—best seller I ever saw." Hundreds of agents coining money—$5.60 worth of tools for one price of one. Wonderful invention—drop forged from finest steel. Nickel Plated all over. Astonishing low price to agents—1,200 ordered by one man. Get our liberal and confidential proposition quick. Sample free—don't delay—experience not needed—write at once.
THOMAS MFG. CO., 2124 Wayne St., DAYTON, OHIO

EMPOWERING FOR TESTIMONY*

NO stronger illustration of the power of the Spirit to inspire the common man to extraordinary achievements has ever been presented than that of D. L. Moody.

Born of a poor family; denied any but the merest rudiments of education; compelled to work hard during his early manhood for a bare living, Mr. Moody yet became the most eloquent and successful of modern evangelists. No one cared that his speech was uncultured, or that his manners were unpolished. The love of God, the burning zeal for the unsaved, so pervaded his every thought and word, that men were swayed by him as by a magician. It was as plain a revelation of the gift of the Holy Spirit as history has ever presented.

Good news is generally welcomed with joy. Alas, the Gospel message is often received in a far different spirit.

It is computed that there are more than 13,000,000 young men in our nation, of whom only 1,000,000 are Christians, while 7,000,000 never enter a church.

What a field for the preacher! Yet how many of us ever go out of our way to speak to these young men? We have glad tidings for them—the greatest help to purity and peace and happiness that earth affords—and yet they often do not wish to hear of it, and we are afraid or careless, and do not tell them. Let us pray for the bestowal of the spirit of power. God has given it to others, and he stands ready to give it to us.

Paul Gilbert tells of an unconverted friend of his named Porter to whom he had often wished to speak, "but no words would come."

"At last a revival broke out. Porter professed himself a follower of Christ. The crowd was going out. I pushed aside the chairs and was soon beside my friend. 'I am proud of you,' I said. He didn't seem pleased. 'Wait a minute,' he said. 'I want to speak to you outside.' When we were there he said, 'You're the fellow that would have let me go to ruin. Do you remember one Sunday afternoon when we were out under these very trees? I don't suppose you do. The words came to me, "He is going to ask you to become a Christian." I was praying that you would do it, but you didn't. And for three Sundays you didn't.'"

Was ever a bitterer reproach! Just from lack of courage, the friend had failed in his duty.

Trust that the power will come, and then begin on the task before you.

It may be the attempt to convert a friend. It may be the winning of an unkind stepmother—a stern father. It may be the conquering of difficult studies or new phases of business—but fear not. There is a mighty reservoir of power at hand for the asking. You may be filled with the Holy Ghost. You may have beauty for ashes and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness.

God will support our hearts
With might before unknown.
The work to be performed is ours,
The strength is all his own.

It is most often in solitude that we can approach nearest to the source of spiritual power. In secret we may most successfully strive to separate ourselves from the world and touch the hem of the Master's garment. When we lose the habit of private prayer, of falling on our knees, alone, and seeking the blessing as those who will not be denied, then we lose the power to save souls.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, May 1. TEXTS: Isa. 61:1-3; Acts 2:3, 4.

The real tidy housekeeper stands by

SUN PASTE

BECAUSE

It Makes Absolutely No Dust,

while in a jiffy—the quickest known—it gives that brilliant, jet-black, mirror-smooth luster you want on your stove. It's always ready for use. If your stove is spattered, just a few seconds' use of the Sun Paste restores it. One box polishes your stove several times because it goes so much further than liquids.

MORSE BROS.,
Props. Rising Sun Stove Polish,
Canton, Mass., U. S. A.

SUN PASTE
STOVE POLISH
OLON
SEE NOTICE ON BOTTOM OF THE BOX
THE SUN PASTE
THIS TRADE MARK REGISTERED IN THE UNITED STATES, ENGLAND & CANADA
DIRECTIONS
APPLY WITH A DAMP CLOTH OR BRUSH
STOVE POLISH
MADE BY MORSE BROS. CANTON, MASS. U.S.A.
"The Stand-By" in all Good Homes

How We Select Our 6% Reclamation Bonds

Our experience with Reclamation bonds covers 16 years. During that time we have bought and sold 78 separate issues of Drainage and Irrigation bonds. All have been secured by first liens on good farm land, and no investor has lost a dollar through default in interest or principal.

We are the largest purchasers of Reclamation bonds, and thousands of bond buyers place confidence in our selections. As a result we are constantly offered the pick of many projects. Thus we are able to select for our customers the cream of these securities.

Our Competent Staff

We employ in our investigations engineers and attorneys of national repute, and of wide experience in reclamation projects. Certified copies of their reports and opinions are supplied to our customers.

The Vice-President of our Company almost constantly travels in sections where land is reclaimed. Thus we keep in close touch with the best undertakings.

We buy no issue of Reclamation bonds until all officers of our Company, and all engineers and attorneys employed in the matter, unanimously agree on the safety of the bonds in question.

The Exact Data

In irrigation projects water supply is now determined by Government records covering a number of years. Government surveys show the area drained by the streams in question. Government records tell the minimum rainfall.

When fertility is in question, soils are easily analyzed. We may know their constituents, and the size and kind of crops they will raise.

Naturally, men don't reclaim land that isn't remarkably fertile. These lands on the average are the most productive farm lands in America. And the question of crop failure is practically eliminated by the control of water supply.

There are few undertakings where the security of a lien can be more exactly determined than in reclamation projects rightly investigated. The Government itself is spending many millions of dollars on such projects, depending solely on the land for repayment.

Farm Lien Security

Reclamation bonds are secured by first liens on good farm land. In irrigation projects the liens are given by land owners in payment for water rights. The bonded indebtedness rarely exceeds one-fourth the land's value. As the liens are paid off in annual instalments the security increases each year.

The bonds are additionally secured by a first mortgage on all the property in which the proceeds of the bonds are invested. Thus we combine corporate responsibility and management with farm lien security.

Some Reclamation bonds are issued by organized districts, so the bonds become tax liens. Some are "Carey Act" bonds, where the State supervises the project.

All are serial bonds, so the indebtedness is rapidly reduced. One may get these bonds maturing all the way from one to twenty years. The denominations are $100, $500 and $1,000. The interest rate is six per cent.

These bonds have become the most popular bonds that we handle. In our estimation it is hard to conceive of any more inviting security.

Ask For Information

Reclamation bonds combine safety with fair interest rate. They appeal to all investors, small and large. Please ask us to send you a new book of facts which we now have in preparation. Cut out this coupon lest you forget.

Trowbridge & Niver Co.

First National Bank Building, Chicago

New York Boston San Francisco

Send me your new book on Reclamation Bonds.

Name .....

City ..... State ..... (964)

New Book FREE

Tells How to Keep Your Floors Bright and New

How to keep your floors—especially painted floors—bright and new is one of the problems of your home.

Paint on the floor is subjected to the hardest wear, from chairs, castors and heels.

No matter how good the paint, or how many coats you apply, it must be protected by a good strong finish if you want the freshness and the lustre to last.

Elastica Floor Finish has been perfected for just this purpose. Put it over your floor paint, and see how much longer the paint will last.

It improves the looks of the floor amazingly—and it is true economy. For Elastica Floor Finish saves you many a re-painting. It makes old paint look like new, and it brightens and prolongs the life of linoleum and oil cloth in the same way.

Our experts have just written a book, about this wonderful finish. They give new and valuable advice about the finishing of painted floors, old and new—floors in natural wood, tints—floors of all kinds.

"How to Finish Floors"

TRADE ELASTICA MARK

Look for this Trade-mark on a Yellow Lable. All others are imitations.

FLOOR FINISH

This book is based on forty years' experience. It shows you the easiest and the most economical way to have well kept floors. This book is free—we want every woman to have a copy, even tho she hasn't a floor which needs refinishing now. As an inducement to write immediately we will send with the book made of celluloid, handsomely lithographed in ten colors. This is something you need and use every day. Sent free with Book No. 72. Write today.

FREE Paper Cutter and Book Mark Combined

Elastica Floor Finish is a tough, elastic, waterproof coating which does not mar. There is nothing else like it.

You can prove this yourself.

With the book we will send you a sheet of paper coated with Elastica Floor Finish.

Crush it into a wad. Stamp on it. Roll heavy things over it. Then smooth it out. You will not find a crack in the Elastica coating. Soak it in water. Other finishes turn white when wet. But you'll find no change in Elastica Floor Finish. Think what these tests mean---what it is to have such a finish as this on your floors. You will never regard a painted floor as finished until it has a coat of Elastica.

With our book we will send you a piece of paper coated with Elastica Floor Finish to make this test yourself.

Beware of the Word "Elastic"

Ask Your Dealer

Always be sure you get Elastica Floor Finish. If your dealer cannot supply you, we will fill your order at our nearest address and ship it prepaid.

Don't be deceived by some common varnish or preparation called "elastic," or having a name that sounds like Elastica. There is only one Floor Finish that stands the tests of time and use unmarred. That is Elastica.

Write for the new book today. [12]

Address Standard Varnish Works, 29 Broadway, New York; 2620 Armour Avenue, Chicago; or International Varnish Company, Ltd., Toronto, Canada.

STANDARD VARNISH WORKS

The Holy Sabbath Day*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

AT that season, early in the summer of A.D. 28, Jesus went on the Sabbath Day, on his way to the temple at the hour of morning prayer, through the grain fields, There were no fences. Stones were set up as landmarks. His disciples were hungry and began to pluck ears and eat. It was lawful for hungry persons to gather what they needed for their present necessity in passing through a grain field, or vineyard, or by fruit-bearing trees (Deut. 23:25).

The Pharisees said: "Thy disciples do that which it is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath." While it was lawful according to the law of Moses, it was "not lawful" according to the law of the Pharisees. The law of the Pharisees was not, therefore, higher than the law of Moses. It was narrow in comparison, and hedged people in with useless if not cruel restrictions, such as that shoes with nails must not be worn on the Sabbath, for it was considered bearing a burden, which was forbidden; for the same reason it was questioned whether a cripple might wear his wooden leg.

Boulder on Clark's Island
Where the Pilgrims kept the Sabbath (1620) before settling at Plymouth.

The plucking of the wheat, according to the Pharisaic law, required a sin offering, because plucking the ears of corn ranged under the sin of reaping, and that of rubbing them as the sin of sifting, threshing, grinding or fanning; so that two sin offerings would be required.

"Have ye not read what David did when he was hungry?" This question was Jesus' reply to the criticism of his disciples by the Pharisees. They knew that David, when he was hungry, had entered into the tabernacle and had eaten the shew-bread (the twelve loaves of bread placed each week on the table in the holy place of the tabernacle, and in the temple which succeeded it), which it was lawful only for the priests to eat; and not only David had done it, but he had given it to those who were with him. The priests had a right to eat it, because they were in the service of the Lord, and David had claimed the same right when he had eaten the bread. The disciples likewise were in the service of the Lord when they gathered the grain to eat on the Sabbath Day.

"The priests profane the Sabbath Day and are guiltless." Jesus referred to the killing of animals, kindling of fires for sacrifice, etc., all necessary to be done in the service of God, and therefore they were guiltless.

In our time, the Sabbath is the hardest working day of the week for the preacher, but he, too, is, guiltless.

"One greater than the temple is here." Just how and why Jesus was greater than the temple has been beautifully and clearly stated in the Bible Encyclopedia: "1. The temple exists but for him. 2. It is but a place of assembly, where men may meet with him. 3. However splendid, it is nothing except he be there. 4. However lowly, the presence of 'the great King' makes of it a heavenly place."

"I desire mercy, and not sacrifice." The Pharisees would have put it just the other way; the ceremonial law was everything to them. Christ would have them know that an act of worship was nothing without love. Jesus declared himself the Lord of the Sabbath. He had created it in the beginning, for without him was not anything made (John 1:3). None knew so well as he what things were lawful on the Sabbath Day.

"Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath Day?" The Pharisees had followed Jesus into a synagogue, and had seen him restore the withered hand. The Pharisees thought that Jesus had certainly done something unlawful, for according to their dictum bones might not be set on the Sabbath Day, nor emetics given, nor any medical or surgical operation performed, excepting when life was in danger; hence their surprise and indignation when Jesus healed the man with the withered hand.

"How much, then, is a man of more value than a sheep?" The Pharisaic law permitted a man to look after a sheep that had fallen into a pit, and supply bedding and food for it, but in case it had been injured it might be killed and left to lie there until the Sabbath was past. By referring to this Jesus showed them that they were less merciful to men than to beasts.

"Wherefore it is lawful to do good on the Sabbath Day." One Sunday School teacher called these words "a pair of Sabbath gloves"—there is a word for each finger. Everybody ought to wear them!

"The Pharisees went out and took counsel against him, how they might destroy him." Dr. Maclaren says: "The Pharisee is always as blind as an owl to the light of God and true goodness; keen-sighted as a hawk for trivial breaches of his cobweb regulations, and cruel as a vulture to tear with beak and claw;" and then he adds, "We all carry one inside, and need God's help to cast him out."

The Sabbath in Question

It was the Jewish Sabbath written upon a table of stone by the finger of God and handed down from Mount Sinai to Moses. Presumably it perpetuated the Edenic Sabbath, but to be quite sure that it really did an almanac must be discovered covering six thousand years of unbroken weeks and months. When Jesus was on this earth he kept the Jewish Sabbath, for he distinctly stated that he had come to fulfil the law and the prophets. But the followers of Jesus do not keep the Jewish Sabbath. In not doing so they show the greater honor to their Master. The first day of the week, recurring every seventh day, is now the Sabbath, the Lord's Day, commemorating his resurrection. We thus honor a risen Christ rather than a dead Christ. Jesus gave his sanction to this change when he made his first appearance after his resurrection on the first day of the week, and waited for his second appearance until the following first day of the wek.

During the year we have one great Sabbath Day, that we call Easter, because it commemorates the resurrection of our Lord; but every Sabbath Day should be considered a little of housekeeping. One decidedly practical way is to use Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk in all cooking where milk or cream is required. Results will be more satisfactory than with most "fresh" milk. The convenience and economy will please you. Dilute Peerless Milk with water to any desired richness.

Continued on next page

* International Sunday School Lesson for May 1, 1910. Two Sabbath Incidents. Matt. 12:1-14. GOLDEN TEXT: "I desire mercy and not sacrifice." Matt. 12:7.

Reduce the Cares

CORNISH

Cornish Instruments for real merit, are unexcelled by any other, whatever the price, or name or reputation.

Sent to You for a Year Free Trial

We will send direct from Factory, Cornish piano or organ that you select from catalog, on terms of payment that you may choose with the distinct understanding that if the instrument does not come up to your fullest expectations it will be under no obligations whatever to keep it, and that the Trial Will Cost You Absolutely Nothing

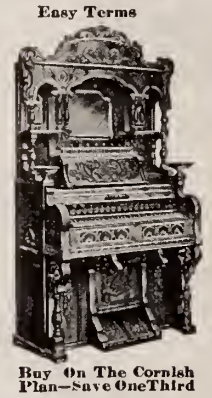
If the instrument does not prove better value for the money than you can get anywhere else—if it is not as good an instrument as you can buy for one-third more than we ask—if at any time within a year you feel that you have not a good bargain, send it back; we won't find one word of fault with your decision, and you will not be one cent out of pocket for freight or use of the instrument.

Two Years Credit If Needed

We Save You $100 and More On a Piano

We Give You a Legal Bond of Indemnity

Easy Terms



which holds us strictly to this offer. You risk nothing. We assume all responsibility, because we know all about the great beauty of material and workmanship in Cornish pianos and organs and know all about the exquisite, rich tone quality of our instruments and we know what a great deal better of a million satisfied purchasers they are of them.

If you keep the instrument it will cost you Rock-Bottom Factory Price, no more nor a cent more, and you will receive with it our Bonded Guarantee which insures the instrument for 25 years against defect in material or workmanship.

Buy On The Cornish Plan—Save One-Third

Chapel Style

Send For The Cornish Book

Don't think of buying before reading it. It is the handsomest piano and organ catalog ever issued. It explains things you ought to know whether you buy from us or not and it is yours for the asking. Write for it now and please mention which you are interested in—piano or organ.

Discounts To Religious and Charitable Institutions

CORNISH CO. WASHINGTON, N.J. Established Over Half A Century.

REDUCE YOUR FLESH

You can safely and speedily reduce your surplus flesh in any part of the body, and thus improve your figure, by wearing

DR. WALTER'S FAMOUS
Medicated Rubber Garments
FOR MEN AND WOMEN

They are very comfortable and never fail to accomplish the desired result. They are worn by the Royalty of Europe and the Society of America.

Neck and Chin Bands, as shown in cut - - $3.00
Chin only - - - - - 2.00

Also union suits, jackets, stockings, etc., for the purpose of reducing the flesh anywhere desired. Invaluable to those suffering from Rheumatism.

Write at once for further particulars.

DR. JEANNE WALTER, Patentee
Suite 440, 55 W. 33d St., New York
San Francisco: 166 Geary Street

250,000

COPIES ALREADY SOLD

HALLOWED HYMNS NEW and OLD

By I. ALLAN SANKEY, son of IRA D. SANKEY

OVER 1000 CHURCHES USING IT

256 Pages, 100 New Songs, Responsive Readings

$25. per 100, not prepaid. 35¢ per copy by mail

Returnable samples mailed to "earnest inquirers"

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

lster, and it will become more and re a holy day.

eeping of the Sabbath a Patriotic Duty

Our forefathers set us a good exple in this matter. A quiet Sabth is the best school of liberty, as ll as of religion. Neither evangeli Christianity nor popular liberty er thrived in a land of holiday Sunrs, which are the allies of tyranny, idelity and superstition. The rest r, from a patriotic standpoint, is a ekly independence day, not to celeate, but to practise independence. llers feel it to be so, because each ry be his own man on that day, or, at is better, God's man. It should impossible in a Christian land for y human master to lay his hand on another man or woman on the bbath Day, and demand that they ll work. The roots of the Amerin Constitution are American instiions, and the American Sabbath is very taproot of them all. To its rt for body and mind; to its culture dintelligence and of conscientiousness ecessities of life in a republic; to its rgling of all sorts and conditions of n as equals in the churches every ek, we owe more than to anything e the fact of our national existence aa republic.

The most sublime expression of the im that ours is a Christian nation i.he flag that floats above Old Glory f one hour on the Sabbath Day on ery United States warship during dine service. Chaplain Evans says ot: "It flies there [at the top of the st] unmolested, as if to say to all in sht that the only true patriotism is t t which has God as its author, and vich can be sealed with the stamp of aroval by the incarnate God, his Sn." Sunday is the chaplain's great dy. At 10:30 A.M. the bugle sounds "urch call," the church pennant is dplayed from the top of the mast, and t ship's bell is tolled. Then the ocial "divine service" is held. Church i "rigged" sometimes on the quarter ck, but generally indoors on the in deck, where the distractions are fer. The "pews" consist of the mess tches; the pulpit is a portable one, cered with the Stars and Stripes.

The "church pennant" should be fnd in every Sunday School in our ld, draped with Old Glory, or placed ve it, as a most effective way to fter the true spirit of the Sabbath ad of Christian civilization.

We strongly urge this use of the "urch pennant," because it is a regulion flag of our government, and ao because another flag is being ged upon our Sunday Schools that h upon it a device which originated h Constantine. We would rather b American than Roman, particularly a Constantine's estimate of the Sabth was so different from our own. March 7, 321 A.D., Constantine ued the first European Sunday law, ithe following words:

"Let all judges, inhabitants of the es and artificers rest on the venerae day of the Sun. But husbandmen ry freely, and at their pleasure, ap themselves to the business of agriculture, since it often happens that the sing of grain and the planting of ves cannot be so advantageously perfmed on any other day."

Still later he appointed markets to b held on the day of the Sun, and ao required armies to pray on that d, not designating the deity to whom ty should pray.

NOTE.—The size of the church pennt used on our ships is usually sixtn feet long by five feet wide at one el, tapering down to a sharp point at t other, with a blue cross about five ft long. The flag is, of course, made obunting, the blue cross on a white fg. It can easily be made by some o in every Sunday School, of any se desired.

Yes, let us be Americans, conscientious Sabbath-keeping Americans. "Tell it everywhere," says Admiral Watson, "that the grim old sea-fighter, Farragut, was a strict observer of the Sabbath, and declared that the non-observance of the day was the greatest peril of his country. I accompanied him to Italy after the war. When we were in Rome the wife of an American sculptor arranged a reception for him on Sabbath evening. When the invitation came the Admiral was angry, and sent her word 'that to invite an American to a reception on the Sabbath was an insult.'" Would that all Americans were as loyal to the Sabbath as Admiral Farragut was! On the contrary, the social functions now given on the Sabbath in our cities are a great peril to the integrity of the Sabbath. When dinners and suppers were given to relatives it seemed as far as social matters should be permitted to go, but now the most elaborate social functions of the week frequently occur on the Sabbath.

A well-merited rebuke was given to this sort of procedure by the Japanese Commercial Commission who visited the United States last autumn. In one of our cities (Spokane) an elaborate Sunday dinner was arranged for them at a summer hotel, fifty miles distant from the city. The ladies were to be entertained in one of the wealthy homes at a formal social function, while the gentlemen were enjoying the trip to the lake. The distinguished guests courteously declined to follow out the programme "because of their respect for America's Lord's Day." Many of them attended services in the Congregational Church. During the service the minister referred to the incident, and congratulated the commissioners on their stand, and assured them that they had but given expression to the real respect which our best citizenship has for the Lord's Day. At the close of the service one of the commissioners present, taking the minister by the hand, thanked him for his words of commendation and said: "I am an officer in the Congregational Church at home, and want to be true to my convictions while abroad."

Will It Harm Me to Spend Sunday Afternoon in Sport?

When we get a world-view of the Sabbath as a God-given boon for all countries and all centuries, the very secret of national greatness, how petty seems the common plea of selfish individuals: "It will do me no harm to spend Sunday afternoon in golf or at a ball game." It will put you on the wrong side in the supreme war of the ages now on between those Continental institutions that make despotisms and republics "good for this day only," and the Anglo-Saxon institutions under which alone permanent self-government has been developed.

Institutions are the chief factors in making countries what they are, and those who do not desire Continental politics and continental morals and continental toil for a major part of the population for seven days in the week may well resist the vanguard in all this—the Continental Sunday.

It is sometimes urged that poor people should have their Sunday afternoon outings, on the ground that "the Sabbath was made for man" (Mark 2: 27). Dr. Joseph Parker commenting upon this says: "The very expression is a proof of the sacredness of the day. It is not said that Monday was made for man. A special meaning attaches to this gift of time; it is holy; it is a piece cut out; it is a sanctuary; it is a resting place on the journey of life; it was made for man; it was set apart for man; it is God's gift to man; it is a hint and type of heaven."

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every dan invested. See their advertisement on page 401, and write them for full information.

THAT old chair in the attic—not used because of its dilapidated appearance, still not relegated to the ash heap or fed to the furnace because of the tender memories surrounding it—"grandfather's chair"—can be transformed into a beautiful piece of furniture fit to grace any room in the house—an antique. It's but one of the many things in your home that you can

RENEW WITH JAP-A-LAC
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Jap-a-Lac is made in seventeen beautiful colors, and Natural or clear, and can be used on anything of wood or metal on everything from cellar to garret.

"THE JAP CHAP"

The Jap-a-lac Model Floor Graining Process solves the problem of "What shall I do with my old carpeted floor to make it sanitary and refined?" Your painter can do it at little expense or you can do it yourself. Insist on Jap-a-lac. For sale by Paint, Hardware and Drug Dealers.

Write for illustrated booklet containing interesting information and beautiful color card. Free on request. If your dealer does not keep Jap-a-lac, send us 10 cents to cover cost of mailing, and we will send a free sample, quarter-pint can of any color (except Gold, which is 25 cents) to any point in the United States.

Our Green Label Line of clear varnishes is the highest quality manufactured. Its use insures perfect results. Ask your paint dealer.

The Glidden Varnish Company
5406 Glidden Bldg., Cleveland, O.
Jap-a-Lac stands for Highest Quality in colored Varnishes.

Send Your Old Carpet
We Will Make
New Rugs
Beautiful designs to your taste—Plain, Fancy, Oriental—fit for any parlor. Guaranteed to wear ten years.
Rugs, 50c and Up
Ours is the largest factory of its kind in America. Established 37 years. Originators of OLSON FLUFF RUG (Grand Prizes at 3 World's Fairs).
We Pay the Freight
Old carpets are worth money: don't throw yours away
FREE Write today for book of designs, prices and complete information.
OLSON RUG CO.
1045 Madison St. Chicago

Even the Smallest
KITCHEN GARDEN
Will be the better for an
IRON AGE WHEEL HOE
to keep the weeds down and the ground cultivated to save all the moisture. Tools are furnished for hoeing, cultivating, opening and closing furrows, leveling, etc.
A DAY'S WORK
IN 60 MINUTES
A woman, boy or girl can operate it as easily as a man.
Costs $2.50 Up.
Ask us to-day for catalog. Sent FREE.
BATEMAN MFG. CO., Box H. Grenloch, N. J.

The Rapid Combination Roasting and Boiling
Fireless Cooker
You'll Be Surprised at the Low Direct Price I'll Make You
Satisfaction guaranteed by full 30 days' trial or no charge—Pays for self fastest—Cooks fastest—No experience necessary—Saves 80 per cent on fuel, time and work—Non-rusting metal-lined—Perfect insulation—Steam can't escape—Boils, Steams, Stews—Roasts, Bakes, Fries.
30 FULL DAYS' FREE TRIAL
Complete, With Genuine Aluminum Cooking Utensils Free. Also Metal Composition Heat-Radiators. Can't Break or Crack.
Cover completely protects cooker from dust, and makes it useful as a seat. Send name today for Over-125-Splendid-Recipe Book and Catalog Free, and low direct-to-you factory prices.
Wm. Campbell Co., Dept. 2
220 21st St., Detroit, Mich.
BOOK FREE

STEEL FISHING RODS
Only 95 cents. Formerly Rods of this style have sold for $5.00.
Only 95cts.
We Have Made an Advertising Appropriation of 3000 Steel Rods at an Almost Give-Away Price.
To quickly introduce our New Rods and Fishing Tackle we will sell 3000 of these Steel Fishing Rods made from best grade Sheffield Spring Steel, Rust-proof, Enameled, at only 95 cents each, if by mail 10 cents extra. 6 Rods assorted lengths, 5½ to 9 ft., as you select, for only $5.50.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED or Money Refunded
These Rods are light, strong, durable. No windings to loosen, no glue to soften. Just the Rod for the mad rushes of any game fish.
DON'T Pay over 95 cents for a Fishing Rod of any sort until after you have seen this one. Send and get it. Money back if not suited. Catalogue of arms and tackle FREE. Estab. 1870
Kirtland Bros. & Co., Dept. CH, 90 Chambers St., New York

LAWN FENCE
Many Styles. Sold on trial at wholesale prices. Save 20 to 30 per cent. Illustrated Catalogue free. Write today.
KITSELMAN BROS.
Box 302 Muncie, Indiana.

LAWN FENCE
Many designs. Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries.
Coiled Spring Fence Co.
Box D Winchester Ind.

Are You Well?

Have You a Good Figure?

You can surprise your husband and friends by giving 15 minutes a day, in your room, to special directions which I give you to strengthen vital organs and nerves, so you are relieved of chronic ailments. Your body can be rounded and you can have as good a figure, as gracefully carried, as any woman of your acquaintance.

A pupil who was thin writes me:

"I just can't tell you how happy I am! I wore low neck and short sleeves the other night and I was so proud of my neck and arms! My busts are rounded out and I have gained 28 pounds; it has come just where I wanted it and I carry myself like another woman. My old dresses look stylish on me now. You remember I have not been constipated since my second lesson and I had taken something for years. I guess my stomach must be stronger too, for I sleep like a baby and my nerves are so rested. I feel as if I had missed so much enjoyment in life, for I never did have such good times before. I feel so well all the time."

I have built up thousands of women why not you? Write me, and if I cannot help your particular case I will tell you so.

I give each pupil the individual, confidential treatment which her case demands.

SUSANNA COCROFT
Dept. 18-H, 246 Michigan Ave., Chicago

Note: Miss Cocroft's name stands for progress in the scientific care of the health and figure of woman.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' Oh, something new—The MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but you can't see them—they are invisible. I would not know that I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right."

The MORLEY PHONE

makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it. Over One Hundred Thousand Sold. Write for booklet and testimonials.
THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 702, Perry Building, Philadelphia

A Sample of Page Fence FREE

Send for an actual sample of the world-famous Page Woven Wire Fence. See the Basic Open Hearth Page Wire—the strongest fence wire in existence! See the wonderful Page Knot—the knot that can't come off! Get a Free copy of the Quarter-Centennial Catalog of Page Fence, explaining its amazing durability, elasticity and economy. Just a postal. Address: (3)
PAGE WOVEN WIRE FENCE CO., Box 213 H, Adrian, Mich

Get Book on "BRECO"

Write Now—Samples Free—Book Free. Direct from factory—$1.36—$1.86—$2.26 per Roll. Freight paid to west boundary line Minn., Iowa, Mo. and north of south line Tenn. Reliable high quality. Guaranteed waterproof; fire-resisting; durable.

Rubber Roofing Freight Prepaid

The Breese Bros. Co.
Roofing Dept. 77, Cincinnati, Ohio

WRITTEN BY 602 EXPERTS

Success Shorthand School

SUCCESS SHORTHAND TAUGHT to beginners and stenographers by court reporters. The system used by experts. Instruction by mail. Write for catalog. If a stenographer, state system.

SUCCESS SHORTHAND SCHOOL
Suite 284, 79 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.
L. Jamea in charge

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Original and unequalled. Wood or tin rollers. "Improved" requires no tacks. Inventor's signature on genuine:

Stewart Hartshorn

Elastic Stockings

From pure gum rubber, woven absolutely to your measure, at the same price you pay for poor-wearing, ready-made goods.

Our Stockings are best in the world and our prices lowest. Write for self-measurement blank and FACTS ABOUT VARICOSE VEINS.

Worcester Elastic Stocking & Truss Co., 58 Front Street, Dept. 9. Worcester, Mass.

Ornamental Fence

Cheaper and more durable than wood. For Lawns, Churches, Cemeteries, Public Grounds. Also Farm and Poultry Fence. Catalogue free. Write for Special Offer.
The Ward Fence Co., Box 146, Decatur, Ind.

ABANDONED IT

For the Old Fashioned Coffee was Killing.

"I always drank coffee with the rest of the family, for it seemed as if there was nothing for breakfast if we did not have it on the table.

"I had been troubled some time with my heart, which did not feel right. This trouble grew worse steadily

"Sometimes it would beat fast and at other times very slowly, so that I would hardly be able to do work for an hour or two after breakfast, and if I walked up a hill, it gave me a severe pain.

"I had no idea of what the trouble was until a friend suggested that perhaps it might be caused by coffee drinking. I tried leaving off the coffee and began drinking Postum. The change came quickly. I am now glad to say that I am entirely well of the heart trouble and attribute the relief to leaving off coffee and the use of Postum.

"A number of my friends have abandoned the old-fashioned coffee and have taken up with Postum, which they are using steadily. There are some people that make Postum very weak and tasteless, but if it is boiled long enough, according to directions, it is a very delicious beverage. We have never used any of the old fashioned coffee since Postum was first started in our house."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

I Can Reduce Your Flesh

Would you like to reduce it by natural means and in a scientific, dignified manner?

I have reduced 25,000 women in the past seven years by a few simple directions followed in the privacy of their own rooms.

I can reduce you and at the same time strengthen stomach and heart and relieve you of such chronic ailments as rheumatism, indigestion, constipation, weak nerves, torpid liver and such difficulties as depend upon good circulation, strong nerves, strong muscles, good blood, correct breathing. You can be as good a figure as any woman of your acquaintance. Why not?

One pupil writes:

"Miss Cocroft, I have reduced 78 pounds and I look 15 years younger. I have reduced those hips and I feel so well I want to shout! I was rheumatic and constipated, my heart was weak and my head dull, my liver all clogged up and oh, dear, I am ashamed when I think how I used to look.

Send 10 cents for instructive booklet showing how to stand and walk correctly.

SUSANNA COCROFT
Dept. 18-H, 246 Michigan Ave., Chicago
Author of "Character as Expressed in the Body," Etc.

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES

VISIBLE WRITERS

or otherwise

L. S. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.
¼ to ½ M'F'RS PRICES
Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY
PRICES $15.00 UP
First Class Machines Fresh from the Mf'rs—Write for Illustrated Catalog 71
Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

PATENT YOUR IDEAS

$8,500 for one invention. Book "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents advertised for sale at our expense in fourteen Manufacturers' Journals.

Patent Obtained or Fee Returned
CHANDLEE & CHANDLEE, Patent Att'ys
Established 16 Years
928 F Street, Washington, D.C.

Sent on Approval. Send No Money. $2.00 WE WILL TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. Hair Switch
Send a lock of your hair, and we will mail a 22 inch short stem fine human hair switch to match. If you find it a big bargain, remit $2.00 in ten days, or call 3 and GET YOUR SWITCH FREE. Extra shades a little more. Inclose 5c postage. Free beauty book showing latest style of hair dressing—also high grade switches, pompadours, wigs, puffs, etc.
ANNA AYERS,
Dept. 13 19 Quincy St. Chicago

LEARN OIL PAINTING

IN YOUR OWN HOME

The New Japanese Oil Painting Process. A fascinating and profitable business. Quickly taught to anyone—even children. Beautify your home. Teach the art to others. Large profits can be made with very small expense. Something new and up-to-date. Write to-day for full particulars free.
Joplin Art School, Dept. C, Joplin, Mo.

TRIBUTES OF THE POETS

To the Late Dr. Louis Klopsch

The Tribute Beautiful

A SOUL sped up from the shades of earth,
To the great white light above,
And a host of angels following
Bore tokens of earthly love.

"These," said they, "are the symbols
By which are the worthy known;
The goodly honor of mankind,
The harvest of love long sown."

There were roses and costly lilies,
From the noblest in the land,
And blessings and prayers and praises
Filled each celestial hand.

"'Tis well," said the Father kindly,
Then from out the shining host
He beckoned one silent angel,
Who brought on his lips no boast.

"Now, what are these gleaming jewels
Thou bearest with modest fears?"
And the angel, softly smiling, said,
"Lo, these are the children's tears."

Then the harps of heaven trembled;
And burst through its arches broad
A great white sea of radiant light,
From the welcoming smile of God.

—ALICE E. MARTIN.

Plainfield, N. J.

The Glorious Crown

UPON a day in springtime
He closed his weary eyes,
To open them amid the bloom
Of God's bright paradise;
To gaze upon the Holy One,
Whom, unseen, he adored;
To clasp the gentle, pierced hand
Of Christ, his risen Lord.

The faithful lips are silent,
The loving heart is cold,
The gentle hands outstretched to all
To lead them to the fold.
But to us his voice is sounding
Above this earthly strife:
"Be true, and Christ the Lord shall give A glorious crown of life."

—MISS CELIA DEVINE.

Rantoul, Ill.

We Cannot Understand

A FAITHFUL laborer for his Lord
His voice no more on earth is hear
And though he rests beneath the sod
The nation's hearts as one are stirred
And hear his voice and feel his touch,
Who gave them help, and inasmuch
As help to needy souls was given,
A welcome waited him in heaven.

We cannot understand just why
A life with such capacity
For doing good should quickly die,
Earth's vision never far can see.
But the great work which he began
Calls unto every son of man,
The needy ones to feed and clothe,
The Gospel bring to those men loathe.

His work is finished and renown
Which here he labored not to gain,
But strove to win the victor's crown,
Is given him with Christ to reign,
And sorrowing hearts the lesson read,
To give to every tongue and creed
Bread for the body and the soul,
Like him who now has reached the goal

Methinks there comes to all to-day,
Like voice from him who won the figh
"Arise, and work while yet you may;
Delay not, quickly comes the night."
He being dead yet speaketh still,
A higher life he lives and will
Until the light of time grows dim
Rest, and his works will follow him.

Wilton, N. H. —JOHN L. PERHA

Friend of Humanity

FRIEND of humanity! chosen of God
Sacred to us the paths thou hast t
Rest now, sweetly rest.
Earth's cares and burdens all laid down
Welcomed with joy thy star-gemmed cro
Oh, victor, thou art blest!

We can but mourn the world's great loss
But heaven has gained a spirit choice;
Then let us dry our tears.
Soon may we hope to meet in love,
And clasp glad hands in realms above,
Through all the eternal years.

Mt. Carmel, Conn. —EMILY A. TUTTL

GREAT REVIVAL AT ICHOWFU, CHINA

IN a letter from Missionary W. P. Chalfant, of Tsingchowfu, Shantung, China, to Mr. J. C. Havemeyer, of Yonkers, N. Y., the writer says: "For the past year, there have not been wanting signs of spiritual awakening at Ichowfu. Since October last, a commodious new church edifice has been completed. A service was held in it and it was filled to overflowing with eight hundred people. Our force at Ichowfu has been depleted until it now numbers only Rev. George Armstrong, Rev. and Mrs. Paul P. Faris, and Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Fouts. They are all in their first term of service, but have risen nobly to meet the heavy responsibilities thrown upon them.

"By arrangement, our young evangelist-at-large, Rev. Ting Li Mei, is making a tour of our southern stations, and, on January 15, he reached Ichowfu. Special interest soon developed. Three or four meetings were held every day. One hundred of our people had been called in from our country out-stations, but the bulk of the audiences came, of course, from the city and especially from the south suburb, where our compound is located. A list was made of those who were willing to investigate the truth of Christianity, which practica means the expression of willingness become Christians. This list rapi grew. It included many who had years been halting between two op ions. Seventy special invitations w sent into the city and several sm officials and business men came c The chief of police, probably as a p caution, came out with a squad of "modern" uniformed police. Tl marched in to the crowded church, before they marched out, four of th had enrolled their names as inqu ers! At the time of writing, friends thought that the number inquirers might reach five hundr But four days ago came a telegr from Ichowfu: 'Meetings overwhe ing. Continued one week. Eight h dred and ninety-six names enroll We are trying to do what we can send them help.

"We have been laboring and pr ing for twenty years for just this s of blessing and now that it has co it finds Ichowfu undermanned both to foreign missionaries and nat evangelists. But it is no time to pine. Perhaps God would have us know that it is not by might nor power that his kingdom comes, by his Spirit."

WHEN YOU WRITE TO ADVERTISERS

DO you always mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD when writing to advertise It will be distinctly to your advantage to do so. Not only is it one of conditions of our guarantee, but you will find that advertisers, in view that condition, will give your inquiries particular consideration.

Advertisers would rather use a publication that guarantees its ads, beca only the most reputable publications do so, and the advertiser therein feels t his printed word will be accepted in better faith by the subscriber.

On the other hand, the subscriber should have faith enough in the adv tiser to write him direct. We receive numerous letters from subscribers aski us to forward their inquiries to advertisers, thinking, no doubt, in that w to make sure of fair treatment. But that is not necessary. It not only enta a lot of clerical work upon our part, but it delays the answer to the adverti ment. If you mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD you need have no fear of advertiser. He is as anxious to please you as you are to be pleased.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD guarantees its advertisements. Whenever any our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we w make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, h mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided t claim is made to us within one month of the date of the appearance of the

Dont Paint Your Roofs

Use Amatite ROOFING

TWO layers of Coal Tar Pitch rolled between two layers of the best grade of waterproofed felt with a top layer of real mineral matter, form Amatite Roofing.

You don't have to coat it or paint it after you lay it. It is there to give protection without further attention.

Amatite is made in convenient rolls ready to be laid on the roof.

Anyone can do the job.

Free sample and booklet sent for the asking. Address nearest office.

BARRETT MANUFACTURING CO.

New York Chicago
Philadelphia Boston
Cleveland St. Louis
Cincinnati Pittsburg
Kansas City Minneapolis New Orleans
London, Eng.

5.95 The AMERICAN SEPARATOR Leads the World

THIS OFFER IS NO CATCH. It is a solid, fair and square proposition to furnish a brand new, well made and well finished cream separator complete, subject to a long trial and fully guaranteed, for $15.95. It is different from anything that has ever before been offered. Skims 1 quart of milk a minute, hot or cold, makes thick or thin cream and does it just as well as any higher priced machine. Suitable for small dairy, hotel, restaurant and private families. Any boy or girl can run it sitting down. The crank is only 5 inches long. Just think of that! The bowl is a sanitary marvel; easily cleaned and embodies all our latest improvements. Gears run in anti-friction bearings and thoroughly protected. Before you decide on a cream separator of any capacity whatever, obtain our $15.95 proposition. Our liberal long time trial and terms of purchase will astonish you. Our own (manufacturer's) guarantee protects you on every American Separator. We ship immediately. Western orders filled from Western points. Write us and get our great offer and handsome free catalog. ADDRESS,

AMERICAN SEPARATOR CO. Box 1184 BAINBRIDGE, N.Y.

Vapo Cresolene

ESTABLISHED 1879

for Whooping Cough, Croup, Sore Throat, Coughs, Bronchitis, Colds, Diphtheria, Catarrh.

"Used while you sleep."

Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough. Ever dreaded Croup cannot exist where Cresolene is used.

Acts directly on the nose and throat, making breathing easy in the case of colds; soothes the sore throat and stops the cough.

Cresolene is a powerful germicide, acting both as a curative and preventive in contagious diseases.

It is a boon to sufferers from Asthma.

Cresolene's best recommendation is its 30 years of successful use.

For Sale By All Druggists.
Send Postal for Descriptive Booklet.

THE VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 180 Fulton St., New York
Leeming-Miles Building, Montreal, Canada

PATENTS That Protect and Pay
Advice and Books FREE. Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services. WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D.C.

Christ Our King*

THE most ardent believer in democracy cannot find fault with the acceptance of Christ as our King. Doubtless if a human being could be invested with the attributes of Deity, infinite wisdom, infinite love, an earthly kingdom would be as good a government as could be devised. It is the character of the king that determines the status of the kingdom.

The great beauty of our religion is, perhaps, the direct communication it affords between King and subject. There is no go-between. We have but to speak the word and we are in his presence, touching the seamless garment of power, and bathing in the fountain of redeeming love.

We have but to open his Book and there we read his commands—they are clear and unmistakable. The path for our weak and ignorant feet is made so plain that the wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein. And the rewards and punishments which go with obedience and disobedience are also explained to us.

"It was," says Dr. Jefferson, "with the vision before them of Jesus, as the King ruling the world, that the apostles went out to convert the nations. Stephen's face shone like the face of an angel because he caught glimpses of the glory of the throne. Saul of Tarsus traveled from city to city hated, hounded, persecuted, but he never winces nor falters, but sings wherever he goes, 'Now to the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory forever.'"

The King of Heaven to the old Jews was a being too awful to be described. Moses, Isaiah, Job, John the Divine all tried to do it, but they failed.

"The genius of human speech," says Dr. Jefferson, "falls in a swoon exhausted by its effort to hint at the indescribable glory of Him who sits on the throne."

When men told William the Silent that his cause was hopeless, his reply was, "When I took it in hand to defend these oppressed Christians, I made an alliance with the mightiest of all potentates—the God of Hosts—who is able to save us if he chooses."

In Tennyson's wonderful description of the passing of the stainless King Arthur, the king is made to say:

I found him in the shining of the stars,
I marked him in the flowering of the fields,
But in his ways with men I find him not.

Then he indicates a method by which men may mend those ways and find their King:

I have lived my life, and that which I have done
May He within himself make pure! But thou,
If thou shouldst never see my face again,
Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore, let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day.
For what are men better than sheep and goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?
For so the whole round world is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

Then the mighty king was borne away "to the great deep," in his dusky barge; and faint sounds were wafted to the ears of his faithful knight, as if some fair city were one voice

Around a king returning from his wars.

Thus may each one of us go home to our kingly master, conquering kings ourselves through his royal bounty.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, May 1. TEXT: John 18:33-40.

Greater Than Ever

Dear Mr. Editor: THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is greater than ever. I was a Home Herald reader, and am delighted with the change. So glad to see that Moody picture and sermon. We like the Children's Sermon, and the editorial page and THE MAIL-BAG. It is all rich and uplifting. God bless you and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Nevada, O. C. A. KUENZLI.

Use Acme Quality and Insure a Satisfactory Finish

It's a pleasure to do over furniture or woodwork with Acme Quality Varno-Lac. You know results will be satisfactory because it is Acme Quality. You know it will be the exact color and shade and wood effect you want. You know it will set hard and smooth, showing never a brush mark, and that it will withstand long wear.

It is easy to apply, because Acme Quality Varno-Lac both stains and varnishes in one operation and you needn't remove previous finishes unless they are very rough.

A splendid plan is to make the furniture and woodwork in a room harmonize by finishing them in the same wood effect.

For floors, Acme Quality Varno-Lac makes a tough, elastic finish that will not show scratches or scars, and wears extremely well. This is only one of the many

ACME QUALITY
Paints, Enamels, Stains, and Varnishes.

There is one specially adapted for every separate surface. If it's anything to be painted, enameled, varnished, stained, or finished in any way, there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.

The Acme Quality Guide Book tells which to use and how it should be applied in each case.

Write for a free copy.

Get Acme Quality Varno-Lac and other paints and finishes from your dealer. Ask for a color card to choose from. If he cannot supply you, write to

ACME WHITE LEAD AND COLOR WORKS,
Dept. O, Detroit, Mich.

WANTED—RIDER AGENTS IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1910 Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write at once for full particulars and special offer.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offer.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderful low prices we can make you. We sell the highest grade bicycles at lower prices than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT—but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. D 71, CHICAGO, ILL.

Here Is Something New From Kalamazoo

Prove for yourself in your own home, that the Kalamazoo is the most perfect—most economical—most satisfactory range for you to use—Your money back if it's not.

Send for Catalog No. 103 with special terms and compare Kalamazoo prices with others

Cash Or Time Payments

We want every housewife to know the comfort and convenience of a Kalamazoo in her home. You can buy on easy time payments or pay cash if you like. Either way—you save $10 to $20 on any Stove in the catalog. We make it easy for responsible people to own the best stove or range in the world.

We Pay the Freight

Kalamazoo Stove Co.
Kalamazoo, Mich.

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"

SPRAY With the WATSON 4-row POTATO SPRAYER

Never damages foliage, but kills bugs, worms and all destructive insects. Adjustable wheel width. Spray and pressure regulator. Sprays 30 to 40 acres a day. Free Book.

FIELD FORCE PUMP CO., 75 Eleventh St., Elmira, N. Y.

Corns Dangerous to cut corns and only makes them grow faster. Don't risk blood-poisoning, when A-Corn Salve removes corns—roots and all. 15 cents at druggists' or by mail. Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music. $3 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Hot Sun -- Stifling Streets

That time is approaching. When it arrives stop at the next soda fountain and treat your hot, tired and thirsty self to a glass of delicious, refreshing Coca-Cola. It will cool you---relieve your fatigue and quench your thirst as nothing else can.

5c Everywhere

Send for our Free Booklet--"The Truth About Coca-Cola." It tells all about it--what it is and why it is so delicious and wholesome.

THE COCA-COLA COMPANY - - Atlanta, Ga.

Christian Herald

1.50 a Year—5c. a Copy
ublished 52 Times a Year

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH, JR.

New York, April 27, 1910

VOL. 33—NO. 17
Offices: Bible House, New York

ainted for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD by F. J. Boston

SEE PAGE 426

The Blossoms of Spring

Questions and Answers

In forwarding MSS. to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, enclose stamped envelopes for return, if unavailable.

A Subscriber. Some of the statements in your article, "Why Educated Women Do Not Marry," in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for December 22, seemed to me cruel to womanhood and I have worried over them ever since, for they cut me to the heart. Why should "old maids" be ridiculed, since they are usually so from choice?

The article, "Why Educated Women Do Not Marry," was simply intended to emphasize the virtues of the educated woman. It contains no atom of ridicule for the unmarried, and it is hard to see where you could imagine any in it. The happily married woman we believe to be the most fortunate of her sex. The woman who marries simply for a home and a husband is to be pitied. The modern young woman usually can afford to remain single, if no man loves her whom she can love; and she is admired and respected by all sensible people for her noble principles.

J. F. C., Boone, Ia. 1. We read in II. Kings 20: 8-11 about the prophet Isaiah bringing the shadow ten degrees backward, where it had gone down in the dial of Ahaz. 2. We find also in Joshua that he commanded the sun to stand still. Did not these miracles interfere with the movements of other planets?

1. The dial of Ahaz, it is assumed, was in the form of a staircase upon which a shadow was made to fall from a pillar, the declination or elevation of the shadow measuring the hours of the day. There is no need to imply, as some have done, that the earth retrograded on its axis; for the miracle might have been produced by the miraculous refraction of the sun's rays on the dial in question without disturbing the divinely appointed order of nature. This might have been effected by a partial eclipse, or by simple refraction through the interposition of a different medium. It is a fact known to scientists that refraction takes place when the rays of light pass through a denser medium. 2. The miracle of the sun and moon in Josh. 10: 12, 13 was fully discussed in the MAIL-BAG of December 8, 1909.

Mrs. J. H. F., Ovid, Mich. Who first wrote the sentence: "Necessity is the mother of invention," and in what connection?

The quotation is "Necessity, the mother of invention." It was written by George Farquhar, and occurs in his Twin Rivals. Farquhar was born in Londonderry, Ireland, in 1678, and died in 1707. His writings were very popular in the eighteenth century.

M. D. S., Asheville, N. C. Who were the brothers of Jesus?

Those named in the Gospels are James (Matt. 10: 3; 13: 55 and Gal. 1: 19); Simon (Luke 6: 15; Mark 6:3); Jude (Mark 6: 3; Luke 6: 16) and Joses (Mark 15: 40). In Matt. 13: 55 there are still other children referred to. There are indications, however, that these were not natural brothers, but merely near relations. In Matt. 27: 56, James and Joses are described as sons of one Mary who is not to be identified with the Virgin, and in Luke 6: 15, 16, James and Judas are described as sons of Alpheus, who was probably the husband of Mary, sister of the Virgin. "Brothers," "sisters," "brethren," as found in the Gospels, do not always or even generally mean relatives in the natural sense, but in the broad spiritual sense. Besides, cousins, nephews, and other kinsmen were called "brethren." Lot and Jacob were called "brothers" of Abraham and Laban. Another explanation approved by many scholars is that the brothers of our Lord were children of Joseph by an earlier marriage with a wife whom tradition calls Escha or Salome, of the tribe of Judah.

Mrs. Anna B. S., Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes: "In THE MAIL-BAG of February 2 the question is asked: 'Why was Judas chosen a disciple when his true character was known to Christ?' I think one reason was that he might be a witness to the pure and holy character and life of Jesus. He was with Jesus most familiarly, probably for the greater part of the three years of his ministry, and during that time would have every opportunity to know him intimately and to observe him under all circumstances. Had Jesus even once during these years devoted to teaching and to service, while enduring trials, temptations and weariness, in any way shown himself other than the 'spotless Lamb of God,' the true image of the Father, Judas would have been justified in delivering him to the chief priests as an impostor; but what is his testimony, forced from him most unwillingly by the goadings of conscience? 'I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood' (Matt. 27:4). Truly this, from a witness who would have eagerly caught at the slighest excuse to justify his treachery, is of great value as evidence that Jesus is the Christ."

L. E. C., Sacaton, Ariz. 1. Is there any Scriptural qualification to the promise, "Whosoever calleth upon the name of the Lord, the same shall be saved"? 2. Is not the decision of the English Government, permitting a man to marry his deceased wife's sister, contrary to Mosaic law?

1. The passage in Acts 2: 21 (a part of Peter's sermon) is a specially important one. He had been describing the outpouring of the Holy Spirit in the last days, and concluded with the prophetic announcement (v. 21) of the time when salvation would no longer be confined to the Jewish people, but would be world-wide. The passage means that whosoever should believingly call upon the Lord would be heard and answered. (See also Phil. 2: 9-11; Rom. 10: 11-13, and I. Cor. 1: 2.) 2. The Mosaic law forbids fifteen kinds of marriages within specified degrees of relationship and affinity. (See Lev. 18: 7-17 and 20: 11.) Marriage with a wife's sister was not forbidden.

S. A. S., Clay Centre, Kan. Will you please tell us what foreign soldiers were hired by the United States during the Mexican War, and what amount was paid for their services? 2. Are there any extensive tin mines in the United States, and is there any great amount of tin manufactured in this country?

No foreign soldiers were hired by the United States for the Mexican War, or any other war. 2. Yes; tin is mined in the United States in California, South Dakota, Idaho, West Virginia, and some other places. As good tin-plate as can be made anywhere is now manufactured in the United States.

Mrs. M. M. D., Jerseyville, Ill. 1. Should a widow sign her own or her husband's name? 2. Do wild geese winter North or South? 3. Was Daniel Webster dark or light?

1. For social purposes a widow continues to call herself by her husband's name, as Mrs. John Smith. That is, her visiting cards, her social letters and other similar papers, are thus marked. No woman should ever sign her name to a letter or document (unless especially required to do so) as "Mrs." Anything. She should use her baptismal name; as "Mary H. Smith." After the lapse of many years, or upon removing to a place where she has not been known as her husband's wife, she may call herself by her own name. 2. Wild geese usually winter in the South. 3. Daniel Webster was dark. His eyes were peculiarly large and dark. We are unable to find in any of our collections the verses you desire.

C. W. C., Morrill, Neb. Does the spring, which broke out one night at Andersonville Prison during the Civil War, continue to flow yet?

Yes; it has been roofed over with a stone well-house and is regularly cared for.

J. W. O., Moundsville, W. Va. What did "psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs" mean to the Apostolic Church?

The apostles were doubtless familiar with the Jewish song service for the temple, but they had not "hymns" in the metrical form as we have them. The different psalms were chanted successively. In the jail at Philippi, Paul and Silas "sang hymns," but the more correct rendering would be "sang praises," or "loudly praised God." Whether this praise was attuned to a melodic strain in regular metre, or was simply a chant, no one can know. In 1. Cor. 14: 26 the allusion is made to improvised hymns. The early Christian Church had its individual songs and hymns of a spiritual nature composed by its own members, and reflecting, no doubt, the influence of the Jewish, Greek, and Roman music of the time. Unfortunately there is not even a fragment of the Christian hymnology of the first two centuries now extant.

Mr. Clarence E. Edwards, of San Francisco, Cal., writes: "In THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of January 19, 1910, you have an article entitled, 'Squirrels Carry Bubonic Plague.' I am sure that THE CHRISTIAN HERALD would never, under any circumstances, intentionally do an injustice or further any misstatements of facts. The article which you printed is entirely beyond the facts in the case, especially where you say that seven people died of the plague around San Francisco. According to the reports of the Marine Hospital Service, which has this matter in charge and well in hand, there h been no cases of plague in or around San Fr eiseo for more than two years, and, while i possible that certain ground squirrels may h carried the disease, there is no recent insta at all where this is shown. The article wl you printed might have been timely some years ago, but now there is nothing that w warrant it being published, and such publ tion in a so highly esteemed journal as CHRISTIAN HERALD is calculated to do a gr deal of harm to California in forming a wr impression in the minds of the reading pul

"CALIFORNIA DEVELOPMENT BOAR

"Per CLARENCE E. EDWARDS."

Mr. J. R. M., Archer, Fla. We take CHRISTIAN HERALD and are pleased with I will be eighty-eight years old the 27th this month. I have been to Sunday Sch every Sunday of 1908 and 1909, and so this year, without missing one Sunday, how long before I don't know. That sh good health; thank the Lord! 1. What cent. of the children born in the Un States reach that age (eighty-eigh 2. Who were the last kings of Israel Judah? What kings conquered the What time did the Jews lose their nat ality?

1. According to the census of 1890, the av age age at death was thirty-one years; the census (1900) shows the average life of An icans to be thirty-five years. There are statistics to show how many reach eighty over. 2. The last rulers of Israel were J boam, Zechariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekah Pekah, Hoshea; and of Judah, Manas Amon, Josiah, Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jehoiach and Zedekiah. Then followed the destruct of Jerusalem (588 B.C.). After the destruct of Samaria by the Assyrians (720 B.C.), m in Israel were carried away captive, but greater ruin came when the Babylonians membered the kingdom of Judah, destroyed temple and exiled a large part of the Jew nation.

Famous Christian Testimonies

PROFESSOR DAVID STARR JORDAN, President of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, and one of the foremost of American educators, is a man of the most varied accomplishments and experience. Scientist, zoologist, traveler, and author, he has come into personal contact with many of the brightest minds of two continents. To President Jordan the question was addressed:

"Is the spirit of Jesus more dominant in business and public affairs than when you entered active life, and is it an advantage or not for a public man to-day to be known as a professing Christian?"

President Jordan's reply is one that cannot fail to encourage and inspire thoughful men and women everywhere, especially where he states that when the conflict between the forces of good and evil is hottest, we see more of the evil than at other times. He writes:

Prof. David Starr Jordan

LELAND STANFORD JUNIOR UNIVERSITY
OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Dear Sir: Stanford University, Cal., December 14.

In answer to your questions, I should say that "the spirit of Jesus," that is to say, the spirit of kindliness, consideration and truthfulness, is more dominant in public affairs now than at any previous time. In some ways those things which are the reverse of this spirit are more conspicuous, but that is because they are brought into the limelight of the struggle against them. When evil is accepted as the normal state of things it does not seem so conspicuous as when a fight to the death is made against it. To be known as a professing Christian, and to be known to live up to what this ought to mean, is certainly an advantage for a man in public life. Very truly yours, David Starr Jordan

Miscellaneous

Mrs. G. W. L., Cecil, O. See answer to y question in MAIL-BAG of April 20 issue.

R. A. F., Bentonville, Pa. You will find whole situation regarding Mr. Roosevelt the Pope described in our issues of April and 20.

Sunday School Scholar, Minneapolis, Mi See explanation of Apostles' Creed, given J. B. M., Baltimore, Md., issue of January 1910, page 40.

Reader, Durhamville, N. Y. Such a m riage as you describe, under the conditi stated, would be legal. This is assuming t the parents of both parties consented.

W. D. F., Ryder, N. D. 1. The Book of M mon is rejected as spurious by all except Mormons themselves. 2. We know nothing the tenets of the denomination in question.

K. U. F., Fulton County, Illinois. We do think the amount would be taxable, but it wo be better to look up your State law in the m ter. You should have sent name and address

P. P. T., Freeman, S. D. The quest obviously does not apply to those to whom Gospel has never been preached, who are under the law, and not to be judged like th who are under the Gospel dispensation.

A. H., Bond, Md. We have heard of the s you mention, but they are generally regar as fanatics. Our advice is to stick to y own denomination and the teachings of y own church, and pay no heed to disturbers.

A. J. C. We are told in Scripture that it our duty not to forsake the assembling of o selves together, which means that we sho not neglect the ordinances of religion. Th may be honest points of difference, but point you mention is not a valid reason staying away.

Reader, N. Y. Apropos of your remarks planatory of the old phrase "as poor as Jo turkey," let me give you this which I f among some old memoranda: "According the popular notion, Job's turkey had but feather in its tail, and was obliged to l against the fence to gobble. Judge Haliburt of Nova Scotia (popularly known as 'S Slick'), refers to 'Job's turkey' in some of writings."

W. A. D., Toronto, Ont. We are not judge others; judgment belongs to God alo Even assuming the truth of all your letter serts, who is to say that restitution has been made or at least attempted by the per in question? We may hate the sin but we n not necessarily hate the sinner, especially after long experience, he sees his error e tries by every means open to him to ma amends. It may be that the only restitut possible is to be found in the means he selected.

NEW YORK, APRIL 27, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Uspallata Station, Argentina

Condor of the Andes

Shelter House in the Uspallata Pass

THE GREAT ANDES TUNNEL OPENED

By CHARLES M. PEPPER

TO pierce the backbone of a continent is a huge task. It has just been done in South America. The great wall of the Andes, which stretches for more than 3,000 miles, has been opened by a railway tunnel. This is one of the triumphs of twentieth century civilization.

The Andes do not run through the central line of the South American continent. Instead they parallel the Pacific coast, but there is on this side a long stretch of territory, in some places hundreds of miles, from the Continental Divide to the ocean, and in other places less than fifty miles. The Andes ranges themselves are hundreds of miles across, since they are really parallel cordilleras, with extensive valleys between the different chains.

The narrowest strip of country between the main range of the Andes and the ocean is in Chile. In some sections the distance from the mountain slope to the ocean is a hundred miles; in others it is not more than twenty-five miles. The Andean mountain wall has not been an absolute barrier between the west coast of South America and the central and east-coast regions, for there were various passes through which traffic could be carried on at seasons by means of pack trains of mules, burros and llamas, the latter being the native pack animal of the Andean region. People could get across in the same manner. But intercourse by this means was very much limited and confined to the summer season. When the winter's snows came they blocked the passes and made travel and traffic so difficult that intercourse was suspended.

During this winter season the only way for the ordinary traveler to get from Valparaiso to Buenos Ayres was to take the steamer through the Straits of Magellan. It is required a ten days' voyage.

Enterprising men knew that some day, in the interest of commerce and of closer intercourse between the peoples of the different countries of South America, the Andes would be pierced. Engineers who studied the subject scientifically reasoned that the passage would be easiest toward the tapering southern end of the range, somewhere in Chile. William Wheelright, the remarkable New Englander who built railways and established steamship lines in South America more than half a century ago, had a plan for tunneling the Andes at a point in northern Chile called Copiapo. Mr. Wheelright built part of the railway line from Valparaiso to Santiago. He also constructed railways in the Argentine Republic, and he foresaw the necessity of joining the two systems. His enterprises were very profitable, and out of these profits he made his munificent contributions to the foreign missions of his native New England. He did not live, however, to complete his enterprise of linking the Atlantic and Pacific coasts by a railway line.

The City of Santiago, Chile, and the Snow-Capped Andes

The route across the Andes between Chile and Argentina which has been followed for a long time is that known as the Uspallata Pass. This pass is 12,600 feet high, but its approach from either side is not difficult. Many years ago the Argentine lines were extended to Mendoza on the eastern foothills of the Andes. The Chilean railway line climbed the western slope to a point called Los Andes. Then the railway building stopped because it was impossible for a rail line to climb the grades over the crest of the mountain. The Uspallata Pass was used as the highway of traffic. Cargoes were carried by the mules and other pack animals, while travelers could drive most of the way through the pass in a comfortable stage coach, so that to complete their journey only a few hours was necessary on the back of the mule. It was a picturesque and interesting trip, but was, of course, limited to the summer season, which in this latitude is from November till April. Then the winter snows would come and the pass would be closed.

Sometimes travel would be open as late as June, but the suddenness with which the storms would come and close every footpath even was always dangerous, and no one could depend on getting over the mountains after the first sign of snow. Some years ago I was at Santiago in early June en route to Buenos Ayres. The snows were later than usual and adventurous travelers were still getting through the pass. I had decided to take the train the following morning to Los Andes and then attempt the pass on foot. The telegraph message came late in the afternoon that everything was clear and favorable. That night, after taking dinner with the American Minister, we started out for a stroll. It was moonlight and the sky should have been clear. But almost in an instant it became purple. He quietly remarked, "You'll go round through the Straits." He was right. In the morning the telegraph message came from Los Andes that the passage was absolutely blocked and that the mail-carriers themselves would not attempt it. Nor did they for the next four weeks.

Notwithstanding the dangers of the pass both the Argentine and Chilean governments always have maintained a mail service through the winter season. Shelter huts are built along the route, but there are no St. Bernard dogs as in the Alps. Frequently the mail-carriers lost their lives.

Continued on page 423

A SERMON TO UNBELIEVERS

An Unpublished Discourse by DWIGHT L. MOODY, America's Greatest Evangelist*

I WANT to call your attention to a passage that you will find in Paul's Letter to the Galatians, sixth chapter, seventh verse: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; and he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap everlasting life." With those two verses, I would like to read one out of the sermon that Christ preached, Matthew seventh chapter, first verse: "With what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

Dwight L. Moody

Now, I am going to ask your attention to that seventh verse—that one verse: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." I believe this sentence belongs to saint and sinner alike. It applies to every human being on the face of this earth. It makes no difference what nationality he belongs to; it makes no difference whether he be Jew or Gentile, Catholic or Protestant. Here is a law that has been enforced for thousands of years, and neither devil nor man has been able to break it. You might as well try to blot the sun out of the heavens as to blot out this truth. You can't get round it or over it. It meets every man, and it makes no difference who the man is; whether it be the minister in the pulpit or the man in the pew, or who he looks like—David or Ahab. He may be a peasant behind the plow. There is the law that meets every man on the face of the earth: agnostic, infidel, pantheist, deist. It makes no difference. A man may say, "I don't believe that Book," and he closes it up. Here is a law that will meet him in every sin of his life. You can't take up the daily newspapers without reading that men reap what they have sown ten, fifteen, twenty, thirty years ago. You haven't got to go out of this hall, or out of your own life, to meet proofs of this text. You will say, "That's true in my own case. I've had to reap." You can't help it.

Truth Is Truth; a Lie Is a Lie

I remember giving out this text to a man and he said, "I don't believe it." "Well," I said, "my friend, that does not change the fact. There's a class of people who lie under this delusion. They think if they don't believe a thing, the thing isn't true." Now, listen! Truth is truth, whether you believe it or not. A lie is a lie, whether you believe it or not. Isn't that so? That man didn't want to believe it. That's the trouble; there are lots of people who don't want to believe it is true. When that meeting broke up, there was an officer at the door who had a warrant for him. He was taken into court and tried for stealing, and found guilty, and he went to prison for twelve months. I have no doubt, when he got into a cell, he found that text true!

Now, my friends, you will find it true, no matter who you are; no matter what your position is. No millionaire can get around that text. His money can't bribe him off. The apostle says, "Don't be deceived." The most deceitful thing in this world is the human heart; it is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. Who can know it? Who knows his own heart? Let us keep in mind that you can't deceive the Almighty. A man must be doubly blind to attempt to pass himself off to the Almighty for more than he is. You can't do it. God is going all through the world and he beholds all the hearts of the sons of men. He knows every one of us to-day—every one. You can't deceive him. You can deceive your own wife; you can deceive your neighbors; you can deceive yourself; but you can't deceive the God of that Book. And that is the difference between the god of this world and the God of this Book. The God of this Book never has deceived any one.

The god of this world is a deceiver. He deceived our parents back there in Eden. Outside of Eden, he has been deceiving the whole human family right along. But no man can say of the God of the Bible that he ever did or could deceive him. Let us keep

* This sermon, never before published, was preached by Mr. Moody in Tremont Temple, Boston, February 9, 1897.

This is the third of twenty remarkable sermons by Moody, never before published, and the existence of which was disclosed only a few months ago. The absolute authenticity of the sermons is vouched for by the evangelist's son, Wm. R. Moody, who cordially approves their publication in this paper. The sermons are the exclusive property of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. One will appear each month.

that in mind. His eyes go all over the earth, and he beholds the hearts of men, and he knows all about us. So, if we are deceived, let us pray God to open our eyes. "Be not deceived." You may trifle with some things, but don't trifle with the eternal things. And there's not a thing in that Book, no one truth, that has had influence over my life like that one truth. I said: "How stupid you were that you didn't see that years ago."

Look at the men and women of this day, who say they are their own, and now they are not only sowing but reaping, reaping in tears, and in agony, and in untold sorrow; just because what they sowed ten, fifteen, twenty years ago they have got to reap.

We Reap What We Sow

First, A man expects to reap when he sows. Second, He expects to reap the same kind of seed he sows; that's in the natural world, as you know. Third, He expects to reap more. He would be a stupid man if he didn't. Fourth, The kind of seed sown makes no difference. He is going to reap what he sows. If he is sowing good seed, he expects to have a good harvest.

If you've got those four points, hold on to them. You've heard of hooks? Hook them into your mind. If God will help me to drive this text home, it's all I want. Forget the preacher; I don't care about him. He is of small account. If I wanted to fasten a board to a post, I might hammer it for an hour. Down it would go; but if you drove a nail through into the post, it would hold. The sermon is only the hammer to drive that text; the text is the nail. Don't forget the Four Points.

First, he is going to reap. Bound to. Agnostics and everybody else. A man expects to reap when he sows. Would you find a man who would sow this spring if he knew that some blight and mildew were coming, and that nobody else would gather a harvest? He would say, "I'll save my seed." But he sows in hope. Would you find these men toiling and working four, five, six, eight, nine years acquiring a profession, and meanwhile they can't earn their own bread, if they didn't expect to reap? They are looking forward to the reaping time. "By and by I will get my hundred dollars, my five hundred dollars, in a day," they say. "I expect to reap." A man buys a pile of goods, and he expects to make a profit. A man expects to reap when he sows. Now this is true in the spiritual world as it is in the natural world. A man is going to reap whether he wants to or not.

Fashionable Lying

Now I come to the second head. If I tell you that I sowed ten acres of wheat last year, and turnips came up, you wouldn't believe me. If I told you that I sowed turnips and cauliflowers came up, you wouldn't believe me. Or, if I planted potatoes and onions came up, you would say: "Moody is daft; he is out of his head." You know it is a fixed law of nature that, if you sow, you shall reap what you sow. It is just this: You get IT; you don't get something else. A man learns a trade, a carpenter's trade. He doesn't expect to repair watches; or he learns the jeweler's trade and he doesn't expect to practise medicine. He expects to reap in the same profession he has sown for. That comes to me with great power, in that Book, that it is just as true in the spiritual life as in the natural—that a man has got to reap the same kind of seed he sows.

I will give an illustration: I have a son. I see a neighbor coming toward my house and I don't want to see him; and I say to my son who is going to the door, "Tell him that I'm out of town." I have put a lie in my boy's mouth to give to my neighbor. It won't be six months before that boy will lie to me. I will reap that lie myself.

A lady said: "Why is it we can't get better service? Is it not strange?" "No," I said, "I don't think it is strange. When you ladies will teach your servants to go to the door and tell a caller that you are out, when all the time you are at home but don't want to be seen, do you wonder that if they lie to callers they will lie to you?"

A fashionable lady said: "Mr. Moody, we don't mean anything when we say we are 'not at home' This is a society lie." Yes, but a "society lie" is as bad as any other lie. There is no difference.

A merchant said to me in Chicago: "Isn't it astonishing that we can't get honest clerks? I found one of my clerks stealing; I didn't want to hurt his character, so I let him go. I get another man, and it isn't long before he gets to stealing. I would have been a wealthy man if I hadn't had so many clerks stealing from me." I said: "What do you, a merchant, will teach your clerks to lie to the customers, they will, of course, lie to and cheat you. When you teach your clerks to say your goods are 'all wool,' when you know they are half cotton, there is no worse for a man to put his hand into your till and put the money in his pocket than to take it out of the customer." Now, what do you say? And when a merchant will go and put a French or German tag on goods manufactured in New England and say it is imported, they won't have honest clerks. If you sow to the wind, you'll reap the whirlwind. You sow tares, you must reap tares. Teach your clerks to lie, to tell that which is not true, and, of course, they will swindle you if they get a chance.

Now, I come to something that I think has had more weight with me on the temperance question than any other thing in the whole Bible, leaving out moral and religious questions. No man can afford to sell whisky. Why? I will tell you. You sell my son whisky, and make a drunkard of him, and you may be sure that some one will sell your son whisky and make a drunkard of him.

The Skeleton in the House

I will throw down a challenge—I will challenge you to find a man or woman who has been allied to whisky for twenty years, who has not got a skeleton in the home. They have either got a drunken son or son-in-law, or brother, or brother-in-law; the curse has come into their own family. Take up the challenge, will you? Go and find such a case. You can't afford to rent your property for whisky. If you do, the curse will come into your own family. "Be sure your sin will find you out." You will find some millionaires who have made themselves millionaires; but where are their sons? In the grave drunkards—been there for years. You don't have to travel far to prove what I say. I threw down this challenge. I threw it down once and a man came to the hotel and said: "I wasn't round to the opera house, but I understand you threw down a challenge. Take it back, for it isn't true." He said: "My father was a rum-seller and I am a rum-seller, and the curse never struck my father's family or mine." I said: "I have traveled all over Christendom, and I have never known two generations that accursed business but the curse struck in their family." There were two prominent citizens in that room. I said: "I will investigate. I am going to speak to-night, and I will take it all back if it is not true." And when I went out, one man said: "That man's own brother committed suicide only six weeks ago in this city, leaving a widow and seven children, and he has that widow and the children to care for; and he himself was drunk with for a week." And yet he said the curse never came in his family! He thought, perhaps, that a brother was not a relative! A sort of relative! The Lord wanted to know about Abel, and Cain said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Some men don't think it comes to them unless it comes down on their own head—their children, their daughter can marry a drunken husband and have a little hell all through life, and it don't seem to "come near them!"

No man can afford to sell whisky; and if you are in the business, take my advice and get an axe and knock it in the head, and don't put it in the cellar. [Applause.] Friends, don't applaud; let it strike down into the heart; unless it goes down in the heart, it doesn't amount to much. If you are allied to this cursed business, get out of it. Let it cost you something. You say, "What's going to become of me? Going to have my wife and children starve?" Well, I would really like to see a martyr in the nineteenth century! It has been a long time since the Church has had a martyr. Let it get out that there's a man in your town who would not sell whisky and his family are starving to death! I declare I would go to the funeral if I had to come away across the continent; and I'd like to pay something toward the erection of a monument over the grave. A man who had so much principle that he would starve rather than sell whisky! I would rather do that than to leave that legacy to my children.

Continued on next page

Sermon to Unbelievers

AN UNPUBLISHED SERMON BY DWIGHT L. MOODY

Continued from preceding page

Am I speaking to a man or woman i this house who is renting prop- ey for whisky? The curse will come t your family! I was in a town some tle ago where a man had built a ise in a street where he lived in valth, in a very reputable part of the cy. And he rented that house (hich improved the lot and the seet when he got the house done) for a evil business. He had four beautiful sons, but no daughters, and every of his sons was ruined in that ise. How much did he make? Sit vn and reckon up. Sow sin and you l reap sin every time, and it will me into your family. You can't put tptation in the way of young men t it will come back to you. You will p the same kind of seed. "Whatsver a man soweth, that shall he also p."

Now, people tell us that the "old ok" is gone out of date. If you will d that book, you will find that right ang for six thousand years God has de men to reap what they sow. He de Adam to reap before he left den. There was no detective; no lice; no constables; no sheriff. I uld like to know what these agnosts and infidels and atheists make out that—that God brought that man to jgment! Sin found him out, didn't i Men may escape our law; they ake laws that we can escape; but d has laws that man cannot escape. E hasn't money enough to bribe the Almighty. You can bribe a judge al a jury, but you can't bribe God. Adam's sin found him out. Didn't d make Cain reap outside of Eden, al didn't he make him reap the same kd of sin he had sown? Didn't God ake Ahab reap the same kind of sin h had sown? Sowing fulfilled to the ler!

Let us get down at once to this character of Jacob. Jacob wanted t supplant Esau. Now, Jacob had bn very cunning. They call him "shrewd," "long-headed." I would a soon be called a "thief" as "long-headed" in getting the start of another an. You go and pass off a lame hse on another man, and think that "shrewd." You will get fourteen lame hses stuck off on you. You can't afford to do that. The idea of a man sling his character for ten dollars! They say "Every man has his price." What is your "price"? It is what you uld "sell out" for. Jacob sold out. E made some skinclothes and put t on the back of his hands and around his neck, so that if his father embraced him he could feel the hair. Esau was "a hairy man." And Isaac sd, "Come hither, my son; let me feel you." Isaac went by "feeling" and g deceived. A lot of people want to fl Christ. You are to walk by faith al not by your feelings. Isaac went by his feelings and got deceived. The wrd "feeling" doesn't occur but twice i the Bible, and this is one. The fther put his arm around the neck of h son, and kissed him; he thought it vs Esau. He said, "It is the hand of Esau, but the voice of Jacob." And by Jacob's lying and deception, he got the birthright blessing that belonged to h brother Esau; but he paid ten tousand times more than it was vrth. You and I never get anything honestly that we are not losers. A an who steals my pocketbook—I'd n lose much, as I've not got much—rks losing heaven as well as peace of conscience. He could never look me i the face again as long as he lives. Jacob was a loser in the transaction, ihe was "long-headed" and "shrewd." And when Esau came in from the fd, and found that Jacob had obtned the blessing of Isaac, Esau sd, "I will slay my brother Jacob." This was his plan. Rebekah is planng to keep Jacob at home; but

Continued on last column

The Children's Pulpit

MOTHER'S DAY

By Rev. J. M. FARRAR, D.D.*

MOTHER sews love into all the seams. Happy is the child whose mother makes the little coat. It may not fit as well as the tailor-made one, but it surely looks more like the child who wears it. A tailor coat keeps the body warm; a mother coat keeps the heart warm. A tailor coat is worn out and forgotten, but the mother coat is worn on the memory even unto old age and never wears out. There is a beautiful story about a mother whose name was Hannah. She gave the greatest gift she had to God. The gift was her little boy Samuel. How did she give him to God? She took him to God's temple and left him there to serve God as long as he lived. Once a year she visited him and each time took him a new coat that she made with her own hands and heart. Ask your mother to tell you about the coat Hannah made for her little boy Samuel.

. . .

SOME one has said that the three best words in the English language are Mother, Home and Heaven. You can fold all three into the one big word, Mother. It is mother who makes the word House spell Home; and Mother and Home are Heaven on earth. There is, therefore, just one best word; it is MOTHER. An old fable represents Atlas holding the world on his shoulders. A great sculptor has given the world a new statue representing Atlas as a mother supporting the world. Here is what Dr. Parkhurst writes about it in the Evening Journal:

> The right arm seems extended to its utmost reach, as though yearning to throw its clasp clear around the precious burden, while the other arm lays itself up against the globe in a sort of half caress. The instant impression produced is that of the clinging affectionateness of sustaining motherhood. There is just enough evidence of strain in the right arm and in the slightly drawn muscles of the back to indicate that, although it is a love-task that she is committed to, it is still a task, and involving that same kind of self-expenditure that is the price at which all perfect service has to be rendered.
>
> In the entire posture — which is not so much posture as action — there is symbolized the idea of mother-love tinged with hope and purpose, as the means of the great world's uplift. She is, however, upon bended knee, and her achievement made holy by the devoutness of her intent and aspiration. Although a work of love, and due to the artist's devotion to his own mother, it is still a marketable product, and has already been sold for $10,000.

. . .

IT is mother who lifts and holds the world. Some of these words in the story of Mother Atlas have too many letters. Ask mother to put a tuck in the long words. As your mind grows you can let out the tucks, one each year. Sunday, May 8, is Mother's Day. One day set apart for every person to think and talk about mother. If mother is with us this is the day to plant tulips where she smiles. If mother is dead, we will plant flowers on her grave. Mother's Day, the best day in all the year.

. . .

DID I hear you sing, "Tell me a new, new story of mother and her love"? Here is one I read in Little Folks, that is new to me. It is called "The Loving Game." It was a pretty game that Aunt Rose and little Harry used to play together. When Harry would put up his tiny forefinger and say, "I can beat you lovin'!" Aunt Rose would say, "Oh, no, you can't!" Then she would put her thinking cap on and begin, "I love you more than a bushel of pennies!"

Quick as a flash, Harry would say, "I love you more than two bags of big dollars!"

Then Aunt Rose would say, "I love you longer than seven Sundays!"

A shake of that tiny forefinger, and Harry would answer, "But I love you longer than ten Christmases!"

"I love you clear round the block!" Aunt Rose would say.

"And I love you all over the park!" Harry would assert.

"I love you as high as this house!" Aunt Rose would declare.

"And I love you to the top of the church steeple!" Harry would say.

"I love you as deep as a well!"

"Pooh! I love you to the bottom of the lake!"

And so they would go on.

. . .

BUT one day, Harry had a bright thought. After he had loved to the bottom of the ocean and down into the middle of the earth, and to the top of the mountains and way up into the sky, he began to caper about and clap his hands. "I've got you! I've got you!" he shouted.

Then with shining eyes he said, "I love you more than my mamma loves me!" Thereupon Aunt Rose gave it up; there was nothing, she thought, beyond that.

The Children's Pulpit thinks Aunt Rose had another guess. She could have told Harry that she tried to love him as much as God loved him. This is the greatest love. If the sculptor had represented Mother Atlas as lifting her children on the world into the arms of God the statue would be complete. God loves every child better than mother loves her child. Hannah knew this and took little Samuel, whom she loved better than she loved herself, and gave him back to God.

Let us all sing "the old, old story of Jesus and his love."

---

* Pastor First Reformed Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. TEXT: "His mother made him a little coat." I. Sam. 2 : 19.

A Sermon to Unbelievers

Continued from first column

through fear of Esau, she sends him away to Laban and never sets eyes on him again. How much did she make? She would deceive her husband. No wife deceives her husband without having to suffer for it. And no husband has ever deceived his wife and lived a double life, who didn't reap bitterly, too. I don't care who he is. It is a terrible thing to make light of sin. There's not much sport when the reaping time comes.

When you hear a man saying, "I'm sowing my wild oats," I say, "There's no joke about sin, my friend. The bitterest thing in this world is sin. And if God will only keep sin out of my life, I don't fear anything else. The bitterest enemy is sin. You can't afford to trifle with it."

Jacob went to Bethel and God met him there, and from the top of that ladder he shouts down "Grace!" Now, a man will think of that and will say, "I don't want anything to do with a God that will deal in grace with a man who has done such a mean thing, a contemptible thing, as that!" A man said, "Where did God ever punish Jacob?" Where didn't he do it? He went down to Haran and had his wages changed seven times. He found that Laban could make a sharp bargain himself. Diamond cuts diamond; Greek meets Greek. Laban could drive a sharp bargain.

Let us go further. Jacob had twelve sons. He loved Joseph more than he loved the other sons. There was partiality. One morning, Joseph tells of a dream in which his father and his ten brothers bowed to him. That was putting fuel on flame; that made things worse. They planned to murder Joseph. They cast him into a pit; and soon after, they saw a band of Ishmaelites to whom they sold him for twenty pieces of silver, first stripping him of his coat of many colors. Then they went to Jacob's flock, caught and killed a kid, and, dipping it in blood, sent it to their father Jacob. Now, what do the ten boys do? They lie to their father, as he had lied to his father. They lied to him. It will always come home. You can't dodge it. "Be sure your sin will find you out." By and by, God will say, "Son, son—daughter, daughter!" All of our sins will come back, if they have not been blotted out and forgiven. Infidels, deists, sceptics —you can't dodge. It overtook Jacob. Do you think that any man or woman will escape the justice of the living God?

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

Anvil Sparks

..TRUTH is what God says about a thing.

..NO one can look at the stars without wanting to live forever.

..THE man who aims at nothing is amazed when he happens to make a hit.

..THE blood of Christ was shed to make every promise in the Bible worth its face.

..A SINNER always hates himself the moment he finds out that God loves him.

..THE man who points to the cross should never do it with a frown on his face.

..IT takes some preachers a long while to find out that God employs no hired help.

..IT is one of the first laws of God that the man who will not give shall not possess.

..YOU say the Lord's prayer every day, but how much of it are you trying to help answer?

..IF you are faithful to present duties, God will promote you to higher ones as soon as it is safe to do it.

..GOD would have his children to still be rich when moth and rust and robbers have taken all they can take.

WITH ROOSEVELT ON THE NILE

By EARL C. ELDER, Assiut, Egypt

ON account of insufficient time, Ex-President Roosevelt telegraphed us that he would be unable to stop to dedicate the new college at Assiut, as he had wished to do. The president of the college went to meet him and to induce him to stop for an hour or two at least.

I had the fortune last summer of traveling on the Upper Nile on the same boat which brought Mr. Roosevelt from Gondokoro to Khartoum, the Dal. During the last two days Mr. Roosevelt has been to see Omdurman and the battlefield of Kerreri, where Kitchener defeated the Dervishes.

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood

The Ex-President at the American School, Luxor

Piles of Grain on the River Bank

A Typical Arab Market Crowd

An Arab Merchant

When Mr. Roosevelt reached the Blue Nile, he was on the border line of civilization. Khartoum is a thriving commercial city with a modern appearance and a large European population. Here are railroads, shipbuilding docks and immense government buildings, all of which are lacking further up the Nile. Beyond Khartoum there are only frontier garrisons, trading posts and mission stations, excepting, of course, the native villages.

Across from this up-to-date town of Khartoum lies the only city in central Africa with a history—Omdurman. The capital of the famous Mahdi and his successor, the Khalifa, has been partially altered, but it is still an Arab city. Where once the wildest and most barbarous of potentates had his place of execution, there are prosperous business houses. The whistle of the tiny engine on the street railway has replaced the ombeya which called men to execution. At its zenith, Omdurman stretched for more than seven miles along the river bank—a metropolis of mud huts. To-day, it is the commercial centre of the native Sudan. Omdurman is truly a cosmopolitan city.

The native markets are much the same as twenty years ago. Men and women gather under patched straw hovels and barter much the same as they did in the days of the Mahdi. Here are to be found earthenware jars, hides, all kinds of basket work, and all manner of food-stuffs. The streets are sprinkled by muscular native women who scatter the water over the dusty streets with their hands.

The river front gives one the opportunity of seeing the importance of the city as a commercial centre. The trade is not centred in large warehouses or carried by immense river steamers. Great piles of grain and other commodities are piled along the bank for the distance of a mile. Native boats, with immense sails, are still used in transporting gum Arabic, dura, rubber and ivory. Sometimes the wind is not good and it takes these boats two or three months to travel a few hundred miles; but the Arab never hurries, so it doesn't matter. Business methods are antiquated; but the amount of business carried on in this mud city exceeds five million dollars per year.

Steamship travel on the White Nile must be made on Sudan government steamers. Few tourists travel beyond Khartoum, so the present need is only transportation for government officials and supplies. Attached to the steamer are two or more barges which are used not only for freight and animals, but also for the third and fourth class passengers. This crowd includes the overwhelming majority of the travelers. Here are Greek traders, the pioneers of trade and wickedness in the Sudan; Egyptian and native Sudanese soldiers, and other transients.

For the first two days the journey up the White Nile is one of monotony. Sand and scrawny mimosa and acacia groves are all that the river banks offer in the way of scenery. Here and there a goatherd may be seen watching his goats as they nibble at the sand dunes. If there chances to be an unusual growth of vegetation, thousands of camels may be seen feeding. From El Dueim, the first stopping place, caravans go to Kordofan, Darfur and the far away French Sudan. The landing place here is filled with half-naked blacks carrying sacks of grain and gum Arabic.

Large flocks of water fowl, herons, cranes, and geese fill the air and settle on the thick shrubbery along the bank. With the appearance of the thick river grasses comes the crocodile. He may often be seen sunning himself on the bank or splashing about in the water or opening his ghastly mouth. About the fourth day out, some native calls out, "grunty," and every one looks at the spot in the river where he is pointing. In a moment there is a splash and a snort and the first hippopotamus to be seen sticks his enormous head from the water. From now on they are often visible and their sputtering heads become familiar sights.

As we advance up the river the change in scenery is so gradual that we scarcely realize that we are coming into wildest Africa. Perhaps one evening just as the steamer makes a turn in the river we realize it instantly. Dense impenetrable forests and tall heavy grasses line the banks of the river. Wild noises fill the air. The twitter of the numerous birds and the rushing of their wings are accompanied by the howls and low moans of the fiercer inhabitants of the place. A herd of antelope or deer appear for a moment and then go scampering away frightened at the steamer. Two naked savages are seen in the tall grass spearing fish, and a canoe with eight warriors glides down the river.

If a stop is made near any native village the bank is often filled with almost naked Shullas or Dinkas, gazing at the strange white people on the steamer. The White Nile and the upper Sudan are not only interesting and unusual, but there is a beauty in the sunsets that is not surpassed even by Egypt. Towards evening, as the sun sets, it tints both sky and water with brilliant carmine and gold.

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood

Mr. Roosevelt Visits "the Tomb of the Kings" at Luxon

The Market at Omdurman

House of the Khalifa at Omdurman

Shullas on the River Bank

HIS GOOD WORKS REMEMBERED

A Public Memorial Meeting in New York Honors the Memory of the Late Dr. Klopsch

NEVER were more heartfelt tributes paid to the memory of a great and good man than at the memorial meeting in honor of the late Dr. Louis Klopsch, which was held in the large auditorium of the new Masonic Hall on Twenty-fourth Street, New York City, on the evening of April 14. Rarely has an audience been more in sympathetic accord with the great central theme of the occasion. Almost all those present had been personal friends of Dr. Klopsch, or had been helped through some personal acts of kindness, or through some of his numerous philanthropies, or had known of his great ıblic services at home and abroad, and wished, by eir presence, to join in the general tribute to his emory.

Dr. O. S. Marden

Although the time set for opening the meeting as eight o'clock, the audience began to gather rly; and they made an interesting epitome, as it ere, of the people who had come in contact with r. Klopsch's many-sided activities. There were ıblishers, prominent men of business, writers of stinction, noted clergymen, and representatives of reign governments. There were people who had own him in his church work. There were men om the Bowery Mission, and last, but not least, o hundred and fifty children of the city tenements, ho had been little guests at the Children's Home Mont-Lawn, which Dr. lopsch had founded. The beauful singing of these little ones rought moisture to the eyes of any in the audience.

The hall was selected for its ntral location and fine acous-s. It is constructed of beautiıl marbles and bronzes, and hen the large platform was led with distinguished men and e expectant audience was ated, it made a scene fitting r the occasion.

On the speakers' platform ere Mr. Will R. Moody, of East orthfield, Mass.; Dr. J. H. Darngton, Episcopal Bishop of arrisburg; Dr. O. S. Marden, litor of Success; Irving Bachler, the author of Eben Holden; ev. John Wesley Hill, pastor of e Metropolitan Temple, New ork; Judge Arthur S. Tompns, of the New York Supreme ourt; Rev. Wallace MacMullen, .D.; Mr. Edwin S. Ives, of New ork, who acted as reading sectary; Rev. James M. Farrar, .D., of Brooklyn; Rev. Ferdiand C. Iglehart; Rabbi Michelon, of Trenton, N. J.; Mr. K. amazaki, Consul-General of Japan; Mrs. Sarah ird, "Mother of the Bowery Mission"; Rev. Mr. anderson, chaplain of the Tombs, and others. The der of the service was as follows:

ENING HYMN	Prof. H. E. Browne, Organist.
	"My Faith Looks Up to Thee."
AYER	Rev. Wallace MacMullen, D.D.
RIPTURE READING	Rev. James M. Farrar, D.D.
EADING OF LETTERS	Mr. Edwin S. Ives.
DDRESS	Rabbi Michelson.
EMORIAL ADDRESS	Bishop J. H. Darlington.
BLE VERSES	Sung by 250 Mont-Lawn Children.
	Prof. Noll, of Nyack, at the Organ.
DDRESS	Dr. O. S. Marden.
	(Representing the Periodical Publishers' Association.)
NGING	"The Glory Song," by 250 Mont-Lawn Children.
DDRESS	Mr. Irving Bacheller.
DDRESS	Rev. John Wesley Hill.
DDRESS	Judge Arthur S. Tompkins.
NGING	"It Is Well With My Soul"..Bowery Mission Men's Choir.
DDRESS	Mr. K. Yamazaki of Japan.
DDRESS	Rev. Dr. Iglehart.
OXOLOGY	Prof. Browne, Organ.
ENEDICTION	Rev. Stephen Merritt.

Mr. William R. Moody, of Northfield, Mass., head f the Moody Schools, presided. After the opening ymn, Bishop Darlington, of Harrisburg, led prayer. The bishop prayed that "the memory of ie good man who has gone may make us more alous in all good works for God and our fellowen, giving us greater love for Christ, a higher lea of duty and a firmer resolve to stand fast for ie righteousness of the saints."

Rev. James M. Farrar, D.D., of Brooklyn, chose as the Scripture reading the first psalm. Mr. Edwin S. Ives read extracts from a number of letters received from friends in different States, regretting their inability to be present. Governor Hughes of New York sent word by his secretary that "the Governor would have been very glad to attend the memorial service to Dr. Klopsch were it possible for him to do so, as he highly appreciated Dr. Klopsch's services to humanity." Among those who sent letters of regret were Mr. John C. Havemeyer, of Yonkers; Ex-Mayor Charles A. Schieven, Brooklyn; Mr. John Brisben Walker, Mr. L. N. Doubleday, Mrs. M. V. Terhune ("Marion Harland"), Mr. John Lloyd Thomas, Commander Scottish Rite; Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, Rev. C. H. Mead, Rev. Bernard Peck, and many others.

Rabbi Michelson, of Trenton, was the next speaker. He said in part:

I am a rabbi. I am in charge of a large congregation; the only rabbi of a Jewish community in Trenton. I am Jewish chaplain of the New Jersey State Prison. When I was a boy, I wanted to read something in English which would arouse me and keep me in touch with the highest, the best and the truest in the spiritual world, and I then turned to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and I saw there and I can feel now as I felt when I read those bright and brilliant and arousing and soothing pages, in which this man had stamped every word and every line and every syllable with his personality. And so I went on studying THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and I am reading it to-day. He who reads it and understands its policy, will walk in the ways of the Lord, I am sure.

I came in touch with another work of his—the Bowery Mission. I think it is possibly the greatest institution of its kind in the world. When Dr. Klopsch spoke there, you will believe me when I say, I was stepping upon holy ground. When I saw many men, weary, heavy-laden, and when I heard the Gospel of the New Testament, I said 'blessed,' and the Old Testament, I said 'blessed'; and it was Dr. Klopsch who loved it and worked for it. Our rabbis tell us that the righteous of all nations shall inherit the kingdom of heaven. Dr. Louis Klopsch was righteous and he was good, and, therefore, though of a different faith, it is my feeling that he will inherit the kingdom of heaven. Let this be our prayer, that when we shall all meet our Father, we shall see him side by side there as our brother himself.

The Memorial Meeting in New York

Bishop J. H. Darlington, who made the principal address, spoke of Dr. Klopsch as the "friend of the whole world, raising millions of money for those hungering unto death. In any great trouble, such as a famine at the ends of the earth, he would take up that want and be glad to meet it. It was seizing the opportunities lying around him that made him a genius. He was a genius in organizing; not in writing or speaking, but in using the things about him which he made into means of vast good. He discovered Dr. Farrar and his ability to preach to the children, that he might bring them to the feet of the dear Master.

"It is only a short time ago that I was at the Bowery Mission, when it was visited by the President of the United States. As I stood there, the boys in their rough way gave three cheers for 'Bill and the Bish'; and I thought they were not cheering the right man. I little thought hat night that so soon the end would come to Dr. Klopsch."

The singing of the "Bible Verses" by the children of Mont-Lawn was beautifully rendered, and made a deep impression on the audience.

Chairman Moody then paid a brief, but eloquent, tribute to the late Dr. Klopsch, as "a Christian great in his deeds, who dared with great daring deeds of magnitude which many would have shrunk from. His sympathy extended beyond geographical barriers, and made him a great foreign missionary in the best sense; a great home missionary in the truest sense, and a loyal and devoted city missionary also."

Dr. O. S. Marden was the next speaker. He represented the publishing interests in which Dr. Klopsch was so active. In the course of his address, he said:

I met Dr. Klopsch last at a banquet in Washington given by the Periodical Association of America, of which he was an officer. The President of the United States was there. Dr. Klopsch sat at my table and seemed to enjoy the occasion as much as any. He was taken ill that very night. I never saw him alive again. He was thought very highly of by the Periodical Association, which represents something like fifty different magazines and periodicals.

Mr. W. R. Moody, Chairman

Mr. Klopsch started in New York poor, and made his own career, and if all those who have been befriended by him should wish to come to this memorial service, the highway from the Battery to Central Park would be black with the people who have been helped by his marvelous life. More than that, there are probably one hundred thousand people alive to-night who would have starved but for this man's remarkable ability and organizing energy, his far-seeing sagacity and business ability. He founded orphanages all over the world. But right here at home was one of the greatest of his works, as represented by the children here to-night. I never saw a man enter into child-life so absolutely as did Dr. Klopsch. I understand that over forty thousand children from the East Side, poor, pale, many ill, have been taken to the Home upon the Hudson—Mont-Lawn—and had two or three weeks' vacation. Think of it. Over forty thousand children! And who of us can tell how many of these he has saved from going wrong because he befriended them, and how many would have been dead but for this man? If we could ask Dr. Klopsch to-night what gave him the most satisfaction, what do you suppose it would be? He would point to these children, who have been saved and helped, and to the men saved at the Bowery Mission. It is only what we give away that we save. It is only what we render to others that survives death. We cannot carry a penny across the Great River, but we can carry good deeds; and Dr. Klopsch would say that many of the things we appreciate were mere rubbish. And he would give us another lesson—to do our work while we live. We plan to do good works. Men accumulating money, intend to do much for some good purpose; but Dr. Klopsch gave us a lesson in doing good while we live.

Chairman Moody again introduced the children, who sang most sweetly the "Glory Song."

Rev. Wallace MacMullen offered a prayer, after which Chairman Moody introduced Mr. Irving Bacheller, who spoke briefly. He said in part:

Our friend, whom we honor to-night, preached with bread; he argued with human kindness; he prayed with wheat and corn and forgiveness and generosity. He baptized with soap and water. We call it the modern spirit, but it is really very old. He preached a sermon to the hungry hordes of India—one of the greatest sermons of history. There were a million bushels of wheat in it. Louis Klopsch was essentially a minister and organizer. His desk was his pulpit; THE CHRISTIAN HERALD the contribution plate; every son of God was his brother. His week day was as holy as his Sabbath; his counting-room as consecrated as his church; his note-of-hand as sacred as his Bible; his business as clean as his religion. We need more such ministers. At Bradstreet's his rating was perfect, and I fancy in the archives of St. Peter it is quite as good. If every man, woman and child whom he had befriended in this wide world should lay a flower upon his grave, a mountain of fragrance and beauty would arise thereon.

Mr. Moody introduced Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill, Metropolitan M. E. Church, New York, who said:

"Last week, in conversation with President Taft in Washington, with reference to the rare qualities and the phenomenal achievements of our departed friend, our President declared that his late visit to the Bowery Mission was one of the most inspiring and delightful events of his life. Then, pausing for a moment, he said: 'Tell me about the Mission. Will it stand?' I said: 'It truly will. It has been so organized and established that it must enlarge and increase and more and more fulfil the vision which its founder had concerning it.' Then the President said: 'I have heard that Dr. Klopsch founded a Children's Home somewhere. Where is it? Tell me about it.' I told him about it; and then he asked what sort of a memorial would be established to the memory of this great and good man. I told him that an effort had already been projected by the friends of Dr. Klopsch to endow the Children's Home. 'Well,' he said, as I left him, 'keep me advised as to that movement, for when the time comes, I want to send

Continued on next page

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

A Notable Appreciation

IT was a graceful and spontaneous tribute that was paid to the memory of Dr. Klopsch by the gathering of professional and business men and women in New York on April 14. Through all the addresses there ran a note of deep and sincere admiration for the character and work of the man who, through his far-reaching benevolences, and aided by a great army of godly people, had been the means of doing so much good to others. Men of every denomination and every station in life, from President down to the humblest citizen, have been impressed with the value of that work to humanity, and by speech or message they freely expressed their views on the subject. Over all else, in the universal estimation, was Dr. Klopsch's love for the children; and the majority of the speakers showed this by their eloquent appreciation of the orphanage work and of the helpful and beneficent influence of the Children's Home at Mont-Lawn, which Dr. Klopsch founded, and where 40,000 little children of the poor have been summer guests in the last fifteen years. Over the gates of Mont-Lawn he inscribed the beautiful words of Frocbel: "I love God and little children"—and these furnished the real keynote of his life-work, although it had many other ramifications. This latest public expression of approval must be exceedingly grateful to all who have co-operated with him in his various charities.

The "Violent Sisterhood" Here?

WHEN the little group of malcontents in the National Suffrage Convention hissed the President while he was delivering his address of welcome, the other day, they gave to this country its first experience of the tactics that have disgraced the movement in England, and which won for a class of reckless and ill-bred agitators the unenviable name of "the violent sisterhood." With his usual keenness of perception, the President quickly comprehended the situation. He saw at a glance that the offenders were a little group by themselves, and in no sense representative of the sentiments or manners of the convention as a whole. He is an old campaigner, and was more than equal to the occasion. "Ladies," said he, with his most pervasive smile, "you show yourselves capable of exercising that degree of self-restraint which is necessary to meet a political situation." This pointed and diplomatic rebuke, delivered in perfect good nature, was roundly applauded. But the incident cannot fail to create an unfortunate impression among thoughtful people everywhere. If we are to believe the claim that the suffrage will be an uplifter and purifier in politics, how are we to harmonize that claim with an illustration of discourtesy like this, which is quite on a level with methods that are bitterly denounced abroad? Such an incident does more damage to a deserving cause than a dozen conventions can rectify.

Still House-Cleaning

ONE of the most noted professors of history in this country once said that the four most important offices in the United States were the Presidential, those of Secretary of State, Speaker of the House, and Governor of New York,—the latter, of course, because of the State's great population, wealth and importance in the sisterhood of States. The present Governor of the Empire State, though he does not care for the spectacular features of political life, has had the eyes of the nation upon him for a long time, and his general policy as Governor has met with approval. His winning fight with the race-track men is still fresh in the public mind. He has always considered that the business of the State should be run on an honest business basis for the people—something which causes the professional politicians to shake their heads, and the people to express their approval.

The Governor has been called "cold-blooded." Perhaps he is, but whatever cold chills he has given to anybody have been to the type of legislator who has yet to find out that a public office is a public trust, and that in the business of the State "graft" should no more be tolerated than it would be in a private business. The Governor has just sent a message to the Senate and Assembly making a firm demand to investigate what use has been made of corrupt or improper means to promote or defeat legislation. The recent Allds investigation is fresh in the public mind, and the Governor also remembers it. Recent facts concerning the way in which insurance bills were passed or defeated have also come to light, and the Governor thinks it about time the people should know who is serving them well and who is not. There are a number in the Senate and House who are not pleased with the thought of an investigation; but it looks as if Mr. Hughes would again insist on house-cleaning, and the representatives will have to agree. It is not pleasant, but the political health of the Empire State will be better for it, and no honest man need fear the light. It is the others who are nervous.

Seeking "New Things"

THERE are so many different philosophies and theologies nowadays that the description of the Athenians in the time of Paul—that they were constantly seeking after some "new thing"—might very well be applied to present conditions. A distinguished theologue has recently written a book on the modern substitutes for religion, in which he discusses various "new things," although in reality they are very old. Among them he enumerates the "Religion of Morality," the "Religion of the Universe," otherwise Pantheism, and the "Religion of Humanity," otherwise Theism without Christ. With regard to the first, he reaches the conclusion that "Morality is variable and conventional—a mere arbitrary arrangement which can be dispensed with by the emancipated soul"—and he adds that the literature which assumes that religion is obsolete "does not as a rule suffer itself to be much hampered by the fetters of morality." With regard to Pantheism, instead of being saved in Christ "the Pantheist is lost in contemplation of a universal God." In humanity he finds that to hold the dictrines of Theism without reference to Christ is to deprive them of their most sublime illustration and their most convincing truth. Thus far there has been no substitute found for Christianity. Christ is to-day, more than in any previous age, "the hope of the world."

Child Criminals

THE child criminal is the product of the wrong side of society. In one of Dickens' novels, he described with his unerring pen the manner in which children were taught to steal by an accomplished older thief. In our larger cities, there can be no doubt that children are employed to help grown-up criminals in their nefarious schemes. Other means are at work besides those of direct teaching and example to start young boys and girls on their first steps on the down grade. There are neglected little fellows, who get their food where they can, who huddle together and sleep in alleys and cellars, whose life from the cradle is a battle with want, and to whom vice is familiar from the time they can speak. These children grow up as naturally and inevitably to prey upon the community as more fortunate children grow to be its pride and defense. What are we to do for delinquent children?

Judge Lindsey has pointed the way, and in some of our larger towns children's courts are conducted fully as much with a view to the betterment of the children as to their punishment, when they are detected in crime. What we need most of all is a spirit of Christian love that shall lead the fathers and mothers in happy homes to see what they can practically do for outcast and outraged childhood. Then there should be a determined effort to do away with vile literature. The stories read by child criminals incite them to emulate deeds that lead to their own destruction.

His Good Works Remembered

Continued from preceding page

my check as my personal tribute to the charact and achievements of Dr. Louis Klopsch.'

"We are too near his memory to fully apprecia his greatness. One must stand back from the mou tain in order to behold its magnitude. We shall n forget him. There are moments when he seems f removed from us. But I think he has only stepp around the corner."

Judge Arthur S. Tompkins, of Nyack, N. Y., ma a speech that deeply impressed the meeting. I said in part:

Coming from the summer home of Dr. Klopsch, and the sce of his splendid work for the children whom he loved and serv I count it a very great privilege to have a little part in t appropriate memorial service. In his death, countless thousa into whose lives he brought sunshine and cheer and hope, ha lost a loving and generous friend, and the world has lost c of its big men, and one of its great benefactors. Few men ha touched so many hearts and influenced so many lives for go His was a world-wide love, as broad as the continent and deep and intense as the needs of his fellow men. His gen and capacity for great enterprises, his business acumen, fertility of resources, his energy and courage and enthusia enabled him to overcome every obstacle and surmount eve difficulty, and solve every problem, and achieve singular succe in every undertaking, and enabled him to do works of char and benevolence and philanthropy that have startled and amaz the world. And to-night the world is better and sweeter a purer, and heaven is richer because he lived and loved a wrought. The Christlike spirit that has made this the ve golden age of philanthropy and benevolence was exemplified the life of our friend. What must be his reward for all t activities of mind and heart and means; for the spiritual a moral and physical well-being of men and women all the wo over? There is no arithmetic by which his benefactions can counted. The sum total of his kindly deeds and his charita acts will never be known this side eternity. But we rejoi that the great works that he inaugurated are to continue. Tru his labors, his works do follow him. He sowed harvests th coming generations will reap. He started some streams work and influence that will flow on and on forever.

The Bowery Mission Choir then sang "It is We With My Soul," the audience singing the chorus.

Rev. Ferdinand C. Iglehart was the last speake He said Dr. Klopsch was most Christlike in h love for children. At Mont-Lawn they climbed upo him, put their arms about his neck, and kissed hir and he was happy, and young; and they were happ because he was with them. The speaker happene to be in Washington just a few days after the deat of Dr. Klopsch. "President Taft asked me about tl institutions which had been founded, and I told hi that his family and those he had gathered about hi in his institutions promised to continue the beautifi work he had done. The great ones of the earth kne and honored him; the men in the Bread Line wo shiped him; the children loved him. 'Bury me i Sleepy Hollow,' he said when he lay dying, 'so tha I can look out upon Mont-Lawn.' It was the app of his eye, and on fair days the children can loo out upon Sleepy Hollow and see the grave of the benefactor. And so long as there shall ring th merry laugh of childhood; so long as there shall l the appreciation of the true, the beautiful, the goo the heroic in human conduct, so long will this ma live in the hearts and interests of our countrymen

After the singing of the Doxology, Chairma Moody asked the Rev. Stephen Merritt to pronounc the benediction. The meeting closed at 10 P.M.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, April 27, 1910

	PAGE
The Blossoms of Spring	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	410
Famous Christian Testimonies (Portrait)	410
The Great Andes Tunnel Opened (Illustrated) By Charles M. Pepper	411, 423
A Sermon to Unbelievers By Dwight L. Moody	412, 413
The Children's Pulpit. By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	413
With Roosevelt on the Nile (Illustrated)	414
His Good Works Remembered (Illustrated)	415, 416
Our Editorial Forum	416
The Bible and Newspaper (Illustrated)	417
Census-Takers Hard at Work (Illustrated)	418
The Second Peace Palace (Illustrated)	418
In Budding Spring-Time. By Margaret E. Sangster	419
The Strawberry Handkerchief Serial by Amelia E. Barr	420, 421
The Drunkard's Woe Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	422, 423
Our Financial Department	424
Our Lookout Round the World	425
Christian Graces. Christian Endeavor Topic	426
A Spiritual Birthday. Epworth League Topic	427

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

World's Deepest Marble Quarry

THE deepest marble quarry in the world is at West Rutland, Vt., where the workmen are operating stone-cutting machines between ıree and four hundred feet below the surface of ıe earth.

Marble is not blasted from its position as some ay suppose. It is too valuable to be shattered. Cutng is therefore resorted to, and the stone is freed om its position in huge rectangular blocks weighg many tons. It is this method of removing the one which gives the quarry walls the peculiar ppearance shown in the illustration.

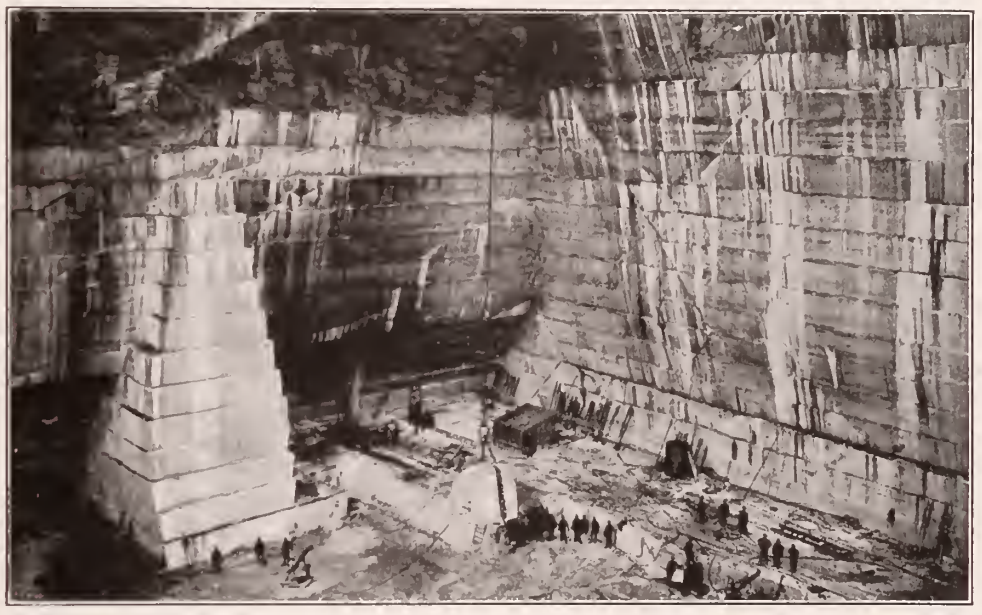
The channeling machines, as they are called, run ck and forth on rails, the drills with which they e equipped being driven with great force downard into the stone, cutting a slit or channel about ı inch wide. By means of powerful drills, holes e then bored horizontally in the exposed face of e rock at the desired depth, and in these holes edges are driven to complete the work of detachg the marble from its bed.

To the uninitiated it may sound strange to speak sawing a block of marble into slabs. Yet this is ne much as a log is sawed into boards. There is, wever, this difference: It takes only a few secds to convert the log into lumber, but it requires any hours to cut a block of marble into slabs. ıe process dates from the times of the ancients, d with the exception that steam and electric wer have been substituted r hand power marble is being wed in Vermont and elsehere to-day just as it was in aly before the time of Christ d the apostles.

Sand, running water and a w, consisting of a strip of ft iron without teeth, are all at is necessary in this pross. The rough block of stone placed in position beneath a t of saws which are worked ck and forth by machinery. stream of water, containing arp sand in suspension, pours nstantly over both saws and one. The sharp edges of the nd cut the soft marble as the rip of iron grinds the small rticles of silicon back and rth against it. Twenty or irty hours are needed to cut rough a block five feet thick. fter this the slabs are polned. They are then ready for e market.

Vermont leads the world in e production of this kind of one. Perhaps three-fifths of l the polished marble in the nited States has been taken om the quarries of West Rutnd and its neighborhood. There were marble arries at Albastron from which the perfumed se was made, which Mary used in anointing her rd. David in making mention of the materials had prepared for the building of the temple, after eaking of the gold, silver, brass, iron, wood and ecious stones of various colors, makes this refer-ce to the product of the quarries:

and marble stones in abundance. (I. Chron. 29:2.)



Interior of the Great Marble Quarry at West Rutland, Vt.

eepy Grass

Experiments by the Carnegie Institution have lled attention to a peculiar kind of grass, well own to the Indians of New Mexico, which puts imals to sleep. Cattle eating it will lie down and ep from twelve to twenty-four hours at a time. ws turned out for a day, who fail to return at ght, can often be found, in a stupor, in districts ere this grass grows. Fortunately, there are no effects from this kind of pasture. There are rtain engagements and amusements that put ristians asleep, and the slumber is by no means rmless, but if undisturbed becomes the sleep of ath. The apostle makes reference to this condin in these words:

Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ ll give thee light. (Eph. 5:14.)

dest Woman on Earth

There is a tall, thin woman, with face full of inkles, almost blind and deaf, with form bent over, io is said to be the oldest woman in the world. It Frau Dutkiewiez, residing at Posen, Germany, who lately celebrated her one hundred and twenty-fifth birthday. By a strange coincidence, her son, who was in his ninetieth year and was a priest of the Jesus Church in Posen, fell dead of heart disease at the altar where he was celebrating mass on the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversay of his mother's birth. The prophet foretold added longevity to earthly life at the ushering in of the kingdom of Christ. There is a manifest increase in the average length of human life, as the ideas and spirit of Christ are disseminated. In his description of this added length of life the prophet says:

There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days; for the child shall die an hundred years old. (Isa. 65:20.)

Mission Worker Slain

Rev. Frank Skala, editor of the Bohemian Christian Journal, and an active mission worker, preached a sermon in the little Congregational Church in Wood's Run, a suburb of Pittsburg, Pa., on martyrdom. After referring to the spirit of the ancient martyrs, inspired with Christian enthusiasm, he said that any moment God should want his life, he would be ready to lay it down. As he left the church, followed by at least a hundred foreigners, a raggedly dressed and collarless man rushed up behind the leader, and pressing a revolver against Skala's head, fired twice, killing him instantly. A brother mission worker who threw up his hand, as if to ward off the weapon from his friend, was also shot in the head and seriously wounded. The assassin was Jan Radovitch. A moment before he had meekly read from juvenile leaflets in the Sunday School led by Skala, and had sat in the back pew of the church during the regular sermon, and heard the man say he was ready for death at any moment. There is not a particle of doubt that the assassin was insane. The question of his sanity ought to have kept him in confinement or under special care. The faithful Christian worker's readiness for death was tested sooner than he expected, and as he was fed on the bread of life and ready for his translation, his tragical death even was a triumph. It will not make much difference to us how or when we shall go, if Christ shall be our life. The text from which Mr. Skala preached his sermon on the martyrs was:

I am that bread of life. (John 6:48.)

Millions in Lame Mule Track

H. W. Campbell, a machinist of Vermont, took up a homestead in Dakota Territory in 1883. His earthly possessions included a few farming implements, a plow, a wagon, a lame mule and a long-horned ox. The ox and mule yoked together broke the sod and put in the crop of wheat. The rains came, the water fell on the loose sandy soil, sank into the ground and disappeared as fast as it fell, and when the long hot days of the sunny summer arrived the blades of wheat dried up and died. Other farmers had similar experiences, and thousands of settlers were compelled to return East to their old homes. Campbell looked over his ruined field for the last time before starting back to Vermont, and noticed that in the tracks made by his old lame mule, where the soil was packed by the weight of the animal, the wheat had grown strong and tall. As the result of this observation, South Dakota harvests one of the largest wheat crops of any State in the Union, and is filled with prosperous farmers, and the bankrupt owner of the lame mule is the owner and operator of a hundred acres in North Dakota, 640 acres in Midland County, Texas; 320 acres near Plain View, Tex.; 320 acres at Holdredge, Neb.; 640 acres at Medicine Hat, Alberta, and a section in South Dakota. The good stalks of grain growing in the mule tracks and surrounded by puny stems set Campbell to thinking, from which he evolved a new system of farming. He first made a simple roller, with which he packed the ground down hard on the fresh-sown wheat. Then he built a factory, and afterward many others, for the production of machines that would better roll the fields, which machines are used not only in this country, but in other countries of the world. Season after season his neighbors' crops would all fail, while his fields would yield a bumper crop. He told the people that he put a cistern under his ground and put a lid on it. The cistern was the natural moisture and the lid the pressed ground at the top. He said: "Here is one of my secrets: I sow only about 20 pounds of wheat to the acre, while the experts are sowing a bushel and a half. This year I raised 67 bushels per acre on my Nebraska farm. The State experimental farm, right across the road from my place, yielded about 15 bushels per acre. I have gotten as high as 200 heads of wheat from one grain, and it all came about because my old mule walked across my wheat field twenty-five years ago."

The late E. H. Harriman, as he once passed through the great wheat country of the West, held out his hand to Mr. Campbell, who was in his private car, and said: "If the Union Pacific gave you $1,000,000 every year it could not pay you for its increased freight from your work." More and more the fact is being realized that the farmer must till his soil with his brains as well as with his fingers and mule and ox. Most of the great discoveries that have promoted human progress have been the result of the observation of the most simple and apparently unimportant facts, like the discovery of 3,000,000 acres in the track of a lame mule. If he who makes two blades of grass to grow where one grew before, or two heads of wheat where one grain grew before, is a benefactor, how much greater debt of gratitude does the public owe to the man who makes two hundred heads of wheat grow where one grain grew before! It is of importance that the spiritual husbandman use brain as well as hand and heart to devise the best method of producing a bountiful harvest, that there may be no failure in the wheat field any year, and that from the grains of Christian truth and love which we scatter there may spring up thousands of acres of harvests, to be gathered full ripe in their season. While some of the seed we scatter will fall on the highway, and some among thorns, it will be well for us to do in the spiritual what the Dakota farmer did in the material realm—scatter our grain in good ground, that we may have a harvest of a hundredfold.

And other fell on good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit a hundredfold. (Luke 8:8.)

A Tired Pigeon

When the Campania landed at New York City recently, there was a sick and tired carrier pigeon in the cabin of the captain. The bird sought refuge in the rigging of the ship when she was five hundred miles from Newfoundland and approaching American shores. A silver ring on one of its legs bore the inscription, "Lafayette Bordeaux." It is believed that the pigeon winged its silent way one thousand three hundred miles before its strength gave out and it flew into the rigging of the ocean liner. This exhausted carrier pigeon is the type of many a human soul which flies until at last it finds the rigging of the ship with its refuge and its rest. The Psalmist thus describes the search of the restless heart for rest in the flight of a bird:

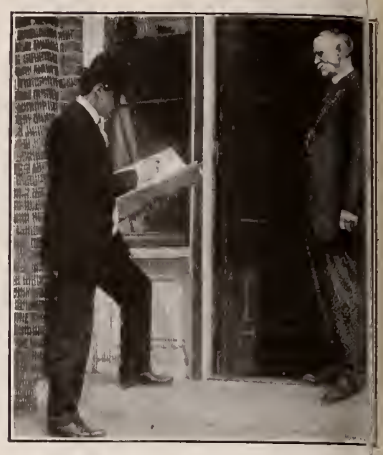
Oh that I had wings like a dove! then would I fly away, and be at rest. (Ps. 55:6.)

CENSUS-TAKERS HARD AT WORK

Photos by Fawcett

E. D. Durand, Director of the Census

Headquarters, United States Census Bureau



United States Census Enumerator at W

THIS is a big country. We all know that, for the politicians and the orators are telling us so every week, and they say that there are so many millions of us here under the Stars and Stripes, and then they roll out the supposed figures, added to the census of 1900, with an enthusiasm that makes all of us in the audience sit up a bit straighter and think what a wonderful people we really are. In a very few weeks, however, the speech-maker will have to drop out those convenient words and phrases, such as "about," and "more," and "numberless multitude," and give the number exactly, or every one who hears him will be able to tell him the figures; for Uncle Sam has thousands of enumerators out taking the facts for the census of 1910.

Many competent observers are guessing as to the result, but their estimates vary greatly, being several millions apart. Of course, these unofficial statisticians have some statistics to go by in formulating their guesses, for some of the States take a census half way between the dates of the national census and they note the rate of increase in one or more States and then apply it to others. It will be found, however, that States, like people, have times when "they weigh more than they look" and some of our Western commonwealths are expected to send in some remarkable figures to pass under the deft fingers of the workers at the tabulating machines in the Census Bureau at Washington.

"Census taking" began on Friday, April 15, at eight o'clock A.M., when seventy thousand enumerators in every State and Territory, all wearing bright badges marked "Census of 1910," knocked on the first door in their districts and asked question number one on the inquiry schedule prepared by Director Durand and his assistants. Over one thousand of the enumerators are women. The enumerators will take from ten to thirty days to complete their assigned tasks. The announcement of the results will be given out about forty days after the first names are taken. Over the regular census takers are special inspectors numbering three thousand, and three hundred supervisors. The enumerators, after being carefully selected from a large number of candidates, were put through a course of special instruction, receiving from men well-versed in the subject a variety of pointers on ways to expedite the work. Above all else they were urged to be tactful; a little of it at the beginning of an interview with a suspicious person saving much trouble and securing what the questioners wish to know. People need not fear that their next door neighbors are to find out just what they have told the enumerators; the information is for the government alone, and the census takers are pledged not to divulge a word of the answers they receive. The penalty for a breach of this order is a fine of $5,000 and one year's imprisonment. So certain are the officials of the reliable character of the enumerators that they do not expect any trouble of this kind.

The following questions are asked among others: "Are you the head of the family?" As the man of the household will probably be at work when the enumerator calls, the woman of the household will have here a chance to show her magnanimity, even if she is a woman suffragist, and admit that her absent spouse holds that title. The enumerators do not question that she is "the power behind the throne." The enumerators are not around for the purpose of registering jokes, and questions such as these are expected to be answered truthfully and fairly. There might be some after-inquiries which would not be at all pleasant if the exact truth were not given.

Then the question is asked: "Are you married? how many children have you?" Then comes the question: "Is your mother-in-law living with you?" Women are certainly coming to the front, for the questioner does not ask concerning the whereabouts of father-in-law. Evidently he is a negligible quantity in the political economy of the twentieth century household. The full name of every pe in the house, with sex and age at last birth is put down. The women will be asked whe they are single, married, or divorced, and how m children they have had. The foregoing quest and a few others will be put down in the enum tor's long book, and then he moves on to the house.

In the country districts taking the census i comparatively easy matter, providing the dogs tied up. An earnest appeal is made by the Ce Bureau that all dogs should be securely chaine order that nothing may occur which would dist the pleasure of the enumerator's visit. It will be the best possible plan for the dog owners to low, for there is no open season on census tak and they are under the full protection of the l and the most careless can perceive that no enun ator can put down correctly the facts he has heard if a large brindle bull pup keeps wande about his person with a meditative eye direc toward the man's nether limbs, evidently cogitat on the old saying that the sweetest meat lies nea the bone.

The greatest difficulty will be experienced in large cities, where there are many foreign who do not speak English and who are suspici of any one who wishes to write down their na in a book. They have visions of taxes and c scription. The President's proclamation was prin in twenty-two foreign languages. The Chinese particularly worried over the census, and the pr lamation in their language has their consular attached to calm their fears.

Greater New York will be a stupendous task the enumerators and 3,128 enumerators will be at work. The large cities will be divided into tions of forty blocks. It is hoped that here, as e where, the advance campaign of information reached most of the people and will help the h working census taker to make this the most compl census we have ever had.

R. S. B

WASHINGTON HAS THE SECOND PEACE PALACE

AN imposing and beautiful structure, the second great "peace palace" which Andrew Carnegie has given to the world, will be dedicated with imposing ceremonies at Washington on the afternoon of April 26. Representatives of all the independent nations on this continent will take prominent part in this novel "house warming," and President Taft, who will make the principal address on this occasion, has stated that he considers the dedication one of the most important international events in the history of the American seat of government.

The philanthropist who made possible the erection of this beautiful new million-dollar marble edifice has been wont, in his public addresses, to refer to the institution as a "peace palace." Its significance as a temple of peace arises from the fact that it is the function and object of the Pan-American Bureau to promote fraternity and good feeling between the various nations of the New World.

This unique bureau, maintained jointly by the more than a score of governments in the International Union of American Republics, was established in 1890 as the outgrowth of the first international conference of the American republics which was held that year on the initiative of James G. Blaine, then Secretary of State. The headquarters of the Pan-American Bureau have always been in Washington, but the unpretentious rented quarters in which the institution has been housed have grown more and more inadequate as the activities of the Bureau have expanded. A few years ago it was decided to ask the various governments to contribute to a common fund for the erection of a suitable building designed especially for the institution. The Congress of the United States set the ball roll with an appropriation of $200,(and the various Latin-American rep lics made a contribution of $50,000 foot up a total of about $250,000.

The New Bureau of American Republics in Washington

Just at this juncture Andrew C negie became deeply interested in work of the institution designed to b in closer unity the independent sta of this side of the Atlantic, and offe to erect a temple of peace that sho be to North and South America w The Hague tribunal is to the world large. Mr. Carnegie donated the s of $750,000 for the building and International Bureau was thus enab to use the quarter of a million doll for the purchase of a site.

The tract chosen as a setting this exceptionally imposing building located south of the White House a overlooking the Potomac River. It in the midst of what was a few ye ago a low, swampy, and unattracti section of Washington, but now, thar to the wonderful transformation wh has been worked within the past f years, it is truly an ideal place. It situated in the very midst of what w at no distant day, be the most beauti section of the national capital.

WALDON FAWCETT.

THE BUDDING SPRING-TIME

About What Do We Talk?

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

IF we happen to overhear the talk of women in a public conveyance it is usually about new fashions in dress, new recipes in cooking, or the progress of children in school. This is quite as it should be. The woman who is indifferent to dress and does not care how she looks or what she wears or how her children appear when they go to school and to church is not really interested in the affairs of woman's world. Whether sleeves are full or skimpy, long or short, whether skirts are to trail on the ground or be finished at comfortable walking length, whether Mary is to have a new frock, or John a new suit, are matters that concern the wife and mother. Listen, if you choose, as you sit in a railway train, to the conversation of the men around you, and you will observe that their range is no wider than that of the women passengers. Men talk when together about politics, stocks, trade and business prospects. Women talk about matters in their own line, and these usually refer in one or another way to housekeeping and home-making. Broadly speaking, housekeeping is woman's vocation. Married or single, she cannot help taking a vivid personal interest in whatever belongs to the realm of home. A new recipe for a dessert gives a woman pleasure. When she tries it and finds that it turns out well her satisfaction is complete. When Owen Wister wrote Lady Baltimore thousands of women who were different to the story were quite excited about the cake from which it was named. If somebody in the South, in the day when the novel was new, sent somebody at the North a lady Baltimore cake, straightway friends and neighbors were called in to test its excellence, and good cooks immediately tried their hand in making one themselves.

Mothers and aunts enjoy repeating the clever sayings of children, and as the little ones grow into adolescence their school trials and triumphs furnish food for suggestion and comparison of views. The mother whose daughter is in the high school or whose son is at college has plenty to say on the subject of education. Usually what she says is worth consideration and repays attention. It is the mother's part, particularly in the case of a young daughter, to be sure that she neither neglects study nor overworks, and a group of mothers discussing the length of tasks, the hygiene of the schoolroom and the advantage and disadvantage of athletics rarely find conversation dull.

In the Woman's Club, if you please, conversation is carried forward on a high plane. The breadth and scope of the topics discussed by women, when they meet to read papers and give attention either to past or present, would prove astonishing to the average man. A club programme arranged for a season is as serious in intention and as thoughtfully carried out in detail as the curriculum of an advanced class in an institution of learning. The vocabulary of women has been enlarged and enriched by the practice they have had in study and discussion in their literary clubs.

THE AULD MITHER

AH! dinna chide the mither;
Ye may na hae her lang;
Her voice, abune your baby rest,
Sae saftly crooned the sang;
She thought ye ne'er a burden,
She greeted ye wi' joy,
An' heart an' hand in tendin' ye,
Foun' still their dear employ.

Her han' has lost its cunnin',
It's tremblin' now and slow,
But her heart is leal and lovin',
As it was lang ago!
An' though her strength may wither,
An' faint her pulses beat,
Nane will be like the mither,
Sae steadfast, true an' sweet!

Ye maun revere the mither,
Feeble an' auld an' gray;
The shinin' ones are helpin' her
Adoon her evenin' way!

Her bairns wha wait her yonder,
Her gude mon gone before:
She wearies—can ye wonder?—
To win to that braw shore!

Ah! dinna chide the mither!
O lip, be slow to say
A word to vex the gentle heart
Wha watched your childhood's day;
Ay, rin to heed the tender voice
Wha crooned the cradle sang,
An' dinna chide the mither, sin'
Ye may na hae her lang!

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

A HOME IN WESTPHALIA

THIS interesting interior gives a pleasant impression of a home among the peasantry of Westphalia. The German characteristics of thrift and simplicity are evident, and one sees at a glance that the happy family life of the good people is carried on without the superfluities of wealth and luxury. Westphalia has something of Holland and of Prussia blending with the qualities derived from its own mountains.

Aunt Prudence Payson's Catch-All

—L. R. If you persist in using your eyes when riding on the train morning and evening, particularly when a hard day's work comes between your journeys, you will continue to have trouble. On the smoothest train the focus of vision often changes. From what you say of your pain and difficulty of sight, I judge you should consult your oculist.

—PERPLEXED MAIDEN. I do not understand why you are embarrassed when two friends call upon you on the same evening. The one who comes first should first take leave. If the two appear determined to sit each other out you cannot help yourself. It is usually good form for a girl's mother to give a welcome to young men who visit her daughter. Your idea of keeping your mother in the background is opposed both to good sense and to the fashion of good society.

Selfishness in Home Life

SELFISHNESS shows itself in various forms. One form, not infrequent, is displayed when a wife is social and a husband the reverse. It may be the other way. A man may like to have his friends around him, and his wife may think the trouble too great that she must take to entertain them. When, for example, a husband complacently declares that he is a good provider; that he stints his family in nothing that has to do with the table, and yet when he is sullen and gloomy if on coming home he finds that his wife has a guest, the man cannot claim to be generous. "I went to call upon an old schoolmate," said a woman, "and rather to my surprise she urged me to stay and spend the day. A little later she told me that her husband, contrary to his custom, would not be at home until late in the evening. Unfortunately, he changed his plans and returned to mid-day dinner. He was, as usual, curt, rude and disagreeable, and my friend's embarrassment was a pitiable thing to see."

If a man loves his wife he should be ashamed to cause her distress on any side of her nature, most of all in the presence of her friends.

The wife who fails on her part in making home a happy refuge for her husband is equally selfish and at fault. In married life there must be concession, mutual forbearance and continual courtesy. The selfish husband and the selfish wife may manage to live under the same roof for a lifetime, but they will fail of discovering the secret of blessedness in marriage. Each must be willing to live for the other's daily happiness, and this cannot be done if selfishness prevails.

A Woman's Garden

Whether you have a large space for your garden, or only a little strip in a back yard, your wish is to make the most of your opportunity. The woman who loves flowers longs for plants in bloom. Sometimes she chooses to set out, from year to year, those which give her returns in color and fragrance the first season. Either she goes to the flower market and purchases blooming plants, which she at once transfers to the ground, or she plants seeds and bulbs that must be renewed every year. She is paid for her trouble to a certain extent, but is less well paid than if she sets her heart and spends her time and money on the planting of perennials. Peonies, hollyhocks, phlox and lilies, poppies and golden-glow repeat themselves from year to year, and before many seasons are a joy to the beholder. They cannot be depended upon to show their finest results the first year after they are planted. Wait until the second and the third, and your garden will be a blaze of glory.

As for vines, do not omit the honeysuckle, that grows so rapidly and blooms so profusely that it seems to be the symbol of household joy. Plant the crimson rambler and the clematis, and any other richly-blossoming vine for which you have room, and incidentally gain health and vigor while you watch your perennial plants.

The Strawberry Handkerchief

A Tale of Colonial Days in Old New York

By AMELIA E. BARR

CHAPTER NINE—Continued

DURING the day the crowd constantly increased, and the bells and drums—muffled and melancholy voices—never ceased reminding it of the purpose for which it was there. Letters were mysteriously found and placards spoke from every wall, orators at every corner were threatening destruction of life and property to any one who should in any way give a stamp, or take a stamp, or delay business for the want of a stamp. A letter addressed to Governor Colden, which had been posted in the Merchants' Coffee House all day, was delivered to him towards evening by an unknown hand. It assured him of his fate if he did not solemnly make oath that he would not execute the Stamp Act.

As the day waned, the crowd constantly increased, and the tumult of it was terrifying. Katrina and Virginia were running to and from the garden gate constantly, for they were sick with fear, and had seen no one all day to relieve their anxiety. But about dark Jan came home.

"On my feet all day I have been, Katrina," he said. "A dreadful day it has been, Katrina, but not one stamp has been used, that is certain."

"Is the trouble over then, Jan?"

"It is only beginning. Colden got a letter to-day which threatened his life unless he swore not to execute the detestable Act."

"Did he?"

"What he did was to send for the troops from Turtle Bay, and march them through the crowd to the fort. He frightened no one, and a very unpleasant march the troops had, for they were jeered and taunted at every step, and had been forbidden by General Gage to answer any insult offered them."

"A wise man is General Gage."

"That is true. If Colden were as wise it would be better. What think you he did, in answer to the letter threatening his life?"

"You told us, fader," said Virginia, "that he sent for the troops from Turtle Bay."

"Yes, and then he ordered men to spike the Copsy Battery cannon."

"But did not the cannon belong to the government?"

"To the merchants of New York the cannon belonged."

"And oh, Jan, what will be the end of it?"

"The Mayor and Aldermen are powerless. I left them in council at the City Hall."

"Talking and counseling is no good."

"No good is anything unless Colden will make some concessions. The people have gone far, and they will go further. They care not how far they go. To death they will go, rather than have one stamp used. I heard Colonel Rutgers talking to a crowd on the Bowling Green, and in a great passion he was. 'It would be stamps everywhere,' he said; 'on every bit of paper we touched, stamps! On our newspapers, stamps! On our receipts, stamps! On our bills of exchange, stamps! Wherever we turned in our warehouses or stores, stamps! On our marriage papers, even, stamps! Yes, even on our burial papers, stamps! We should go crazy, friends!' he cried out, 'for every stamp would burn into our hearts, as the hot iron burns the brand of slavery into the flesh. Will you carry in your pockets the sign of your being bondmen to a power three thousand miles away? Freeborn Americans, will you do that?' And there was a shout of 'No! we will not!' Such a shout, Katrina! It lifted me off my feet. And as home I walked, I walked on air. Now I will sleep a little. Much life men give away when their blood flows so hot, and their hearts beat so strong and high."

So Jan went to the sofa, and soon fell asleep. And Madame turned her wheel at the fireside, and Virginia sat still, with closed eyes and folded hands, and there was not a sound in the room but the ticking of the clock and the crackling of the burning logs on the hearth. But about eight o'clock there was a noise from the city that made both women alert, and Virginia went to the door, and by a motion of her hand called her mother. The roar of angry human voices, the sound of hammers, the blaze and crackling and smell of fire were all too evident. But they warned each other by emphatic motions not to awaken the weary Captain, and so sat together silent and fearful until about ten o'clock, when Arent came noisily into the room. Then the Captain awoke and asked hastily:

"Now, then, what is the matter?"

"Fader, the city has got beyond control. The men who have come to-day from far and near will not be talked to. They came to fight, and are determined to fight. They went to the fort, they pounded the gate for admittance, they threw bricks and stones against the walls, they placed their hands on the tops of the ramparts, and dared the guards to fire; they filled the air with shouts of vengeance."

"Speak, Arent! has there been fighting?"

"Not a word or a shot answered them."

"That Gage must be a ——"

"No, no, Jan," said Madame; "he is a wise man. In his heart, too, he may have some sympathy with the Americans."

"Not he! No, indeed!"

"I have heard thee say something about a brave man feeling always with the under dog in the fight."

"We are not the under dog! No! Go on, Arent."

"The Sons of Liberty led by Isaac Sears——"

"Sears, of course. He is always baring his arms, and shouting 'Come on, boys!' And pray what did Sears do?"

"He took the crowd to the Common. There they erected a movable gallows and hung Colden's effigy on it amid threatening shouts. After a time they carried the gallows to within ten feet of the gates of the fort. It still held the effigy of Colden, though it was torn and riddled with shot. There they left it swinging."

Jan set his mouth tight, but made no remark, and it was Virginia who said:

"It was a shame! Governor Colden only did what he believed to be his duty. I am sorry for him."

"I am not sorry," contradicted Jan. "Go on, Arent. Is his Excellency's effigy swinging there yet?"

"No. The last offense of the Governor has been to make the soldiers take down the fort fence facing Broadway, so as to expose the citizens to the fire of the fort, if it was determined to fire on them."

"What a childish bit of spite and aggravation!"

"It made the citizens furious. The boards had been gathered into a pile, and the idea of burning them came to every man at the same moment. They broke into Colden's coach-house, took out his fine English chariot, and placing it, and the gallows, the chair, the effigies, and every movable they could

Continued on next page

The first requirement of soap, no matter what it is used for, is purity.

An impure soap, that is, a soap that is not made of good materials, properly combined, will injure everything it touches. Such a soap, if used in the laundry, will change the color, weaken the fabric and shorten the life of every article it comes in contact with.

Ivory Soap, being made of pure vegetable oils and containing no "free" (uncombined) alkali, will cleanse but it will not injure anything that water will not harm.

Ivory Soap - 99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

Gives 500 candle power. Casts no shadow. Costs 2 cents per week. Makes and burns its own gas. Over 200 styles. Every lamp warranted. No dirt. No odor. No grease. Agents wanted. Write for catalog, now.

THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, O

Tricycles for Cripples and Chairs for Invalids

Complete catalog sent on request. Write for it today.
WORTHINGTON CO., 301 Cedar St., Elyria, Ohio.

ONE THING the wise college girl knows. Karo makes dandy fudge, butter-scotch and taffy—and that she can't get the same goodness and flavor without it. It is a pure, wholesome sweet for all cooking and table uses—and agrees with everybody.

Karo
CORN SYRUP

Eat it on	Use it for
Griddle Cakes	Ginger-Bread
Hot Biscuit	Cookies
Waffles	Candy

Send your name on a post card for Karo Cook Book—fifty pages, including thirty perfect recipes for home candy making.

Corn Products Refining Company
Dept. O. NEW YORK P.O. Box 161

The New Flavor

MAPLEINE

Better than Maple

Mapleine is a pure, wholesome and delicious flavoring extract, guaranteed under the Pure Food Laws of every State.

A few drops added to sugar dissolved in water makes a delicious table syrup, and unlike lemon or vanilla it flavors pudding sauces, cake fillings, ice cream, ices, custards, candy, puddings, etc.

Your grocer sells it. If not, send us 35c. in stamps for a 2 oz. bottle and our cook book, "Mapleine Dainties."

CRESCENT MFG. CO.
Seattle, Wash.

5% 17 YEARS

If your savings have been earning less than 5% let us show you how we are able to pay this rate on deposits entrusted to our care. Established 17 years during which time we have never paid less than 5% while growing stronger each year. Your funds are safeguarded by the best of securities—selected mortgages on New York and Suburban Real Estate.

UNDER SUPERVISION OF NEW YORK BANKING DEPT.
ASSETS OVER $2,000,000

Your funds may be deposited or withdrawn on any date. Earnings credited for full time.

Write for booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings and Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42 St. and B'way, New York

Pozzoni's Complexion POWDER

The Greatest of all Beautifiers

A delicious toilette necessity—cooling, refreshing and invigorating, a clear, refined, delicate, summer complexion. It is prepared from purest materials—beautifying without injuring the skin. It is the only complexion powder that clings—the only one put up in a Wooden Box—retaining all its delicate perfume and medication until entirely used up. Five colors, Flesh, White, Brunette, Cream and Special Pink.

50c—Everywhere—50c

Learn Piano Tuning at Home by the aid of the TUNE-PHONE. A Profession that can be converted into money at any time or place in the civilized world at an hour's notice. Earn $5 to $15 per day. Illustrated book Free. Write NILES BRYANT SCHOOL OF PIANO TUNING, 51 Music Hall, Battle Creek, Michigan.

If YOU Would Be Successful Stop Forgetting

MEMORY the BASIS of All Knowledge

You are no greater intellectually than your memory. Send today for my free book "How to Remember"—Faces, Names, Studies—Develops Will, Concentration, Self-Confidence, Conversation, Public Speaking. Address MEMORY SCHOOL, 70⁹ Aud't'm Bldg., Chicago the finest face powder made; three shades, White, Flesh and Brunette. Price 50 cts. at all dealers or by mail. Samples of Kosmeo Powder and Kosmeo Cream together with 64 page booklet on the hair and complexion free. Address, Mme. Gervaise Graham, 499 Michigan Ave., Chicago.

KOSMEO FACE POWDER

KOSMEO FACE POWDER

AGENTS 200% PROFIT

Handy, Automatic HAME FASTENER

Do away with old hame strap. Horse owners and teamsters wild about them. Fasten instantly with gloves on. Outwears the harness. Money back if not satisfactory. Write today for confidential terms to agents. Thomas Mfg. Co., 724 Wayne St., Dayton, Ohio

PATENTS that PROTECT

Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps. R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D.C., Dept. 36, Est. 1869

The Strawberry Handkerchief

Continued from preceding page

find in the coach-house upon the fence boards, they set the whole on fire."

"That was bad work," said Katrina; "foolish work, too. I like it not."

"Fiddlesticks!" shouted Jan impatiently. "Did they stop there, Arent?"

"No, many went with the mob so far, but when they became unmanageable and burned all of Major James' rich furniture, knocked to pieces the doors, windows, and partitions in his home, destroyed his summer house, and desolated his beautiful gardens, the better class deserted the mob."

"Nothing better Major James had any right to expect. He and his men have made the citizens the butt of their evil tongues. Railing and mockery cost some money. He owed New Yorkers a big bill. To-night he paid it. That is well. I have no objections. What then, Arent?"

"I came here. I could not find thee, fader, in the crowd, and I was uneasy. I feared for thee."

"If I had been awake, then I had been looking for thee. Katrina, your boy is safe. Feed him now, and see that to bed he goes. Yes, yes, see to it. The bed is safer than the streets for a young man when a riot is on hand."

Arent flushed and flashed, but a glance from his mother settled the question, and he answered, "You are right, fader. Something nice to eat my moeder will give me, and then will come the good sleep. To-morrow will be another day."

"That is so. Good-night, my boy. To-morrow may give us what was kept from us to-day. We can not cross the stile till we come to it."

But in this case to-morrow brought no rest and no hope to the insurgent citizens. Early in the morning the Governor was assailed by threatening letters. He was told that nothing but the Stamps would satisfy the people, and that if they were not delivered to them, the fort would be attacked that night. Colden sent for his councillors. Only a small minority came, and they advised him to leave the distribution of the Stamps to the new Governor, Sir Henry Moore, who was hourly expected.

In the meantime message after message arrived from the people, assembled in street conclaves, and the old man was in a fever of passion. As he walked the floor of his room in the fort, he wrung his hands, and railed at the Ministry, which had left him to face the consequences of their folly. Yes, at that hour, he saw the folly of the Stamp Act, and felt wronged and indignant enough to say what he saw. Again he shifted his anger to Sir Henry Moore. "He is a sneaking coward!" he cried. "He knows the strait I am in, and he dilly-dallies at sea to keep out of trouble and danger. He ought to have been here weeks ago. It is only right to leave him to do the work he was sent to do."

Acting on this decision he wrote to the Mayor and Aldermen of the city, saying, "The Lieutenant-Governor will not distribute any Stamps, but will leave the matter to Sir Henry Moore's action." Further, he offered to place the Stamps on board the man-of-war commanded by Captain Kennedy, if the Captain would receive them; which Captain Kennedy refused to do. Night was approaching, nothing had been settled, and Sears shouted to the multitude:

"We will have the papers! In twenty-four hours we will have them!" and they answered him with Hurrahs!

Men of the highest character and influence patrolled the streets, entreating the unruly element to wait a little longer. Their arguments were helped by the fact that the next day was Sunday. The crowd flocked to the churches. They wished to hear what the dominies and the minister of Trinity would say. The latter, a learned, conservative gentleman, preached what he had been licensed to preach, that only; politics, with their unruly elements, passed not the door of the holy place. But in the Middle Dutch Kirk, Doctor Laidlie fully satisfied those who had gone to hear a sermon suitable to the times. Van Vroom and Batavius were present, but the ladies of the family were—as Madame put it—"indisposed." It was the second calling of the banns of marriage between Batavius and Virginia, and Batavius was very angry at Virginia's indisposition. He could not help feeling that he had been slighted by Virginia's absence. Therefore he was angry and far more disposed to discuss the rite than the sermon.

"We were called amidst a lot of nobodies," he said in a temper; "and our names were not spoken out clearly. I say they were slurred over, and no more attention paid to Batavius De Vries and Virginia Van Vroom than to John Bedloe and Cornelia Hahn; and Bedloe is one of our teamsters, and Cornelia a servant girl in the Rutgers family. I wonder respectable people tolerate such ways."

"They do not," answered Virginia. "Respectable people would wait for a license. I do not intend to tolerate them."

"Next Sunday, my Virginia, is the third and last time, and you must tolerate them for once. It is not proper for me to go alone. It does not look as if you appreciated me."

"I shall not tolerate them next Sunday."

"Then I shall not go to kirk either."

"I would not, if I was you."

Jan did not like this conversation, and he interrupted it by turning to Katrina, and saying with enthusiasm, "Katrina, we had a wonderful sermon from Doctor Laidlie. He knew what the crowded kirk meant, and no one went empty away. Many grand words he said, bold, straight words, that struck from heart to heart, and we all of us came away comforted and strengthened."

"Well, then, Jan, hast thou forgotten them all?"

"Do I go to kirk to hear, and forget? No. He told us we had a right to complain—that the voice of the people was the sword that guarded them. With all our hearts we must serve Liberty, and take no wages from her; more than that, we must give her our faculties, our gold, our life if it was necessary, and not only give, but give gladly, give with both hands. And then I looked at John Reparreck, and Bram Borger and others, and I was pleased in my heart they should hear such strong words, for every one knows——"

"Then, Jan, if every one knows, there is no need for thee to say what they know. Scarce one heart in the whole world rings true to the very bottom."

"Astonished am I at thee, Katrina. Does not thy husband's heart ring true?"

"Ask thyself, not me."

And Katrina looked at him steadily, and he answered her not a word. For what man, going on any warfare, does not have little withdrawals of confidence in his cause, little doubts and abandonments, and worst of all, fears that he is serving virtue, and obeying conscience, and will get nothing for it?

Dinner and the entrance of Arent put an end to these uncomfortable reflections.

To be continued

Any Church wishing to use the individual Communion Service, the sanitary method of observing the Lord's Supper, can secure a trial service from the Thomas Communion Service Co., Lima, Ohio. See their advertisement on page 423.

"STANDARD" WEEKLY SPECIALS

Do your shopping here every week from the "STANDARD'S" Weekly Specials and Save Money

Dutch Collar Lace Trimmed Waist 98c

126 98¢

126. Stylish, Cool and Serviceable for Summer Wear. Made of fine Soft-Finished Batiste. Dutch Collar handsomely trimmed with Valand Venice laces. Front is laid with inserts of Val in between which are groups of pin tucks. Patch pockets with handsome Swiss embroidered Medallion Three quarter sleeves turn back cuffs—cuffs and tie trimmed with Val. Closes visibly in front. Sizes 32 to 44 Bust. Special, 98c

Pure Irish Linen Real Hand Embroidered Waist 98c

125 98¢

125. Tailored Waist of Pure Irish Linen. The shaped right front overlaps the left and closes visibly with medium size pearl buttons. Front is Hand Embroidered in effective pattern and neatly tucked. Detachable Linen Collar-tie not included. Long sleeves and soft finished Linen cuffs. Never before have you been offered a Pure Irish Linen Real Hand Embroidered waist for 98c—Order Now. Sizes 32 to 44 Bust. Special Price. 98c

This Dainty Embroidered Lingerie Waist 98c

100 98¢

100. This is Two waists in one. The frill lace-trimmed jabot is Detachable. Waist can be worn with or without jabot which buttons on invisibly under front closing. Material used is a Fine, Soft Imported Batiste, very durable. Six rows of handsome Swiss Embroidery worked in effective blind pattern trim front. Same embroidery forms the deep cuffs, outlined by Val lace. Collar pin-tucked and edged with Val Back and Bishop sleeves with clusters of pin-tucking. Sells at retail for $1.50 and is worth it—but our Special Price is Sizes 32 to 44 Bust. 98c Order one or all of these Special Waists NOW. You are sure to be pleased---if not, your money will be promptly refunded. We GUARANTEE "Entire Satisfaction or your Money Promptly Refunded.

FREE Write for FREE yearly subscription to the "STANDARD" BULLETIN. MAY and JUNE number now ready, showing all the latest New York Summer Styles in Made-to-Order and Ready-to-Wear Garments. Also many Special Bargains.

WRITE TO-DAY

STANDARD MAIL ORDER CO.,
161 Wooster Street, New York City

No. A H 2742

No. A H 2696

4 Fashionable Dainty Neck-Pieces

Retail Value, $1.00

Our Importer to Wearer Price to Christian Herald Readers, 55c

No. A H 2742. Newest Style Sailor Shape Dutch Collar, made of fine quality India lawn inserted with filet lace and embellished with imported Embroidery, handsomely edged with novel pattern Val. lace. Attractive Jabot to match Dutch Collar neatly tucked and trimmed with Baby Irish Lace and Insertion heavily edged with imported Point Venice Lace.

No. A H 2696. Fine Quality Linen Collar in up to date style, elaborately embroidered in bow knot pattern with open-work embroidery neatly set off with blind floral pattern. Two tab Jabot of equally elaborate embroidery to match the collar.

Why This Cost-Price Offer Is Made

Never before has there been offered such novel and up-to-date neck pieces as we are showing above at the price of 55c postpaid. We are doing this to get the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD acquainted with our up-to-date merchandise, sold through the mail, and prices equalled by none. Style and quality combined with expert workmanship and remarkable values characterize every article we sell. Our Guarantee to Refund your money should you not be satisfied, protects you from any loss whatsoever.

Write today for these 4 fashionable neck-pieces at the special price of 55c, before the supply is exhausted

VALENCIA LACE AND EMBROIDERY CO., Dept. A H. 416 Broadway and 276 Canal St., N.Y.

Our New 1910 Fashion Book Sent FREE

Elaborately illustrates and describes advance Parisian styles of Lace Embroideries, Neckwear, Waists, etc., produced at great expense. Indispensable to women of refined taste. The largest and most complete fashion authority of its kind in this country. The edition is limited. Write to-day for your copy to avoid disappointment.

You Do Wear Stockings — Then Why Not Buy Them Right?

Six Months' Wear or Money Refunded

Three Prices: 75c, $1.40 and $2.75 per ½ doz. prepaid; sizes 8½, 9, 9½, 10

Style 100. Six pairs for 75c. Cotton, seamless, double heels and toes interwoven with linen thread, more than doubling their wearing qualities. Black or Tan. Sample pair, 13c

Style 510. Six pairs for $1.40. Imported ingrain cotton, full fashioned, double heels, toes and soles, unbleached split foot, light weight, exceptional value. Black only. Sample pair, 24c

Style 330. Six pairs for $2.75. Imported ingrain silk lisle, shaped in knitting, double heels, toes and soles, double garter tops, very fine and gauzy, extraordinary value. Black, Tan or White. Sample pair, 47c.

State size and color desired and enclose remittance for whatever quantity and styles ordered. If not entirely satisfied, return at once—our expense. We prepay all express or mail charges.

We are specialists in Ladies' Shirtwaists, Muslin Underwear, Knit Underwear, Petticoats, Hosiery and Sweaters. Write to-day for our FREE Illustrated Catalogue. Prices and Quality will surprise you.

RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED. NATIONAL DRY GOODS CO., 361 West 23d St., New York City

Hunyadi János

Natural Laxative Water

Quickly Relieves:
Biliousness,
Sick Headache,
Stomach Disorders,
and
CONSTIPATION

AT ALL DRUGGISTS

I'll Save You $26.50

on my 1910 Split Hickory Auto-Seat Buggy. Or, 25% saving guaranteed on retail price of any vehicle. Made to order. 30 days' road test—2-year guarantee.

Let Me Pay the Postage on Big Free Book to You

Shows 125 styles. Also harness. Beautiful color-views. Prices astonishingly low. Write me now.

H. C. Phelps, Pres.
The Ohio Carriage Mfg. Co.
Sta. 236, Columbus, O.

Raise Mushrooms

Big Profits! Quick Profits!

Anybody can make big income all year raising Mushrooms at home in cellars, sheds, barns, boxes, etc. Markets waiting for all you grow.

Free Illustrated Instruction Booklet.

HIRAM BARTON, Desk 9 West 48th St., New York

ORIENTAL POLISHER

FOR SILVER STILBOMA AND GOLD

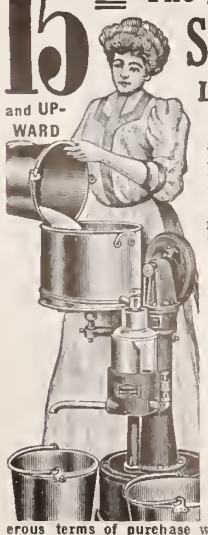
A Prepared Chamois Skin without grit or acid to make old silver look like new. It's a wonder—wears for years Price 50c. Half Size, 25c. Sample 4c. Agents Wanted.
THE STILBOMA MFG. CO., Cleveland, O.

15.95 The AMERICAN SEPARATOR

Leads the World



and UP-WARD

THIS OFFER IS NO CATCH. It is a solid, fair and square proposition to furnish a brand new, well made and well finished cream separator complete, subject to a long trial and fully guaranteed, for $15.95. It is different from anything that has ever before been offered. Skims 1 quart of milk a minute, hot or cold, makes thick or thin cream and does it just as well as any higher priced machine. Suitable for small dairy, hotel, restaurant and private families. Any boy or girl can run it sitting down. The crank is only 5 inches long. Just think of that! The bowl is a sanitary marvel; easily cleaned and embodies all our latest improvements. Gears run in anti-friction bearings and thoroughly protected. Before you decide on a cream separator of any capacity whatever, obtain our $15.95 proposition. Our liberal long time trial and generous terms of purchase will astonish you. Our own (manufacturer's) guarantee protects you on every American Separator. We ship immediately. Western orders filled from Western points. Write us and get our great offer and handsome free catalog. ADDRESS,

AMERICAN SEPARATOR CO. Box 1184 BAINBRIDGE, N.Y.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Half the money spent for chimneys would be saved if everybody bought Macbeth "Pearl Glass" lamp-chimneys.

Because Macbeth lamp-chimneys never break from heat—they will melt first.

Then they're handsome—clear—crystalline—and give a lamp a well-bred look.

Unless my name is on a lamp-chimney it is not a Macbeth.

I have a book which tells which chimney to get for any burner made. It is free. Address

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

THE DRUNKARD'S WOE*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Craft

THE man chained to the bottle has woe; woe in this world and in the world to come. His drunkenness prepares the way for calamities, and drunkards are included among those who shall not inherit the kingdom of God (I. Cor. 6:10).

A very zealous and efficient Sunday School teacher, who had gathered up a class of boys previously neglected, was one morning, after the regular lesson, talking to them about the great evils of intemperance. Suddenly she said: "Boys, I wonder how people learn to drink?" A bright little fellow, son of a publican, said: "I know: by tasting." And the teacher said: "Do not forget this: 'Touch not, taste not, handle not,' and you will never become a drunkard."

The Man Chained to the Bottle Has Sorrow

The story is told of a group of handsome young men, laughing and drinking in a bar-room, when a poor tottering tramp pushed open the door, and with sad eyes looked at them appealingly.

"Come in, Senator, and drown your cares in the flowing bowl!" they said jeeringly. "I will come in, thank you," he said, "for I am cold and hungry." "Take this brandy, Senator," they said mockingly, "and drink to our health."

After swallowing the liquor the tramp gazed at them for an instant, and then, with a dignity and eloquence that showed how far he had fallen in the social scale, he began to speak.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I wish you well. You and I complete a picture of my life. I was, alas, a senator. My bloated face was once as young and handsome as yours. This shambling figure once walked as proudly as yours. I, too, once had a home, and friends, and position. I had a wife as beautiful as an artist's dream, and I dropped the priceless pearl of honor and respect in the wine cup, and, Cleopatra-like, saw it dissolve and quaffed it down. I had children as sweet and lovely as the flowers of spring, and I saw them fade and die under the curse of a drunken father. I had a home where love lit the flame upon the altar and ministered before it and I put out the holy fire and darkness and desolation reigned in its stead. I had aspirations and ambitions that soared as high as the morning star, and I broke and bruised their beautiful wings, and at last strangled them, that I might be tortured with their cries no more. To-day I am a husband without a wife, a father without a child, a tramp without a home, a man in whom every good impulse is dead—all, all swallowed up in the maelstrom of drink.

"Young gentlemen," he said, as he passed out into the darkness, "whichever way you go—whether you follow your mothers', wives' or children's prayers and enjoy their love on earth and dwell with them in heaven, or whether you become a saddened soul forever lost like me—I, I wish you well." Tears dimmed the eyes of the young men as they watched a despairing soul disappear.

Who Hath Contentions?

The man chained to the bottle has contentions. Did any one ever see a drunken person who did not show fight? Possibly when the creature was "dead drunk" he was peaceful, but only then. A saloon is always a storm centre in any community where it is located. We are told that in Italy it is the custom for the authorities to shut up a saloon for weeks and even months when a fight and disc conduct has occurred. It is a pi not shut up once and for all. B action saloonkeepers are bound t the peace.

The man chained to the bott complainings (babbling). Dr. I Fothergill, of England, in his work on Diet says: "No reliance ever can be placed on the word ment, affirmation, or assertion orated by solemn oaths of a dru for a drunkard is a liar. Ar holds good of both sexes and al and everywhere and ever." Thi awful charge. The worst is, it and it is one of the worst eff drunkenness. How often ha seen a drunkard stand and li weep and tell the worst lie of may drink a little too much, bu is one thing I won't do—I won

A well-known manufactur whisky said: "I've drank liquor life, but I never was drunk." made the assertion by way of to prove that he was a very ni of gentleman after all!

Would that such men cou themselves as others see them man at least had that opportu two different occasions. Whe was drunk and did not know talked very freely and very d ingly about his private affai friend who wanted to cure hin a stenographic report of what and afterwards read it to hin self-contempt was almost measure. Another friend had era and took his picture when drunk. The only effect of tho efforts on the part of his frien to make him lock himself in hi well stocked with liquors when determined on a drunk.

Who Hath Wounds Without C

The man chained to the bot wounds without cause. He is sic head to foot because of the which he takes into his syste started out in life with a stron and he might be strong agai would only let alcoholic drinks All up-to-date temperance spe in the light of recent scientific ments, have adopted as the word of discussion, in place of enness, alcoholism, which the define as the chronic poisoning sults from the habitual use of whether in the form of beer, spirits, even in such quanti would not produce visible intox Dr. Legrain, of Paris, said at ternational Congress on Alc held in London last July: "In t alcohol is the brain poison mos feared. In small doses it prod intoxication which is only a b tack of lunacy. There is n term which describes the alm stantaneous disorders which fo taking of alcohol; disorders wh pair the judgment, the reason exactitude of sensation, and destroy the will only to insta impulse in its place." He add ciety is full of persons soaked very marrow with alcohol, eith or adulterated. Alcohol inter with the public and private life persons. There seems no more cure than the voluntary giving this brain poison. There is no of general safety of greater than prohibition. United effo justly directed against such poi lead and phosphorus, substan less dangerous, with a view t prohibition. With far more should similar efforts be put against alcohol."

Much is being said about th servation of forces." First, it forests, and then it was applie

Continued on next page

* International Sunday School Temperance Lesson for May 8, 1910. Prov. 23 : 29-35. GOLDEN TEXT: "At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Prov. 23 : 32.

WE PAY THE POSTAGE
This CORSET COVER ONLY 45¢
HANDSOMELY TRIMMED FRONT AND BACK WITH BEAUTIFUL IMPORTED EMBROIDERY
SIZES 32 TO 44 BUST MEASURE

No. 638—Send only 45c

We will mail you this Handsome Corset Cover, postage prepaid. Made of good quality soft finish Nainsook has beautiful 3¼-inch Imported Open Work Embroidery Yoke; two rows handsome Val. lace; one-inch lace beading; edged entirely around neck and arm-holes with one-inch Val. lace to match. Yoke finished with beautiful pure silk ribbon draw and large bow, further trimmed with pure silk baby ribbon draw entirely around neck, fly front, pearl buttons; all seams tape bound. Back yoke has one-inch Val. lace with one-inch lace heading. Sizes 32 to 44. Be sure to state size wanted. Price only 45c. If you don't find it worth at least 85c. return it and we will cheerfully refund your money, also postage. This extremely low price is made to introduce our Large Free Catalog of Everything to Wear for Men, Women and Children, also Furniture, Stoves, Carpets, Rugs, Refrigerators and all kinds of Household Goods.

Reference: Commercial National Bank of Chicago
Capital $7,000,000.00

CHICAGO MAIL ORDER CO.
INDIANA AVE. & 26TH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Floor Polish OF QUALITY

If you have never used

Butcher's Boston Polish

your floors, you do not know what it is to have Perfectly Finished Floor. There are imitations but none of equal excellence.

It is the STANDARD in the different trades, throughout the UNITED STATES and CANADA When finishing your floors use BUTCHER'S BOSTON POLISH and be convinced of its merits.

Send for our free booklet

Butcher Polish Company
ATLANTIC AVENUE, BOSTON, MASS.

Stork Pants

THE WATER-PROOF MARK
FOR BABY

Button over regular diaper. No pins required. Keep baby's clothes dry and sweet. Adjustable, cannot slip down. Easily washed, will not harden or crack. Aseptic and hygienic. Will not irritate the most delicate skin. Made from Stork Sheeting. Contain no rubber. Price 50 cents.

CAUTION: Our registered trade-mark appears on inside of the waistband of every pair of Stork Pants. Look for it! If your dealer does not carry Stork Pants we will send them postpaid on receipt of price

FREE: For dealer's name, a Baby Sponge Bag made of Stork Sheeting. Also booklet

THE STORK CO., Dept. 53 G, BOSTON, MASS.
Also Makers of Stork Absorbent Diapers, etc.

ELECTRO-SILICON

has achieved its world-wide reputation as the leading Silver Polish by reason of the wonderful brilliancy it imparts to SILVERWARE—without scratching or wearing. It saves you Care—as well as Time, Labor and Expense.

Send address for FREE SAMPLE

Full Sized Box, post-paid, 15 cts. in stamps.
Electro Silicon Co., 30 Cliff St., New York.
Sold by Grocers and Druggists Everywhere.

Buy the Original

ZIMMERMANN "AUTOHARP"

"The Nation's Favorite" None genuine without our trade mark "Autoharp." A musical instrument adapted to all classes. At all music stores or direct from us. "Easy to play, Easy to Buy." Send for Free catalog. THE PHONOHARP CO., East Boston, Mass.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

layman's movement in relation to moral and religious matters. Now we would apply it to national life in its relation to its citizenship regarding brain power and physical well-being.

The brain capital of a nation is undoubtedly diminished by alcohol, and there should be government action against its use instead of connivance with it through license in our land and other lands.

In the conservation of human life physicians in all parts of the world are engaged in the study of the "Great White Plague," tuberculosis, which we in our childhood called "consumption." It is said by Dr. Temmoin Cannon of England, "that for every sixty-seven persons who die from acute infectious diseases sixty are killed by tuberculosis;" also, "that fifty-six per cent. of these die between the ages of twenty and forty-five, the most valuable age in life."

There is general agreement among the world's greatest physicians that alcohol produces a predisposition to tuberculosis. At the International Tuberculosis Congress, which met in Paris in 1905, the following resolution was passed:

"In view of the close connection between alcoholism and tuberculosis, it is important to combat alcoholism as well as tuberculosis." At the meeting of the same body held in Washington, D. C., three years later, the relation of alcohol to tuberculosis received large attention, if it was not, indeed, the principal theme discussed. Very impressive charts containing statistics were prominent in the exhibit connected with the congress.

In logging districts a jam sometimes occurs in a river, and some one is sent out to discover the "key-log." When that is loosened the jam quickly disappears. We believe that alcohol may be considered the key-log of disease, and that when its use is prohibited and when prohibition works, more than half of the world's diseases will disappear. Let us be sure that we begin at the right end of the key-log; that is, with the children. Dr. T. Alexander MacNichol in a paper which he read before the American Medical Society said: "My report includes a study of thirty thousand children, fifty-eight per cent. of whom drink some form of alcoholic beverage occasionally or at regular intervals. Thirty-seven per cent. drink one glass of beer a week to five glasses of beer a day. Twenty-one per cent. drink wine or spirits. In some groups the percentage of occasional and regular drinkers runs as high as seventy-nine per cent." He adds: "Of sixteen thousand whose physical condition was studied, seventy-one per cent. have some functional or organic disorder." And Dr. MacNichol attributes this to both the children's own habits of drink, and of their drunken fathers who bequeathed degeneracy to them.

That the children themselves readily respond to efforts made on their behalf, is illustrated by the following incident: It was election day in Steubenville, O., and it was to be decided whether the town should be wet or dry. The children were marshaled and drilled for a demonstration on election day; between five and six thousand were in line. The liquor dealers had threatened to stop the children's procession before they should get down town, but no one knew by what means. Suddenly those same liquor dealers appeared on the line of march and dashed bucketfuls of bright pennies in the path of the children, but the dear, brave boys and girls marched right forward, grinding the pennies under their feet, not picking up one!

Who Hath Redness of Eyes?

The man chained to the bottle has redness of eyes. Yes, and his vision is impaired. He thinks he sees the whole world going around while he alone stands still. And then everything looks lopsided, when the fact is that he himself is the only thing that is lopsided. And he sees the air inhabited by serpents and hideous crawling things, when in reality God has given to the air beautiful birds and gay-winged butterflies and shining iridescent insects, and lovely skies overhead. How strangely askew is the drunkard's vision! Ah, yes, there is a serpent; but he does not see it! It hides in the bottom of the cup out of which he drinks. He will not discover it until at the last. And then how bitter will be its sting! There is only one way to smite that serpent. Engage it in deadly conflict by the sword of the pledge.

Mrs. Stella B. Irvine says: "Smite the serpent with the pledge in childhood when character and habits are being formed. Fortify the rising generation by God's truth and the truths of science. Smite the serpent with the pledge in youth, when temptations surround and the strongest influences are needed to keep the young in paths of sobriety and virtue. Smite the serpent with the pledge in manhood and womanhood. Fathers, mothers, pastors, superintendents, teachers and officers, have you made a prohibitory law for yourselves? Will you do it? Smite the serpent, Christian citizen; yours is a grave and serious responsibility. You have a weapon even mightier than the pledge, the ballot. With it you can smite the serpent alcohol and help to drive the infamous liquor traffic from the land."

The Andes Tunnel Opened

Continued from page 411

For many years the Chilean government cherished the project of building the tunnel by which the Trans-Andean Railway line could be extended to meet the Argentine line. The Clark Brothers, enterprising Chilean citizens, once undertook it, but they had to wait thirty years till the project was really in shape to be carried forward. Then they built a section under the contract which W. R. Grace & Co. had with the Chilean government.

The Andes range is tunneled at a height of 10,460 feet above sea level. The entire tunnel is five miles long. The main tunnel is in the form of a gallery 10,385 feet or nearly two miles long. The work has many remarkable engineering features. It compares especially with the Simplon tunnel in Switzerland.

The completion of this railway tunnel link will be of great benefit to the people of both Chile and Argentina. It will undoubtedly enlarge their commercial exchange, and there will be much more intercourse between the two peoples, who are of the same racial stock and have the same language and institutions.

The opening to travel and traffic of the Trans-Andean Railway tunnel comes in an historic year for Chile. This year will see the centennial celebration of the War of Independence which freed her from Spain. There will be various celebrations. It will be especially interesting for the people of Chile to travel by railway across to Buenos Ayres to take part in the expositions by which the Argentine Republic is commemorating the centennial of Argentine independence and then for the people of Argentina to return the visit and take part in the Chilean centennial celebration.

The opening up of the through rail communication between Valparaiso and Buenos Ayres has a wider interest than for the people of these two countries alone. There is much travel now down the west coast of South America and then around to the east coast. After the Panama canal is opened this travel will be greatly increased.

This Smart Linon Suit (Strictly Tailored)

$2.97

We pay all expressage

This is one of the many attractive price-saving specials in our catalogue for summer wear which we would like to send you. Send postal card to-day.

This Handsome Wash Suit

can be had either in white or natural color; it is made of an excellent quality butcher linon; coat is 36 inches long, collar and cuffs of blue linon on the white suit and white linon on the natural color suit; three large cut jet buttons adorn the coat; skirt has two double sets of plaits on front panel.

Bust measure, 34 to 44 inches. All skirt lengths are 41 inches, with 3-inch basted hem, that can be lengthened or shortened by the customer.

If you do not think that this is the very finest dress ever sold at this price return to us at our expense and we will at once refund your money.

Send for our great free Catalog No. 66 to-day; it is full of wonderful values like the above.

A 551.—THIS SUIT IS $2.97

Martin's SUIT & WAIST HOUSE
Fulton St. Brooklyn NEW YORK CITY

ENDURING

AS THE

PYRAMIDS IN MEMORIAM

TO PERPETUATE THE MEMORY OF THOSE LOVED AND HONORED. OUR EVERLASTING MONUMENTS ARE PARTICULARLY APPROPRIATE ✱ MORE BEAUTIFUL THAN MARBLE ✱ MODERATE IN COST ✱ MADE IN A WIDE RANGE OF SIZES AND DESIGNS ✱ DELIVERED ANYWHERE ✱ WRITE FOR DESIGNS, DESCRIPTIONS AND PRICES ✱ STATE APPROXIMATE SIZE OR VALUE ✱ REPRESENTATIVES WANTED IN EVERY COMMUNITY.

MONUMENTAL BRONZE COMPANY.
355 A HOWARD AVENUE · BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

250,000

COPIES ALREADY SOLD

HALLOWED HYMNS NEW and OLD

By I. ALLAN SANKEY, son of IRA D. SANKEY
OVER 1000 CHURCHES USING IT
256 Pages, 100 New Songs, Responsive Readings
$25. per 100, not prepaid. 35¢ per copy by mail
Returnable samples mailed to "earnest inquirers"
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago

Varicose Veins. We make not only the stocking, but we go back of that and make the elastic of which our seamless heel are made, so that in ordering from us you are sure of getting fresh, new, live rubber elastic, on which the life of the stocking depends. Careful record kept of every case treated. Send for Varicose Veins Booklet, self-measuring directions and prices.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS

Curtis & Spindell Co., Elastic Weavers, 202 Market St., Lynn, Mass.

Does your church use INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS? If not send us $4.75 for a tray (like cut and 36 plain glasses. Or $5.25 with 44 plain glasses. Money refunded if not entirely satisfactory. Over 6,000 churches use.

THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE CO., Box 125, Lima Ohio

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c. Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD. Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

A Safe Investment A Good Income

These are the two points the investor should look for before purchasing any security.

Our experience of thirty-four years has convinced us that this combination can best be obtained by an investment in well chosen Public Utility Bonds.

We have made a study of this class of security for years and we can offer the bonds of various Public Service Corporations which we have investigated thoroughly, and unhesitatingly recommend to the conservative investor, at prices to yield better than 5 per cent.

We shall be glad to send our booklet, "Public Utility Bonds as Investments," free of cost to all who are interested, together with circulars describing special issues.

Ask for Circular No. 634-H.

E. H. ROLLINS & SONS

John Hancock Bldg., Boston, Mass.

New York Chicago Denver San Francisco

The Franklin Society

¶ If you are looking for safe, convenient, profitable investment, large or small, acquaint yourself with the methods of the Franklin Society. ¶ Subject to the strict supervision of the State Banking Department; ¶ Lends only on first mortgages in New York City and immediate vicinity; ¶ Has handled millions without ever losing a cent of anybody's money; ¶ Has maintained consistently a dividend rate of one per cent more than ordinary savings banks offer. ¶ Begin now. Send a $1 or more and get a mailing size Pass Book, or write for Booklet U.

THE FRANKLIN SOCIETY

FOR HOME BUILDING AND SAVINGS. FOUNDED 1888

S. E. Cor. Beekman St., at Park Row, New York

For Savings

CHRISTIAN HERALD BOND BOOK

WE have received so many requests for copies of the financial articles which have been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, that we have thought it wise to preserve them in pamphlet form, for the convenience of readers who may wish to secure a complete set.

Any reader may secure a copy of this useful booklet without charge, by forwarding 4c. in stamps to cover postage.

Address CHRISTIAN HERALD, Dept. 96. Bible House, New York

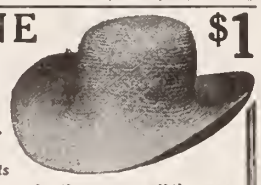
GENUINE HAND WOVEN PANAMA $1



Rare Bargain in Genuine Panama Hats

Panama Hats more popular than ever—all the rage this summer. By importing large quantities we can sell direct to user for this surprisingly low price. These hats are warranted genuine all hand-woven; unblocked, and can be worn in that condition by Ladies, Gentlemen and Children. Easily blocked in any shape or style. Just as serviceable as the $10.00 kind; the difference only in fineness of weave. Assorted sizes. Weight only 2 oz. Sent prepaid, $1.00. Order today. Satisfaction Guaranteed on receipt of $1. Limited. Supply Limited.

PANAMA HAT CO., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York City

If you have $1000 or more which you wish to make earn all it can consistent with safety, write us and we will send you complete data regarding such bonds as we now have to offer.

Write to-day for Circular B-46.

N. W. HALSEY & CO.

Bankers: Dealers in Government, Municipal, Railroad and Public Utility Bonds

New York: 49 Wall St. Philadelphia: 1429 Chestnut St.
Chicago: 152 Monroe St. San Francisco: 424 California St.

PUBLIC UTILITY BONDS

CERTAIN classes of securities which are very much in favor with many investors are known as public utility bonds.

A public utility bond is one which is issued upon a property which is used by the public, such as an interurban electric railway, a street railway, an electric lighting plant, a gas company, etc. Public utility bonds have often been confused with industrial bonds, but there is a difference which from the standpoint of security is very much in favor of the public utility. The true public utility bond is one issued upon property which is more or less of a necessity to the public, such as, for instance, a street railway, something, in fact, which is so necessary to the public welfare that it cannot, in the light of our modern civilization, be very well done without. An industrial bond, on the other hand, may be issued upon a plant, the product of which is used by the public, and yet it may be, after all, a matter of private enterprise, and its product not a public necessity.

Public utility bonds have been confused with municipal bonds also, but they differ from municipal bonds in that the ownership of the plant, which has been mortgaged to secure the bond-buyer, is generally in the hands of private companies to which franchises have been granted; whereas the municipal bond is the obligation of a whole community.

It is the dependence of the public upon these public utilities which make their bonds so much to be desired in the way of an investment security. But, while such bonds are eagerly sort for by experienced investors, there are certain features connected with them which should be carefully investigated by the intending purchaser. If the investor make his purchases through a bond house of the highest standing, there need be very little fear of a mistake. However, he may choose to do some investigating of his own, in which case there are several main considerations concerning which the intending purchaser has a right to ask his bond house. One of these is the matter of the franchise.

Considering the Franchise

The life of a public utility bond should not extend beyond the term of the franchise which has been granted by the community to the company. Suppose, for instance, the life of the franchise is fifteen years, whereas the bond is made to mature in twenty years. It is possible that the company might not be able to renew its franchise at the end of fifteen years. The bond purchaser would then suffer because of the uncertainty involved.

There are cases where it is reasonably safe to buy bonds which mature after the franchise term has expired. Sometimes where several roads are included in the same interurban electric system, the franchise for one of the roads may expire before the life of the bond has been completed. The fact, however, that other parts of the system under operation may be highly profitable, is usually an assurance that all of the bond obligations will be met at the proper time.

It is quite proper for the bond purchaser to make detailed inquiry concerning the earnings of a public utility, so as to see what proportion these bear to the obligations involved in the bond. After all, the purchase of a bond resolves itself into an act of lending money to the company which issues the bond. Therefore, the purchaser should make sure that the earnings of the company will be more than sufficient to pay back the money which has been borrowed, and still leave a respectable surplus.

Dangers of Bad Management

The management of the company owning the public utility should also be considered. A great deal, if not everything, depends upon the executive ability in charge of the company's affairs. For instance, in one of our large cities there occurred recently a trolley strike which had a very disturbing affect upon the minds of some of the street railway bond owners of that community. At one stage of the proceedings the company was threatened with a receivership. Just how great an effect such a proceeding would have had upon the company's bond issues need not be discussed, but the possibilities, at least, were disturbing to the bond owners.

Another matter of importance to the bond purchaser is the consideration of the territory in which the public utility company is situated. If the territory is one which is growing, it is fair to suppose that the earnings of the company, and hence its capacity for keeping its bonded promise, will be the greater. For, of course, the more business done by a company under proper management, the more will it be able to pay off principal and interest on its bonds at the proper time. It generally requires an experienced eye to determine the possible effect which a particular community may have upon public utility bonds. There are communities which depend upon one or two industries. Disaster to these industries might mean a decline in the prosperity of these communities, and a trolley company, for instance, which depended upon the community for its earning power would naturally decline with the waning prosperity of the community.

These are considerations which are directly in line with the investigation of public utility bonds; but they are considerations which, after all, are dependent upon the integrity of the bond house which underwrites the issue. In the last analysis, it is up to the bond house to guarantee the issues of bonds handled by it, and bond purchasers in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred will be quite safe in taking the word of a concern to whom a long-established reputation is worth more than any single issue of bonds ever could be.

AMONG THE WORKERS

—EVANGELIST SHANNON has just closed a six weeks' meeting at Marshfield, Ore. It was held in a tabernacle seating 2,000. One thousand and thirty-five confessed Christ, including the sheriff, chief of police, lawyers, doctors, and bartenders.

—MISSIONARY F. SECORD, of Guatemala, C. A., writes that the Gospel is making progress there and many are coming to a saving knowledge of the truth. The medical work is attracting many, and an effective campaign is being conducted with Gospel literature.

—FRANCIS SKALA, a journalist and active mission worker of Pittsburg, was shot dead by Jan Radovitch, a shiftless, idle fellow well known at the missions. Radovitch is said to be feeble-minded. He is said to have acted on an insane impulse, as he had no acquaintance with Skala.

—JOHN L. DUBE, the Booker Washington of the Zulus, was a student in the Union Missionary Training Institute, Brooklyn. At present he is editor of the Ilanga, the only Zulu paper run entirely by Zulus. He has obtained great recognition and honor from the ruling class in South Africa. The Missionary School from which he was graduated has sent one hundred and sixty-six missionaries throughout the world in recent years, through twenty-five different boards.

—THE WORLD MISSIONARY CONFERENCE assembles in Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14, and will last ten days. Delegates from every country on the globe will attend.

—PETER SHUPE, of Berlin, Ont., Can., a composer of sacred and secular music, has issued a Pocket Edition of the Rudiments of Music, which will be found very helpful to those who are taking up that study. It is specially suited to classes and singing schools. Price, 5 cents or $3 per hundred.

—EVANGELISTS Bromley and Myers recently conducted a successful tabernacle meeting at Vermillion, S. D. Nearly five hundred came forward, a large percentage of whom were men and young men. Three other special meetings were held in the State University chapel. A number of students were among the converts.

Proved Investments

From time to time we repurchase from our clients small blocks of First Mortgage Bond Issues formerly marketed by us. In almost every instance the original issue has been materially reduced through the operation of our plan of serial payments, the margin of security has been correspondingly increased and the ability of the borrowing company to take care of the interest and maturing principal has been proved.

Such bonds net from 4¾ to 5½ %, and sometimes as high as 6 %, and are under ordinary conditions readily realizable.

We have just prepared a circular offering a large variety of these proved investments secured by Iron Ore, Coal, Timber, Steel Steamships, Steam and Electric Railroads, Railroad Equipment, Chicago Real Estate and the plants of well-known Industrial Corporations.

Write for Circular No. 697 P

Peabody, Houghteling & Co.

(Established 1865)

181 La Salle Street (45) Chicag

NEW YORK REAL ESTATE

IS THE ONE INVESTMENT CERTAIN TO INCREASE IN VALUE

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Our STOCK represents its actu ownership, yields a regular incom and enables the holder to obta a share of that increase.

Our BONDS (for any amoun are absolutely secured by it; yiel 6% a year (payable semi-annually and are redeemable in gold.

Honest, Safe, Profitable Investments

Write to-day for free booklet 14, showing past results and present condition

New York Realty Owner

489 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YOR

A BOOK ABOUT Mortgages and Trust Bonds

Yieldin 5 to 5½ Net

SENT FREE

Write to-day for our book describing these Guaranteed First Mortgage Trust Bonds and our plan whereby payments of $10 to $100 and upwards at your convenience secures at once ownership and income

BONI Secu by F Mortga on New Y and Suburb Real Est

UNDER SUPERVISION OF NEW YORK BANKING D

NEW YORK MORTGAGE

DEPT. D 1475 BROADWAY NEW YORK C

6% NET

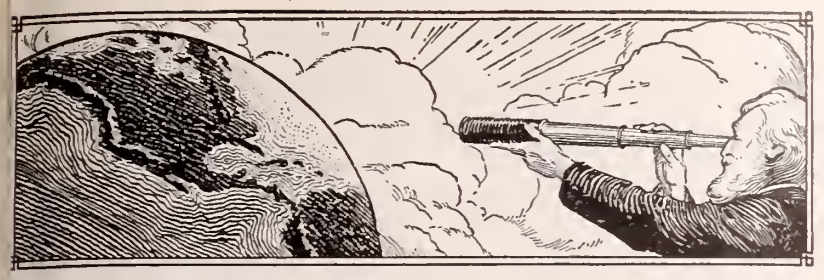
For 35 years we have been paying our cu the highest returns consistent with cons methods. First mortgage loans of $200 which we can recommend after the most personal investigation. Please ask for Loan List $25 Certificates of Deposit also for saving

PERKINS & CO. Lawrence

PATENTS SECURED OR FE RETURNED.

Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent fre

VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington,



Our Lookout Round the World

HE World's Sunday School Convention, to be held in Washington, C., May 19-22, promises to be one of t· largest and most interesting religus conventions ever held in this ntry. The delegates will number out three thousand. Arrangements f the entertainment of these visitors ve already begun. More than five hdred delegates will be from foren lands—either missionaries or Sday School workers. The Americ delegations represent the Sunday Sool associations of the States and Territories and of Canada.

There will be an average of two or tee guests with each delegate, and ts means a total accommodation to found for about nine thousand pers s. The Washington Committee on Arrangements will give free entertnment to the delegates from abroad. Te committee is appealing to friends o the Sunday School movement who a willing to entertain one or more othe delegates. As one hundred and fy Washington churches have affilied, it is expected that there will be n trouble in finding accommodations f all who come. The American delegles meet the expenses of their own eertainment, but the local committee h volunteered in aiding them to find aommodation. The Entertainment Cnmittee is also arranging for a nmber of excursions to nearby points, iluding the Luray Cave, Gettysburg, Mnt Vernon, and other places.

. . .

—MR. ROOSEVELT and his party, on loving Rome, visited Genoa, where he reived a popular ovation. They tn proceeded to Porto Maurizio, to vt Miss Carow, Mrs. Roosevelt's s,er. The little Italian town was d ped in gay bunting and all the offic s turned out to welcome the visitors wh speeches, flowers and fireworks. A few days later the party left for Si Remo, Monte Carlo and Nice. Tr journey northward into France h been like a continuous triumphal p cession.

. . .

—LAST WEEK witnessed another advce in the prices of meats of all kds. The situation in New York is boming serious. Nearly 700 small bcher shops on the East Side have been obliged to close their doors and police reserves have been on duty to check rioting. The wholesale meat dealers predict a still further advance as the result of the scarcity of stock, although such scarcity is not apparent in the record of shipments to the East. Many arrests have been made, including women who were among the demonstrative crowds around the smaller meat stores.

. . .

—A BILL HAS BEEN introduced in the Nevada Legislature which may revolutionize the methods by which divorces are now procured so easily at Reno and other points in that State. Under the new measure, an applicant for divorce must actually reside in the State where he seeks the divorce at least six months. There is a strong movement to do away with present disgraceful divorce conditions in Nevada. It is not improbable that the campaign may become a national one. At present over ninety per cent. of all Nevada divorces are granted in Reno.

. . .

—PRIME MINISTER ASQUITH, of England, has been hurling some terrifying adjectives at the House of Lords. In the Commons a few days ago he declared that "the continued existence of the House of Lords as a second chamber on the present basis was an anachronism and it was an integral part of the Government's policy to get rid of that anachronism." This was during a debate on the resolution introduced by the Government, limiting the power of the Lords in regard to general legislation. The contest between the two houses steadily increases in bitterness.

. . .

—WE IN THIS COUNTRY are apt to think of precious stones as imported only from Europe, South Africa, and the Far East, yet some of the most beautiful pearls have been discovered in America. A jewelry firm in Maiden Lane, New York, has just come into possession of an American pearl worth $20,000. It is round, pink, and is said to be the largest fresh-water pearl ever seen in the city. It was found by a "pearl fisher" a little while ago in the White River, Arkansas. It was sold first to a Western dealer, and was then bought by the New York house.

A CHANGE IN OUR GUARANTEE

WE have changed the wording of our Advertising Guarantee so as to give our subscribers a longer time in which to make complaints in regard to misunderstandings with advertisers. As it now reads, claims may be nde within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement, instead of within one month as heretofore.

Subscribers have advised us that after answering an advertisement, receiving the goods and trying them, more than thirty days may elapse, and a nmber have asked us to extend the time. These requests seem to us very reasnable and, in any event, it was not our intention to hold our subscribers literally within the period of thirty days designated in our Guarantee.

In being responsible for any dissatisfaction which may arise, we mean to live up to the spirit as well as the letter of our Guarantee, and the fact that a cmplaint has been made a few days after the time limit expired would make n difference in our attitude toward the subscriber. As a matter of fact, we invite correspondence on this subject. We do not care how long ago the incident may have taken place, we are glad to know about it, as it may enable us to consider the integrity of our advertising columns from a new view-point.

We have yet to find one advertiser unwilling to co-operate with us in adjusting any dissatisfaction which may have arisen in the minds of any of our subscribers, and already we have been instrumental in bringing about the reimbursement of a number of subscribers whose cases, if it had not been for our Guarantee, would never have been adjusted, simply because they had not thought it worth while to call attention to the matter.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement.

←From Shoe Box To Ash Can→

Usually a short journey

HOW often is the complaint heard that shoes wear out so quickly! In every family the shoe bill is a heavy item of expense. Shoes wear out fast, their life depending on the wearing quality of the sole, which is simply the hide tanned, and not treated with oils and greases as the uppers are.

When shoes get wet, the soles become spongelike and are soon saturated, resulting in the loosening of the leather, and a process of weakening which makes the leather wear out quickly.

The Leyden Chemical Laboratory in SOLESOL produced an article very effective in increasing the wear-resisting qualities of sole-leather. It prolongs the life of the shoe three-fold. One can contains enough for four pairs of shoes. Price, 20 cents, by mail. SOLESOL will positively save you money by cutting down your shoe bills. Send 20 cents now for a can and try it in your household.

Good men and women agents wanted in every community. Write at once for territory.

LEYDEN CHEMICAL LABORATORY

149 Church Street, - - - - - - - - New York, U. S. A.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music. 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett. 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne. Ind.

Not "as good as," but "better than" is our Standard in the making of

HYMNS OF WORSHIP AND PRAISE

Send for a copy TO-DAY—25c., Postpaid. Tullar-Meredith Co., New York-Chicago

Save Steps between kitchen and dining room. One trip with Wheel Tray sets table. Another clears it. Stands beside table for serving. Beside sink while washing dishes. Price $10, exp. paid. Circular WHEEL TRAY CO., 435C West 61st Place, Chicago, Ill.

Send us your order for No. 26T2106 Minnesota New Model "A" Drop Head Automatic Lift Sewing Machine. Weight, about 125 pounds.

Price, shipped from Dayton, Ohio, $17.85

Complete Set of Attachments, 75 Cents Extra.

Our Catalog describes Sewing Machines from $8.45 up. Fill out the coupon.

This Six-Drawer Automatic Lift Drop Head Style Sewing Machine

Has the following special features which have made this model famous:

Ball Bearing
Short Needles
Extra Long Shuttle
Disc Tension
Automatic Bobbin Winder
Special Needle Plate
Independent Positive Cam Take-Up
Automatic Tension Release
Extra Large and Strong Feed
Round and Hardened Needle Bar

OUR SPECIAL SEWING MACHINE CATALOG is a book you must have if you contemplate buying a sewing machine. It shows all our various models, many of them in colors just as they appear; illustrates the various parts, tells you all about everything you want to know, explains fully our twenty-year guarantee, our three months' trial contract, and describes the uses of all the special attachments. Fill out this coupon carefully with your name and address. The very day we receive it we will send you a free copy of our special Sewing Machine Catalog.

Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Chicago, Ill.

S. M.— Christian Herald.

Name_____

Postoffice_____

R. F. D. No._____ State_____

P. O. Box No._____ Street and No._____

Sears, Roebuck and Co., Chicago, Illinois

Himalaya Cloth

TRADE MARK

An Exact Reproduction of the Fashionable Rough Silks at about One-quarter of Their Cost

27 inches wide 35 cts. per yard 75 shades and colors

Women everywhere have recognized the excellence of Himalaya Cloth for Suits; Coats, Evening and Automobile Wraps, Evening Gowns, Shirt Waists, Children's Dresses and for every purpose where real silk is desirable.

It is far preferable to silk because it launders perfectly, never wears fuzzy and has great durability, It is a favorite with the most discriminating ladies' tailors, modistes and dressmakers.

Every woman who examines this wonderful cloth realizes at once that it is as beautiful as the real Rough Silks, and it is no over-statement to say that an expert can hardly distinguish between "Himalaya" and silks that cost $1.00 to $1.50 per yard.

The excellence of Himalaya Cloth is due to three things: the peculiar character of the rough yarns, the care used in weaving and the perfect finish which insures the permanent brilliancy.

Your guarantee of perfection and assurance of the genuine is the word "Himalaya" stamped on the selvage. Do not accept any cloth claimed to be just as good. There are many cheap imitations. See the word "Himalaya" for yourself on the selvage.

Ask for Himalaya Cloth at the wash goods counter of your dealer. If it is not in stock, write us giving his name.

FRED. BUTTERFIELD & CO., 725 Broadway, New York, Bradford, Eng.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL

We will ship you a "RANGER" BICYCLE on approval, freight prepaid to any place in the United States without a cent deposit in advance, and allow ten days free trial from the day you receive it. If it does not suit you in every way and is not all or more than we claim for it and a better bicycle than you can get anywhere else regardless of price, or if for any reason whatever you do not wish to keep it, ship it back to us at our expense for freight and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We sell the highest grade bicycles direct from factory to rider at lower prices than any other house. We save you $10 to $25 middlemen's profit on every bicycle. Highest grade models with Puncture-Proof tires, Imported Roller chains, pedals, etc., at prices no higher than cheap mail order bicycles; also reliable medium grade models at unheard of low prices.

RIDER AGENTS WANTED in each town and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1910 "Ranger" Bicycle furnished by us. You will be astonished at the wonderfully low prices and the liberal propositions and special offer we will give on the first 1910 sample going to your town. Write at once for our special offer.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogue and learn our low prices and liberal terms. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. D-71, CHICAGO, ILL.

HOUSEWORK HALVED

By Syracuse "EASY" Utilities

SOLD ON TRIAL

We are specialists in labor-saving utilities for the home. Our Syracuse "EASY" Vacuum Washer and "EASY" Ball-bearing Wringer have lightened the burdens of thousands of women, and are known by them to be the best made for their purpose.

The latest addition to our line is the "EASY" Vacuum Cleaner, hand or electric, which is positively the easiest operated and most efficient cleaner made. Gets ALL the dirt, without raising dust. Cleans carpets, rugs, furniture, draperies, floors and walls right in the room. Once tried, you will not be without it. Write for Trial Offer, Easy Terms, and testimonials from our customers.

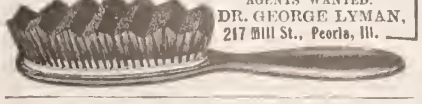
DODGE & ZUILL

535-J Dillaye Building. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

THIS NEW HAIR BRUSH COMBS AND BRUSHES THE HAIR AND MASSAGES THE SCALP.

The greatest modern invention for keeping the hair beautiful and fluffy and the scalp clean, healthful and free from dandruff or dirt. Keep the scalp clean and properly massaged and nature will grow the hair. Write for free circular.

AGENTS WANTED.



DR. GEORGE LYMAN, 217 Mill St., Peoria, Ill.

POST CARDS

10 Birthday, 10 cts. | 10 Decoration Day, 10 cts.
10 Rose, 10 cts. | 10 Fourth of July, 10 cts.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

An immediate relief for Hoarseness, Coughs, Sore Throat, Bronchial and Asthmatic Troubles. An article of superior merit, absolutely free from any harmful ingredient.
Price, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1,00 per box.
Sample mailed on request.
JOHN I. BROWN & SON, Boston, Mass.

LAWN FENCE

Many designs—Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries.
Coiled Spring Fence Co.
Box D Winchester, Ind.

A Spiritual Birthday*

GIPSY SMITH in his striking way often tells his congregations that though they may be members of churches, it does not by any means follow that they are Christians.

The spiritual birth alone makes men real Christians, and the spiritual birth comes not to all of us.

Unfortunately there are many other motives than the right one, which impel people to unite with the church. It may be that there is a revival. Many are coming forward to declare themselves on the Lord's side. It may be just then rather a popular and fashionable thing to become a Christian, and you may be swept into the church on the tide.

Or your dearest friend may become a Christian and may persuade you to join the church with him, when you really are not fit.

Any one of many motives may so incline you—and yet you may not have been spiritually born again.

How can you tell whether you have been?

This question has been asked in agony by many conscientious people, who fail to find within themselves the joy and peace which they think a Christian ought to feel.

But remember that if you have had a clear vision that God's side is the right side, and that you want to be with him and not against him, and have come out bravely and said so, you have taken the first step toward the new birth. You have enlisted in the army. You have not yet proved your mettle. You may be overthrown in the first battle—but you have a right to call yourself a Christian.

Then come the struggles—for Satan attacks us in front and rear, putting all kinds of doubts and fears into our hearts.

But if, as the years pass, we remain true—if, through faith and prayer, we have been able to pick ourselves up after every fight, and continue the campaign, little by little we come to realize that the old creature is dead within us and that we are new-born in Christ Jesus.

"But must we wait until we have been Christians for years before this comes to us?"

No. It may come to you at once with your turning from the world to Christ. There have been many clear and plain cases of an utter change of heart—the heart of stone taken away and the heart of flesh bestowed—at once upon conversion. But oftener, months or even years of conflict intervene before the man who has chosen Christ for his leader has sloughed off the old and put on the new in Christ Jesus. It comes to us often unconsciously, and most surely when we forget self in labor for others.

To him who has truly known the great spiritual re-birth, God's will is the only will; the promotion of his kingdom is the only cause; the looking for his appearing is the only aspiration; and the day when one first felt those great truths might well be called one's spiritual birthday.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, May 8. TEXTS: I. Thess. 1:5-8; Gal. 1:15, 16.

The Blossoms of Spring

(See Illustration on Cover Page)

DEEP in the heart, when the spring blossoms glow,
Waketh a song that is tender and low.
Words it has none; but its music so sweet
Needeth no words for its beauty complete.

Long, long the winter, and deep, deep the snow.
Moons wax and wane, rising slow and more slow.
At last blows the south wind, and soft, with its sigh,
Warble of robin and bluebird float by.

Buds soon are bursting. The children are gay.
Sad faces brighten to see them at play.
Then in the orchards and meadows behold,
Splendor outshining the glory of gold.

Then thrills the ecstasy—then wakes the song.
And youth and the springtime together belong;
For fairest of blossoms the seasons can bring
Is a slip of a girl in life's beautiful spring.

KATE UPSON CLARK.

CALLED HIGHER

Mr. John Dinsmore Robbins passed away Cheney, Wash., February 14, 1910. He born in Acton, Mass., September 6, 1813.

Mrs. F. M. Wolfe, who had been a subscr to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for many years, October 9, 1909, at Piney Flats, Tenn., a seventy-six years.

Rev. J. Gunderman, of Rives Junction, Mi died on December 16, 1909, in the ninety-sec year of his age. He had preached the Go over sixty-five years as a Baptist minister.

POSTUM FOR MOTHERS

The Drink that Nourishes and Supp Food for Mother and Child

"My husband has been unable to dr coffee for several years, so we were very g to give Postum a trial and when we unc stood that long boiling would bring out delicious flavor, we have been highly plea with it."

"It is one of the finest things for nurs mothers that I have ever seen. It keeps the mothers strength and increases the sup of nourishment for the child if partaken freely. I drank it between meals instead water and found it most beneficial.

"Our five-year-old boy has been very d cate since birth and has developed slo He was white and bloodless. I began to g him Postum freely and you would be prised at the change. When any person marks about the great improvement, we ne fail to tell them that we attribute his gai strength and general health to the free us Postum and this has led many friends to it for themselves and children.

"I have always cautioned friends to wh I have spoken about Postum to follow ections in making it, for unless it is boi fifteen or twenty minutes, it is quite tastel On the other hand, when properly made, i very delicious. I want to thank you for benefits we have derived from the use your Postum."

Read "The Road to Wellville," found pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A n one appears from time to time. They genuine, true, and full of human intere

MUSIC LESSONS FRE

In Your Own Home

In order to make our home study courses kn in your locality we will give you—absolutely fr 96 lessons for either Piano, Organ, Violin, Gui Banjo, Mandolin, or Cornet. In return we ask t you recommend our Institute to your friends a you learn to play. It matters not whether you a beginner or an advanced pupil, the lessons be made suitable to your need. It is not necess that you know one note from another. The less are so simple and easy that any person or li child who can read English can learn them. will receive one lesson weekly, and your expense during the time you take the lessons be the cost of postage and the music you use, wh is small. Thousands have learned by mail and can do the same.

Don't say you cannot learn music, but send our free booklet and tuition offer. It will be s by return mail free.

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF MUS 98 Fifth Avenue, Dept. 11, New York C

Theodore Roosevelt'

Own Account of His African Trip Now appearing in

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZIN

is the most popular magazine contribution for yea and of great interest to a LARGE NUMBER OF NE READERS, 100,000 subscription orders already plac —Here is a Great Opportunity for Subscription Agen Liberal cash commissions and many extra priz are offered those who can devote even a little tir to soliciting subscriptions. REPRESENTATIV WANTED IN EVERY TOWN OF AMERICA.

For particulars, address at once Desk 3.

Scribner's Magazine, 155 Fifth Ave., N.Y.Cit

A FLOOD OF LIG FROM KEROSENE (Coal O

Burning common kerosene the ALADDIN MA LAMP generates gas that gives a light mor liant than city gas, gasoline or elect Simple, odorless, clean, safe and du is revolutionizing lighting everywhere. N In every home. Every lamp guaranteed. itself Our Sunbeam Burners fit other Ask our nearest office how you can get a free or apply for Agency Proposition.

AGENTS MAKE BIG MON

MANTLE LAMP CO. of America, Det

Chicago, Portland, Ore.; Waterbury, Conn.; Winnipeg, Montreal,

Old Appliance

LAME PEOPLE

Our Appli

The Perfection Extension Shoe for any person with one short limb. Worn with any style of ready-made shoes with perfect ease and comfort. Shipped on trial. Write for Booklet.

HENRY E. LOTZ 313 Third Ave., NEW YO

18 Beautiful Colored Floral Post Cards 10
Views if you prefer them. Agents wanted.
Thos. W. Emery, 39 Bank St., New York.

For Toilet, Bath and Shampoo

Use the single soap that does double duty — the soap which cleans and disinfects at the same time.

LIFEBUOY

Soap is the health soap of the hands. It prevents the roughening of the cuticle and keeps women's hands soft and smooth for handling embroidery silks, etc.

5c AT YOUR GROCERS

LEVER BROS. CO. Cambridge, Mass.

"SAVE-THE-HORSE" SPAVIN CURE.

REG. TRADE MARK

here are no baneful and vicious features attending use of "Save-the-Horse."

ou obtain results without delays, relapses, blisted, fevered, swollen legs or permanently thickel tissue or suspended use of the horse.

O PROMISE OF RESULTS IMPOSSIBLE TO PERFORM OR FALSE TESTIMONIALS TO MISLEAD YOU. YOU CANNOT MISTAKE THE CERTAINTY OF ITS UNFAILING AND UNEQUALLED POWER OR THE SECURITY OF OUR CONTRACT.

Havre de Grace, Md., Dec. 7, 1909.

To Chemical Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

During 1908 I had two horses go wrong, one with a "bone spin"; she was dead lame. The other with two "bog spins" and a big knee.

After reading your advertisement week after week I had Mr. Ely order for me one bottle of "Save-the-Horse," which I thought I would just simply try. I used it on both cases, following your directions. I gave them both road work until I had consumed the one bottle only, which took just two months. And to-day I shall say just one year has elapsed since the treatment, that they both are as sound as a new dollar and never one has taken a lame step since. EDWARD T. WELSH.

$5.00 a bottle, with signed guarantee or contract. Send for copy, booklet & letters from business men & trainers on every kind of case. Permanently cures Spavin, Thoroughpin, Ringbone (except low), Curb, Splint, Capped Hock, Windpuff, Shoe Boil, Injured Tendons & all Lameness. No scar or loss of hair. Horse works as usual. Dealers or Exp. paid. SAVE-THE-HORSE CHEMICAL CO., 39 Commercial Ave., Binghamton, N.Y.

HEALTH MERRY GO ROUND MAKES HAPPY, HEALTHY CHILDREN

who prefer to stay at home and enjoy themselves rather than play on the streets. Operated by children themselves; the movement not unlike that of rowing, brings every muscle into play. Most healthful form of outdoor exercise; keeps lungs inflated, develops sturdy legs, strong arms, straight backs, broad shoulders. Makes children studious. You owe the children this delightful pleasure—you'll save it in doctor bills. Inexpensive, simple, absolutely safe; no cogs or complicated gears to catch and tear clothing. Not a toy, but a real Merry-Go-Round. Will last for years. Full particulars and handsomely illustrated booklet free. HEALTH MERRY-GO-ROUND CO., Dept. F, QUINCY, ILL.

Official Florida Book-Free

County Commissioners of Marion Co., have issued an official booklet of conservative information which will be sent FREE to all. Address M. M. Proctor, County Commissioner, Pro, Marion Co., Fla.

IF YOU STAMMER

I will send you my 81-page book "Advice to Stammerers" Free. It explains how I quickly and permanently cured myself. Profit by my experience and write for free book and advice.

BENJ. N. BOGUE

1560 NORTH ILLINOIS STREET, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

BEEKEEPING its pleasures and profits, is the theme of that excellent and handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on trial for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page book of bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name this paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, Ohio

Christian Graces*

THE Christian graces which are named in the selections for the week are all necessary to a well-rounded Christian character; but one is omitted from them which is contained in Paul's great enumeration of "the fruits of the spirit," in the fifth chapter of Galatians.

This is the virtue of joy, which in spite of the apostle's express mention and the numerous admonitions throughout the whole Bible to "rejoice," has never really "come into its own" as a Christian grace.

If it had only been so recognized everywhere, Christians would not have been so generally denounced as "long-faced" and "solemn." That we should be sad, to whom efficient help has been promised for the overcoming of sin, and to whom the hope of a blessed immortality has been revealed, is indeed a shame to us all.

It is hard to understand why the human mind is more apt to dwell upon those things which it has not than upon those which it has. Carlyle says that every age always seems to itself "most unheroic." So it seems to many of us as though our lives were barer and poorer than those of others.

We forget that behind t· outer seeming of each of those lives there is much that only the man himself knows, or those nearest to him. The familiar poem of "The Changed Cross" well illustrates this truth. A poor soul begged to take some other cross. His own was intolerable. The kind Lord let him try many others, but he found each one far heavier than his own. He asked at last to have that comfortable old cross given back to him.

Joy is bound up with many kindred virtues. A sane mind cannot feel true joy unless it is in harmony with the Eternal—unless it is walking in the path of duty. Faithful work, the consciousness that one has done one's best—has never yielded a jot to the evil one—has kept pure what Scott called "the bird in his bosom,"—all these are at the root of joy, and it is impossible to have real joy without them.

The poet has voiced it well in these ringing lines:

I like the man who faces what he must,
With step triumphant and a heart of cheer;
Who fights the daily battle without fear,
Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unfaltering trust
That God is God, that somehow, true and just,
His plans work out for mortals; not a tear
Is shed when fortune, which the world holds dear,
Falls from his grasp; better, with love, a crust
Than living in dishonor; envies not,
Nor loses faith in man; but does his best,
Nor ever murmurs at his humble lot;
But with a smile and words of hope, gives zest
To every toiler. He alone is great
Who by a life heroic conquers fate.

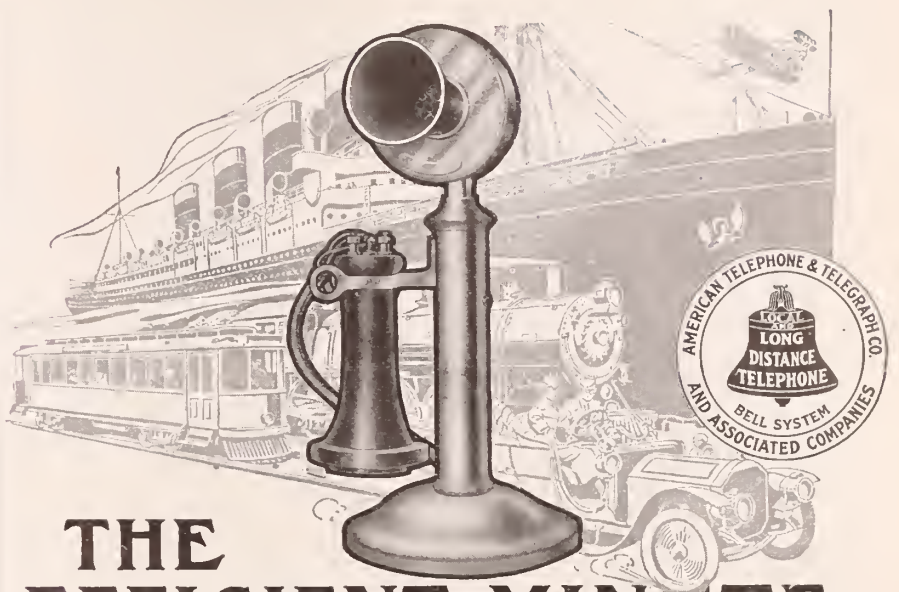
"Paul," says Dr. D. J. Burrell, "was fifty-one years old when he wrote the Epistle to the Romans. At about the same time he wrote another letter full of like courage and good cheer in which he said, 'I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake; for when I am weak then am I strong.'

"Nine years later he was in Rome, a prisoner in the Mamertine jail; and there he dictated a letter to Timothy, his spiritual son. Had he changed his mind in those nine years? Had increasing age, suffering and persecution diminished his fervor and hopefulness? Let him speak for himself: 'Be strong, my son, in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him. I have fought a good fight. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown.'

"Out beyond the gate there is the flash of an ax, and the heroic spirit of Paul goes up to join the multitude who surround the throne."

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, May 8. TEXTS: I. Peter 4 : 7-11; Col. 4 : 6.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 421, and write them for full information.



THE EFFICIENT MINUTE

We have speeded up our ships and railways; we have made rapid transit more and more rapid; we have developed a mile a minute in the air and much faster in an automobile.

But the Bell Telephone is quickest of all. It is instantaneous. No weeks or days or minutes wasted in waiting for somebody to go and come; no waiting for an answer.

It is the most effective agency for making minutes more useful, more efficient.

In almost every field of work men are accomplishing more in less time with the Bell Telephone than they could without it. They can talk with more people, near and far; they can keep the run of more details; they can buy or sell more goods, and to better advantage; they can be active in more affairs.

The Bell Telephone has placed a new and higher value upon the minute — for everybody. It has done this by means of One Policy, One System, and Universal Service.

Bell Long Distance Telephone service not only gives an added value to a man's minutes — it accomplishes business results which would be absolutely impossible without it. Every Bell Telephone is the Center of the System.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY
AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

Twenty thousand trained nurses use Kingsford's. —For Custards, Blanc Mange, Charlotte Russe and the little dainties an invalid needs they say that nothing can take the place of

Kingsford's Corn Starch

On the home table there is always a welcome for these light, digestible desserts. How to make them told in our remarkable little Cook Book "O," over 160 recipes. It is free; SEND FOR IT TODAY.

T. KINGSFORD & SON, Oswego, N. Y.
NATIONAL STARCH CO., Successors

Gipsy Smith

The World's Foremost Singing Evangelist Sings Exclusively for the COLUMBIA.

After repeated requests in England and America, I have decided to place on record so of the songs of the gospel, or as I call them, "sermons set to music," which I have found helpful in my work in England, America, Australia and South Africa. The following son "Saved by Grace," "He Lifted Me," "Kept for Jesus," "O, Beautiful City of God," "Je is My Light," and "Pass It On" will be recognized as old favorites, and as set forth by the Columbia Company can be used and preserved long after my voice is far away or no more. My one hope is that they may in this form bring back blessed memories and give new inspiration wherever heard.

Gipsy Smith

COLUMBIA
DOUBLE-DISC RECORDS

Gipsy Smith's voice is marvelously sympathetic, and it happens also to be a wonderful recording voice. The reproduction is unmistakably faithful to the original, and very few records ever made can compare with these for distinctness. It is perfectly easy to catch every word from the beginning to the end, whether the songs are familiar or not.

Although it is well-nigh impossible to convey in words an adequate impression of those qualities which render the singing of Gipsy Smith so uniquely and supremely attractive, it should be said that, overshadowing all others of these qualities, is felt the expression of a loving human sympathy as wide as the universe itself. In the vivid accents of a faith that is complete and perfect, and a sincerity the fervor of which carries an unmistakable message to the heart of every listener, is found the true spirit of the evangelist shining through his recorded work. In every one of the selections there is felt an intimate personal appeal that cannot be evaded.

Of scarcely less importance is the technical perfection of these records from both vocal and manufacturing points of view. Gipsy Smith is not alone a great evangelist in word and deed—he is likewise a singer whose vocalism is scientifically correct. The quality of his voice is an exquisite sweetness, and the reproduction of this inherent quality in the record is perfect and absolute. The Columbia series of Double-Disc Records by Gipsy Smith is a distinct achievement in the recording art.

Those Old Familiar Hymns

The Columbia Graphophone has secured a place of honor in the homes of the American people as the one incomparable musical instrument: Partly by its marvelously true rendition of grand opera music, recorded by the stars of the opera and concert world—Bonci, Zenatello, Bispham, and a host of others: Partly because of its versatile and faultless rendering of popular songs and standard ballads—vocal and instrumental music of every class.

But there is no sort of music that seems to lend itself to reproduction on Columbia Double-Disc Records like such grand old hymns as "Nearer, My God, to Thee," sung in the Columbia laboratory by well-known choristers from certain famous New York City churches.

If you own a disc talking machine (Columbia or other make) mail us $1. and we will send you, prepaid, any of the Gipsy Smith records you prefer (two selections)—and a complete catalogue with it.

If you don't own a Graphophone, ask for Graphophone Catalog.

Columbia Disc Graphophone don't be satisfied with any oth Prices $25 to $100.

The Columbia Grafonola (c cealed horn instrument) in th type—$100, $200, $225.

Columbia Phonograph Company, Gen'l, Dept. U, Tribune Building, New York

Prices in Canada plus duty. Address 264 Yonge Street, Toronto

Creators of the Talking Machine Industry. Pioneers and Leaders in the Talking Machine Art

Owners of the Fundamental Patents

Dealers Wanted—Exclusive selling rights given where we are not properly represented

CHRISTIAN HERALD

UBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
UBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH, JR.

NEW YORK, May 4, 1910

VOL. 33—NO. 18, PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

See Page 448

A JINRIKISHA OUTING IN JAPAN

Questions and Answers

WE have received many letters from readers of this journal, conveying expressions of sympathy and regret at the death of its late editor. As it is impossible to answer all of these writers individually, we take this method of expressing our appreciation of their friendly messages and assure them that we value greatly the continued confidence and co-operation of the friends of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in its work.

I. J., East Norwalk, Conn. 1. What kind of instruments were the sackbuts and psalteries mentioned in the Bible? 2. What authority is there in the Bible for the statement that the birds and animals talked and understood each other?

1. The sackbut was a stringed instrument of four or more strings and triangular in form. The psaltery was of a general harp-like form, but was in various shapes and sizes. Some were curved. Some scholars have identified it with the lyre. 2. It is pure legend. There is nothing authoritative to be found anywhere in the Scriptures on the subject.

Rev. James Curry, San Francisco Theological Seminary, Newark, Calif. In your issue of recent date there is reference to the "Mother Shipton" prophecy. A great many people seem still to believe this genuine, when it is all fallacious. In his book. Many Infallible Proofs (pp. 44-45, published 1886), Dr. A. G. Pierson exposes the fraud. He shows at least three different versions of it, in which slight changes are adroitly made to make it correspond to the developments of current history. A Mr. Charles Hindly, to whom it was traced, acknowledged himself as the author of this prophetic hoax, which was written in 1866. So most of the fulfilment occurred before the prophecy was written.

Dr. Curry's letter is timely and welcome, although the statement has already been published in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD that the "Shipton prophecy" was a hoax, perpetrated by a clever English writer, who afterward admitted the fact.

G. R. H., Palestine, Tex. What is the generally accepted belief of the most learned Bible students as to the immediate place to which a saved soul goes at death? Do they hold to the belief that a saved soul goes immediately to heaven, or goes to an intermediary place?

Many books have been written concerning the state of the soul between death and the resurrection. The Catholics have the doctrine of purgatory, but the early Christians held no such belief. They believed that there was a judgment immediately after death and a final judgment later, and that in the intermediate state (not "place"), every believer's soul would find a foretaste of the greater joys to come. Some non-Catholic authorities have held that the soul after leaving the body remains inert until the resurrection. The best authorities, however, hold that it retains its active powers, and is assigned to a condition which is suited to its degree of spiritual development until the final change. Dr. Tuck points out that Hades, the abode of the departed, was regarded by the Hebrews as divided into two sections: one for the good; the other for the wicked. "Both together made up the abode of the dead"; one Paradise, the other Gehenna. Jesus promised the repentant thief: "To-day thou shalt be with me in Paradise." (Luke 23: 43.) Paradise was to the Jewish theologians a state of future bliss with lower and higher stages; yet it is not the final stage. See also II. Cor. 12: 4; I. Pet. 3: 19; II. Cor. 5: 6-8. On the other hand, there are passages that are capable of a different construction. See Job 7. 21; Dan. 12: 2; I. Cor. 15: 51; I. Thess. 4: 14. In these passages, it is probable that "sleep" may refer to the body and not to the spirit.

G. B., Bloomfield, Mo. 1. Explain sanctification. 2. What is the sin against the Holy Ghost?

1. When a believer gives himself to God unreservedly and believes in Christ with the heart unto righteousness, God through the Holy Spirit sanctifies that believer. Sanctification is the work of God within us and it purifies the whole life. 2. There are conflicting opinions on the matter, but it is believed to have been attributing the works of Christ to Satanic agency. 3. The passage you quote is not in the Bible.

T. N., Shimshu, Japan. 1. Did Zaccheus climb the tree to see Jesus for curiosity only? 2. Are we to infer from Luke 19: 8 that he was a bad man, or was he no worse than other publicans?

1. He climbed to gratify his curiosity, but he seems to have had a deeper interest. He had probably heard of Christ and his miracles and wished to know more of this wonderful Being. 2. He was a rich Jewish revenue official—a customs gatherer—and v. 8 would seem to imply that he was regarded as a hard man. All tax-gatherers under Roman authority were cordially disliked by the Jews, and they were usually cruel extortionists.

J. B., Des Moines, Ia. Can not you publish something to allay the foolish fear about the comet which seems to prevail in many sections of the country? Of course, it is absurd, but some people need to be reassured.

Professor E. E. Barnard, of Yerkes Observatory, one of our best authorities, has lately been busy answering many letters like the foregoing. He writes: "The logical supposition is that the gas of the comet's tail is so attenuated that the earth's envelope of atmosphere will pass through it like a ball without being penetrated by it. The passage will begin about 8 o'clock on the evening of May 18, and will take twenty-four hours, supposing that the tail of the comet is nearly fifteen million miles thick. Computations show that the earth passed through the tail of the comet of 1861 without any one being aware of it until the fact was established years later by astronomers figuring out the astral wanderer's orbit." We may add that this is the view taken by practically all the scientists who have spoken or written on the subject. In their opinion, there is not the slightest cause for alarm.

A. C., Neoga, Ill. In Christ's miracles of healing of the body, do we understand that he also at the same time cleansed them from sin? In some cases the Scripture makes it plain that he did. In others, nothing is said. Are we to imply that he did in all cases?

It is to be inferred that the healing was complete, physically and spiritually, even though it may not be so stated definitely. "He pardons our iniquities and heals all our diseases." Even in the case of the nine lepers who did not return after being cleansed, the inference holds that they had been healed in both soul and body.

A. M., Orchard, Colo. 1. Please name a few good books, suitable for a gift to a young woman upon her graduation day.

A good edition of Shakespeare or any other of the standard poets (as Tennyson, Browning, Wordsworth, Longfellow, Whittier, Bryant); or a set of the works of the great prose writers (Ruskin, Emerson, Scott, Dickens, or Thackeray), would be suitable. They are furnished by nearly all booksellers and the range of prices is large. A few special books are: Stepping Heavenward, by Elizabeth Prentiss; Winsome Womanhood, by Margaret E. Sangster (Fleming H. Revell Co.); Beside Still Waters, or almost any others of the books of A. C. Benson; Happiness, by Carl Hilty; The Efficient Life, by Dr. Luther Gulick (Doubleday, Page & Co., $1.50). The price of each of the above books is about the same.

S. V. K. (a Native of India). 1. Do you advocate conversion to Christianity of all non-Christian peoples? 2. When you advocate conversion to Christianity, do you advocate it from the desire of saving the people from "hell fire" or of doing them some earthly good? 3. Do you decide the question entirely from the standpoint of the interest of the people to be converted? 4. Have you made any honest endeavor to investigate through impartial agencies whether conversion of non-Christian peoples has really done the converted peoples any appreciable good? 5. Are you conscious of any evil arising from the missionary work?

1. Yes; we are commanded by Jesus Christ to preach the Gospel to all nations and peoples, and this means to bring them into the Christian fold as true believers. 2. From both. Christianity gives a new meaning and higher purpose to this life, and the promise of life hereafter, with larger possibilities. 3. It is for their eternal welfare that we strive, but we do so also because it is a high privilege for Christians to bring souls out of darkness into light. See Dan. 12: 3. 4. Unbiased observers other than Christian workers have given abundant testimony to the value of missionary effort. Perhaps the most recent instances are the speeches and other utterances of President Taft at the Missionary Convention in Washington, and ex-President Roosevelt, who has very freely and very favorably given his opinion of missionary work in Africa. 5. On the contrary, it is productive of nothing but good; and this is so well attested that it hardly needs discussion. Christianity has done a wonde and world-wide work in civilizing the sav races, and in uplifting great masses of t who were under the old heathen systems. teaches not only the way of salvation thro Jesus Christ, but it educates the ignor softens the savage, raises woman from sc slavery to equality with man, inculcates just purity, truthfulness, temperance and kind toward others. Those who claim that arises from the propagation of Christianity the mission field are either blindly prejud or have never given the subject practical st

Mrs. L. W., Prophetstown, Ill. Please explain, the benefit of our Sunday School class, after performing the miracles mentio in Luke 8: 41-56; 5: 12-14; Mark 7: 32-; Matt. 9: 27-30, Jesus in each case s "See that thou tell no man" (or sim words), and why did they in almost ev ease "tell it all the more"?

The commentators unite in saying that reason for such a caution, no doubt, was t Jesus "did not desire to let the public f ing regarding himself come too precipita to a crisis." Nothing was to be gained tumult and sensation, which might prov decided disadvantage if it provoked the in ference of the authorities. He had just had experience with great cro (Mark 5: 24) which w an obstruction to his minis rather than an advantage, a therefore, he counseled household and friends of Jai to go quietly about their affa and say nothing that would cite the people. In most cas however, the caution went heeded. Their astonishment so profound that they could keep quiet. The result was t he was obliged, owing to popular excitement, to wi draw from the city to the derness. See Mark 5: 19, and Luke 5: 16.

Photo by Harris & Ewing

President Taft Opening the D. A. R. Congress in Washington, D. C.

ON April 18, the nineteenth Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution held its opening session in beautiful Continental Hall, with four thousand delegates present and with President Taft as the chief speaker. The hall, one of the most beautiful in America, was built by the Daughters for headquarters and to accommodate their gatherings. It is pure colonial in its architecture, with thirteen pillars given by the thirteen original States. It is one of the show places of Washington.

Miscellaneous

A. M., Elgin, Ill. See explan tion given to H. A. B., issue April 28, 1909.

Mrs. E. D. C., Attica, Ind. F statistics of dependent child write to the Children's Aid S ciety, 105 East Twenty-seco Street, New York.

Troy, N. Y. If the friend y mention is a good man and exerts a good influence upon yo life, we see no reason to reg the acquaintance. If, howev his influence is of a doubtf character, and distracts or p plexes you, you should not he tate to drop his acquaintance.

N. Silvius, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes: "W trust that the high standard of THE CHRISTIA HERALD will be maintained. A weekly paper much esteemed and beloved, deserves to found in every family where the English la guage is read. May the late Dr. Klopsc whose death we deeply deplore, have a success worthy of him, who made THE CHRISTIAN HE ALD one of the best papers in this country."

Mrs. E. R., San Francisco. There are ma persons throughout the country engaged spreading the Gospel by tract distributio placards and painted signs. We know of son who make this their special duty and who fi great good in it. The signs in box-cars a possibly the work of Christian railroad em ployees, or of the Commercial Travelers' Chri tian organization, or they may come from a one of a number of other sources.

R. A. F., Bentonville, Va. Rev. 21: 18, whic pictures the doom of Babylon, the world-powe is regarded by students of prophecy as yet t be fulfilled. This world-power (as to the ide tity of which commentators differ) is to b the greatest material expression of the Ant christ—a great and cruel persecutor of th faithful. Rev. 19: 20 describes the fate of Ant christ and his confederate kings and the followers. The battle itself is not describe but its results are given.

P. F. Y., Bloomington, Ill. 1. The author The Reign of Law died in 1900. 2. "Eterna Life" and "Immortality" are practically synon ymous. 3. See Matt. 19: 16; Mark 10: 17 Luke 10: 25, and 18: 18; also Matt. 25: 46 Matt. 10: 30; John 3: 15; John 5: 39; 6: 54 6: 68; 10: 28; 17: 2; Acts 13: 48; I. Tim 6: 12, 19; I. John 2: 25, and other passages 4. They probably have not given these subject the study they deserve, although they are th very essence of the Scriptures and should b taught in every pulpit.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

The Petitions to Congress

On Their Way for a Hearing by Congress

Arriving at the Capitol

Photographs by Waldon Fawcett

THE SUFFRAGIST INVASION OF CONGRESS

By WALDON FAWCETT

SEVERAL unusual and notable features have characterized the forty-second annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which was held at Washington, D. C., recently. One element of novelty was found in the presence of several of the foremost English suffragists, who made addresses and participated in the discussions of the convention. A second feature was presented in several open-air meetings—the first of the kind ever held at the American capital—and which are designed to inaugurate a country-wide campaign of open-air agitation, somewhat on the lines followed in England. However, the most picturesque feature of the 1910 convention of American suffragists had to do with the presentation of a monster petition to the two Houses of Congress. The big petition, signed by nearly half a million American citizens, was carried to the Capitol by the whole body of suffragists, several hundred strong, whose pilgrimage took the form of a spectacular automobile parade, the cars being decorated with banners embodying the slogans of the present campaign of votes for women.

The great appeal for the suffrage, which for months past has been circulating for signatures all over the country, reached the seat of government in the form of a mammoth national petition—the consolidation of many petitions circulated by individual workers. Instead of the petition being submitted to Congress as a whole, it was divided into sections on a geographical basis, so that the suffragists from each State were enabled to place their own appeal in the hands of their respective senators and representatives. The signature rolls of the petitions varied considerably in size.

In the automobile parade to the Capitol—which extended for more than three blocks when arranged in close formation—there was one or more motor cars assigned to the delegates from each State. Each State delegation carried its respective section of the big petition, and huge yellow streamers bearing the names of the States were strung across the sides or backs of the automobiles. Most of the occupants of the motor cars wore sashes of yellow ribbon, inscribed "Votes For Women," and were also adorned with white celluloid buttons bearing the same slogan, which became a familiar one during the convention. At the head of the procession were two cars containing the national officers, the leading automobile having among its occupants Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, who was unanimously re-elected president of the National Association; Mrs. Avery, the first vice-president; and Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, the treasurer. Most of the threescore automobiles were hired for the Congressional invasion. They were all liberally adorned with banners emblazoned with the arguments of the suffragists.

The Parade of the State Delegations Bearing the Petitions

This singular parade moved on the Capitol just at noon, the regular hour for the convening of Congress. Most of the women first sought out the representatives from their respective States and handed to them the petitions designed for their perusal. They then repaired to the Senate Chamber, which was the principal objective point of the invasion, owing to the fact that speeches on petitions are allowed in the Senate, but not in the House. Naturally, the suffragists were eager for some acknowledgment of their novel demonstration. Within a few minutes after the arrival of the parade on the east front of the Capitol, all the seats in the Senate galleries were occupied and a great number of interested women found themselves unable to gain admission to the chamber.

Scattering applause greeted the statements made by several Senators in presenting the petitions. A genuine ovation awaited Senator La Follette when he took the floor on the subject. Like his wife, the Senator from Wisconsin is an enthusiastic advocate of votes for women. His eldest daughter, Miss Fola La Follette, had been a conspicuous participant in the parade to the Capitol. The Senator in his address said: "I hope the time will come when this great body of intelligent people will not find it necessary to petition for that which ought to be accorded as a right in a country of equal opportunities." This was the first oratorical gun and it was greeted with such a round of applause that the presiding officer was obliged to admonish the galleries that "no applause is permitted in the Senate." Senator Perkins, following the presentation of the petitions, obtained an order for the printing of the body of the petition in the Congressional Record.

Aside from the very spectacular presentation to Congress of the great petition, the suffragists obtained formal hearings before the committees of Congress. It had originally been planned to have these hearings occur on the same day as the presentation of the petition; but Congressional procedure made it necessary to have the petition presented on Monday and the hearings deferred until Tuesday. Dr. Shaw and other women of national reputation appeared before the Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage, while Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton and six or seven other leaders presented forceful arguments before the House Committee on Judiciary.

THE
AMERICAN PULPIT
A Sermon by
Rev. Charles F. Aked, D.D.*

THE SONG OF THE WELL

TEXT—Num. 21:17, 18 (R. V.)

THIS is a gospel for commonplace people! The Old Testament Scriptures have their message for the great men and women of the race. Sage and seer, poet and prophet, statesman and ruler of nations have fed their greatness on the high food which they supply. Those hero-souls whose names shine resplendent in the heaven of lofty thought have been nourished into manhood, sustained in adversity, made strong in weakness, and nerved to a deathless life by the poetry and prose of these sacred books. But this morning we find in an Old Testament passage a gospel for quite ordinary people. Once we were to make our mark and make it deep on the life of the nation; now we are satisfied if we feel we can make some little corner of the world better than we found it, and leave a name for which our children will not need to blush. Once, when we looked upon our greatness in the magic mirror of the future, our sublime heads struck the stars. Now we are hewers of wood and drawers of water!

Making Labor Light

Drawers of water! It is the Scriptural phrase for those whose lives were toil and drudgery. We have chosen to weave the web of romance round the maiden at the well. Rebekah is fair as the morning, lovely as the daylight—in pictures. In actual fact, the young woman, who was sent to draw water from the well, was a household drudge, a Cinderella of a most unfairylike world, with never a respectable godmother in sight—the hard-worked, unpaid, ill-treated serving-woman of the tribe. And here is a charming little poem let into the solid prose of Scripture, showing what escape these drudges found from their drudgery, and how they lit up their monotonous toil with radiant thoughts. They said that they were co-partners in service with the greatest of their race! They said that princes had digged this well; that the nobles of the people had digged it with their sceptres and with their staves. They said that if their work was hard and coarse, it brought them into line with a heroic past. They said that they were carrying on a work which the first-born sons of heaven had begun. They said that they were one in labor and thought and purpose with earth's best blood! And they made the exhausting labor light with their laughter and inspiring song:

> Spring up, O well; sing ye unto it;
> Well, which the princes digged,
> Which the nobles of the people delved,
> With the sceptre, and with their staves.

This is the glorification of the commonplace. It is divinity, even if divinity draped in drab!

And it is true! Can you name one single, honest occupation which does not go back to the princes and the nobles of the race? Is not this City of New York more wonderful in its daily realities of train and tide, tramping millions and rolling river, seaborne splendor and conquest of the earth, than any Aladdin's palace of an Arabian Night's dream? There is not a ship that comes into our river; there is not a flag that floats from her masthead, that has not tales to tell of enterprise and daring, of hardships endured, of death outfaced and baffled or bravely met, and of the spirit of man subduing earth and sea to the empire of his will. Do you spend your commonplace life in weighing things by the pound or the ton, or measuring things by the yard, or in moving these things from one part of the land to another, or in selling them or buying them, or only in writing about them in office books, or perhaps even merely waiting on those who do? But these very things, and the commonplace functions you discharge in connection with them, link you on with your fellows all over the world; and not with the commonplace only, but with the pioneers, the discoverers, the inventors, the captain of the seas upon his bridge at night, the captain of industry, not necessarily a less heroic figure in the light of day; the chemist in his laboratory as well as the lonely traveler o'er antres vast and deserts idle; not only the brawny-limbed son of toil in the factory or the depths of the earth, but the brawny-brained thinker also whose towering intellect is as the lighthouse of the world! Princes digged these wells! The nobles of the people digged them with their sceptres and their staves!

It is wonderful, wonderful! We cannot touch the commonplaceness of it anywhere, blindly as we may grope, but that our lightest pressure brushes the commonplace aside and we perceive divinity. Things are not things, but immortal realities. They respond to us—Oh, thank God! they respond to our cry—and this is the song that breaks on our listening souls:

> Spring up, O well; sing ye unto it;
> Well, which the princes digged,
> Which the nobles of the people delved,
> With the sceptre, and with their staves.

There is a brutal passage in the writings of an English atheist which I often repeat to myself, in sheer wonder that a sane man can be so insanely absurd. He is preaching the amazing doctrine of everlasting nothingness, and he says: "On the last great day of account, the heroes who fell at Marathon and the last barrowful of litter wheeled out of the cavalry stables will be alike remembered." Jesus said: "Not a sparrow falls to the ground but your Father knoweth. Every hair of your head is numbered." And the untrained instinct of the toiler asserts its indestructible belief in the truth that Jesus taught when he feeds his soul's hunger for immortality with the knowledge that princes digged this well and the nobles of the people digged it with their sceptres and their swords!

So, then, we will go on to reconcile ourselves to our commonplace lives; nay, to glorify them. These are the lives of value to the world! In our schoolbooks, when we were boys and girls, we used to read of Mettus Curtius, a Roman youth, who sacrificed himself for his country by leaping, in full armor and on horseback, into the gulf which had opened in the Forum, and could only be closed by Rome throwing in what was most valuable to the city. The gulf closed over his head, and Rome was safe! But if you read between the lines of the gaudy palimpsest of history you will find the record of uncounted millions of obscure and commonplace people who have closed up the gaping fissures of Church and State with their own bodies, and laid the foundations of empires in their blood. I wonder if you have forgotten the story which John B. Gough used to tell of a traveler from Old England passing through New England after the war. He said to his companion:

"'The painful feature to me in New England country life, is the immense amount of human vegetation one sees.' 'What do you mean?' 'Well, in these isolated country towns, where no railroad approaches, what do the people do? What do they see? Where have they been? What do they know? You, who are working in the busy haunts of men, and know what life is, cannot call that "life" which you see here. Why, it is existing in a circle; it is a sort of vegetation. Now, there you see a specimen of just what I mean.'

The Influence of a Simple Life

"We were passing one of the outlying farm places, and on one side was a little house, a one-and-a-half-story house, as we call them; and at the window was a woman knitting. She had a black band round her white widow's cap, and was of middle age. 'There,' he continued, 'that's just what I mean. Look at that woman. She eats, and drinks, and sleeps, and knits, and knits, and sleeps, and drinks, and eats, day by day; but you can't call that eating, and drinking, and sleeping, and knitting, life. What does she know? Where has she been? What has she seen? What has she done? There sits a human vegetable.' Stop, sir; stand still awhile, and look well at that woman. Her name is not known beyond the circle of her acquaintance, within the radius of a mile or two; but look at her! Sixteen years ago she was left a widow with six children—the youngest a boy four years old—in poverty. She owned that little old house, and about an acre and a half of land; she was poor, for New England. Where is her eldest son? Doing his work as a missionary in the fore[ign] field. Where is her second son? Doing his w[ork] as a home missionary in Western Iowa and Kans[as]. Where is her third son? His work is done, and [he] lies under the sod at Gettysburg. She gave him [up] without a murmur; and she wears the black b[and] for him. Where is her youngest—her Benjam[in]? With his regiment, doing his duty in defense of [the] Union. But there were six of them? Aye! bu[t a] requisition came from Roanoke and Newbur[n]—'Send us teachers for our contraband negro[es]; teachers who are willing to endure without p[ay]ment, and to sacrifice without remuneration'—[and] her two daughters have left her to go southwa[rd]; and she is alone, eating, and drinking, and sleepi[ng], and knitting. Well, let her eat, and drink, [and] sleep, and knit, struggling with poverty. She h[as], nevertheless, brought up her family of childr[en]; she has given them to her country and her God; [and] now she sits quietly biding her time. If that is [a] human vegetable,' God send to Great Britain [and] America a crop of such vegetables!"

Commonplace Lives

To be sure! Commonplace lives like ours are [the] lives which are of value to the world. But this [is] not all. The character which is demanded of us [in] our commonplace conditions is the same as th[at] which sets on high lives the most conspicuous, [the] most influential, and the most honored. All heroi[sm] is of a piece. There are not two kinds of goo[d]ness; goodness for great men and goodness for co[m]monplace people. Virtue, devotion, loyalty, obe[di]ence, sacrifice—are they not the same in us as [in] men and women, the greatest the world has know[n]? Has not Christ taught us that he who receives [a] prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive [a] prophet's reward? The reason we know. It is ju[st]. For that man must share the prophet's nature w[ho] knows a prophet when he sees him and does h[im] honor. And this is why our Lord is confident th[at] he who is faithful in little will be faithful in mu[ch]. The much, no more than the little, demands th[e] commonplace virtues of endurance and loyalty a[nd] unselfishness which the worlds and the ages ha[ve] agreed to call heroic.

I will go one step further. Having committ[ed] myself to this glorification of the commonplace, [I] will give hostages to fortune and declare that th[e] commonplace lives call for a capacity sometimes a[nd] a courage often greater than those demanded [by] greater circumstances. For, if conspicuous positi[on] and a famous name bring great responsibility, th[ey] bring also powerful stimulus. They bring an appe[al] a moral obligation, an encouragement to noble livi[ng]. If the eyes of the world are upon a man he brac[es] up, takes his courage in both hands, lives finely, [and] prepares to die picturesquely. We shall never kn[ow] how much of the supreme courage of men, who[se] daring has become the imperishable memory of th[e] kind, was innate and intrinsic, and how much of [it] was born of some heroic hour when they felt t[he] glorious propulsion of the expectation or faith of [a] million souls. We shall never know how brave th[ey] might or might not have been amid the humdru[m] commonplaceness to which you and I are made su[b]ject. In the prophet's view it is easier to fly th[an] to run; easier to run than to walk! The anti-clim[ax] is the real ascent. The fall into commonplace [is] the crown of achievement. They that wait up[on] the Lord shall renew their strength. They sh[all] mount up with wings as eagles—that is splendi[d]. They shall run and not be weary—running does n[ot] sound as wonderful as mounting with wings, b[ut] it is more splendid! They shall walk and not fai[nt] —and walking seems nothing contrasted with th[e] running and the flying, yet it is most splendid [of] all! Anybody can fly—now and then, when you[r] aspires, dreams, disdains the limitations of tim[e] and sense! Almost anybody can run on occasio[n] for a little time, when the great effort is needed, an[d] the great moment calls for a great effort. But [to] walk and not faint; to trudge on, mile by mile, [in] narrow path, circumscribed, dreary, without vie[w] of smiling landscape or awe-inspiring hills—to ke[ep]

Continued on next page

* Pastor Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, New York City.

The Song of the Well

Continued from preceding page

n steadily, quietly, persistently, always with a smile, always with the ove-light in the eyes, and always confident that there's always something, omewhere sings—this is heroism indeed, the heroism of the commonplace, nd of such is the kingdom of heaven!

This is the life which reflects divinty! Did you look for it in priest or ing? Did you think to find it only in nartyr and in saint? But what went e out for to see? A reed shaken with he wind? But what went ye out for to ee? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft raiment re in kings' houses. Verily, I sav nto you, divinity is in your own heart, r nowhere! Now are we the children f God!

So, now, let us sing of the well! Is ot the work of the Church and the School and the Mission mere routine nd drudgery often to our souls that spire to bigger things? And is not he common round, the daily task of he home, drudgery too? And are we ot from day to day bound down to a ommonplace task? Yet why should ve not be willing to do chores for God? And who would not be glad to be the handy-man of the Almighty?

> Spring up, O well; sing ye unto it;
> Well, which the princes digged,
> Which the nobles of the people delved,
> With the sceptre, and with their staves.

Does not our consecration go back o the Christ of Calvary and of the Resurrection Morning, to the prophets vho hoped for him, to the evangelists vho wrote of him, to the apostles who proclaimed him, to the martyrs who lied for him, and to all the sweet and racious souls who have loved him and ived with him and died in the assurnce of his salvation, whose lives are idden with Christ in God? We are ot great. In us there dwells no faroff touch of greatness, unless great it e to know we are not great. Yet, if y word or deed or thought of ours ome burden be lifted from the shoulers of earth's weakest children; if ome sorrow be assuaged, some conience cleansed of the perilous stuff hat weighs upon the heart; if through he commonplace goodness of our commonplace lives, one who was lost is found and one who was dead is alive gain, then, though it is not ours

> The applause of listening senates to command,
> The threats of pain and ruin to despise,
> To scatter plenty o'er a smiling land,
> And read our history in a nation's eyes—

et one day princes who digged the vell and nobles who hollowed it out vith their sceptres and their staves, hall join with us in the song of the ransomed, and our commonplace lives hall be in this commonplace world as well of water springing up into everasting life.

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

Anvil Sparks

..GROWTH in knowledge is the only ure for conceit.

..STARTING to heaven on a gravetone is a risky business.

..A MATCH looks harmless, but it as often taken a life.

..IF you wear religion as a cloak, our soul may freeze to death.

..WHEN God measures men, he rings them all to the same standard.

..THE devil can no more hurt a Christian than mud can soil sunlight.

..THE moment a Christian looks ack, he begins to make crooked paths.

..THE man who is not satisfied with Christ is not satisfied with any one lse.

..YOU have as much right to rob our neighbor as you have to set him bad example.

..TALK of improving the liquor raffic! You might as well try to paint he devil white.

..CHRIST will knock at the door of our heart, but he will not come in without an invitation.

The Children's Pulpit

GRANT'S BIRTHDAY

By Rev. J. M. FARRAR, D.D.*

SWEARING is a great waste of time. Stop the leak in the kettle. This kettle is an hour with sixty drops of time in it. If there is a leak in the kettle the little drops of time will be lost. Sixty drops and the hour-kettle is empty. Swearing is a bad habit and will surely wear a hole in the kettle. It is difficult to swear without getting angry. Sometimes the kettle is emptied before the hole is made. How? Anger starts the kettle boiling and time runs over and is lost. Swearing is a great waste of time! In sixty minutes of temper an hour has run over.

. . .

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, was Grant's birthday. Some one told the following interesting story about him. "While sitting with him at the camp-fire late one night, after every one else had gone to bed, I said to him: 'General, it seems singular that you have gone through all the trouble of army service and frontier life and have never been provoked into swearing. I have never heard you utter an oath or use an imprecation.'

"'Well, somehow or other, I never learned to swear,' he replied. 'When a boy I seemed to have an aversion to it, and when I became a man I saw the folly of it. I have always noticed, too, that swearing helps to arouse a man's anger; and when a man flies into a passion, his adversary who keeps cool always gets the better of him. In fact, I never could see the use of swearing. I think it is the case with many people who swear exeessively that it is a mere habit, and that they do not mean to be profane; but, to say the least, it is a great waste of time.'"

. . .

WHEN you read this to your uncle he may say, "If General Grant had been provoked as I often am, I think he would have sworn." Just tell uncle this story and ask him if General Grant did not have some reason now and then to have a provoke:

"After he had served the nation as its President, General Grant was in New York when the Masonic Temple was burned. The fire-line was drawn half way down the block, but the great, surging crowds hampered the work. A policeman stationed below failed to recognize the ex-President as he approached the line, and quickly grabbing him by the collar, he swung him around in the other direction, yelling at him as he gave him a whack with his club: 'Here, what's the matter with you? Don't you see the fire-line? Chase yourself out of here, and be quick about it.'"

The General did not swear, but just got out of the crowd and began to attend to his own business. Swearing would have been a great waste of time.

Other great men tell us that swearing is more than a waste of time; it destroys the kettle.

. . .

GENERAL WASHINGTON, in an order issued August 3, 1776, said: "The General is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice hitherto little known in an American army, is growing into fashion. He hopes the officers will, by example as well as influence, endeavor to check it, and that both they and the men will reflect that we can have little hope of the blessing of heaven on our army if we insult it by our impiety and folly. Added to this, it is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it." Swearing is a great waste of character!

James says: "But above all things, my brethren [and my Juniors], swear not; neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath; but let your yea be yea, and your nay be nay; lest ye fall into condemnation." Swearing is a great loss of soul! James asks you to be specially watchful against the habit of swearing. "Above all things"—that is, you will find it more difficult to keep from this sin than it is to keep from many other sins.

. . .

IF Satan cannot get a boy or girl to swear with the tongue, he will try to get a swear through the hands or feet. Slamming a door when you are mad is hand-swearing. When you have been corrected and go out of the room as though each step would put holes in the floor you are foot-swearing. Sometimes a swear spreads over the face like a cloud across the sky. Swearing is a great loss of happiness!

Did my Juniors celebrate Grant's birthday by resolving never to swear? Do not forget that swearing is a great waster.

. . .

YOU really want a story? I never tell a swear-story, but here is one that may help you to remember our thought about swearing: A long, long time ago in the summer time a man was stung in the face by a bee. This made him mad, and he swore and swore and then swore again. The swear was so hot that his kettle of time boiled over and he wasted half an hour swearing at the bee. A friend who was sorry to hear him swear, said: "Jim, I am sorry for you. I think that bee might have stung you in a better place." Again the kettle boiled over. "Where might it have stung me?" asked the swearer. "Why, it would have been better for you if it had stung you on the tip of your tongue." Read the third chapter of James and then think of the need of a bee on the tip of the tongue.

* Pastor First Reformed Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. TEXT: "Above all things, swear not." James 5:12.

How Deaconess Alice Lived

By LUCY RIDER MEYER

"SHE cannot possibly live," said the doctor.

"Oh, doctor!"

"I am sorry to say it, but I must."

The doctor was very sad. He had been a friend of deaconesses ever since they first came into the church, and it was not easy to pronounce the death sentence. Moreover, he had fought the dread white plague in his own family, and his very heart had been wrung once by a lost battle there. What wonder he was sad over this beautiful, devoted young woman doomed to death in the very prime of her life?

"But can nothing be done?" said the superintendent.

"Well, send her to the mountains. If she can live at all it will be there."

Sister Alice went to the mountains. She slept in a tent or out of doors; and in the high dry air of Arizona the balance slowly swung up—toward life. She grew strong and active again, and with the true spirit of a deaconess began looking about for work. There was plenty at her very hand, for the little mountain city is always crowded with poor pilgrims in search of health. Some of them live, but others die. They are lonely and friendless, and sometimes in great poverty, having spent their all in the battle. Oh, you who have watched over your own sick ones in tenderly sheltered homes, think, if you can, what it must mean to these other sufferers when this strong cheery friend, this "angel of the white ties," finds them out in their need. She helps them all she can, and, living or dying, she tells them again of Jesus and his love. Was it not worth while to save such a life as that of Sister Alice?

Sister Alice has lived for five years on scant "deaconess allowance," yet she has lived, and she has been helpful to others, and that has been enough for her own happiness. But now a great ambition is growing in her heart. It is not for herself. Her place in the little church is secure. The sick people about her, as in the time of Florence Nightingale, are ready to "kiss her shadow" as she passes, from sheer love and gratitude; and she has won the hearts of all. But now she wants to buy a little piece of ground and pitch her tent on it permanently—perhaps, indeed, two tents, or three, or even some time, if the Lord should send money, a house might be built—in order that she may be able to welcome and help those of her sister deaconesses who may also some time need a refuge from the dreadful disease. There are more than seven hundred licensed deaconesses in America alone, and, true sisters of humanity, their work is largely among the poor and sick. They cannot altogether avoid infection, and from time to time some will be going down with tuberculosis. What saved the life of Sister Alice will save the lives of others. This little foothold in the mountains must be secured. Property is rising rapidly. The lot on which for two years the tent stood is now sold—for three times what it could have been bought for then. A thousand dollars will buy another lot and a second tent. Two hundred dollars of this sum is already pledged. If all the room should not be needed at once, perhaps some beds could be fitted up for a few homeless girls. A second deaconess, a well woman, is ready to go if needed.

I have pleaded the cause of many things since I have been in deaconess work, but never anything that touched my very heart more than this. There is so much money in the hands of God's people, and this Home now will mean life and health to many a devoted deaconess. It must be secured. Surely the God who hears his little black ravens when they cry, will speak through these poor words to the heart of some who will respond. Any reader who wishes to do so may send a gift, or address inquiries to me at No. 4949 Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

A NOTABLE AMERICAN WEDDING

WHEN the eldest daughter of a very rich and generous man marries the promising son of another very rich man, the wedding is likely to be on a lavish and splendid scale. That of Miss Marjorie Gwynne Gould and Mr. Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., at St. Bartholomew's Church in New York, April 19, fulfilled these conditions and was probably the most beautiful wedding among the long list of recent events of similar character.

Copyright by Pach Bros

Mr. Anthony J. Drexel
The Bridegroom

All the accompaniments of the wedding were on a grand scale. The magnificent gifts; the white satin Charmeuse gown of the bride, with which she wore a remarkable string of matched pearls and a priceless pearl-and-diamond brooch; the superbly decorated church, its walls almost hidden beneath its drapery of lilies, white lilac, apple and white peach-blossoms and pink azaleas; and the crowd of two thousand elegantly attired guests—all made a combination not soon to be forgotten.

An elaborate musical programme is now likely to form a part of the modern marriage ceremonial. That at the Gould-Drexel wedding was exceptionally well chosen. It began with Mascagni's "Hymn to the Sun," and included Parker's arrangement of the Twenty-third Psalm, a Wagner Intermezzo, Massenet's "Morning Hymn," Martin's "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden," Barnby's "O Perfect Love," Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," and as a recessional, Parker's "Lord, Who at Cana's Wedding Feast."

The twenty-four white-vested little choir-boys, each with an American Beauty rose pinned across his breast, reached the chancel by a side aisle, singing, as they went, Martin's beautiful hymn; while behind them came Bishop Scarborough of New Jersey, in full canonicals, accompanied by the Rev. Ernest Matthews of Lakewood, and Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of St. Bartholomew's, all of whom participated in the ceremony. The wedding party walked up the aisle to the strains of the greatest of wedding marches—the six ushers leading, one of them being Viscount Maidstone, who is soon to marry Miss Margaretta Drexel, the sister of the bridegroom. Then followed the six bridesmaids, gowned in delicate pink and blue, with toques wreathed in blue tulle and ornamented with pink ostrich plumes. Two little flower girls in white came next—little Edith Gould, the bride's youngest sister, and Ellin, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Mackay. The maid of honor, Miss Vivien, the lovely second daughter of the Goulds, then preceded the bride on her father's arm.

The wedding cake, made by Delmonico, was one of the most elaborate confections ever created. It was a cake of three layers, heavily iced and four feet high by two feet wide. On the top layer was a "Temple of Love," done in candied frosting. Below it was the "Fountain of Youth," supported by tiny Cupids, with still tinier ones poising on the edge of the outer basin. In the inner basin were dolphins, spouting white threads of crystalized sugar into the outer pool. Much of the fruit-cake for distribution was in small silver boxes and these were all guarded during the night before by a special policeman, so great was their value.

It seems incredible that free and democratic Americans can desire to push in where they have not been asked and where they are not wanted; but so great is the popular curiosity to see the rich and the much-talked-of, that crowds of the uninvited have not infrequently gathered in the adjacent streets, and even surged into the very church itself upon the occasion of a widely advertised wedding. Even the rain, which marred the Gould-Drexel wedding, could not keep back these interlopers. Cordons of policemen were unable to control them. They fought and pushed, and tugged, and jostled over each other and over the policemen, too, in the drenching rain, just for the sake of catching a glimpse of the bride and her fair attendants. It was a remarkable spectacle and by no means an edifying or agreeable one.

Copyright by Maceo

Miss Marjorie Gwynne Gould
The Bride

At the Gould home, 857 Fifth Avenue, the wedding reception was held, and it was a brilliant affair. On the third floor the wedding presents were displayed, being closely guarded by detectives. They included Mrs. Gould's gifts of a diamond watch on a long pearl chain, a corsage ornament of diamonds and emeralds, and a ring of emeralds and diamonds. The bride's father gave her a large flat Oriental collar with diamonds, a diamond pendant and a house on Fifth Avenue, with furnishings. The bride's grandmother sent a pearl and diamond bracelet and an emerald and diamond ring for the bride groom. Her brothers and sister gave her a gold tea service. The other gifts included diamond bracelets from Paris, pearl collars, diamond and turquoise ornaments, and diamond rings; diamond brooches, gold and silver handbags with diamond monogram, an immense number of silver pieces, including two large chests with a tea and a dinner service, gold dinner plates from several friends, silver baskets, clocks, mirrors, candelabra, gold coffee sets, etc. The total value of the gifts is estimated at $2,000,000.

The honeymoon will be spent on board Mr. Gould's yacht, the Atalanta.

Copyright by Marceau

The Wedding Group at the Gould-Drexel Nuptials

THE BIBLE AND THE IMMIGRANT

THREE years ago an educated young Russian, on landing at Ellis Island, was presented with a New Testament in his own language, by a missionary of the New York Bible Society. It was the first time he had ever seen any portion of God's Word. The village in Russia from which he came had not a single Christian living within its boundaries.

On Sunday, March 6, 1910, a young Russian was baptized in one of the churches of New York City. He was the same man who had landed at Ellis Island and had received the Testament. He had been converted through reading the little Book and had decided to return to his own country as a missionary. He delayed sailing in order that he might be baptized in the country where he had found the True Light. His parents have disowned him because of his conversion, and he will be the only Christian in his village, yet he has gone back to tell the people there the story of salvation.

Some one is responsible for the Testament that was given to this immigrant. Some one made a donation to the New York Bible Society, and the gift made it possible to furnish the Scriptures to this young man—was it you? If so, this story will encourage you in your giving.

If you never have helped this noble cause you can be sure that you have now found a way to do both home missionary work and foreign missionary work at the same time. You will find this to be a paying investment.

A gentleman who believes in this work has recently made the greatest offer ever made for Bible distribution among the immigrants, the sailors, and among all nationalities in the city of New York. He has said to the New York Bible Society: "I will give $100,000 if you will raise $100,000 before May 1." He has offered more than this, for he has said: "I will give dollar for dollar for this work for all sums that you raise up to $100,000 before May 1."

A Missionary of the New York Bible Society Distributing Scriptures Among Immigrants

The New York Bible Society is alone carrying on this great work. It employs missionaries at Ellis Island to supply Bibles to the immigrants, so that each may have the Book in his mother tongue. More than one hundred thousand immigrants landed at Ellis Island during the month of March, and the Bible Society missionaries made a record distribution of the Scriptures among these strangers. A missionary is also employed to work among the sailors of the harbor, visiting over three hundred vessels every month. In the city, Bibles are placed in hotels, hospitals and prisons. Missionaries and pastors of every creed are supplied with the Scriptures, for house-to-house visitation.

This offer to the New York Bible Society was made several months ago, but has not before been made public, in order not to conflict with the appeal of the American Bible Society to meet the offer of Mrs. Russell Sage, which has been fulfilled.

Up to the present time $35,000 has been subscribed. There remains $65,000 to be raised forthwith if the $100,000 is to be obtained from the friend who has made this offer. That is, if the condition shall be fulfilled, the New York Bible Society will have $200,000 for its work. Here is a great opportunity and need. Many of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD readers will respond to this appeal. Your gift, whatever it may be, will be doubled. It should be sent to James H. Schmelzel, treasurer, 66 Bible House, New York.

REV. GEORGE WILLIAM CARTER,
General Secretary.

THE UPRISING IN HUNAN PROVINCE

Pilgrims of Chang-Sha | Mr. and Mrs. Keller | A Christian School in Chang-Sha

ONCE more the fanatical and backward populace of the province of Hunan, in China, have risen against those who sought to give them a truer religion, a more hopeful way of life, and have driven American and European missionaries from their homes and schools and have applied the torch to the buildings which housed them. It is a disheartening blow to the men and women who were striving so earnestly and fearlessly to bring enlightenment to that benighted region, for Hunan has been undoubtedly one of the most difficult fields for the intrepid followers of the Cross. It has always boasted of the fact that it was a province for the Chinese alone, and that foreigners would not be admitted within its boundaries. An American who entered it literally took his life in his hands until within a very few years. A few travelers went through with strong guards. The spirit of the old backward China is more rampant there than in the provinces nearer the sea, which have come more under foreign influence. Recently the opposition to the presence of missionaries seemed to grow less, and a large number of the Chinese of the province had come to look up to them as their best friends, and were giving them their confidence; the prospect of many conversions in the near future seemed very bright. Already there is a growing band of native Christians who are anxious to work among their own people. China is now athirst for Western learning, and the missionaries felt that no period has been more opportune for a determined effort to carry the Gospel into the remotest sections of the country than when the great giant among the nations of the East seemed to be awakening from its long sleep and to be reaching out for the civilization of the West. Consequently the sudden uprising at Chang-Sha came as a surprise, though periods of reaction will doubtless come, as they have in other heathen lands, before the Cross is planted to stay for all time.

The rioting at first was not directed against the presence of the missionaries and other foreigners in Chang-Sha, but agitators soon made them the object of their attacks. The province of Hunan has suffered this year from scarcity of food, and on April 13 mobs gathered and made attacks on the rice shops, which were soon pillaged, though the police fought hard to suppress the disorder. One of the captains was badly wounded in the fray, and would have been killed had not reinforcements arrived and covered his retreat to his house, which was soon in a state of siege. The troops were called out and a part of them surrounded the house of the Governor of Hunan, Wau Chung Siu. Inside of a few hours, however, they had deserted to the rioters, and both the Governor and his son were dead. Whether they were killed by the mob or committed suicide is not yet certain. Both reports are in circulation. A number of other high officials were obliged later to flee from the city, as threats were made to kill them.

At last the remaining Chinese officials posted a proclamation that they were unable to protect the lives and property of foreigners longer. There were six thousand well drilled troops in the city, but they were drawn from the same class of the people as the malcontents, and the authorities did not feel that they could be relied upon to act against the rioters. On the 14th the mobs made their first attacks on the missions. The Norwegian and the China Inland missions were looted and burned, and, the spirit of destruction now being uppermost in the minds of the mob, they put the torch to other buildings and soon whole quarters of the city were in flames. Mr. and Mrs. Keller were in charge of the China Inland Mission, and at this writing they are reported to be safe. The British Consul held two steamers in the river ready to receive the fleeing refugees, who had taken to flat-boats. During the night the situation grew worse and the feeling against all foreigners more fierce, and, all the troops having gone over to the rioters, they now numbered over twenty-four thousand. Made bold by their numbers and their success, they burned all of the public buildings and all of the consulates, except the British. The feeling against the Japanese was particularly bitter, and over seventy of them sought refuge on the waiting steamers. The missionaries of the United Evangelical, Yale and Wesleyan Missionary Alliance, and Episcopalian missions to the number of forty-one were successful in getting aboard the steamers which were ordered down to Hankow. After they were on board they could see the flames of burning buildings, including the British warehouses.

Eight German missionaries escaped from the city in junks, but according to one report, three of them lost their lives. They were sailing down the river toward Hankow with no lights showing when their junk was run down by the British gunboat Thistle, which was steaming to the scene of the trouble. Shallow water prevented the warship reaching Chang-Sha that night, but she renewed the attempt later.

The British Consul was at last compelled to remove to a steamer a mile from the city, where he could watch events, return to Chang-Sha, or make his escape to Hankow, according to circumstances. He had done all possible to save life and protect property, and was the last to leave.

Hunan means in Chinese the country south of the lake. Hu-peh is the next province north, and means the country north of the lake, a large body of water having once divided them, of which only a small remnant remains. There were riots in Hu-peh, but the viceroy crushed them with an iron hand, and sent two thousand troops south to Hunan to restore order. They marched into Chang-Sha, and with their support the authorities, whose courage had revived somewhat, began to drive the rioters from the localities in which they had established themselves, and in a few days there was the semblance of order; but the city itself could not have looked worse if it had been through a siege and bombarded. Not a stick which had sheltered the hated foreigners was left standing, and the sites of the missions were marked by blackened ruins; but the fanatics had not been able to stamp out the Christianity which had been planted in the hearts of the converts. The seed will continue to grow, even if in a small way, within the very walls of intolerant and fanatical Chang-Sha.

A View of Chang-Sha, Scene of the Recent Riots

GENERAL COMMENT ON CURRENT TOPICS OF THE DAY

—IN THE U. S. Senate, the first step has been taken in the direction of remedial legislation affecting the cost of living. It came in the form of a recommendation by the investigating committee to limit to one year the time of perishable articles of food in cold storage, the purpose being to prevent the forcing up of prices. Any perishable food kept in storage over twelve months will be classed as "adulterated." Senator Lodge, of the Committee, expressed the opinion that the limitation of the cold storage period would be of great value in checking diseases that are attributable to meats long held in refrigerators.

—EMIL SEIDEL, the newly elected Mayor of Milwaukee, is a Socialist, but as he himself explains, his socialism involves nothing revolutionary. He does not propose to introduce measures to precipitate either "Utopia or the Millennium." He stands on a platform which declared for municipal ownership, lower food prices, an eight-hour day, and the initiative and referendum. He will try to compel corporations to pay their proper taxes and will endeavor to improve the condition of the working classes. A pretty moderate, yet up-to-date, platform on the whole.

—IN THESE days of acute Bible discussion and of frequent assault on the reliability of the old Book, on the part of those who claim that there is a chasm of divergence between Science and the Bible, it should be the duty of every intelligent professing Christian to become familiar with the ascertained facts. In an early issue, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will begin the publication of a short series of articles entitled, "Science and the Bible," which will show that there is at bottom no vital discrepancy between the two, and that the conflict is largely an imaginary one. Every one who reads these articles must be convinced on this point. This old world of ours, year by year, is giving up its long-hoarded secrets under the hands of skilful investigators; and these, being reverently deciphered by the world's best scholarship, are so strongly corroborative of the historical accuracy of Scripture that they form a most impressive argument against the skeptic and the agnostic. This valuable series deserves to be read, studied and preserved by pastors, teachers, Bible students and believers everywhere.

—THE ANTI-VIVISECTION campaign undeniably has some features about it that smack strongly of the sensational. Well-known physicians and surgeons have not hesitated to point out many misleading statements made, no doubt, in ignorance of the real facts, which are calculated to convey the impression of unheard-of cruelties and an almost fiendish wantonness in the infliction of pain upon helpless animals. It is always unfortunate when tactics of this sort are allowed to prevail. That there have been excesses in the name of science, no one doubts, and this is so well fixed in the public mind that it is only a matter of a short time when regulative legislation will remedy such evils where they exist. Proper scientific research will not be impeded, but abuses in the name of science will be rendered impossible. And we are assured that no one will welcome such a legislation more cordially than the medical and surgical fraternity.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

A New Creed

IT is announced that one of the large churches of Connecticut, belonging to the Congregational denomination—a church which has for more than two hundred years held firmly to orthodoxy—has decided that it must have a new creed. Its pastor is credited with the declaration that the time-honored Creed of the Apostles is "a mere historical relic." It is true, he very kindly proposes to keep the Apostle's Creed upon the church records; but the working creed of his church henceforth is to be one better adapted, in his opinion, to modern needs and ideas. This new confession of faith, we are assured, will contain no recognition of the divinity of Christ. It is to be non-theological, "the emphasis being placed on the religious purpose of life, rather than upon doctrinal requirements." It does not seem to have occurred to the proposer of this new departure that a Christian creed without Christ is an anomaly. We do not believe that any considerable number of the great body of Congregational adherents is prepared to make this sacrifice, or to proclaim themselves Unitarians or agnostics. A Christless creed and church can have no use for the Gospels, other than as philosophic literature. The old Bible itself would be to them simply a compendium of morals, history and philosophy, and the prophecies would be meaningless.

The Art of Giving Away

THAT sprightly nonagenarian, Dr. D. K. Pearsons of Chicago, who lately celebrated the birthday that opened his tenth decade of life, is a wonderful old man. He is a living illustration of the fact that cheerfulness, clean living and common sense, plus Christianity, are the best preservatives of youth the world has yet discovered. This cheerful old-young philosopher has given away several millions of dollars to colleges, seminaries and schools in the last twenty years. His honorably accumulated fortune he is using for the noblest purposes. "I mean to die poor," he says. He realizes the joy of giving, for he gives with a good grace, spontaneously, and ties no strings to his benefactions. For yachts, autos, fine horses, or showy surroundings he cares little or nothing; his pleasures lie in a different direction. He seems to get a good deal more out of life than most rich men do, and we have his own assurance that the pleasantest occupation in the world is that of doing good to others. There are many who will envy this old Spartan Presbyterian, whose simple daily regimen, with its light diet, dumb-bells and avoidance of worry, keeps him up to his work so well. In any age, he would have been considered a remarkable man; but in these days he is specially so from the fact that he has been almost a lone pioneer in the great art of giving, and has found the pleasure and blessing of it increasingly throughout the years.

The Hilprecht Controversy

IN another part of this issue is reproduced the now famous "Deluge Tablet," with Professor Hilprecht's translation of the cuneiform inscription which has been the subject of so much controversy. Critics have hotly disputed the age of the tablet and the accuracy of the translation. While several eminent gentlemen who have never been in Nippur are still engaged in disputing and doubting, it is interesting to know that five leading American Assyriologists—two of them of the very highest standing—have endorsed Professor Hilprecht's determination of the age of the tablet, and four of the leading Assyriologists of Europe have done likewise. One of these, who has given the most thorough and unqualified endorsement, is Professor C. P. Pinches, for twenty-five years Curator of the Babylonian Section of the British Museum, who writes: "As the whole fragment is clear and fully readable, and treats, moreover, of the Flood in a different way from others, agreeing much more closely with the Biblical account, it may be regarded as a discovery of the first importance." Two other distinguished professors in their endorsements pronounce the finding of the tablet "an epoch-making discovery"—and they are both American! Up to the present time, the controversy has been somewhat one-sided, as far as actual knowledge and experience in Assyriology are concerned, none of the three professors who have distinguished themselves as dissentients by trying to belittle the fame of this great accomplishment being recognized as authorities on the cuneiform writing of that particular period.

Mark Twain

GENIAL Mark Twain, beloved on two continents; the idol of our boyhood; the perennial wag who for nearly half a century has delighted a large portion of the English-speaking world; the creator of "Huckleberry Finn," of the famous "Jumping Frog," of "Tom Sawyer" and "Pudd'nhead Wilson," characters dear alike to youth and age—has crossed the Great Divide! His pen never set down a vulgar or offensive word, nor a malicious one, for his versatile literary work, always brimful of quaint surprises and characteristic wit, was ever kindly and generous. His last years were devoted to the preparation of his autobiography, some chapters of which have been published serially. Much more than a mere mirth-maker, his pleasantries had an underlying vein of true philosophy. He was one of the few writers who knew how to keep march with the changes in public taste. Fame and wealth came to him in his maturer years; but it is a question whether any of his work afforded him so much genuine pleasure as the little book of stories written in Calaveras County, California, 'way back in the 60's, and through which he first became known.

After his seventieth year, he found life very lonesome. The sweet companionship of old friends became only a sad memory, for they had gone—wife, daughters, literary chums and social intimates. "How fortunate they are!" he would say. And the old man, who so often had made the whole world smile, at times would be inconsolable in his sorrow for the loss of all his loved ones—a loss for which his successes afforded little compensation. He was pleased at the prospect of meeting them again, and the name of one of those friends was almost the last word on his dying lips.

Union Churches in Rural Districts

THE multiplicity of churches of various denominations in small towns and villages has long been a subject of discussion. In many places the question is asked: "Does it pay to have too many churches in a small town?" Now, however, the tendency is gradually toward consolidation and the effacement of purely denominational lines. This is designed to meet two requirements: (1) To assure adequate financial church support in small communities, and (2) to attain such unity of action in church and philanthropic work as will prove more effective than if the churches acted independently. A reader in the Chicago Interior injects a new idea into the discussion. He proposes that two or three congregations choose a joint executive committee to act in the common business interest; that one building should be chosen for public worship and the others utilized for reading and recreation rooms, gymnasiums, Y. M. C. A. headquarters, etc. It is not at all certain that such a suggestion will meet with favor. So strong is the hold of denominationalism that many, especially the aged, would regard the new idea as a disloyal desertion of the old allegiance, even if it did not interfere with the vital truths of religion.

The Believing Heart

WHAT a beautiful custom that is of the herdsmen in the Alps! They use a horn to call their cattle; but the horn is also for another purpose, solemn and religious. As soon as the sun has disappeared, and its last rays are glimmering on the snowy summits of the mountains, the herdsman who dwells farthest up the mountainside takes his horn and trumpets forth: "Praise God the Lord!" Instantly, all the herdsmen in the neighborhood take their horns and repeat the words, "Praise God the Lord!" This continues for some minutes, while on all sides the mountains echo the praises of God. A solemn stillness follows, and every one offers his secret prayer on bended knee. By this time it is dark, and then the herdsman on the loftiest height peals forth, in his own musical French, "Good night!" and "Good night!" is repeated on all the mountains, from the horns of the herdsmen and the clefts of the rocks.

So, when the sun has set—the sun of pleasure and prosperity—and nothing is left but the twilight or the deeper darkness of sorrow, or poverty, or old age, very pleasant it is to find the believing heart still overflowing with the grace of thankfulness and adoration — giving "praise to God the Lord"; and then, however deep the shadows—though it be the very valley of death, bidding "Good night," not in sadness, but in peace and hope.

The Suffragist Congress

SUFFRAGE is in the air, also on the Atlantic cables, and in the national Capitol. It is the "day of promise" of the emancipated, and we are pleased to see the ladies taking advantage of this beautiful spring weather to enjoy a good time. They have presented to Congress the monster petition of half a million names, and made a very proper apology to President Taft for the offense of the handful of irresponsibles who interrupted his speech of welcome. In the "great petition," the presentation of which must doubtless produce its effect on the legislative and public mind, the women have not overlooked the fact that the right of final decision as to the eligibility of a voter is one that belongs at present to the various States. It is not within the power of Congress to decide. The battle for the ballot must be fought out in the States themselves, and the prospects there are by no means discouraging. Apropos of the general subject, a new incident has just come to light, showing that Bismarck, the "Iron Chancellor" of Germany, was a believer in equal suffrage. "I esteem every woman who raises us men up," he said, "who teaches us religion and morals; who preserves to us ideals and weaves heavenly roses in our earthly life. . . . Women should not dabble in a man's work or business; but they should lead him to what is right. The day will come when women will be chosen to co-operate with men. The clever woman can get pretty much what she wishes." Clever they are and charming most of them can be, and that they are not only entitled to but qualified for citizenship, no one now questions. But he surest road to victory in the suffrage campaign is the path of conservatism. Bismarck gave a hint of the right direction when he said that woman must not surrender either her womanly graces or her high ideals. With these, she may conquer the world at will.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, May 4, 1910

	PAGE
A Jinrikisha Outing in Japan	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	430
President Taft Opening the D. A. R. Congress (Ills.)	430
The Suffragist Invasion of Congress (Illustrated) By Waldon Fawcett	431
The Song of the Well. Sermon By Rev. Charles F. Aked, D.D.	432, 433
The Children's Pulpit. By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	433
A Notable American Wedding (Illustrated)	434
The Bible and the Immigrant (Illustrated)	434
The Uprising in Hunan Province (Illustrated)	435
Our Editorial Forum	436
The Bible and Newspaper (Illustrated)	437
My Tour Among Nine Republics (Illustrated) By Rev. A. B. Simpson, D.D.	438
World's S. S. Convention to Meet (Portraits)	439
The Famous "Flood Tablet" from Nippur (Illustrated)	439
What Every Woman Wants (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	440
Fallacious Fortresses (Portrait) By Rev. Dr. Silas C. Swallow, D.D.	441
The Strawberry Handkerchief Serial by Amelia E. Barr	442, 443
Ole Mammy Cheerful (Illustrated) By Rev. C. H. Mead, D.D.	444, 445
They Want "to Be Somebodies" (Portraits)	445
Hatred or Love—Which? Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	446, 447
America's Great Humorist Gone (Portrait)	448
Christ's "Verilies." Christian Endeavor Topic	449
The Upward Look and the Uplift. Epworth Topic	451

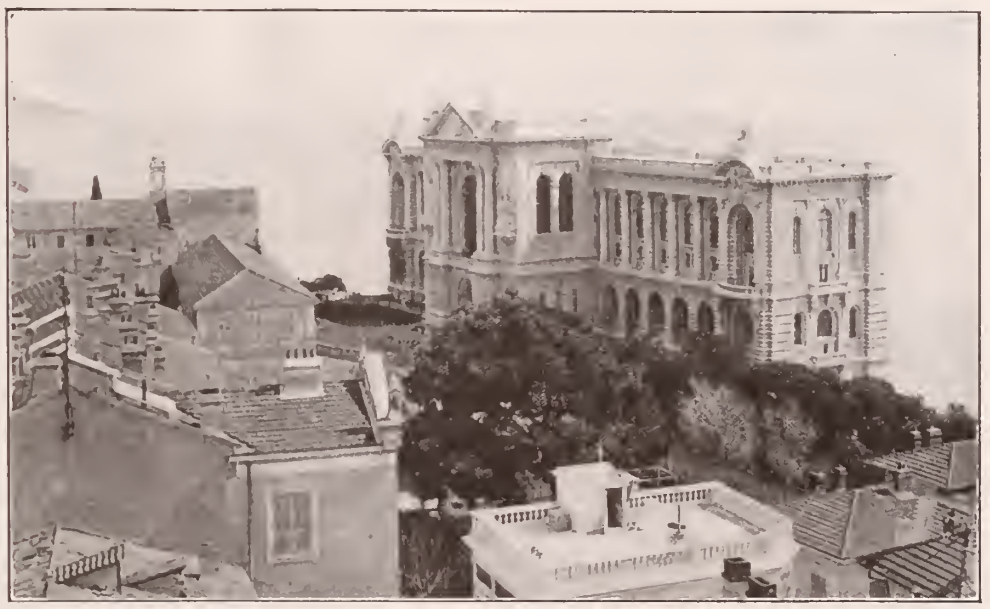
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

An Oceanographical Museum

FOUR days were given up to fêtes and ceremonies connected with the opening of the new Oceanographical Museum at Monaco. The great fête upon the sea at Monte Carlo represented Hercules reaching the shore of Monaco in a galley, preceded by marine monsters. This is the only museum of the kind in the world which is devoted to investigations concerning the sea, its inhabitants, its tides, and its bottom. The Prince of Monaco is the greatest living scientific investigator of the sea. He has a ship built especially for the purpose, in which he cruises and makes his deep sea investigations. It is fitted with elaborate scientific instruments, many of them devised by himself. It has a wonderful arrangement for viewing the bottom of the sea through glass sections. It was through his influence that this museum was erected to preserve collections of all forms of fish and sea life, vegetation of the sea bottom, charts and data in regard to tides. The Prince presided at the official ceremony of the inauguration of the museum. For more than an hour before the time fixed for the inauguration the distinguished guests had been arriving, and were at once shown to their seats in the splendid Salle d'Honneur and Salle des Conférences, at the end of which were grouped singers, with a chorus and a famous orchestra. The seats of honor were allotted to the foreign official representatives, all of whom were in full court uniform. M. Pichon, minister of foreign affairs for France; Admiral von Koester, representing the German government; Senator Oden de Buen, representing the Spanish government, and Count de Souza-Roza, who represents Portugal, were given places facing the platform. In all, there were about six hundred persons present, from all parts of Europe. It was probably the largest assembly of savants that has ever met under one roof. The Prince of Monaco, who was in uniform, was met at the entrance to the museum by His Excellency Admiral Hautfeuille, Governor of Monaco, and the members of the Board of Administration, headed by the director. The Prince's address was received with loud applause, and replies were made by the various foreign representatives. The dedication of this institution marks another step in the scientific progress of the world which will increase knowledge and benefit mankind. The apostle makes reference to the domination of man in earth and air and sea.

For every kind of things in the sea is tamed, and hath been tamed of mankind. (James 3:7.)



The New Museum at Monaco, for Deep-Sea Investigation

Advice to Young Men

Dr. D. K. Pearsons, the millionaire philanthropist of Chicago, in an interview recently told young men what to do to attain old age and success in life. These are some of the things he suggested: "Keep the Ten Commandments. Go to bed early and sleep eight hours. Don't worry. Eat moderately of wholesome food. Sleep with your window open. Avoid ill temper and all extremes of emotion. Honesty, chastity, sobriety—these are essentials of a successful career. Read the Bible; it is the greatest, best and most satisfying book ever written. It contains all the wisdom of the ages. Where will you find more beautiful poetry than in the Psalms, greater truths than in the teachings of Christ and more learned treatises on almost any subject than in the Old Testament? Governmental science is founded on the Bible. Our present day civilization dates back to its teachings. A few days ago a man called on me and said: 'If you had kept your money during these last wonderful twenty-one years, had devoted yourself to making more and carefully reinvesting it, do you know how many millions you would now have?' He had an estimate, and it was not very far from right, and he thought I had made a great mistake that I did not hold on to my money and make more. But he was very much mistaken. I am a richer man for what I have given away. I am a happier man for every wise gift. When I die I shall not be rich in money. I intend to give it all away. But I am rich in the joy of doing good. All accumulations of money and of knowledge are of little worth unless there be with these upright character and a faithful life. Live to serve God and your fellow-men. The world needs young people strong in body and in mind who are able to bear the burdens of the future." The old doctor in his ninetieth year concluded his advice to young men by commending the study of the Bible and the pursuit of an earnest Christian life, in imitation of the wise man who wrote:

Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. (Eccles. 12:13.)

Lord Kitchener's Reception

Lord Kitchener, of Khartoum, in his trip around the world, spent a few days in New York City, where he was accorded a royal welcome. At a great dinner given to him by the Pilgrims at the Waldorf Astoria, Mr. Joseph Choate, after having read a telegram of congratulation from Lord Roberts, made a witty, complimentary speech, which closed with this introduction: "I have the honor to present to you the greatest living soldier of the age in active service, Field Marshal Lord Kitchener." Four hundred men sprang to their feet and cheered lustily. The distinguished guest made appropriate remarks, complimenting our country and its influence for good in the world. Others, including Mayor Gaynor, made addresses which were full of wit and wisdom. Lord Kitchener, in explaining why he made such a short stay in the United States, remaining only an hour in Chicago and four days in New York, said he was homesick and in a hurry to return to his native land. After eight years in India, where he kept profound peace in a mighty empire, the hero, whose face was burned by the Indian sun, sailed for home. By a series of military successes Joab was made head of the army of Israel, and was politically and personally loyal to David. Lord Kitchener won his way by signal military contests to the field marshalship of a great empire and will be enthusiastically received in his home as a son loyal to his country and his king.

The general of the king's army was Joab. (I. Chron. 27:34.)

Danger to Y. M. C. A.

By a cablegram from London we learn that Lord Kinnaird, president of the national council of the Young Men's Christian Associations, together with other leaders in the movement in Great Britain, has issued a call to the members to make the year 1910 memorable by a return to the fundamental principles of the organization with relation to its religious work. The social work, he declares, threatens to swamp the purely Christian features. This, he claims, would be disastrous, as the Young Men's Christian Association is primarily a Christian organization, and if this basis is permitted to deteriorate the whole structure will soon fall. The Young Men's Christian Association in this country is facing the same kind of peril. In some of the cities the plants are so expensive and the money needed to run them each year is so great that all kinds of educational classes and social functions are in danger of interfering with, if not edging out, the soul-saving work, for which the organization was originally founded and which has brought it to such a marvelous height of success. The evangelical spirit unquestionably dominates the majority of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the country, and it is to be hoped that the tendency to employ the physical, intellectual or social, as a substitute for the spiritual, in some associations, may cease. It seems important that this danger should be avoided at this special time, when there seems to be a world movement for the evangelization of the race within a generation. It is important that the Young Men's Christian Association, famous as a soul-saving institution, should renew its vow and redouble its diligence in its efforts to save the world; it is as true now as it was in the time of Christ that:

The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Matt. 9:37.)

Prison Poet Liberated

John Carter broke into a railroad station at midnight at Carlstadt, Minn., and stole $24. He was caught with a butcher knife on his body, was convicted and sent to prison for ten years. He was a young man of genius, who had used his pen in contributing to some of the newspapers, and having some considerable time for reflection within prison walls, he betook himself to writing poetry, which attracted the attention and favor of the whole country, and led to his release from prison on the recommendation of the Board of Pardons for the State of Minnesota. He did not apologize for his crime, but said he broke the law and got himself into trouble. He said he knew that society would still be suspicious of him after his release, but that he intended to do his duty like a man, and if they did not give him a fair opportunity in one place he would move on to the next and do his best to repair the fearful damage to himself and society which he had caused. He said that one of the influences that led to his pardon was a letter from his dear mother in England, who wrote to Chief Justice Start of the Supreme Court, and enlisted him earnestly in her son's behalf. The mother loved her boy and had faith in him and in his future. The penitent sinner is pardoned by the great Judge of all men and the severe penalties of the law are averted. His love for the wayward who are sorry for their misdeeds, trust in the Saviour, and intend to reform, is more tender than a mother's.

When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up. (Ps. 27:10.)

Masterpiece in Kitchen

After remaining in the possession of a humble Italian family for over 400 years, what is said to be a genuine Guido Reni portrait of the head of Christ, has been brought to light. Dingy and smoke-stained, it hung many years in the kitchen in the home of Giovanni Sufilippo, a mill operative in Olneyville. The Italian was out of work and without food, and hoped to raise the price of a meal by the sale of the picture, not knowing its value. It is said that $100 was offered to him for the picture, which greatly astonished him, but which also set him to thinking that it might be worth more. He took it to an art museum in Boston, where the estimated price of the picture was placed at $30,000, and in these days, when a single picture is bringing a quarter of a million of dollars, it is possible that the Italian will get more than $30,000 for it. Many of the most precious things in life are found in the most modest and even unseemly circumstances. There are in the kitchens and humble places of the world beautiful faces and characters, of whose value their possessors are often ignorant. The picture of the real Christ to the eye, and his personality in the soul, are a treasure beyond any earthly price. They are a guarantee of this life and the one which is to come. The apostle thus defines the riches of the mystery of this divine relationship:

Which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. (Col. 1:27.)

MY TOUR AMONG NINE REPUBLICS

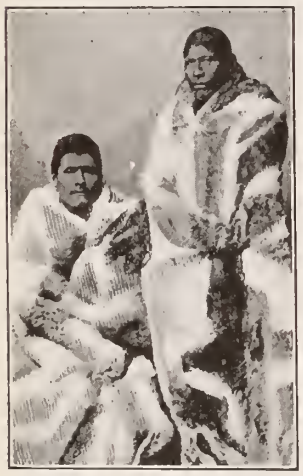
A Leading Street in Buenos Ayres

A Group of Gauchos

By Rev. A. B. SIMPSON, D.D.

THE writer has just completed a voyage of discovery. He has discovered South America. After a lifetime of considerable reading and thinking, he has to confess that he was almost as ignorant of actual conditions in the Southern Continent as the dear old lady in Ireland, who once asked him to call on her boy in America, with a message from his old mother, and added that "he lived in a place called Chicago, somewhere near New York." We are persuaded that the average American, so far at least as realizing the conditions is concerned, is about as ignorant.

Leaving New York in January, by the Hamburg-American Steamship Blucher, we called successively at St. Thomas and several Brazilian cities and reached Montevideo and Buenos Ayres about the middle of February. Tarrying in Argentina for about a week, we had the privilege of seeing the great city of Buenos Ayres and going out several hundred miles into the pampas and seeing the wonderful productiveness of that land. Then taking an English steamer, we passed round through the Straits of Magellan and disembarked in Southern Chile, where we spent a week and passed up by rail through the lovely Central Valley of that republic to the great cities of Santiago and Valparaiso. A sail of several days and several hundred miles next took us along the coast of the narrow "Shoe-String Republic" of Chile, to the borders of Peru. The last two weeks were spent along the coast of Peru and in the fair cities of Lima and Callao, closing with a charming sail along the coast of Ecuador, with a brief call at Guayaquil, to Panama, where we are once more on American soil, and waiting for a steamer to take us to Venezuela.



Natives of Tierra del Fuego

And so we have discovered South America. That means that we have got a view and a realizing sense of its natural vastness and grandeur, its commercial resources and possibilities, and its unspeakable religious needs. Brazil has a coast line 5,000 miles long, nearly twice as far as from New York to Queenstown. Brazil is larger than the United States without Alaska, and one of its twenty provinces would cover all our country east of the Mississippi. Argentina is larger than England, France and Germany combined, and almost every foot is good soil. Chile stretches three thousand miles along the Pacific, and is four times as long as California. Peru is larger than France and Germany combined. The Andes look down with lofty pride on our Rocky Mountains, and Pike's Peak and Mont Blanc are no higher than some of the railways that cross the Andes and look up almost two miles more to the snowpeaks that still rise above them. The La Plata, one hundred and ten miles wide, laughs at our little Hudson; and the Amazon, nearly three thousand miles long and embracing forty thousand miles of navigable waters in its various branches, could swallow up most of the other rivers of the world.

For tropical luxuriance and variety of landscape, flowers and trees, there is nothing on earth to be compared with the shores of Brazil. For majestic mountain heights, yawning depths, awful precipices, majestic glaciers and mountain cascades, the passes of the Andes and the Straits of Magellan have few rivals, even in the fiords of Norway and the valleys of Switzerland. For vast and almost endless pampas the plains of Argentina hold their own with Nebraska and Manitoba. And for fertile valley and sweet pastoral scenes, where shall we find anything, even in California, England or Italy, finer than these fair scenes in Chile which the early discoverers well named "Valparaiso"—"The Valley of Paradise"?

Urban life gives the first impression of a country's progress. The first cities approached on the South American coast are a revelation to the ordinary traveler. Para, at the mouth of the Amazon, is a splendid metropolis of two hundred thousand souls, embowered in tropical luxuriance and Moorish architecture. Sao Paulo has all the life, energy and architectural finish of Cleveland or Buffalo. Rio Janeiro, with its unequaled harbor, and its Avenedas and Trocadero, is probably the most magnificent scenic city in the world. Buenos Ayres, with a million and a quarter people and a new model of modern architecture on almost every street front, is a Western Paris. Santiago is magnificently set amid majestic mountains, reminding one very much of fair Edinburgh, and the architecture is worthy of its setting. Valparaiso rises from the sea in mighty terraces, like some vast amphitheatre, and is unlike any city we have ever seen. And fair Lima, capital of Peru, is perhaps the finest of them all, with its balmy air, its glorious vegetation and its stormless sea and sky.

South America is more than a handsome show picture. She is a great storehouse of riches and an unrivaled field for modern enterprise. One of the most valuable staples of commerce and manufacturing is rubber, and recent developments have given it new importance. Brazil controls the rubber trade of the world, and last year shipped over $80,000,000 worth. Even more world-wide is the demand for coffee, and Brazil supplies to-day more than nine-tenths of all the coffee of the world. Wheat, beef and wool are the staples of the world's trade, and in all these Argentina stands in the very front with the world's greatest nations. There are more than one hundred million live stock in the State and a single ranch in Tierra del Fuego has one million sheep. Along the barren shores of Chile are deposits of nitrate which would make any nation rich without even agriculture or manufacture. The visible supply of nitrate to-day in the works in Chile and the stores in Europe and America is $240,000,000! The desolate islands of Peru are covered with rich beds of valuable guano. And what of her mineral wealth? It has only begun to be developed, and the treasures of copper, tin, silver and gold in the mines of Chile, Bolivia and Peru are believed to be as great as in even the fabulous days when the mines of Potosi were the wonder of the world.

The fiscal returns show that of the three leading nations of South America, Brazil and Chile have an annual foreign trade of over $200,000,000 each, and Argentina over $400,000,000. Argentina is increasing in trade, wealth and population faster than any nation on earth and her foreign immigration is over three hundred thousand a year. This is not wonderful to one who has seen her great wheat and cattle farms. With no forests, stumps and stones to clear from the land; with no winter to demand shelter and fodder for his stock, and with a soil rich and loamy like our great Western prairies, the farmer can afford to pay thirteen per cent. for his capital and earn forty. He has simply to turn his stock loose on the pasture fields and wait a little and time will do the rest, and his great herds, with fifty dollars for each fattened steer, will make him rich almost without an effort. We could easily show that similar conditions, although perhaps in a less extraordinary degree, are pushing forward the other South American States in agricultural industry, railway extension, commercial expansion and mineral development.

The need of South America is profound. She needs citizenship. She has nothing as yet like our American citizenship, but only a mass of heterogeneous people of every class, not yet fused into a commonwealth or animated by a true national spirit. She needs good government, for while republican in name, her State governments are really oligarchies, the domination of a few leading families. She needs capital to develop her boundless resources. But her supreme need is the Gospel of Christ.

Plaza at Santiago, Chile

In Brazil, the dominant spirit is shallow indifferentism, a great, fun-loving people, who spend half a year's earnings in the fiesta, and then save up for the next. In Argentina, we learned on good authority that of the eight thousand students in the universities not one in ten believed in Christianity, much less in the Church, and the rest were either materialists or utterly indifferent. In Chile, we learned from experienced missionaries that morality was little known; that an awful proportion of births were illegitimate, and that this was ordinarily no disgrace. In Peru and Ecuador, the power of the Papacy is greater and conditions worse. South America is crying, "Come over and help us!"

And missionaries are succeeding. In Brazil and Chile especially there is a root, vigorous and growing, of a real national church with splendid native preachers and workers. And the Indians are at last being reached. No part of our "Discovery of South America" has given us more pleasure than the discovery of conditions among the five million aborigines of this land and of a way to reach them. Space will not let us say more now; but at last, we believe, the heart of Christ's Church is beginning to beat true to the heart of Christ for South America.

The writer wishes to express his profound sorrow at reading in a Santiago paper in Chile of the death of Dr. Louis Klopsch, the editor and proprietor of this journal. It is a pleasure to bear testimony to the distinguished service which he rendered to the cause of Christ and humanity, and the special help which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD gave so long to our orphanages in India.

WORLD'S S. S. CONVENTION TO MEET

Dr. George W. Bailey | Hon. Justice J. J. Maclaren | Rev. F. B. Meyer, President | Rev. N. Tamura | Edward K. Warren

ALL arrangements are now completed for the Sixth World's Sunday School Convention, to meet in Washington, May 19 to 24. As ne thousand five hundred and twenty-six delegates ere present at the convention in Jerusalem, and ne thousand one hundred and eighteen at Rome, it expected that two thousand will be in attendance the Washington convention. At least thirty-seven ations will be represented, and over fifty religious enominations. Some of the persons whose names are on the programme are Sir Francis Flint Belsey, Rev. Frank Johnson, Rev. Carey Bonner of England, Judge J. J. Maclaren and Judge Seth P. Leete of Canada, Rev. J. A. McKenzie of New Zealand, Bishop Yoitsu Honda, Rev. N. Tamura, Rev. Y. Tanaka, and Rev. Y. Ono of Japan, Hon. T. H. Yun of Korea, Professor J. R. Chitamber of India, Mr. C. T. Wang, Mr. M. W. Ding of China, Mr. A. E. Churchian and Rev. M. G. Papagian of Turkey, Rev. E. M. Sein of Mexico, Rev. L. E. Marek and Rev. Louis Bogan of Bohemia, Rev. John Paul Cook of Algeria, Señor Alvaro Reis of Brazil, and Rev. S. M. Zwemer of Arabia. Between two and three hundred missionaries will be present, and will enrich the programme by telling of the Sunday School evangel in many lands.

alvary Baptist Church, Washington, D.C.

The president of the convention is Rev. F. B. Meyer, D.D., of England, the distinguished preacher and author. He has spent a year in South Africa, China, Japan, Korea, and other foreign countries, holding institutes and conferences in preparation for this convention.

Calvary Baptist Church, with its well arranged Sunday School house, is to be the convention centre in Washington. Also Convention Hall, which seats five thousand persons, will be used for some of the mass meetings. The largest mass meeting of all will be held on the front steps and plaza of the Capitol, when "Praise Service" will be conducted by Professor E. O. Excell of Chicago, and Mr. Percy S. Foster of Washington.

The convention will open at 2.30 P.M., May 19, and several foreign delegates will speak on the subject: "The Influence of the Sunday School Upon the Nations." In the evening President Taft will deliver an address of welcome.

One interesting feature of the convention will be an adult class parade by men around the Capitol and down Pennsylvania Avenue, to illustrate the fact that the Sunday School is not a children's institution alone. All of the pulpits of the nation's capital will be opened to the distinguished delegates, who will speak on "The Sunday School and the Great Commission." In several of the churches at the evening services, there will be sections of the convention with two or more speakers to hear from. Following the convention, beginning May 23, there will be eight simultaneous departmental conferences to consider methods of Sunday School work. In each conference will be considered the questions peculiar to it. Mrs. Zillah Foster Stevens is in charge of the Temperance Conference, and it is expected that the subject of having the Quarterly Temperance Lessons in the Graded Course as well as the Uniform System will be discussed and probably recommended.

Among the results expected to be accomplished by the convention are these:

1. It will bring the Sunday School workers of the whole Christian world into fellowship.
2. It will show the blessedness of uniform world-wide Bible study.
3. It will show that the life of the Church is in the breath of the children.
4. It will reveal the dark places of the earth, where more Gospel light is needed.
5. It will set standards for practical methods of carrying on Sunday School work.
6. It will bring about a more thorough understanding of the scope of the Sunday School movement.
7. It will show that the Sunday School is a part of the world's missionary work.

The Sunday School workers of Washington, under the leadership of Mr. P. H. Bristow, are thoroughly aroused to the opportunity they have in store to welcome the world's Sunday School leaders. We realize that all CHRISTIAN HERALD Sunday School folks can not attend the convention. They could hardly find seats in many of the meetings, but let them in their homes earnestly think about the convention and pray that God's blessing may be upon it.

Washington, D. C. MRS. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

THE FAMOUS "FLOOD TABLET" FROM NIPPUR

PROFESSOR HILPRECHT'S latest "find"—a broken tablet, containing part of an account the Deluge—is here reproduced photographically. is the property of the University of Pennsylvania. he writing, which is cuneiform, contains what is elieved to be the oldest account (from Babylonian ources) of the Flood that has yet been discovered. It was found among the remains of the Temple ibrary of Nippur (the modern Niffer), and was covered with crystals of nitre and other sediment that at first only a few cuneiform signs could recognized. The word "A-bu-bi" ("deluge") was ear.

Professor Hilprecht then cleaned the tablet, uncovering one cuneiform character after another, ntil he had deciphered every sign. Then it was iat he found that the fragment of unbaked clay 2¾ inches at its greatest width, 2⅜ inches at its reatest length, and ⅞ of an inch at its greatest hickness) was a piece of the earliest version of ie Babylonian Deluge story thus far known—bout 1500 years older than similar fragments nown from the library of Ashurbanapal (668-626 .C.).

The fragment has the parts of fourteen lines. rofessor Hilprecht personally presented it to the emple Library of Pennsylvania University. It is ot a very formidable-looking affair, yet, small and complete as it is, the world's leading authorities nite in regarding it as the most important find, in ie last quarter of a century at least.

Professor Hilprecht's translation gives this version of the writing on the tablet. The first line is obliterated and undecipherable. The others are shown line for line, which readers may contrast with the Bible story.

The passages in brackets are supplied by Prof. Hilprecht to complete the meaning of the tablet. They are, of course, conjectural.

Photo by permission of Prof. Hilprecht

The "Flood Tablet" from Nippur

WHAT THE TABLET ACTUALLY SHOWS	THE GAPS AS SUPPLIED BY PROF. HILPRECHT
2. . . . "I will loosen."	"[the confines of heaven and earth] I will loosen,
3. . . . "It shall sweep (or 'take') away all men together."	"[a deluge I will make, and] it shall sweep away all men together;
4. . . . "life (?) before the deluge cometh forth."	"[but thou seek l]ife before the deluge cometh forth;
5. . . . [over] "as many as there are, I will bring overthrow, destruction, annihilation."	"[For over all living beings], as many as there are, I will bring overthrow, destruction, annihilation.
6. . . . "build a great ship, and"	"Build a great ship and
7. . . . "total height shall be its structure."	"total height shall be its structure.
8. . . . "it shall be a house-boat carrying what has been saved of life." 9. . . . "with a strong roof covering it."	"it shall be a house-boat carrying what has been saved of life. "with a strong deck cover [it].
10. . . . the boat] "which thou shalt make."	"[The ship] which thou shalt make.
11. . . . " . . . ing the beasts of the field, the birds of heaven."	"[into it br]ing the beasts of the field, the birds of heaven,
12. . . . "instead of a number."	"[and the creeping things, two of everything] instead of a number
12. . . . "and the family"	"and the family" . . .

Several critics have protested against these conjectures in the bracketed passages, as too speculative to be accepted seriously. One of these critics, Professor George A. Barton, claims that the tablet is of much later date than Professor Hilprecht believes, and that while probably genuine, it is by no means the oldest known Flood record. The highest authorities, however, hold that it is the earliest Flood record yet recovered.

What Every Woman Wants

Women in Council

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

WOMAN'S kingdom has its centre and throne in the home. In these days the interests of women are widespread beyond the confines of the household. There are few limitations, except those inherent in the physical life, to bar the progress of women in any direction they choose to take. We women may be wives and mothers and grandmothers, or we may be spinsters, without a particle of the dread that once attached its stigma to the term "old maid." We may be housekeepers, or if we like, we may engage in business, practise law, preach in the pulpit, occupy the professor's chair, undertake, in fact, any professional or practical line of activity for which we consider ourselves fitted. The same thorough preparation and technical training are demanded to-day from the women who would succeed, that have always been demanded of men in the business of the world. A glance at the last published census report will show any daughter that the women of America are excluded from no service, except the service of the army and navy. They are mentioned even in such columns as those of roofers, car conductors, and deep sea pilots. Women very properly serve on school boards, are truant officers, and county superintendents of education. They are in the van of every reform, and we are informed that in the few States where women have been admitted to the privilege of voting, their votes are cast in favor of clean living and pure morals.

. . .

Woman's Realm No proof is required to show that woman's realm is by no means narrow; still it everywhere diverges from its home centre. A man by himself cannot make a home. He may build a shelter and may surround himself with material comforts, but he cannot give the home-atmosphere, or the home-touch without some woman, mother, sister, wife, or daughter to be his helper and chief-of-staff. Marion Harland, in her brilliant and terse fashion, once remarked that a woman could make a home even out of a dry-goods box, or out of anything that had four walls and a door. She was pretty nearly right.

. . .

Lonely Lives Among the readers of this page of women who live in city and country, on crowded streets, in pleasant farmsteads, and on lonely ranches, it has seemed to me that if all these women could come together every week in a familiar and friendly council, precisely as if it were a mothers' meeting on the next street, or a ladies' aid society in the church, or a neighborly convention to arrange improvements for the time, or any other grouping that brings women together, we might have a very good time here in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; and might arrive at some practical conclusions that would be suggestive and beneficial. Now, may I ask every one who reads this to take a sheet of paper and a pen and write briefly to me, addressing her letter in the care of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; tell me what you have liked best on the family page in the past; tell me, too, what you would like to read in it in the future. If you are housekeepers, and have anything new in the line of good recipes that you have tested and used on your tables, send them for the benefit of other housekeepers. Each of us has a direct interest in pure food well cooked; there is as much genius expended in making delicious rolls that are light as puffs, and sure to induce good digestion and good temper, as in the painting of pictures and the writing of poetry. If you would like hints about the management of children, and the best way of keeping husbands happy and contented, please say so; and if you have had experiences worth repeating, send those for the benefit of the rest. To make Women in Council a really popular feature, you must join hands all round and must not too long delay your replies to this request. Regard it as the request of a friend who knows you, cares for you, and feels sure that she has a welcome at every one of your firesides.

. . .

Womanly Attractiveness When is woman most attractive? Note the form of the question. It cannot be answered in an arbitrary manner. The answer concerns women in general and not woman in particular. Probably a woman, as a rule, reaches her fullest beauty in her early thirties. The girl in her teens and twenties is a creature running over with charm; her coloring, her bright eyes, her dimples, and her play of expression combine to make her a ... to every beholder. Until a woman is thirty ... has not, however, reached the fulness of graci... development that is her coronation. She ... hitherto been a little uncertain of herself, and ... not taken stock of her capabilities. Between thi... and thirty-five a woman who has health, po..., spirituality, and common sense is queenly, by ri... of her own personality. She is really what Ten... son happily styled in a perfect line: "Queen Rose ... the rose-bud garden of girls." She has passed ... bread-and-butter age; passed the reefs and sho... that often make girlhood a restless period; a... whether married or single, has sufficient dignity ... be a social leader.

. . .

The Woman of Thirty Having said so much, it is ti... to say that, although from thi... to thirty-five a woman may be ... the first supreme flower of beauty, she is not, the... fore, the most attractive of her sex. Possibly ... might have been so described the day before y... terday; the day when her grandmother was a g... Times have changed and we change with th... From forty to fifty, a wom... who has kept in touch w... current events, who rea... studies, thinks, and ming... with those about her ... friendly terms, is attractive ... men and women alike. Ev... one is aware that there ... women who prefer the soci... of men to that of their o... sex; women to whom men gr... itate in a drawing-room a... who apparently without eff... secure attention from admir... wherever they go. Mrs. Hu... phrey Ward drew the portr... of such a woman in Lady Ros... Daughter. Readers of t... romantic novel must rememl... how Julie, the companion o... brilliant old gentlewoman w... had long queened it in socie... eclipsed her employer, as a s... of the first magnitude outshi... one of the second. Those w... have read Mr. Winston Chur... ill's latest book—A Mode... Chronicle—have found t... this master of fiction has w... consummate art painted t... picture of a man's woman ... Honora Leffingwell. This ... witching young woman recei... homage from childhood to gi... hood and has the unique d... tinction, when nineteen, ... listening to three offers ... marriage in a single day, a... this between sunrise and s... set. Her career of singul... attractiveness closes in Mr. Churchill's book wh... his heroine is thirty-two, and the reader is left ... wonder what added charms Honora will display ... the privacy of life after the curtain drops over h... earlier dramas.

. . .

A "Woman's Woman" Between forty and fifty, let ... repeat, a woman may use accum... lated stores of knowledge, both ... people and books. To me a woman's woman ... decidedly more charming than her opposite. I c... hardly understand the type of woman who does ... care for women friends; to whom they are ... necessary, and who does not attach them to h... with hooks of steel, as she steps onward to lif... meridian. The woman exceptionally attracti... who has her intimate friends and good comrades ... folk both young and old; in the college boy, w... confides in her and consults her about his lo... affairs; in the girl who sits by her in the twilig... and reveals her maiden fancies; in the children; ... invalids shut in. Such a woman may be a... age from twenty to sixty, seventy or eighty, as ... happens. In a certain community known to m... the woman most loved and honored, and must glad... welcomed everywhere, is well beyond four sco...

THE CHILDREN'S NEW PLAYMATE

A MOTHER'S VISION

By Minnie Reid French

SITTING alone in the firelight, with aged head bent low
Over some little garments that were worn in the long ago,
A woman, old and faded, was dreaming of other years;
And the faces of absent loved ones she saw through a mist of tears.

All was silent; no echo of footfalls swift and gay;
The dancing feet of her children had wandered far away.
Busy and happy and thoughtless, they were scattered far and wide;
All grown to be men and women—save the little boy who died.

It was strange that of all the children, he should feel to-night so near.
His little grave had been covered by the snows of many a year;
Yet she fancied she saw him enter; that she saw him standing there,
His blue eyes clear and smiling, the light on his curling hair.

And a voice spoke from the silence, saying "This for you I kept;
But my meaning you could not fathom when for your child you wept.
The living have left your hearthstone, but with you shall he abide
In the beauty of deathless childhood, your little boy who died."

FALLACIOUS FORTRESSES

By Dr. Silas C. Swallow

HE liquor business has been in politics for nearly half a century. dictates nominations, dominates litical conventions, and helps to buy ctions. It was not prayed into wer, but was voted in, and it must out by votes. It fills almshouses, lums, police courts, criminal docks, ls, penitentiaries, and perdition! It costs the country for liquor, and e care of its products, sixteen dollars every one dollar received in reve- e therefrom. It divides families, olates homes, and is a fruitful rce of the nearly forty thousand nual applications for divorce. It is mother of a large proportion of the perty and crime that threaten the e of the nation, if unchecked.

Rev. Dr. Silas C. Swallow, D.D.

What to do with this Mother of sery has long been a problem un- ved. (1) We have tried letting it ne; but it does not let the individual, family, the municipality, the State, nation, nor the Church alone. (2) e have tried low license, and found t taxation gives it respectability l protection; for the government st protect its taxables. (3) We ve tried high license; but if it re- ced the number of sellers, it gave h a monopoly to those remaining t they could afford more gaudy ding with which to entrap the sober th, to take the places of the hun- d thousand yearly that they had bed and debauched. (4) We have tried government control and even ownership, only to find that a dirty business is not made clean by government patronage; but that, on the other hand, by it the government is befouled. (5) We have tried local option, and over forty out of our eighty millions population are said to live in "dry" territory; yet the sequel shows that there is not a foot of "dry" territory in the country, owing to the overriding of State law by national complicity. And further, more liquor is sold per capita than was sold a decade ago, before the optional morality idea, locally applied, became such a popular delusion.

And this is so because (1) a majority vote cannot render right that which everywhere and always is morally wrong. (2) Because God's method, as also man's method, where he is successful in coping with evil, is prohibition, with a penalty for violation, and never permission by majority vote. Such are the Ten Commandments and the human codes founded upon them. Moses so argued against Aaron's local option calf. Lincoln so contended against Douglas' "squatter sovereignty" slavocracy.

Where prohibition is secured by a secret abstract ballot, the officials say, "Let the people execute it; for they got the law, and we were not elected on a prohibition platform." And the people say, "Let the officials execute it, for they are paid for it." The law thus lies on the steps of the local option state house, where it was still-born. Men pledged personally to prohibition and elected on a prohibition platform to enact, apply and execute prohibition laws, are, under God, the only hope of true reformers. Any other method, as shown by reason, revelation and experience, is an illusion, and a worse than waste of time, of money, of toil and of precious immortal souls. Law does not leap from the statute book and execute itself, any more than an ax or a scythe cuts without stalwart hands and arms to swing them.

Let us be forever done with "fallacious fortresses." A law providing for a ballot which reads "For the suppression of the manufacture and sale of intoxicants" is local prohibition, and in our judgment is nearer right. But a ballot reading both "wet" and "dry," thus inviting electors to vote for "the sum of all villainies," must be an abomination to Him who says plainly, "Woe unto him"—the man, municipality, State, or nation—"that giveth his neighbor drink." Yes, let us be forever done with "fallacious fortresses."

Harrisburg, April 4.

A WORD ABOUT INVESTMENT ADVERTISERS

WE have received a number of letters from subscribers asking as to the advisability of investing with financial concerns which are not advertisers in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. In every case we have done our utmost to secure information as to the reliability of such concerns; but sometimes our information is less complete than that which we have obtained concerning our advertisers. Before accepting a financial advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, we go to the furthest extent in our investigation of his reliability. We take as much trouble, in fact, as would a good bond house in investigating a new issue of bonds.

Now, the financial advertisers in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD submit propositions of such variety that our readers can make with them investments of almost any character; and so we would suggest that our readers, before taking up an investment with concerns that are not advertisers in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, write our financial advertisers and ascertain whether the same sort of investment cannot be obtained from them. In this way the investment will be further safeguarded by our guarantee, which is:

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement.

IF the watch you have now is nearing the end of its usefulness, or is disappointing to you in any way, get an Ingersoll-Trenton. From the minute you put it in your pocket you will be sure that you have at last found a watch that will not fail you—the only watch you will need for the rest of your life, barring accidents.

Every Ingersoll-Trenton is finely jeweled and keeps time to the minute. We guarantee this; you prove it through long years of use. It is a joy to carry such a watch.

THE RIGHT TIME IN CONNECTICUT

"I have compared my Ingersoll-Trenton watch with Standard time daily for fourteen days. It has apparently not varied even a fraction of a second."

W. D. Tucker, Middletown, Conn.

Ingersoll-Trenton

JEWELED WATCHES

If you want to spend only $5.00 you can get an Ingersoll-Trenton in a durable nickel case. Make it $7.00 and the case will be ten-year gold-filled. For $9.00 you can get an Ingersoll-Trenton in a twenty-year gold-filled case—a superb watch fit for the most critical user.

Small picture of an Ingersoll - Trenton Watch showing side view of movement.

Possibly you are ready right now for a practical demonstration in watch-economy and watch-satisfaction. In that case do two things: first, rely on this advertisement; second, go straight to your jeweler and tell him what you want. INSIST on an Ingersoll-Trenton. There!—that is absolutely the best thing we can tell you about watch-buying.

"As time goes on" we continue to make more than one-half of all the watches made in the United States.

We also manufacture the famous INGERSOLL Watches at $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00. We have been doing this for seventeen busy years. Ingersoll models are sold by 60,000 dealers.

RESOLVED:

That the Ingersoll-Trenton Watch has fully earned its place in the Hall of Fame devoted to the world's accurate timepieces.

Our illustrated fact-book about watchmaking will open your eyes and save you money. Send for a copy. Read it yourself and loan it to your neighbors. It's a good book.

ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 61 Frankel Building New York City

NO broom or vacuum cleaner can so deftly pick up every speck, scrap or string as can a

NATIONAL ROLLER BEARING Carpet Sweeper

Adjusted for long or short nap carpets simply by pressing on handle.
Box is "Spill-Proof"—won't tip and scatter the sweepings.
Brush Pulleys have rubber tires same as wheels, and never wear slick or split as wood pulleys do. This gives positive rotation of brush and makes the National an unusual dirt-getter.
The genuine Chinese bristle brush will stand daily use for years.
Roller Bearings take away the squeak and give the easiest running sweeper in the world.
Brush can be removed for cleaning by a finger-touch—patented brush release.
No broken or loose handle-tips, with our steel ferruled handle.
Nationals cost no more than others. Ask your dealer.

GRAND PRIZE ST. LOUIS

Send for free booklet, "How to Double the Life of Carpets and Rugs."

NATIONAL SWEEPER COMPANY, Dept. Q9
Newark, N. J. Chicago, Ill.
(ADDRESS NEAREST OFFICE)

WE PAY THE POSTAGE

This CORSET COVER ONLY 45¢

HANDSOMELY TRIMMED FRONT AND BACK WITH BEAUTIFUL IMPORTED EMBROIDERY SIZES 32 TO 44 BUST MEASURE

No. 638—Send only 45c

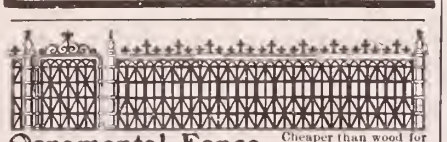
and we will mail you this Handsome Corset Cover, postage prepaid. Made of good quality soft finish Nainsook; has beautiful 3¼-inch Imported Open Work Embroidery Yoke; two rows handsome Val. lace; one-inch lace beading; edged entirely around neck and arm-holes with one-inch Val. lace to match. Yoke finished with one-inch pure silk ribbon draw and large bow, further trimmed with pure silk baby ribbon draw entirely around neck, fly front, pearl buttons; all seams tape bound. Back yoke has one-inch Val. lace with one-inch lace beading. Sizes 32 to 44. Be sure to state size wanted. Price only 45c. If you don't find it worth at least 85c. return it and we will cheerfully refund your money, also postage. This extremely low price is made to introduce our Large Free Catalog of Everything to Wear for Men, Women and Children, also Furniture, Stoves, Carpets, Rugs, Refrigerators and all kinds of Household Goods.
Reference: Commercial National Bank of Chicago
Capital $7,000,000.00

CHICAGO MAIL ORDER CO.
INDIANA AVE. & 26 TH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL.



Ornamental Fence Cheaper than wood for Lawns, Churches, Cemeteries, Public Grounds. Also Wrought Iron Fence. Catalogue free. Write for Special Offer.
THE WARD FENCE CO., Box 146 Decatur, Ind.

LAWN FENCE
Many designs. Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries.
Coiled Spring Fence Co.
Box D Winchester Ind.

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD. Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

TRAVELERS' CHEQUES of the AMERICAN BANKERS ASS'N.

"Certainly; We accept them"

CAN you justly blame the hotel man who declines to accept your personal check? If you are a stranger, he knows neither your signature nor the state of your bank account; and, besides, he has lost much money in the past by cashing worthless paper.

Be fair to the hotel man and all others with whom you deal when away from home, by presenting in payment of your expenses the "A.B.A." Travelers' Cheques, which are always and everywhere good and are self-identifying.

Banks, Hotels, Railroads, Steamship lines, etc., throughout the world, accept them at face value. Sold by leading banks in $10, $20, $50 and $100 denominations.

Equally convenient for foreign and domestic use.

A booklet fully describing these cheques will be sent on request.

BUY THEM FROM YOUR OWN BANKER
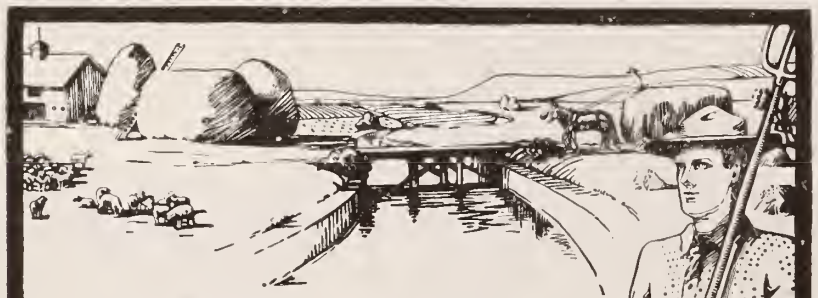
OR IF MORE CONVENIENT APPLY TO BANKERS TRUST COMPANY. 7 WALL ST., NEW YORK CITY



Irrigated Farm and Fruit Lands

The small irrigated farm or orchard means greater production with less labor. It takes away the element of chance and makes a good crop a reasonable certainty. The land in the Northwest such as is being irrigated by government and private projects in Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, on or reached by the Northern Pacific Railway, is exceedingly rich and requires only moisture to yield bountifully. This moisture is provided by irrigation, which makes irrigated farming, fruit and vegetable raising a scientific profession, not a drudgery. The ideal climate is a strong argument in favor of the Northwest.

¶ The Northern Pacific extends into or through Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon. New, rich territory being opened up by extensions now building. The Homeseeker's Chance!

If you want to know more about the possibilities of making your efforts bring you greater returns, write for information about these irrigated lands. Maybe the "dry-farming" territory will interest you. Write tonight and state what section you are most interested in. Don't delay. The information will cost you nothing and will pay you well.

The Scenic Highway Through the Land of Fortune
Northern Pacific Railway
L. J. Bricker, General Immigration Agent
Dept. 219, St. Paul, Minn.
A. M. CLELAND, General Passenger Agent, ST. PAUL
E 2

NORTHERN PACIFIC YELLOWSTONE PARK LINE

THE STRAWBERRY HANDKERCHIEF

By Amelia E. Barr

CHAPTER NINE—Continued

"WHERE hast thou been, my son?" asked Jan.

"Here and there, fader."

"Is the Manhattan ready?"

"In two or three days."

"What is the matter with the ship?"

"She needs some calking, and both oakum and pitch have been hard to get."

"The delegates are impatient to be off."

"That I can not help;" and Madame looked at her son, and clearly divined that Arent's words did not ring true to the bottom. She was sure that it was not the seams of the boat that was delaying the Manhattan. And catching Virginia's glance at her brother, she saw also that Virginia had the same persuasion. And she smiled scornfully at her suspicion. Arent was a passionate patriot. Oh, yes; but he was also a passionate lover.

"I think all is quiet to-day, Arent," said the Captain.

"Not very quiet, fader. A letter was sent this morning to the Custom House promising death to the officials if they did not clear out vessels as usual. And a paper has been posted all over, telling the people to be ready to storm the fort on Tuesday morning, November the fifth."

"Who was this paper signed by, Arent?"

"The Sons of Neptune."

"I thought so."

"If it is obeyed, fader——"

"It means civil war."

Governor Colden understood this result as plainly as any one, and very early on Monday morning he sent for Mayor Cruger, and some of the most influential citizens, and offered to renew his solemn promise "not to distribute any of the stamped paper." Arent came in with this news while his father was eating breakfast, early Monday morning. The Captain rose instantly and Madame followed him.

"Oh, Jan! My Jan, stay at home to-day!" she cried. "Jan, I am sick! I fear for thee! The sailors will persuade thee! Oh, my Jan, leave us not. Saturday was too much, we were ill with fears and suspense. Jan, stay with us to-day!"

"I can not stay. I will not stay, Katrina. What is it you women want? That I should be called a coward? Worse, that I should call myself a coward?" and he began to fuss about his beaver cap and coat. Then silently Katrina helped to put them on, and silently he left the house. But when half-way to the gate he remembered the pale faces of his wife and child and, turning, saw them watching him. Then he went back and said, "Kiss me once, dear ones. Home to my dinner I will come, if it be possible."

Evidently Jan did not find it possible. It was quite dark when he returned. And Arent was with his father, and the two men were in a temper of inconceivable triumph. Their voices—thrilled through with tones of victory—were heard afar off; and Katrina and Virginia threw wide the door and waited impatiently for their entrance.

"We have got the Stamps!" shouted Jan.

"They are in the City Hall, moeder!"

"The Mayor and the Aldermen have them!"

"And they will take good care of them!"

"Till we send them back to Lady Britannia!"

"I'll take them on the Manhattan if the people want me to!"

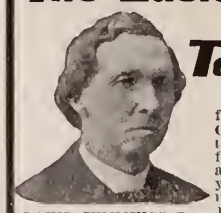
So from father to son the words rushed rattling on one another, and were soon emphasized by Katrina's and Virginia's cries of delight. And for a little while the joy was all a confusion, short ejaculations, cries of

Continued on next page

The Easiest Shoe for Tender Feet



Do you know the comfort of the WORTH Cushion Sole? It bears the same relation to your foot through the day that an easy mattress bears to your body through the night, providing an easy resting place for every bone and muscle. The wonderful sole is to be found ONLY in the famous

Worth Cushion Sole Shoe

If you have never worn a pair, a new and delightful experience awaits you.

Mens, $4 to $6. Womens, $2 to $5

Send for Catalogue and diagram order blank. On receipt of catalogue price, we deliver FREE anywhere in the United States.

Wholesale and Mail Orders.

The CUMMINGS COMPANY FACTORY
Dept. C, Worcester, Mass.
Agents Wanted everywhere. Write for prospectus

DAVID CUMMINGS, Pres.

THE CUMMINGS CO. RETAIL STORES:
1225 Broadway . . . . New York, N.Y.
Hudson Terminal Building, 196 Fulton St., New York
570 Fulton Street . . . . . Brooklyn, New York
15 South 13th Street . . . . . Philadelphia, Pa.
406 Washington Street . . . . . Boston, Mass.

Huyler's Candies of Rare Quality

An Assortment of Heart Shaped Deliciously Flavored Sweets

PACKED IN HEART SHAPED TIN BOXES
30 cents per Box.

Sold by our Sales Agents everywhere and by Huyler's 55 Retail Stores.

"Let It Go At That"

No Estey Organ workman ever finishes a task with the words, "let it go at that." Everything is done well in the making of Estey Organs. When you put an Estey Organ in your Church or Sabbath School the job is done for twenty years or more.

Address Estey Brattleboro, Vt.

MERIT and INTEGRITY have Sustained the High Reputation of
BORDEN'S
EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK
for 50 years

20 Beautiful Post Cards 10c
No Two Alike—Latest Designs

Lovely assortment of 20 Artistic Birthday, Friendship, Good Luck, Roses and Flowers in exquisite colors, all for only 10 cents, if you answer this ad. immediately.
J. H. Seymour, 255 W. Eighth St., Topeka, Kan.

BEEKEEPING its pleasures and profits, is the theme of that excellent and handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on trial for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page book on bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name this paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, Ohio.

Save Steps between kitchen and dining room. One trip with Wheel Tray sets table. Another clears it. Stands beside table for serving. Beside sink while washing dishes. Price $10, exp. paid. Circular.
WHEEL TRAY CO., 435C West 61st Place, Chicago, Ill.

The Strawberry Handkerchief

Continued from preceding page

von r and pleasure, bold expres- don current words that rang well, and ew from heart to heart. Then, s t men felt the serenity and sat- sfa on of work well accomplished, nd atigue, hunger, and cold van- she they began to talk more rea- ona y, and Katrina asked:

"Vill, then, Jan, did the Mayor and he ntlemen answer the Governor's all is morning?"

"Ys, and very strong they must ave alked to him, for he positively ene d the promise made on Satur- ay, ot to distribute the Stamps. Then at all the usual places notices ere osted, telling the people that the ove nor had promised Mayor Cruger, obe Livingston, John Stevens, and eve y Robinson that he would not sue nor suffer to be issued, any of he amps then in Fort George."

"Ad that satisfied them?"

"Satisfied them? No, indeed! iste Katrina. Underneath every otic of the Governor's promise they ost another notice, requesting the eop to gather in the 'Fields' to- morr w, and come ready armed to com the fort."

"What next, Jan?"

"Mayor Cruger then wrote to old , proposing that the Stamps hou be given into the charge of he ty Corporation. The Governor as offended, and did not answer. Then a deputation went to see him, nd newed the Mayor's offer. His oun advised him to yield. He lead his oath to the King. They old m he must give the Stamps to he people, or the people would take hem and then great loss of life here would be. He said no doubt his fe ould be the first taken. No one ontradicted him. He was in a des- era strait. To the old man the ques n was his honor or his life. Deci he could not. Hour after hour passed, and every hour the in- ste clamor for the Stamps grew erce and louder. At length four cloc came, an immense crowd was wait g at the City Hall, and calling for t result. No time was there to lose, ot a moment. Mayor Cruger and e Aldermen hurried to the fort, and old the Governor 'the people ould bear no longer delay. It was he Stamps or the fort.' Colden wrung is hands, lost his temper, and then in despa appealed to General Gage."

"And what said the General?"

"The General said the first gun red from the fort would be the be- inning of war. Colden was terrified with the question he had to solve."

"Vell he might be," said Katrina.

"Oh but I am sorry for the Gov- erno"

"No, no, Virginia! Be sorry for the hounds of men waiting in the cold and in. Why did he not do right at once"

"That is true, Jan. Did General Gage make him do right?"

"No But it was growing dark. The people were desperate. Their murmu sounded louder. The Governor was ce a man out of his senses. He kept he walked about, he sat down, he tumbled with fatigue, and at last, when he could hardly speak, he told Mayor Cruger he would 'give up the stamps to the City's Corporation.'"

"Oh fader, it was a hard case! Yes, we must be sorry for him, and for his wife, and his daughters. They were kind to your Virginia, fader."

"Well, then, it was a hard case—for us. But the welfare of many hounds must not be taken, to let one man have his way. Unjust is that. At four o'clock, Arent and I were at the City Hall. Nine-tenths of the men in the city were waiting there. Cold and wet they were, but too angry and anxious to care for the rain and the wind. Weary of waiting and waiting, they began shouting for the result of their offer. Too long they had been kept. I myself wondered at their patience. Louder and louder grew their demand, 'Would the Governor give them the Stamps, or would he not?' And slowly, but surely, a movement I can not describe or explain stirred them. I said to myself, 'It is too late; does not the wicked old man see he is going to give the city up to fire and sword?' Katrina, I was sick at my heart."

"Oh, Jan! My poor Jan!"

"Then I heard some one calling, calling loud, and Arent said to me, 'Mayor Cruger is hurrying toward us, fader,' and the next moment every one was watching him, and a dead silence followed. No one spoke, or stirred; men hardly breathed. Very soon the edge of the crowd caught his words, and they flew from mouth to mouth like wildfire—'The Stamps are to be put in our charge! Come with me to the fort and get them!' Then he turned back to the fort, and the multitude followed him; all silent, Katrina; not a word from any one. That was so strange. It was like a dream, yes, it was. The Aldermen were waiting at the gate for us, and the Mayor and Aldermen and the chief citizens carried out the parcels of Stamps. In these hands, thy Jan carried one package, and when they were all ours, the Mayor led the procession, and the men carrying the Stamps came next, and the multitude followed. Not silent then! Oh, no! With shouts of triumph we carried them to the City Hall. And there they are."

"And after that, Jan?"

"To his home, or his post, every man went quietly and gratefully. This night, New York will sleep well."

They were an hour behind the usual breakfast time, and Madame was worried.

"Monday was a day lost," she fretted, "and Tuesday just as bad; to-day is Wednesday, and to-morrow Thursday, and the next day Friday, and not a handkerchief of the washing out yet."

"Never mind the washing, Katrina."

"Jan, what art thou talking about? Do without the washing, we can not."

"We have the Stamps! Is not that enough?"

"No, it is not. Clean linen must be had, and dinners."

"If thou had gone to kirk last Sunday, Katrina, thy temper had been better to-day."

"My temper has nothing to do with the kirk. It was not proper for Virginia and me to be in kirk last Sunday. I have told thee that twenty times."

"Good gracious, wife!"

"Also, I like not Doctor Laidlie. What right has he in a Dutch pulpit? Of the Amsterdam classes he talks, but from Edinburgh he comes."

"Well, then, you women were all crying out for a sermon in English."

"English!" said Virginia scornfully.

"Yes, English, Virginia."

"Fader, you mean Scotch."

"English, Miss."

"Lady Rose speaks English properly. Doctor Laidlie speaks like Elder Semple. He has the Scotch accent. It is vulgar."

"And his faith is not pure," said Katrina.

"And, moeder, he stands too stiff in the pulpit."

"True, Virginia, and also he is too short in his applications."

"But the worst of all, moeder, is that he wears spectacles. Ladies don't like to be looked at through spectacles—it is not pleasant."

Jan could stand this conversation no longer. "Ho! Ho! Ho!" he laughed—"Ladies do not like spectacles, do not like to be looked at through glass—It is not pleasant. What are poor old men to do?"

"Poor old men!" chorused Madame in a disdainful, mocking sympathy.

And in the midst of it, the door was pushed softly open, and Lady Rose entered.

To be continued

Backed by 32 Years of Experience

If there's a mistaken idea about Holeproof Hose, please let us correct it. "Holeproof" are not bulky or coarse in the least. No softer hose than "Holeproof" can be made. They are the long-sought result after 32 years of hose making experience—the original guaranteed hose. Don't judge "Holeproof" by vastly inferior makes—hose created and made just to compete in the stores with "Holeproof." No other hosiery ever attempted to compete with "Holeproof" on the foot, for that's where the difference appears. You must wear genuine "Holeproof" to know this—so don't accept imitation makes with a name like "Holeproof's" and the same guarantee.

FAMOUS Holeproof Hosiery FOR MEN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

All the newest Summer colors now on show

Simply Guaranteed Hose Not Sufficient

Here are the things that make "Holeproof" superior. Our yarn costs an average of 70c per lb.

We could use 30c yarn, but the hose wouldn't be soft and attractive like "Holeproof."

We spend $33,000 a year merely for inspection. So every pair is right.

Unusual Hose at the Usual Cost

Six pairs of Men's "Holeproof" guaranteed for six months cost $1.50. The extra light weights cost $2. The mercerized—finished like silk—cost $3. One color or the newest colors assorted. The weights are the very lightest—made for the warmest summer's wear. We sterilize each pair twice in the making, so the colors are fast—the hose sanitary.

We don't know where else you can get hose like these, though you pay twice what we ask for "Holeproof." Don't you want to try the real "Holeproof"?

They are made for women and children, too. Six pairs of women's hose cost $2 (mercerized $3). The children's hose cost $2 for six pairs.

Sold in Your Town

The genuine "Holeproof" is sold in your town. We'll tell you the dealers' names on request or ship direct where we have no dealer, charges prepaid on receipt of remittance.

Write for free book, "How to Make Your Feet Happy"

Reg. U. S. Patent Office, 1906

The Holeproof Hosiery Co., 456 Fourth St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Are Your Hose Insured?

(45)

5% EVERY DAY

UNDER NEW YORK BANKING DEPT SUPERVISION

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

You may deposit funds on any date or withdraw on any date. We have no fixed "interest days"—earnings commence when money is received and paid for full time to date of withdrawal. Remitted by check quarterly semi-annually, or compounded if desired.

Established 17 years. During this time we have never paid less than 5 per cent. a year, while increasing our assets to over $2,000,000, and accumulating surplus and profits of $150,000.

Our record is open to public inspection. We invite fullest investigation of our methods.

Write for booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d St. and B'way, New York

STOP DRUDGING

3-IN-ONE REGISTERED TRADE-MARK

Don't work yourself to death cleaning and polishing furniture in the old-fashioned way, with soap and water or varnish.

3-in-One Oil removes spots, scratches and scars from piano cases, fine furniture and all varnished surfaces easier, quicker and better than any furniture polish. It brings back the original lustre, dries quickly and gives a bright, lasting finish.

FREE Write for generous sample bottle and "the-new-way" to polish furniture, both free.

3-in-One Oil Co., 54 BROADWAY NEW YORK

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium
For the Scientific and Effective Treatment of CANCER
Without Resorting to Surgical Procedure

The only private institution of magnitude in the United States for the exclusive treatment of Cancer and other malignant and benign new growths. Conducted by a physician of standing. Established thirty-two years.

For complete information address
Berkshire Hills Sanatorium, North Adams, Massachusetts

Japanese Air Fern

Most beautiful of all ferns. Lives years without soil or water. Sent, prepaid, 25 cents. Large size infancy basket, ready for hanging, 50 cents. Agents Wanted.
F. H. CRESS COMPANY, 5216 Prairie Avenue, CHICAGO

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

MELVILLE CLARK

-The MAN and His WORK,

The APOLLO-PIANO

THE ORIGINAL 88-NOTE PLAYER

ANTONIUS STRADIVARIUS made a better violin because he knew the violin. Melville Clark knows the player piano. In the music trades his personal supremacy in the field of pneumatics is unquestioned. Recently the entire player piano industry paid a remarkable tribute to his genius in adopting the 88-note (complete keyboard) principle, which for eight years was exclusively an Apollo feature.

Other Apollo features (invented and patented by Melville Clark) are:

Apollo Human Touch — The pneumatic fingers of the Apollo 88-Note Player Piano strike DOWN on TOP of the Keys, just as the human fingers do in manual playing. Other players strike UP on the sticker of the action, or UNDER the keys at the back. Both of these methods are unnatural and are the cause of the unnatural, mechanical music produced by other player pianos.

Apollo Self-acting Motor — A patented motor that runs the music roll and rewinds it without pumping or electricity. Other players are equipped with air motors which necessitate tiresome pedaling. The Apollo's self-acting motor costs five times as much to manufacture as the old style leather-and-wood air motor.

Solo-Apollo Accenting Device— The latest triumph of Melville Clark and the climax in the development of the Apollo Player Piano toward an ideal. The Solo-Apollo actually emphasizes the melody as a virile idea of the composer, and as he intended it to be emphasized.

More Apollos In Use—Notwithstanding the Apollo costs $25 to $50 more than ordinary player pianos, there are more 88-note Apollo Player Pianos and Piano Players in use than all other similar instruments combined.

There are only three player pianos made that can even lay claim to being artistic. Write for descriptive literature and a simple, sure method by which you can decide the player piano question.

Melville Clark Piano Co., 440 Steinway Hall Chicago

75,000,000 WASHBURNE'S PAT. "O.K" PAPER FASTENERS

SOLD the past YEAR should convince YOU of their SUPERIORITY.

Easily put on or taken off with the thumb and finger. Can be used repeatedly and "always work."

Made of brass, 3 sizes. In brass boxes of 100. Handsome. Compact. Strong. No Slipping, Never!

All stationers. Send 10c for sample box of 50, assorted sizes. Illustrated booklet free.

The O. K. Mfg. Co., Syracuse, N. Y. No 1B

LYON & HEALY'S GOOD CHURCH ORGANS

At Reasonable Prices

We make a specialty of large reed organs, voiced to closely resemble pipe organs. These church organs will be found much richer in effects than any cheap pipe organ.

Let us tell you what our $450 Cathedral Organ will furnish in the way of musical effects

Illustrated catalog free. Styles from $100 to $500. Payments spread over 2 years when desired.

Fine Folding Organs $37.50; Fine Parlor Organs $45.00; Good Second-Hand Organs at half price. (68)

LYON & HEALY, DEPT. F5575, CHICAGO

$650 A. B. C. Automobile $650

The biggest Automobile bargain in America. 2 or 4 Cylinders Surreys, Runabouts and Delivery Wagons, 18 or 30 H. P., Solid or Pneumatic Tires. Write for FREE Catalog.

A. B. C. Motor Vehicle Mfg. Co., 3941 Morgan, St. Louis

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES

VISIBLE WRITERS

or otherwise

L. C. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.

¼ to ½ M'F'RS PRICES

Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY

PRICES $15.00 UP

First Class Machines Fresh from the Mfrs—Write for Illustrated Catalog

Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

AGENTS—$1.33 Per Hour

Comer made it, so can you. Swain says, "Best thing I ever struck." Easy money maker. High School boy sold 36 boxes in 2 days—profit $12.60. Agents get big repeat orders—build up steady business. Everybody wears hosiery. Guaranteed for 4 months against holes in heels and toes. Send right back to us if not perfectly satisfactory. J. R. Valentine sold 600 pairs in 50 hours—you can do as well—yes—better. Worn goods replaced free—no experience needed—we teach you everything. Here's your one big chance—don't lose it—write today. Free samples.

THOMAS MFG. CO., 1924 Wayne St., DAYTON, OHIO

Bad Breath

MURRAY'S CHARCOAL TABLETS

Absolutely unmedicated. Sweeten and purify the stomach and breath. They arrest fermentation and cause complete digestion. Eat and drink anything you like, in moderation, and use Murray's Charcoal Tablets daily.

For 10c. in stamps, a full-size 25c. box mailed for trial. Once only.

A. J. DITMAN, 2 Astor House, N.Y.

OLE MAMMY CHEERFUL

By Rev. C. H. Mead, D.D.

OH, de Lord am good, an' de skies am bright,
An' my soul is filled wid de heabenly light,
As I trabel on de King's highway.
He supplies my wants an' he holds my hand—
While he leads me on to de Promised Land
At de ending ob de King's highway.

On de King's highway; yes, de King's highway;
Oh, my faith am strong,
An' I sing my song,
As I trabel on de King's highway.

Each note and word of the song rang out clear and sweet, and as musical as a running brook, and harmonized with the beauty and gladness of the spring morning. As the singer, a colored woman, came round a bend in the road, a broom in her left hand and a basket on her right arm, her old face was all aglow with the faith and brightness of which she had just been singing, and was a picture well worth looking at. Hardly had the last note of the song died away, when a young lady standing on the wide porch of an old-fashioned mansion, blithely cried out:

"Good morning, Mammy Cheerful, and three cheers for the 'sweet singer in Israel.' Here is the best and easiest chair about the house waiting to be filled by the dearest old mammy in the world, and you come right up and fill it."

After a warm embrace, the old woman was esconsed in the big comfortable rocker, a veritable embodiment of contentment and happiness, and ready for the rapid fire of questions she knew she might expect from her beloved foster child.

"Well, Mammy Cheerful, what brought you here this morning?"

"What brought me here, Miss Annie? Why, bress your heart, 'taint no secret, an' if 'twas, I could trust my honey wid it; 'twas jes my faithful old feet what brought me."

The old woman's sides shook with merriment and her laughter was as musical as the song of a meadow lark. Miss Annie joined in the laughter heartily and then said:

"I am sure you have some good news; pray tell me what is up."

"Up, dearie; why eberyting am up; my Lord am up, and love am up, and heaben am up, an' eben de corn my ol' man planted yesterday was up before I left home dis mornin'."

Again the old woman's laughter pealed forth, until it seemed as if a flock of canary birds was giving a concert.

"Planted yesterday and up this morning! Why, Mammy, how was that possible?"

"Well, yer see, honey, Uncle Eph thought, what wid de sunshine an' rain, it mought come up in a week or ten days, but he hadn't reckoned on dem pigs a bustin' froo de fence in de night an' givin' de corn a lift he hadn't counted on."

Again Miss Annie and her Mammy made the whole neighborhood ring with peals of merry laughter.

"I say, Miss Annie, I dun a heap of thinkin' about pigs as I come along dis mornin'. I used to tink dat pigs wid dere curly tails and dere squealin' was de cutest things dat eber was, but I made up my mind dat all a pig thinks about is to make a hog of himself while makin' a hog of himself, an' doin' all he can to turn his squeal into a grunt, an' den roll in de mud an' thank goodness dat he's a hog. He don't want to be a man, but jes' a hog, an' it's all right, for dat's his nature. But, honey, dear, can you 'splain to me how a man, born to trabel in 'de King's highway' under de blue sky, an' among de flowers, an' hear de birds sing, an' to lie down in green pastures, an' to open de windows ob his soul to let de love shine in, gits tired ob bein' a man, an' goes to de saloon, an' comes out a hog, a wallers in de mud wid de four-members of his family? I dun t' my ole man, dat I'd rather de pig froo our fence an' make hogs ol lemselves out ob de seed corn, dan t some boys bust froo de saloon d make hogs of demselves. Oh Annie, yer asked about de good an' I's sure got some. De od dey voted to make our town d quit makin', hogs out ob de bo I ain't done much but shout a eber since."

"Oh, Mammy Cheerful, but t good news; and I understand no

Ole Mammy Cheerful

it was your singing, as you came the road this morning, sounded sw than ever. See here, Mammy, d ever get blue?"

"Blue, chile! wat for I get blue? my heavenly Father de King ob an' isn't I his chile? De place fe is in de sky, an' de place fer love de heart, an' I keeps de blue an de place whar' dey belong. D two things I couldn't get along wi one ob dem is a broom, an' de o faith. Wid a broom I keeps de and dirt out ob my way, an' w faith I keeps de cobwebs out o sky. Bress de dear Lord for b and faith."

Here the old woman with sm face sang softly, so softly th sounded like a humming bird:

On de King's highway; yes, de King's hi
Oh, my faith am strong
An' I sing my song,
As I trabel on de King's highway.

Tears were in the eyes of Miss as the music ceased and very ear she said: "Oh, Mammy Cheer wish I had your faith, and I always wished it ever since I v child in your arms. You are jus dearest mammy and the best Chri I ever knew. But, forgive me fo sooner asking about your rheuma Is it better?"

"Rheumatiz! Well, dar; I dur got all about habin' it, fer ye honey, I has so many blessings to about, dat I don't git time to about little troubles. I has en twinges from de rheumatiz' to re me dat I is not yet in de promised but grace enough to keep me totin' out a thing like dat, when I my soul full ob de love ob God. folks enjoys bein' misable, an' so

Continued on next page

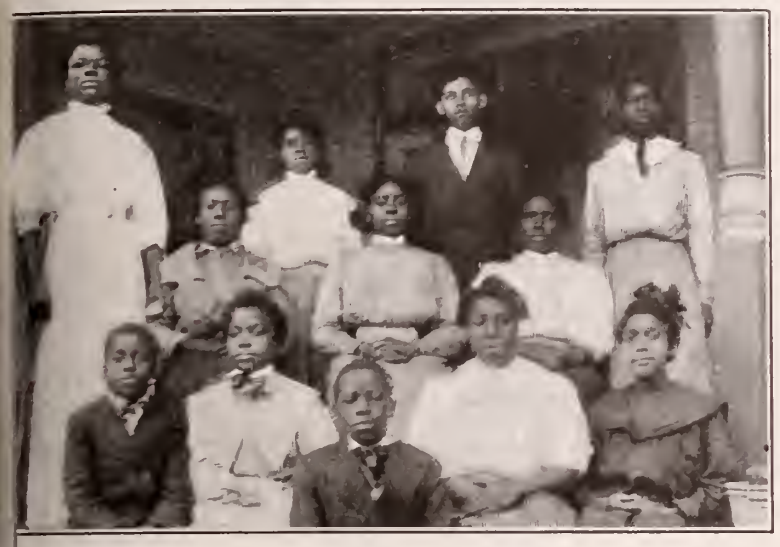
You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every dan invested. See their advertisement on page 443, and write them for full information.

They Want "to Be Somebodies"

THE Lord frequently multiplies a good deed in a most wonderful way. Some time ago, Miss Emma Won, superintendent of the Mayesville, S. C., Industrial Institute—a training home for poor colored girls and boys in South Carolina—received a letter from a girl named Jennie Stuletary, who lived in another part of the State. In that letter the girl pleaded to be helped to an education; she wanted "to be somebody," and she had made up her mind that, if the Lord would open a way, she would try to do good service all her life long. It was a simple, touching appeal from a girl who had no prospects of help from any human quarter. Jennie, in addition to other handicaps, is lame; but this fact did not deter her from making an effort to gain an education and be somebody."

The superintendent forwarded the letter to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, which laid the poor girl's plea before its readers, with the result that a number of generous, generous-hearted people sent small contributions to help Jennie to realize her wish and "be somebody." And here is where the divine multiplication of a good act exemplifies itself, for not only was enough money sent in to cover the cost of Jennie's education and industrial training, but enough has been contributed to provide for several other boys and girls who were in a similar position.

Now, there are no less than twelve of these young colored students at the Mayesville Institute, supported by what is known as THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Scholarship Fund. They are shown in the photograph above. All are said by the superintendent to be bright, promising and exceedingly earnest young Christians. The general work of the Institute, however, is greatly hampered by lack of sufficient funds. Teachers' salaries, too, are overdue. Any contributions which generous hearted friends may send will be specially welcome just now. They may be sent direct to Miss Wilson, Mayesville Institute, Mayesville, S. C.



Mayesville Institute Students Supported by "Christian Herald" Readers

Ole Mammy Cheerful

Continued from preceding page

there aches an' pains an' troubles, though dey was de greatest tings in de world. No, no, honey dear, what should I hand yer a weed, when I kin gib yer a rose, or a cloud instead of sunbeam, or talk to yer about rheumatiz wen I can tell yer about how I's all right."

"Well, Mammy, what have you got in yer basket? I am sure it is something nice."

With a chuckle the old woman said: "S yer done noticed de basket at last has yer? Well, I's been spectin' to hear yer ask dat question. In dat basket is some ob de nicest an'-freshest eggs dat eber a hen laid, or a rooster crowed about. I say, Miss Ann, did yer eber notice how much a rooster is like some men? De rooster jes' is biggest crowin' when de hen has laid an egg, an' some men does dere best crowin' ober something dere wife has done. Dar's dat lazy feller down in our town, Mose Simmons; he some one asked him what he done for a libin', he says, 'My old woman does de washin',' an' den all day long he sets a-sittin' down a chair in front ob de door an' tellin' wat a smart woman his wife am. An' say, Miss Annie, yer ought to hear dat same Mose shout in church time; my, my, yer done tink he was de good Lord's chosen disciple, but everybody knows dat all de religion he's got is in his wife's name. But my, honey, how yer old mammy's tongue does run on! It does my soul good ter see yer, an' I jest couldn't stay away any longer."

"Well, Mammy Cheerful, you are welcome over and over again, and I was hungry to see you and hear your sweet voice once more. I get more help out of your simple, childlike faith, and preaching on everyday things, than I do out of all the sermons down at the old church, where you held me in your arms the day I was christened. I hope you are going to make me a good long visit, and we will turn those lovely fresh eggs into the nicest things we can make for you to eat."

The eyes of the old woman were swimming with tears, while her old black face shone like a morning sunrise, as she said very softly, "Dear Lord, I wants to thank yer dat I still has a warm place in de heart of my Honey Lamb, an' dat she don't turn her back on her old black mammy. Miss Annie, I was going back home tonight, if my old feet got rested enough after walkin' nine miles dis mornin', but now I'm gwine to stay until tomorrow."

"That's lovely, Mammy Cheerful. If it was not for Uncle Eph, you should never go back. You shall have the best bed in the house, and to-morrow I will send you back in the carriage."

As Miss Annie went into the house she heard the old saint humming:

On de King's highway; yes, de King's highway,
Oh, my faith am strong,
An' I sing my song,
As I trabel on de King's highway.

Mix These Crisp Grains With Berries or Bananas

Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice gives an additional relish to any sort of fruit.

The grains are crisp, porous and nut-like, and the flavor blends well with the fruit.

During the berry season you will miss something good if you don't serve one of these grains every morning.

Some Other Ideas

Another good way to serve Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice is in a bowl of milk—as you would bread or crackers.

These grains are four times as porous as bread. They are as crisp as toast. And they have that rich flavor which comes when whole grain is subjected to terrific heat.

Then Puffed Wheat or Rice are far more digestible than any other cereal foods. They form good bed-time foods, or between-meal foods, for they give little tax to the stomach.

In candy making, Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice have come into immense popularity. They are particularly good when mixed with taffy or fudge. And, of course, they are wonderfully wholesome.

When you find out these foods you'll be glad to know all these different ways to enjoy them.

Puffed Wheat, 10c
Puffed Rice, 15c
Except in Extreme West

These are the foods invented by Prof. Anderson, and made by this curious process.

The wheat or rice kernels are placed in sealed guns. Then the guns are revolved for sixty minutes in a heat of 550 degrees.

The heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes tremendous. Then the guns are unsealed and the steam explodes. Instantly every starch granule is blasted into a myriad particles.

The grains are puffed to eight times former size without breaking their coats or altering their shapes. We have magnified grains, made porous and crisp and digestible.

Nearly Everyone's Choice

We have served at a lunch counter—with fruit and without—about every sort of ready-cooked cereal. And four out of five—as a natural choice—have taken Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice.

You would find it the same at your table, we think, if you served a dozen kinds. Four times in five the choice would be one of these enticing foods. They would probably be the invariable choice for eating with any fresh fruit.

You can easily find this out. If it proves to be so, you'll be glad that you know it. Please order them both—Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice—and let your folks give their decision. (39)

Made only by The Quaker Oats Company

It's all in the rib inside the jar and the patent porcelain dasher

You can make butter in 1 minute with the TURN-A-MINIT churn ——pure, sweet, real butter—butter seasoned to your own taste—not cold-storage butter——from either sour or sweet cream. Sour cream makes quite as good butter as sweet cream, and by using it you can save from 10 cents to 15 cents per pound. The TURN-A-MINIT churn is built upon a new principle — of solid removable parts that can be thoroughly cleansed.

It is perfectly sanitary.

It is the only practical home churn.

Besides butter you can make ——whipped cream in 20 seconds

——mayonnaise dressing in 30 seconds

——ice cream, icings, beaten eggs, light batter, soufflé—in a few turns of the handle. You need the TURN-A-MINIT churn—every housekeeper needs it—for convenience, hygiene and economy.

Quart size $2.50, Gallon size (jar of porcelain instead of glass) $7.50. Dairy thermometer furnished free with each churn. When ordering give your dealer's name.

ATTRACTIVE TERMS TO AGENTS

Send a postal for descriptive booklet,

THE TURN-A-MINUTE CHURN CO.

284A METROPOLITAN TOWER, NEW YORK CITY

LABLACHE

FACE POWDER

BEAUTIES OF SPRING

are the women everywhere, whose skin is smooth and velvety, unmarred by the lines of time or by exposure to wind and sun. They are the users of Lablache. Their complexions rival in delicacy of coloring the fragrant blossom of the peach.

Refuse Substitutes. They may be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink, or Cream, 50c. a box, of druggists or by mail.

Send 10c. for sample box.

BEN. LEVY CO.
French Perfumers
Dept. 22 125 Kingston St.
Boston, Mass.

Cincinnati Iron Fence Co.

FREE CATALOGUE. AGENTS WANTED.

Largest Iron Fence Factory in Ohio.

Address Dep't S for prices. CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Stencil Beautiful Designs

Latest Fad—Fascinating—Inexpensive

You can easily make handsome, indelible designs in all colors on linen, velvet, satin, cotton, canvas and other materials for cushion covers, curtains, table cloths, etc., with this complete outfit. Consists of 6 CLEAN CUT STENCILS as illustrated, 2 brushes, 6 colors paints, thumb tacks and full instructions for use. All in 5x13 inch box.

$1

Special Introductory Price, prepaid, only $1.00.

This Beautiful Poinsettia Stencil, 50c

Size 10x13 in., admitting the use of bright colors for curtains, scarfs and pillows. The handsomest stencil design ever made. Everyone delighted with it. Above offer for a limited time only. By mail with catalog, 50c. Catalog Free with each order.

John F. Rahn & Co., Dept. B, 2202 Clybourn Av., Chicago.

Hatred or Love—Which?*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

"THEN was brought unto him one possessed with a demon, blind and dumb." It would be hard to imagine a person more afflicted than that one, both in mind and in body. He was shut in with Satan, and Jesus was to be his liberator. Undoubtedly, he was brought to Jesus by some persons who had themselves been healed, or possibly by those whose friends had been healed. They had faith in the power of Jesus, and they brought him to the house where Jesus was teaching a throng of people.

"And he healed him," and then the man both spake and saw. We are not told whether it was by his word or by his touch. Jesus had healed in both ways.

"The multitudes were amazed." The sudden transformation in the man could have had no other effect. For several months we had been accustomed to sit opposite a man at table who had one eye closed. Imagine our surprise one day to see both of his eyes open! Seeing our surprise he explained that he had been treated by a very skilful oculist. Recalling this incident helps us to realize something of the amazement the people felt who saw the sudden transformation in the man who was not only blind in both eyes, but deaf, dumb, and a demoniac. It was not a matter of hearsay with them; but they saw it done.

Some said, "Can this be the Son of David?" They were disposed to think that Jesus was the Messiah, whom they had been so long expecting, and of whom it had been prophesied that he should open blind eyes; but not so the Pharisees. Edersheim says: "They regarded Jesus as not only temporarily, but permanently, possessed by a demon, and this demon was, according to them, none other than Beelzebub, the prince of devils. Jesus was regarded by them as an incarnation of Satan."

"If Satan casteth out Satan, he is divided against himself." Jesus read the thoughts of the Pharisees and so answered them. That was logical. Satan would have held his power over the man, if he had not been forced to quit. That he did quit was evidence that he had felt a superior power; even the power of God.

"Then is the kingdom of God come upon you." It was as if Jesus had said, "God is now here, and Satan must depart."

Where There Is No Neutral Land

"He that is not with me is against me." There is no neutral province between the kingdom of God and the kingdom of Satan. After the downfall of Napoleon, the map of Europe was readjusted. There was a certain small territory lying between Holland and Prussia which could not be divided, because of valuable zinc mines; so a neutral province was created called Moresnet. But God does not do things that way. Neither does he go shares with Satan. It must either be "none of self and all of Thee," or "all of self and none of Thee."

"Every sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men, but—" The thief who blasphemed the name of Jesus when he was dying on the cross, was forgiven, and, when he had repented, the comforting assurance was given to him: "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

"But blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven." That is one step too far! "The guilt of the Pharisees lay in treating as a Satanic agency what was of the Holy Ghost," says Edersheim. How men have endeavored to discover just what the unpardonable sin is! What is it to sin against the Holy Ghost? A man, who thought he had been guilty of this sin, came to a minister and told him his fears. "You believe yourself guilty of the unpardonable sin?" asked the minister. "I am sure of it," the man replied. "In what did the sin consist?" "I opposed the work of God." "So did Saul." "I denied Jesus Christ." "So did Peter." "I doubted the power of Jesus Christ, after strong evidence in its favor." "So did Thomas." "What are you endeavoring to prove by such examples—that I am a Christian?" "Not at all; I am only inquiring into the nature of your guilt, and thus far, I see no reason to despair. Let me ask whether you desire the pardon of your sins?" "Assuredly, if it were possible." "Do you regret the conduct of which you accuse yourself?" "Certainly." "Do you sincerely desire repentance?" "I would give the world, if it were mine to do so." "Then it is not possible that you have been guilty to an unpardonable extent, for these are characteristics of a state of mind faithless, but far from being desperate, and they come within the Gospel invitations." And the man went away with a strange peace in his heart, and a determination to be a sincere follower of the Lord Jesus Christ.

When Jesus was here upon earth in the form of man, it was not always easy to recognize his divinity. But after the Holy Spirit had descended, there was a new light upon Jesus Christ, and "to blaspheme him in the latter condition would be to hate the light the clearer it became, and resolutely to shut it out, which precludes salvation."—J. F. B.

The Sign Given by Jesus

"The Scribes and Pharisees answered him." Thus are classed together the most learned, the most religious men among the Jews. They answered him by asking Jesus for a sign to prove that he was all he claimed to be. Miracles did not satisfy them, because they were familiar with the works of magicians and exorcists; and they did not choose to see the difference between them and the wonderful acts of Christ. Jesus reproved them for their incredulity, but told of a sign that would be given to them in the days yet to come when he should be three days in the grave and rise again into life. And with that act, which should be, he compared the prophet Jonah, who was three days and three nights in the belly of the whale. (Among the Jews, any part of a day was reckoned as a whole day.) Did those wise men doubt the story of Jonah and the whale? They certainly did not, or Jesus would not have referred to it as confirming evidence. Did Jesus himself believe the story of Jonah and the whale? He certainly did, just as much as he believed in his own resurrection, which should be accomplished at Jerusalem.

If Jesus believed, and so used it, is it for any human being to say, "I do not believe it"? Jesus bound the story of Jonah and the whale together in the bundle of life with his own resurrection, and one can not be doubted without denying the other.

Let us suppose, if we must, that God miraculously interposed and saved Jonah in order that he might be a prophetic sign of Christ's resurrection. But several cases of that kind are known; one particularly, which occurred in 1758, when a man supposed to have been lost was found alive in the body of a whale when captured; and another in recent years, who was rescued from a similar grave, and when he returned to consciousness, was

Continued on next page

* International Sunday School Lesson for May 15, 1910. Growing Hatred to Jesus. Matt. 12 22-32, 38-42. GOLDEN TEXT: "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." Matt. 12:30.

Mar-Proof Floors

That's it. A painted floor will not show a mar of any kind—a floor that always looks new. This result calls for a special mar-proof varnish—ELASTICA Floor Finish.

Elastica Floor Finish is a tough, elastic, waterproof coating. Trample on it, rock on it, roll heavy things over it, throw water on it—there is not a mark left on Elastica.

For Every Floor

Elastica Floor Finish isn't confined to painted floors. For natural wood floors, porch floors, linoleum and oilcloth it is the ideal finish. There is nothing else like it.

Be sure that you get Elastica Floor Finish. The genuine always bears this trade mark

TRADE ELASTICA MARK

Look for this Trade-mark on a Yellow Label. All others are imitations.

FLOOR FINISH

Our experts have written a book, "How to Finish Floors." It tells how to treat every sort of floor to get the utmost results. We want every woman to have it, even tho she hasn't a floor which needs finishing now. As an inducement for you to write immediately we will send free with book, a handsome paper cutter and bookmark combined, made of celluloid, hand somely decorated in ten colors. This is something you will want the greatest sort of a convenience. Sent free with book. Ask for No. 72.

Address Standard Varnish Works, 29 Broadway, New York; 2620 Armour Avenue, Chicago; or International Varnish Company, Ltd., Toronto, Canada.

STANDARD VARNISH WORKS

ASK YOUR DEALER

FURNITURE ON CREDIT

Have your home furnished as beautifully as you would like and settle for your purchases in small amounts from month to month as you earn the money. It's a strictly confidential credit arrangement—thoroughly dignified—wonderfully helpful. We give you over a year's time on every purchase you make.

CATALOG No. 60 FREE

This great catalog is handsomely illustrated, a considerable portion of goods being reproduced in colors. It contains everything to furnish and beautify the home—quotes factory prices on furniture, carpets, rugs, curtains, draperies, pianos, crockery, sewing machines, clocks, silverware, stoves, ranges, pictures, mirrors, lamps, go-carts, refrigerators and washing machines. Write for this big catalog at once—today.

HARTMAN FURNITURE & CARPET CO.
Dept F2 223 TO 229 WABASH AV., CHICAGO

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' Oh, something new—The MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but you can't see them—they are invisible. I would not know that I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right."

The MORLEY PHONE

makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it. Over Two Hundred Thousand Sold. Write for booklet and testimonials.

THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 702, Perry Building, Philadelphia

Stewart Hartshorn

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.

Get "Improved," no tacks required.

Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

SIX New Doilies, Briggs Alphabets, Catalog of Stamped Patterns and a year's subscription to Ingalls' Fancy Work Book—all for 10c. Address J. F. Ingalls, Lynn, Mass.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

ge to tell much about the conditions ler which he had been swallowed.

Dr. L. T. Townsend, in commenting on this incident, says: "The story o Jonah is no more incredible than a of the scores of miracles recorded i the Bible; no more incredible than t parting of the waters of the Red
S.; no more incredible than the call-i of fire from heaven by Elijah; no re incredible than the preservation o Daniel in the den of lions, or than t walking of his three companions in t midst of the fire; no more incredib than the story of Christ's death, b ial and resurrection, of which J ah's experiences always have been r arded as prophetic types, and upon w ch, in supreme dependence, rest the f h and hope of the whole Christian w ld."

cience as the handmaid of religion,
though recent excavations by Layard, confirms all that the Bible says about Neveh in the days when Jonah went there.

A greater than Jonah is here." So sa the Lord Jesus Christ of himself, comparing himself with Jonah, as a preacher of righteousness to lost and sinful people.

The Mistake of the Pharisees

A greater than Solomon is here." Al
Jesus spoke of the queen who jorneyed from far that she might see th greatness of Solomon, and receive answers from him to all of the questi s that were in her heart. But Jesus was greater than Solomon, because he could read what was in the hearts of men; they did not need to te him their questions; and his wisdo in replying to them was unerring.
Solomon was the wisest man, but Jesus was the God-man, and infinite in wisdom.

One greater than the temple is here." (Matt. 12: 6.) Jesus had previously made this claim when the Pharisees had attacked him because he had not prevented his apostles from plucking grain on the Sabbath Day to appease their hunger. It was a criticism not for breaking God's law, but for disregarding some human sectarian rules. Never echoed ritual so grand through corridors so beautiful as in the temple at Jerusalem. But Christ's saying teaches us that a church of a dozen lowly men gathered in an open field, with Christ in their midst, is a truer church and a mightier one than the most elaborate ritual in the costliest temple, which lacks the presence and power of Christ. That temple was long since destroyed, and its worship ever growing feebler lingers only in a widely dispersed race; while that wheatfield church of Christ has grown from a dozen to hundreds of millions, and includes a multitude of every race.

Hatred of Jesus

How strange it seems that any one could hate Jesus, "the altogether lovely"! In our study we have now reached a period in his ministry that is called "the year of opposition." The year preceding has been called "the year of popularity." The clouds of opposition, which gathered about Jesus, were due largely to the Pharisees on account of the Sabbath which they thought Jesus profaned by deeds of healing. The Sadducees also opposed Jesus, principally because he taught the resurrection. They held to the law loosely, while the Pharisees magnified it. Notwithstanding these differences, the Pharisees and Sadducees made common cause with each other in condemning Jesus to the cross. As a sect, the Sadducees disappeared after the first century; but they have successors in the worldly Jews and Christians of to-day.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH

A Shine that Really Outlasts All Others

under the heat of the stove is what you want, and if you have not found it, you must just ask for RISING SUN and you will have it as true as you live. Other makers claim it because they know it is the essential thing. We have got it, and you can prove it, and you will thank us for showing you that a RISING SUN mirror-smooth shine is really superior in durability to anything which hitherto you may have THOUGHT best. Insist on having the real best.

One package of Rising Sun will polish your stove many times, covering more surface than a dozen packages of liquids, which always separate and settle out.

Morse Bros., Props., Canton, Mass., U.S.A.

Here Is Something New From Kalamazoo

Prove for yourself in your own home, that the Kalamazoo is the most perfect—most economical—most satisfactory range for you to use—Your money back if it's not.

Send for Catalog No. 103 with special terms and compare Kalamazoo prices with others

Cash Or Time Payments

We want every housewife to know the comfort and convenience of a Kalamazoo in her home. You can buy on easy time payments or pay cash if you like. Either way—you save $10 to $20 on any Stove in the catalog. We make it easy for responsible people to own the best stove or range in the world.

We Pay the Freight

Kalamazoo Stove Co. Kalamazoo, Mich.

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

"Porosknit" Summer Underwear

FOR MEN FOR BOYS

This Label on Every Garment

TRADE MARK "Porosknit" REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
FABRIC PAT. DEC. 12 1905 DESIGN PAT. DEC. 18 1905

It Guarantees Summer Comfort

A union suit which fits without bunching at the waist, or pulling open between the buttons, is a comfort to the wearer.

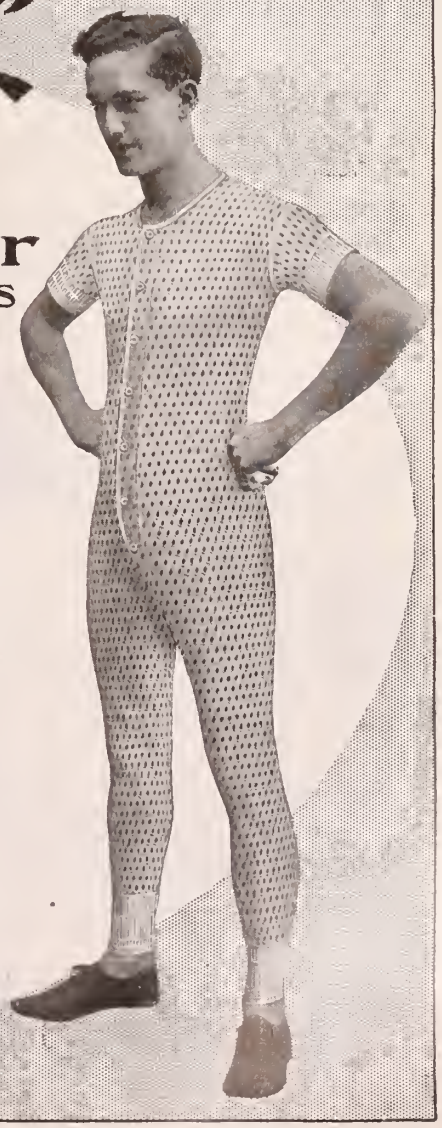
"Porosknit" Union Suits are that and more—they are elastic, yield to every movement, fit everywhere and bind nowhere. The open texture lets your body breathe and evaporates the hot perspiration. "Porosknit" two-piece suits do the same. Either gives cool comfort. Try "Porosknit" once.

For Men $1.00 Any Style Union Suits For Boys 50c

Buy from your nearest dealer. Send to us for new and handsomely illustrated underwear Booklet—Free.

For Men 50c. Shirts and Drawers Made in Every Style Garment For Boys 25c.

CHALMERS KNITTING CO., 30 Washington Street, Amsterdam, N. Y.



When—

appetite suggests something good—when health dictates something nourishing — when bodily strength demands something sustaining — in short, when you're hungry.

Uneeda Biscuit

(Never Sold in Bulk)

5¢ a Package

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

America's Great Humorist Gone

ON the morning of April 22, when the people from Maine to California took up their daily papers there was a start of surprise and an exclamation of sorrow, for they saw from the black head-lines that there had passed away a man whom all knew and admired; a man who had brightened many a weary hour; a friend, even though they had not set eyes on his strong and kindly face. Samuel L. Clemens, "Mark Twain," humorist, writer of tales of mirth and of pathos, an American of Americans, was dead; and those who had read his books, and they constitute almost every one who can read at all, felt that our foremost figure in the world of letters had gone, leaving a void which it would be difficult, if not impossible, to fill.

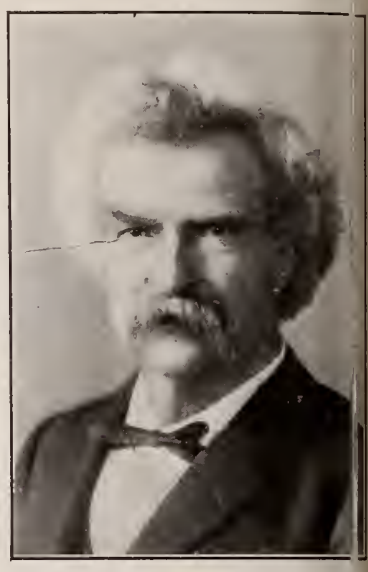
Seldom has the memory of a modern writer received such sincere and spontaneous tributes as fell from the lips of noted men and women in all walks of life, both in this country and in Europe.

His health had not been good for several years past, but he remained cheerful almost until the end. The death of his old friend, H. H. Rogers, the oil magnate, was a great blow to him, and the death of one of his daughters added to his load of sorrow. Then others whom he held dear passed on, among them Mr. Laffan of the New York Sun, and Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, of the Century. Referring to these he said sadly one day: "They are more fortunate than I." He felt that his work was done, and that with his friends gone there was little left for him to look forward to. He took a trip recently to the Bermudas; but returning a few weeks ago, he had a bad attack on shipboard. He was taken to Redding, Conn., where a painless death, which was like falling asleep, ended a long and painful illness.

Mark Twain's life was in itself an interesting example of the possibilities open to the poorest boy in America, providing he has what the writer had in full measure—grit and a determination to attain the goal of his ambition, combined with "stick-to-itiveness." He was born in the little town of Florida, Mo., in 1835. When he was two years old his family moved in a wagon to Hannibal, in the same State.

His father died when the future author was still a small boy, and the lad was apprenticed as a compositor in the office of the Hannibal Courier. Hannibal and its people were always dear to him, and they were pictured in his book Life on the Mississippi and several others. He went East for a while, working as a typesetter on various papers in different towns. He came as far as New York State, and then headed back to Hannibal. He was then only seventeen, but he had become tired of the printer's case and was fired with the desire to become a river pilot on one of the great double-stacked Mississippi steamers which have held such an important place in the history and romance of the great river. For eight years he worked on the river until the Civil War came, and Missourians were found in both the Southern and Federal army. The young pilot enlisted in the Confederate service and was a soldier for a few days, and then he went West to Nevada, where his brother held a government post. He worked on a paper in Virginia City, at that time the great silver-mining centre of the country. Other men were getting rich quickly, but it did not seem to interest him. He much preferred to write sketches of the mining camps and thrilling accounts of holdups and other incidents of Western life. After a while he went on to San Francisco, and worked on the Morning Call. In 1867 he printed his first volume of sketches, which brought him recognition. It was entitled The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County and Other Sketches.

A newspaper proprietor supplied him with the money to take a trip through the Mediterranean and he wrote weekly letters in payment. In 1869 he published Innocents Abroad. It was read everywhere, and is being read with pleasure by the rising generation. Mark Twain's fame was established. He came to Buffalo, N.Y., and bought an interest in a paper and in 1870 married Miss Olive L. Langdon, who died eight years ago. He went to Hartford, Conn., where he lived for several years. Tom Sawyer soon came from his pen, and then Life on the Mississippi and his famous Huckleberry Finn. He joined a publishing firm, which printed many of his books. It failed and he heroically went to work to pay off every cent of indebtedness, which he did by his lectures and new books.



The Late Samuel L. Clemens

Mark Twain was unique among humorists, as his fun was kindly; it was impossible for him to be bitter or get effects at the expense of others. He saw the funny side of everyday life, and put into words what others saw, but had not the art to express. He was thus delightfully human in his writings, the secret probably of his great and lasting success. He was intensely patriotic; the product of the country and a fine representative of its best ideals.

The Native "Cabs" of Japan

(See illustration on cover page)

WITH the coming of Western dress and education, the time-rel customs of old Japan have been modified, but it is doubtful whether the jinrikisha man and his odd but comfortable two-wheeled cart will ever be replaced, for it is used by and is equally popular with native and foreigner. The light wagon, though a natural product, bears little resemblance to other Japanese work and might well have been devised by some foreign but inventive brain. It has little decoration, simplicity being its most prominent characteristic. The cabmen in this case supply their own motive power and keep up a trot through the streets and over country roads that the rider, coming from a land where the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals flourishes, begrudges his steed to stop and rest, only to get a shake of the head and a renewed burst of speed. A slight incline adds much to the task of the coolies, but they consider it a reflection on their power of endurance if the passenger should get out when they start up a steep

"BRECO" Freight Prepaid

Rubber Roofing Don't think of using any kind of roofing till you test sample of old reliable Guaranteed "BRECO." Why pay more? Investigate, and you will order here today.

BOOK AND SAMPLE Free Book proves and shows testimonials of Breco Service. Waterproof and fire-resisting qualities. Cement and nails free. Write today.

The Breese Bros. Co. Roofing Dept. 77. Cincinnati, O.

Western boundary line Minn., Iowa, Missouri, north of south line of Tenn., 100 lbs. or more.

35-lb. Roll 1-Ply $1.36
45-lb. Roll 2-Ply 1.86
55-lb. Roll 3-Ply 2.26
Each Roll 108 Sq. Feet

CARPETS

BUY AT THE Wholesale Price

We save you retailer's profits on Ingrain Carpets for home or church. Best quality all-wool Ingrain only 57 cents per yard delivered to you FREIGHT PREPAID. Write for SAMPLES AND PATTERNS—FREE Cayuga County Carpet Co., AUBURN, N. Y.

AGENTS This Sanitary Clothes Sprinkler is a wonderful invention, and is having a tremendous sale. Cannot soil your clothes, nor chap your hands, nor give you a cold; never rusts; very beautiful, light and appreciated for Cleanliness, Health, comfort and modern convenience. Agents make 20 to 50 sales a day and are wild with success.

Write for Special Terms and Particulars.

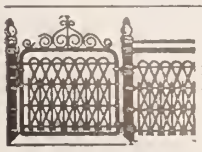
DR. LYONS, 24 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

PATENT YOUR IDEAS

$8,500 for one invention. Book "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents advertised for sale at our expense in fourteen Manufacturers' Journals.

Patent Obtained or Fee Returned

CHANDLEE & CHANDLEE, Patent Att'ys
Established 16 Years
928 F Street, Washington, D.C.



LAWN FENCE

Many Styles. Sold on trial at wholesale prices. Save 20 to 30 per cent. Illustrated Catalogue free. Write today.

KITSELMAN BROS.
Box 302 Muncie, Indiana.

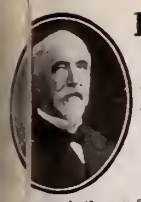
POST CARDS

10 Birthday, 10 cts. | 10 Decoration Day, 10 cts.
10 Rose, 10 cts. | 10 Fourth of July, 10 cts.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

THE OLD FAMILY DOCTOR

POND'S EXTRACT

Sixty years at work relieving pain. The test of time has only served to strengthen confidence in Pond's Extract.



I Was in the Refrigerator Business When Lincoln Was President

Here is the perfect result of my forty years' planning and experimenting—

THE LEONARD CLEANABLE REFRIGERATORS

So far as I know—and I have known refrigerators all my life—a better one could not be made. I'll tell you why:

First, it is absolutely sanitary. Lined with genuine porcelain enamel—pure white; indestructible—as easy kept fresh and clean as your china dishes.

Second, for its economy. Because of a special quilted felt insulation, it saves half on your ice bills. Also a constant circulation of dry, cool air makes your food keep longer.

Third, it has the only perfect water cooler.

Outside, the Leonard Cleanable is as beautifully finished as your piano.

Free book for Housekeepers

All about refrigerators, the care of them, and other household information. It oceans many a dollar saved on expenses. Write for catalog and free samples of porcelain lining.

If your dealer does not sell Leonard Cleanables, write to me. I'll ship you one direct from the factory. Your money refunded if it's not just as I say.

No matter what kind of refrigerator you use, you need my book.

H. LEONARD, Pres.
Grand Rapids Refrigerator Co.
77 Clyde Park Ave.,
Grand Rapids, - - - Mich.

No. 4 Leonard Cleanable Refrigerator. Size 38 x 21—46 inches high; lined with real porcelain enamel. Price $33.00, freight paid as far as Mississippi and Ohio Rivers. With Leonard Porcelain Water Cooler, $5 extra. Fifty other styles and prices.

'Tis Wool Knitted Sweater

$1 Guaranteed Pure Wool. Fully Worth $2. Only one to a Customer

(And 15 cents postage)

Owing to the fact that we are offering this Sweater at less than cost, we are compelled to ask you to pay postage—15c.

We want your name so that we can send you our New Spring Style Catalog No. 62, of Paris and New York Styles Free of Charge. That is why we make this great offer.

Warm Serviceable Sweater of great elasticity, made of pure soft wool, perfectly proportioned handsomely knitted, V-shaped collarless neck, single breasted, closes with 5 large pearl buttons; two roll pockets; colors white or oxford gray. Sizes 32 to 44

E 454.—THIS SWEATER IS $1.

You do not think that this is the very finest Sweater ever sold at this price return to us at our expense and we will at once refund your money.

Send for our great free Catalog No. 62 to-day; it is full of wonderful values like the above.

Martin's SUIT & WAIST HOUSE
Fulton St. Brooklyn
NEW YORK CITY

Be Well Without Drugs

I've helped over 46,000 women. I can help you to make every vital organ do efficient work, thus building a strong vitality which throws off naturally all sorts of chronic ailments such as constipation, weak nerves, rheumatism, sleeplessness, torpid liver, indigestion. This is done by following a few common-sense directions, according to your need, each day, in your own home. In delicate cases, I co-operate with the physician. One pupil writes: "Just think of it! To be relieved from constipation. Entirely free, after having it for 30 years! I feel so much better and stronger."

Smile me, telling me your faults of health and figure, and I will gladly tell you if I can help you. For 10 cents, I will send you my instructive booklet telling how to stand and walk correctly.

SUSANNA COCROFT, Dept. 18-F, 246 Michigan Blvd. Chicago

Miss Cocroft's methods and work have been thoroughly endorsed by representatives of this magazine.

CALOX THE OXYGEN TOOTH POWDER

Depends for its virtues not upon strong oils, carbolor other irritating disinfectants, but upon the presence of Oxygen (peroxide)—Nature's purifier.

Ask your Dentist—he knows
OF ALL DRUGGISTS, 25 CENTS
Sample and Booklet free on request.

McKESSON & ROBBINS, NEW YORK

Christ's "Verilies"*

IN our modern vernacular, a certain word is so much used that we sometimes tire of it. It is the word "Listen." In fact, it has become a form of slang. One hears the young people saying it to each other constantly. They mean, apparently, to invoke special attention to their next remark; but all force is lost by their too frequent use of the word.

It is quite possible that this popular custom sprang from the habitual use of "Listen" by Gipsy Smith in his sermons. From him, it is never objectionable, but serves much the same purpose that "verily" served in the discourses of our Lord.

The man who emphasizes too much, who italicizes his writings, who gesticulates and uses loud tones about trifles, weakens the impression that he makes. It will be observed that Jesus, in Matthew's version, uses the emphatic "verily" only three times in the long Sermon on the Mount.

It is worth while to notice what were the points which he thus distinguished.

The first (Matt. 5: 18) was concerning the fulfilment of the law and of prophecy. Though heaven and earth should pass, no jot of these should be abated until all should be fulfilled.

The second concerns the payment of debts. They must be paid. (5: 26.) All charges due your "adversary," and all fees incurred, must be covered "to the uttermost farthing."

The third condemns the hypocrite (Matt. 6: 5), toward whom Christ is always merciless. He singled out for particular censure only two sins, and one of these was hypocrisy.

These three selections are most instructive to us. Keep the law, regard the word of God. It shall hold until the elements dissolve with fervent heat. It is established forever.

Pay your debts. Owe no man anything. It is said that in the great transactions, such as the forming of syndicates and the purchase of railroads, debts are inevitable; but in the individual life, the long and the unpaid debt are unnecessary and demoralizing. The active brain and the right heart will avoid them. The man who is constantly in debt, or who leaves a place with unpaid debts, must be weak-minded or else a rascal.

The third is quite as important. Be yourself. Put on no airs. Pretend to no beauty nor virtue that is not yours by right. The frank and open-hearted man need not "carry his heart upon his sleeve," but he can speak and act honestly. To young women this message comes with peculiar force. The false complexion, false hair, the distorted figure of fashion—what are all these but rank hypocrisy?

It behooves us all to remember that we must lay peculiar stress upon the great things of life. They must be carefully discriminated from the less important. "The power of comparison," said the great philosopher, Sir William Hamilton, "is the highest attribute of the human mind."

Another of our wise men has said that judgment is the rarest of mental attributes, the trait which marks the great general and administrator.

If we can only learn to tell the large things from the small, and to see that the large things are always regarded first in our lives, we shall have taken a long stride toward success.

Nothing will more certainly guide us to a knowledge of these large things than the study of God's word—not the hasty and cursory daily reading of a passage, to be forgotten almost as soon as read, but the patient and exhaustive study which extracts the pith and meaning, and lets us more and more into the mind and purposes of God.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, May 15. TEXTS: John 6: 26, 32, 47, 53.

Would You Like Vibrant Health Rosy Cheeks Rested Nerves?

I have helped over 46,000 women in the past eight years. If you need to Reduce Flesh or Build Up Your Figure or if you are suffering from such chronic ailments as

Superfluous Flesh	Constipation	Sleeplessness
Thinness	Catarrh	Diseases Peculiar to the Sex
Indigestion	Anæmia	Nervousness
Torpid Liver	Asthma	Rheumatism

mark (x) after the ones you have, and tell me of any others. Clip and send this to me to-day. I never violate a confidence. If I can help you, I will tell you how; if not, I will refer you to the help you need. My work is scientific, based upon common sense, and done in the privacy of your own room.

For 10 cents I will send you my instructive booklet, showing how to stand and walk correctly.

SUSANNA COCROFT, Dept. 18-D, 246 Michigan Boulevard, Chicago

Miss Cocroft's methods and work have been thoroughly endorsed by representatives of this magazine.

CORNS removed by A-Corn Salve are gone forever—roots and all. No knife, no pain, no danger. 15c. at druggists' or by mail.
Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia.

SPRAY With the WATSON 4-row POTATO SPRAYER Never damages foliage, but kills bugs, worms and all destructive insects. Adjustable wheel width. Spray and pressure regulator. Sprays 30 to 40 acres a day. Free Book.
FIELD FORCE PUMP CO., 75 Eleventh St., Elmira, N. Y.

"The Text-Book on 6% Reclamation Bonds"

This is the title of our new book, based on 16 years of experience with Drainage and Irrigation Bonds. It is a notable production—a veritable text-book on farm lien securities. Ask us to send your copy—just from the press.

Drainage and Irrigation Bonds have attained a high place with a well-informed class of investors. We have thousands of customers who consider them the most desirable bonds that we handle.

They are secured by first liens on good farm land—sometimes a thousand farms. And the liens rarely exceed one-fourth the land's value.

They are additionally secured by a first mortgage on all the property in which the proceeds of the bonds are invested. Thus they combine corporate management and responsibility with farm lien security.

The bonds are for $100, $500 and $1,000, so they appeal to small investors and large. The maturities run from one to twenty years, so one may invest for any time that he chooses.

The interest rate is six per cent—a desirable rate in these days of high prices. A knowledge of the facts regarding these ideal securities is important to every investor.

A Wide Choice

Reclamation bonds include Drainage and Irrigation, and they offer a wide choice in each. Some are based on the rich Delta Lands of the South, and some on the most productive lands in the West.

Some are Corporation Bonds secured by first liens on land where one crop will often pay the whole debt.

Some are Municipal Issues which form, as do School bonds, a tax lien on an organized district. Some are "Carey Act" Bonds, where the State supervises the project.

All are serial bonds, part of which are paid annually, so the security constantly increases. As the farmer controls his own water supply, the land is not subject to crop failures.

They who know the facts, as told in our book, will find it hard to conceive of any better security.

How Selected

Our book also explains our extreme care in selecting the Reclamation Bonds that we buy. It names engineers and attorneys of national fame whom we employ to investigate projects.

It tells how water supply, rainfall and drainage area are determined by Government records. Also how soils are analyzed so we may know their exact fertility.

It tells how we keep in touch with the best of these projects. How an officer of our Company almost constantly travels in sections where land is reclaimed. And how we are thus able to select for our customers the cream of these securities.

Wide Experience

In the past 16 years we have bought and sold 78 separate pieces of Drainage and Irrigation Bonds. This book names them all. No investor has lost a dollar through default in interest or principal.

We are very large purchasers of Reclamation Bonds, so we are naturally in touch with every phase of this subject.

Our wide experience and accurate knowledge make our book of decided interest. And every investor owes to himself a knowledge of these facts. Cut out this coupon as a reminder to ask us to mail this book.

(25)

Trowbridge & Niver Co.
First National Bank Building, Chicago
Also New York, Boston and San Francisco

Please mail me your "Text Book on 6% Reclamation Bonds."

Name _____

City _____

State _____ 1002

New-Wonderful-Unexpected!

GLORIOUS DISCOVERY! BEST THING EVER HAPPENED. FAREWELL TO SWEEPING, DUSTING, HOUSE-CLEANING

NEW HOME VACUUM CLEANER. AIR DOES THE WORK

CLEANS CARPETS, RUGS, MATTINGS ON FLOOR

No Machinery—No Electricity—No Motors. One Person Operates. Does same work as high priced machines. SIMPLE, POWERFUL, EFFICIENT. It's the suction that does it. It's that terrific, irresistible in rush of air, carrying with it the dirt, dust and germs out of the carpets into the Cleaner. Weighs 9 pounds. Costs $8.50. Circulars give full details. Thousands praise it. Unlike anything you've seen or heard of. No such device sold in stores. Housekeepers everywhere have longed, wished, hoped for it.

$9 to $18 a day for Agents

FREE SAMPLE to active agents. A splendid opportunity for readers to make money—Men and women.

This new—marvelous invention, this saver—deliverer—champion of over-burdened housewives should be in every home—once used, you wouldn't be without it for love nor money. Weighs nine pounds. Operated by child or frail woman. No expense—no labor. Terrific air suction draws dust, dirt grit and germs from carpets, rugs, mattings, etc., while they remain on the floor; raises no dust, hence no dusting required. Every particle drawn into cleaner—then dumped.

Abandon Brooms, Brushes Dust Cloths

They don't clean your rugs and carpets. Brooms and sweepers fill the air with clouds of dust, and remove a portion of the surface dirt. The New Home Vacuum Cleaner sucks up into itself not only the surface dirt, but the dirt, dust, grime and germs—from the very warp, fibre. No more necessity to go through the disturbance and upheaval of house cleaning. New Home Vacuum Cleaner keeps them clean all the time—cleans on the floor. Saves money, time, strength and health. Nothing like it anywhere—nothing can take its place. Away with hard work—away with slaving toil. Send to-day for a cleaner.

Price, $8.50. Not Sold in Stores.

Not $100.00; not $50.00; not even $25.00—only $8.50

Have a clean home, hours of leisure. Adopt the easy way—the modern way—the sanitary way—the scientific way. All Hail! New Home Vacuum Cleaner, marvel of the 20th Century, champion of overworked womanhood.

Each machine tested before shipping—each guaranteed as represented or money back. The price insignificant—the benefits everlasting. Will last for years. Not sold in stores.

Don't delay—don't hesitate—don't wait for others—don't wonder if it's true. It is true—every word—couldn't be exaggerated—words can't describe it. Stop short! Put drudgery behind you—leisure and health before. Enjoy yourself now—to-morrow may be too late. $8.50 will do it all—$8.50 brings relief from hard work—brings time to enjoy yourself—to visit friends—to read, shop, etc. Pays for itself in saving of carpets, rugs and mattings.

MAKE LOADS OF MONEY

This wonderful cleaner simply takes women by storm. They can't resist it—bargain day, isn't it. No experience necessary. Just hustle and the money rolls in. Shown in three minutes. Sold in five. Then on to the next. None refuse. All buy. Hurry—be first—get the cream Women eager—they need it—when they see it, can't let it go. Drop everything—sell this marvelous vacuum cleaner. Make $100 a week—you can—easy. C. E. Goff Mo: "Sold 5 Vacuum Cleaners last Saturday my first attempt." Gustave Anderson, Minn.: "Enclosed find order for 12 Vacuum Cleaners. Ship prompt. One man sold a dozen 3 days." W. H. Morgan, Pa.: "Sold 45 Cleaners in 25 hours. Have sold two out of three persons canvassed." And so it goes. Hundreds of like letters every day; every one pleased, no one dissatisfied. All making money easy. Agents' profit 100 per cent. Write to-day—secure agency—get to making this easy money. FREE SAMPLE to active agents.

R. Armstrong Mfg. Co., 994 Alms Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio

Read What Users Say:

F. I. Pierce, N.Y.—"Wife more than pleased with Home Vacuum Cleaner. It does all and more than you claim for it."

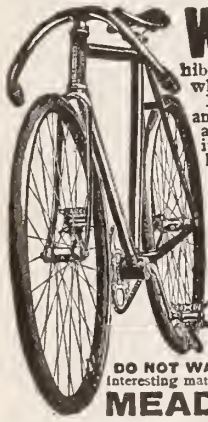
Prof. Geo. S. McDowell, Pa. "Took 8½ ounces fine dirt from carpet 10x13 feet."

L. Banville, O. "Home Cleaner greatest ever. Have arranged for demonstrations in stores."

Mrs. Jane Shully, Nebraska. "You don't claim half enough. I wouldn't part with my cleaner for any price if I couldn't get another. My ten year old girl operates mine easily."

Mrs. Henry Deller, Rhode Island. "I must thank you for telling me of your wonderful cleaner. What a godsend it is to women. I have not felt so rested in years. Work now easy. Plenty of spare time. Don't see how you can sell it so cheap.

$8.50 SENT ANYWHERE



WANTED—RIDER AGENTS

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1910 Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write at once for full particulars and special offer.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offer.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderful low prices we can make you. We sell the highest grade bicycles at lower prices than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT—but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. D 71, CHICAGO, ILL.

Buy Direct—Save Money—We Pay Freight

Our monthly installment plan of selling direct saves you all the dealer's profit and his excessive charges for installation and repairs. We can save at least one-third the cost of your furnace. We have been building Jahant Furnaces for over thirty years and guarantee satisfaction.

JAHANT DOWN DRAFT FURNACE

The Best Heating System Made for residences, schools, hotels, churches, etc. It is the most economical furnace too, and saves one-third to one-half the cost of fuel, because the patented "Down-Draft System" burns wood, hard or soft coal, and burns it all without cinders, clinkers or any waste. Needs less attention, yet heats much better than any other furnace, hot air, steam or hot water heating system. Our plan of monthly payments makes it easy for any one to have the best heating system made. Every Jahant Furnace is sold with a strong "Guaranty Bond" that allows you 365 DAYS TRIAL. You don't run any risk buying from us.

ONLY $10 DOWN and $10 A MONTH

We send complete outfit, furnace, pipes, registers, etc. together with special plans, full directions and all tools for installing. If you can drive a nail you can install a Jahant Furnace without the aid of a tinner.

Write To-day for Catalog which explains the Jahant Down-Draft System and tells why it gives more heat at less cost.

THE JAHANT HEATING CO., 205 Hamilton Bldg., Akron, O.

DON'T BUY PAINT TILL YOU GET OUR BOOK

Here's the difference between Chase's fresh, made-to-order paint and the paint at dealers' and paint that is made by painters. Dealers' paint is stale—with the linseed oil eaten up by chemicals. And no painter has the heavy machinery to mix and grind paint. Our paint is made after each order is received and shipped the day it is made. Chase paint means fresh paint—longer service, better service. Be sure to write, now, for Big, Free Book and Color Card. Also direct-from-factory prices, free trial and freight-prepaid offer.

O. L. CHASE, THE PAINT MAN, DEPARTMENT 8, ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

Among the Workers

—Missionary Thomas Houston has just concluded a series of Gospel meetings in Frankfort, Pa., which resulted in two hundred and five professed conversions.

—Rev. James Walter Doughty, whose excellent lectures we referred to in a recent number, is contemplating a return to the pastorate, and is available for pulpit engagements. We commend him to any of our churches needing a supply. His address is Williams Bridge, New York City.

—Missionary Edward W. Thwing, of Tientsin, China, writes asking the sympathetic support of Americans in behalf of the campaign now being made by missionaries in China against the cigarette evil—"a plague that has come from the West"—which is spreading with frightful rapidity and startling results.

—Mr. Roosevelt, as the result of observations during his foreign tour, has become convinced that too much money is wasted on armaments. He will lecture on this type of national extravagance when he returns, and may have something of interest to suggest in the line of a limitation of armaments.

—The New York Evangelistic Committee will be glad to hear from any clergymen visiting New York who may be willing to speak at the various meetings from time to time. Those who wish to do this volunteer work should address Rev. Arthur J. Smith, superintendent, 541 Lexington Avenue, New York.

—Rev. E. O. Guerrant, of the American Inland Mission, writes from Wilmore, Ky.: "Almost from the beginning of the work for the highlanders, Dr. Klopsch became enlisted for their help. He sent General O. O. Howard to visit our mountain missions, paid all the General's expenses, and published elaborate accounts of the visit. Every few months he sent liberal help—the gifts of his readers—for the support of the missions in the farthest mountains, and tens of thousands of these sturdy highlanders will never forget these noble benefactions."

—Evangelist J. M. Taylor, of "Faith and Love Mission," Bridgetown, Barbados, W. I., writes: "In moving our party of missionaries from Antigua to Barbados we passed the islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique, French possessions, said to have a combined population of four hundred and thirty thousand. On inquiry we learned that there was absolutely nothing being done there by any religious body, except the Catholics. Martinique has a population of one hundred and eighty-two thousand. Ignorance prevails. There are very few marriages. Rum-drinking prevails. The Faith and Love Mission calls for workers for these islands."

Called Higher

S. A. Garrett (84), at Marion, Ia.
Sarah Price (62), at Delaware, O.
Robert Murray (82), of Zarra, Can.
S. R. Anderson (76), of Corsica, Pa.
Hartley Holden (87), of Corsica, Pa.
Miss Ella Behler, of Mauch Chunk, Pa.
Mrs. Catheren Dohrn, of Lansing, Kan.
Mrs. Jane Minor (88), at Columbus, O.
Mrs. Robert B. Craige, at Madison, Ind.
James Stevenson (38), at Coal Centre, Pa.
Mrs. L. W. Raymond, of Warrenshurg, Ill.
Mrs. Mary E. Garrett (79), at Marion, Ia.

Mrs. Judith Burge Hogue, of Shelby, N. C., died November 2, 1909.

Mrs. Maria Harper, of Selbyville, Del., died December 12, 1909, aged eighty-two.

John Dunwoody died at his home in Marengo, Ill., January 22, 1910, aged seventy-five.

Mrs. Augusta C. Gilbert, of Phœnix, N. Y., died January 17, 1910, aged eighty-seven years.

Mrs. Carrie Jones died at her home in Lafayette, Ind., January 21, 1910, at the age of sixty-five.

Entered into rest in Oak Park, Calif., January 25, 1910, William T. Campbell, aged seventy-two years.

Mrs. Hannah P. Smith, of Friendship, N. Y., passed away January 9, 1910, at the advanced age of eighty-two years.

Mrs. George P. Read, of New Bedford, Mass., passed away December 12, 1909. She was nearly seventy-eight years old.

Mrs. Agnes Sneeten, of Philadelphia, Pa., died recently. She had been a subscriber to this paper for over thirty years.

Mrs. Everitt Pierce, of Sacramento, Calif., entered into rest at her home on July 7, 1909. She was in her eighty-sixth year.

Robert Gibson, of Green Bay, Wis., passed away on January 12, 1910, in his ninety-third year. He came from Scotland in 1837.

Mrs. J. M. Dunscomb died at Twinsburg, O., on the 10th of January. She had been a member of the King's Daughters and a communicant of the Episcopal Church for many years, and also a steady contributor to The Christian Herald. She was a supporter of the Bowery Mission and the Children's Home.

Rev. Aaron K. Sanford, D.D., died at Yonkers, N. Y., Feb. 24, after fifty-seven years of effective service in the ministry as a member of the New York M. E. Conference. From 1861 he was superintendent of the Five Points Mission three years; later was presiding elder of two districts; then, from 1893 to 1904, was again superintendent of the Five Points Mission, and pastor of the People's Church. Dr. Sanford was a manager of the Board of Foreign Missions forty years, and missionary superintendent of the New York City Church Extension Society. He was a delegate to the Ecumenical Missionary Conference in London in 1901, and also delegate to the Convention at Seattle in 1907.

BUY ROMPERS BY MAIL DIRECT FROM FACTORY

All Charges Prepaid.

LET us supply your children's Rompers direct from the factory and save you the middleman's "big profit"; our Rompers are the best that can be produced: durable, serviceable, fast color and will stand many trips to the wash tub. Choice of pink or blue, checked chambray with neck, collar and belt bound in white,

5 for $1.00

ROMPERS made of good grade Madras, with yoke, rolling collar, cuffs and pocket piped in white: choice of assorted checks and stripes . . 3 for $1.00

ROMPERS made of an excellent grade of linen suiting that will wear like "buckskin": dressy patterns with rolling collar; yoke and cuffs piped in white; belt piped and fastened. Tan and Cadet Blue . . . . . 2 for $1.00

These ROMPERS will not shrink; they are exactly as represented, worth double our price. Sizes 2 to 6 years. ALL CHARGES PREPAID. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Specify size and color. REMEMBER our offer of 4 sets for $1.00 from factory to you: all charges prepaid.

CONSUMER'S APRON COMPANY
61 Clymer Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

THE WALKING OF WESTON

Always Stimulates INTEREST IN WALKING

ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE

Shake Into Your Shoes

Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder for the feet. It relieves painful, swollen, smarting, nervous feet, and takes the sting out of corns and bunions. It's the greatest comfort discovery of the age. Allen's Foot-Ease makes tight or new shoes feel easy. It is a certain cure for ingrowing nails and hot, tired, aching feet. TRY IT TO-DAY. Sold everywhere, 25 cts. Do not accept any substitute. Sent by mail for 25 cts. in stamps.

FREE TRIAL PACKAGE sent by mail. Address

ALLEN S. OLMSTED, Le Roy, N. Y.

It Cures while You Walk.

250,000

COPIES ALREADY SOLD

HALLOWED HYMNS NEW and OLD

By I. ALLAN SANKEY, son of IRA D. SANKEY

OVER 1000 CHURCHES USING IT

256 Pages, 100 New Songs, Responsive Readings

$25. per 100, not prepaid. 35¢ per copy by mail
Returnable samples mailed to "earnest inquirers"

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago

HONOLULU $110

and back (1st class) 5½ days from San Francisco. The splendid twin-screw steamer SIERRA (10,000 tons displacement) sails from San Francisco April 16, May 7, May 28, and every 21 days. Round trip tickets good for 4 months. HONOLULU, the most attractive spot on the world tour. BOOK NOW and secure the best berths. LINE TO TAHITI AND NEW ZEALAND. S. S. Mariposa coaning with Union Line, sailings April 15, May 21, June 29, etc. To Tahiti and back (24 days), $125. New Zealand (Wellington) $246.25 first-class, R. T. 6 months.

OCEANIC S. S. CO., 673 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

WHEEL CHAIRS

A Wheel Chair is often an invalid's greatest comfort. We offer over 75 styles of these easy, self-propelling Invalid's Rolling Chairs, with latest improvements. Ship direct from factory to you, freight prepaid and sell on 30 Days' Trial.

Liberal Discounts to all sending for free catalogue NOW

GORDON MFG. CO.
454 Madison Ave., Toledo, O.

Elastic Stocking

From pure gum rubber, woven absolutely to your measure, at the same price you pay for poor-wearing, ready-made goods.

Our Stockings are the best in the world and our prices lowest. Write for self-measurement blank and FACTS ABOUT VARICOSE VEINS.

Worcester Elastic Stocking & Truss Co.
58 Front Street, Dept. 9. Worcester, Mass.

Auto-Masseur REDUCES

40 DAY FREE TRIAL

So confident am I that simply wearing it will permanently remove all superfluous flesh and make it permanently disappear, I will let it free, without deposit. When you see the beautiful shapeliness speedily returning I know you will gladly buy it. Try it at my expense. Write to-day.

PROF. BURNS Dept. 203, No. Broadway, New York

PATENTS That Protect and Pay

Advice and Books FREE. Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services.

WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D. C.

When You Buy a Piano ou want to know you are etting the best for your money.

CORNISH

When you buy a "CORNISH" you get full piano value — nothing added for the protection of dealers.

ent To You For A Year's Free Trial

Cornish Pianos for real merit, are unexcelled by any other, whatever the price, or name or reputation

Must prove their superior value over all others by home tests or we pay the freight both ways. We will place a piano in your home, freight paid if you wish at rock-bottom factory price, upon terms of your own choice, giving you 1 year to test the instrument before you need decide to keep it and we give you a Bond of Indemnity which holds us to this offer and also insures instrument against defect for 25 years.

Save One-Third—Buy On The CORNISH PLAN—Easy Terms

Send For The New CORNISH BOOK

The most beautiful piano catalogue issued — it explains things that you ought to know whether you buy from us or elsewhere. The book is yours for the asking. Write for it now.

CORNISH CO. Washington, New Jersey. Established Over 50 Years

MENNEN'S
BORATED TALCUM
TOILET POWDER

Superior to all other powders in softness, smoothness and delicacy. Protects the skin from wind and sun. Prevents chafing and skin irritations. The most comforting and healing of all toilet powders.

Mennen's Borated Talcum Toilet Powder is as necessary for Mother's baby as for Baby's mother.

It contains no starch, rice powder or other irritants found in ordinary toilet powders. Dealers make a larger profit by selling substitutes. Insist on Mennen's. Sample Box for 2c Stamp.

Gerhard Mennen Co., Newark, N. J.

Are Your EYES AFFECTED In Any Way?

If so, let us send you The Ideal Sight Restorer for 10 days at our expense.

The Normal Eye

It helps Nature in a purely natural way to strengthen the eyes and restore the natural vision. Its action is in the nature of a gentle message, which stimulates the eyes by restoring the normal circulation of blood—that is all that weak eyes require. But it does more—it models the eye painlessly but surely to its perfect shape. This is necessary to correct near-sight, far-sight, astigmatism, and kindred defects. It is absolutely safe—it does not come in direct contact with the eyes; and five minutes' manipulation, in your own home twice a day, is all that is necessary to counteract eyestrain and headache, and relegate eyeglasses to the rubbish box. Throw away your eyeglasses. See nature, and read with your naked eyes. Write for instructive booklet No. 127 E and 10 days' test to

THE IDEAL CO., 134 W. 65th St., New York

MEMORIALS & MONUMENTS
FOR CEMETERIES SCHOOLS & PARKS
LARGE VARIETY OF DESIGNS FOR EVERY PURPOSE
DELIVERED ANYWHERE · SEND FOR CATALOGS
STATE REQUIREMENTS AGENTS WANTED
MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.
355-B HOWARD AVE., BRIDGEPORT CONN.

PATENTS that PROTECT
Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps.
E. G. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D. C., Dept. 36, Est. 1869

The Upward Look and the Uplift*

THEY go together. You look up and you see the stars. The beautiful sight strengthens and inspires you. Then you tell your neighbor to look up. Thus you have strengthened and inspired another.

In Milton's greatest poem, Mammon was always wandering through the Heavenly City with downcast eyes, gloating over the golden pavements, instead of feasting them upon the glories of the Most High.

"Look up, and not down," said our wise seer, and the proverb has been taken to heart by our whole people. Everyone knows that when one's nerve is weakening upon some height, it is fatal to look down. The only hope is in looking up. In seasickness, look up and off, and you are most likely to be relieved. For physical, mental and moral health alike, the great prescription seems to be, "Look up."

One of our poets, Dr. S. V. Cole, has written especially to you young people:

O youth, O golden time, whose other name
Is opportunity, dost thou not know,
Has no one ever told thee of thy claim?
Thou art the heir, for heaven has made thee so;
All things are thine; look up and thou shalt see;
Sun, moon and stars are bowing down to thee,
Making obeisance, as in Joseph's dream;
For thee it is that waters roll, stars shine,
Voices arise by lonely hill and stream,
Friendly monitions, whisperings divine;
For thee do Ariels sing; and where the walls
'Twixt the two worlds are thinnest, in the air
Come momentary gleams—the sheen that falls
As from no earthly garments ever; there,
With heaven's power and blessing to bestow,
The holy presences pass to and fro.

But it is in uplift of others that the strongest work is done for the Master. Rendered purer and nobler by the contemplation of the "heavenly presences" above, it is ours to turn thither the eyes and hearts of others.

One of the "slum-workers" of Boston testified that he had not been able to use very much the services of theological students in his ministrations.

"They are willing only to sit upon the platform and address the multitude," he said. "It is but now and then that a man comes along who is willing to devote himself to the unromantic work of dealing with the individual."

It is this individual work which counts. Jesus spent a very large part of his time in training twelve fishermen, who were, he said, to do greater things than he.

We must try to make every one we labor with a missionary. Then, like compound interest, or like the chain letter, it will increase tremendously the Gospel power. Like a great belt of light, it will flash around and around the world, until all its peoples are made one in Christ Jesus.

In helping to uplift the world, strange work will sometimes come to us—for we must take each day's task as it happens along—take it bravely and do our best.

Here is the way in which one noble Christian took up hers:

The saintly Mme. Guyon was not a business woman; but upon her husband's death, a complicated law-case, of which the settlement had been left to him, was brought to her. The contestants knew her high character and promised to abide by her decision.

She felt unequal to the task, but she saw that here was a great work and she determined to try to do it. For thirty days she shut herself away with the confused mass of papers which her husband had left, and, praying constantly for wisdom, she patiently studied the case in all its aspects.

The twenty-two claimants were perfectly satisfied with her decision. A bitter quarrel was averted and justice and right prevailed. It was a noble Christian service.

Your duty is not only to look up and to purify yourself; but you have a duty to your neighbor, to help him up likewise.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, May 15. TEXTS: Titus 2:11-14; Heb. 12:1, 2, 12; I. John 3:17.

Make it new. That's the idea. If the inside of your refrigerator begins to show blisters or spots—or if it is zinc and you want it white—all you need is a good brush and a can of Acme Quality Bathtub Enamel (Neal's). It makes a hard, durable, snowy surface that is impervious to hot or cold water or moisture in any form. Dirt or germs can't cling to it. Cleaning is easy.

The same enamel will make your bathtub white and lustrous. It should be used also on washstand, sinks, bathroom woodwork and other surfaces exposed to steam and moisture.

Whatever surface you want to finish, remember there's an kind to fit that particular purpose. Stains, varnishes, enamels and a variety of other finishes for floors, walls, inside woodwork and furniture of each room. Special paint for floors and woodwork of porches. Special enamels for window screens and porch furniture. Right paints and finishes for cycles, carriages and autos.

ACME QUALITY

Tell your dealer just what surface you want to cover and ask him for the Acme Quality Finishes you'll need. Be sure to write to us for free copy of the which shows colors and tells which finish to use and how it should be applied in every case. It's a real text book of painting, a valuable thing to have on hand.

Acme Quality Guide Book

ACME WHITE LEAD & COLOR WORKS
Dept. O, Detroit, Mich.

PAINTS ENAMELS THE ACME QUALITY KIND STAINS VARNISHES

5 Fine POST CARDS FREE
Send only 2c stamp and receive 5 colored Gold and Embossed Cards FREE to introduce post card offer.
CAPITAL CARD CO., Dept. 132, Topeka, Kan.

IT SLUGS HARD

Coffee a Sure and Powerful Bruiser.

"Let your coffee slave be denied his cup at its appointed time! Headache—sick stomach—fatigue like unto death. I know it all in myself, and have seen it in others. Strange that thinking, reasoning beings will persist in its use," says a Topeka, Kansas, man.

He says further that he did not begin drinking coffee until after he was twenty years old, and that slowly it began to poison him, and affect his hearing through his nervous system.

"Finally, I quit coffee and the conditions slowly disappeared, but one cold morning the smell of my wife's coffee was too much for me and I took a cup. Soon I was drinking my regular allowance, tearing down brain and nerves by the daily dose of the nefarious concoction.

"Later, I found my breath coming hard and frequent fits of nausea, and then I was taken down with bilious fever.

"Common sense came to me and I quit coffee for good and went back to Postum. I at once began to gain and have had no returns of my bilious symptoms, headache, dizziness, or vertigo.

"I now have health, bright thoughts, and added weight, where before there was invalidism, the blues, and a skeleton-like condition of the body.

"My brother quit coffee because of its effect on his health and now uses Postum. He could not stand the nervous strain while using coffee, but keeps well on Postum.

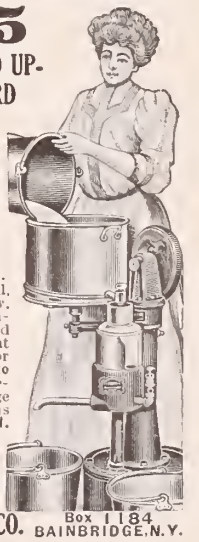
"Miss F., I know personally, was incapable of doing a day's work while she was using coffee. She quit it and took up Postum and is now well and has perfectly steady nerves."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

$15.95 AND UPWARD

AMERICAN SEPARATOR



THIS OFFER IS NO CATCH. It is a solid proposition to send, on trial, fully guaranteed, a new, well made, easy running separator for $15.95. Skims hot or cold milk; making heavy or light cream. Designed, especially for small dairies, hotels and private families, different from this picture which illustrates our large capacity machines. The bowl is a sanitary marvel, easily cleaned. Gears thoroughly protected. Western Orders filled from Western points. Whether your dairy is large or small write us and obtain our handsome free catalog. Address:

AMERICAN SEPARATOR CO. Box 1184 BAINBRIDGE, N.Y.

Even the Smallest
KITCHEN GARDEN
Will be the better for an

IRON AGE WHEEL HOE

to keep the weeds down and the ground cultivated to save all the moisture. Tools are furnished for hoeing, cultivating, opening and closing furrows, leveling, etc.

A DAY'S WORK IN 60 MINUTES

A woman, boy or girl can operate it as easily as a man.

Costs $2.50 Up.

Ask us to-day for catalog. Sent FREE.

BATEMAN MFG. CO., Box H. Grenloch, N. J.

WANTED LOCAL REPRESENTATIVE to sell men's clothing on credit by largest credit clothing house in the world; no capital required; write for plan. Good openings for right men. Menter & Rosenbloom Co., 600 Cox Bldg., Rochester, N.Y.

Victrola

Tone

That's where the Victrola is pre-eminent.

You might be able to build a cabinet that outwardly would resemble a Victrola. You might even copy the inside construction and details, if they were not protected by patents. But there is no copying the superior Victrola tone-quality.

That represents years of patient experiment—with various woods, with different proportions, with numerous vibratory surfaces—and it is simply astonishing how slight a variation in size, in shape, in position, produces discord instead of harmony.

No, the Victrola tone can't be equaled! Even though the eye could take in every detail of construction, there is still that same indescribable "something" which makes the Stradivarius supreme among violins, which gives to the Victrola such a wonderfully sweet, clear and mellow tone as was never known before.

Hear the Victrola to-day at the nearest Victor dealer's. Ask him to play the great Trio from Faust, sung by Farrar, Caruso and Journet (95203). Then you'll realize the wonderful advance in quality of tone due to our improved process of making Victor Records.

The new Victor catalogue lists more than 3000 selections—both single- and double-faced records. Same quality—only difference is in price. Buy double-faced if the combination suits you.

Victor Talking Machine Co., Camden, N.J., U.S.A.

Berliner Gramophone Co., Montreal, Canadian Distributors.

To get best results, use only Victor Needles on Victor Records.

Victrola XII $125
Mahogany

Victrola XVI $250
Circassian Walnut

Mahogany, $200. Quartered oak, $200.

New Victor Records are on sale at all dealers on the 28th of each month

CHRISTIAN HERALD

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH, JR.

New York, May 11, 1910

VOL. 33—NO. 19. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Drawn for The Christian Herald by E. Farnsworth

MAY FLOWERS

Fine
For Breath.

Fine
For Teeth.

NEW YORK, MAY 11, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Leaving Ellis Island for New York

Waiting for the Boat

Arriving at the Promised Land

Photos by Brown Bros. for The Christian Herald

IMMIGRATION'S HIGH-WATER MARK

FAR and wide in the countries of the Old World word has been passed from mouth to mouth that the United States is increasing in prosperity and that the outlook is brighter than it has been for several years past. Always ready to think of our land as the Eldorado, the land of gold, or rather golden opportunity, the adventurous ones, dissatisfied with their home conditions, have been packing up their household goods, buying steamer tickets, and making their way to the nearest seaport to embark for America. As a result of these reports of coming good times there has been a steadily increasing tide of humanity flowing through the gate of the New World—in other words, Ellis Island, New York Harbor.

Every steamer from Europe in March and April was loaded to its full capacity with expectant immigrants anxious to try their fortune in the country where so many of their kinsfolk have preceded them. All previous records for the same two months have been surpassed; and as the record for May and June will probably be even larger, it would seem that before the census of 1910 is finished there will be added to our population two or three hundred thousand.

The force at Ellis Island was found insufficient, and Commissioner Williams, who rules the islet with a firm but kindly hand, had to ask for a larger force of inspectors and also for larger accommodations. When the present buildings were put up they seemed adequate for all demands made upon them, but if would-be Americans come in much greater numbers than at present the Commissioner will be in a quandary as to what is to be done with them. On one day recently eight thousand were landed on the island, while three thousand more were compelled to stay on board the steamers down the bay. With this army to be looked after, the authorities received word that thirty thousand more were on the high seas and would be ready to invade the country within seven days. Twenty-seven ships were bringing them, nearly denuding some Italian villages of all their inhabitants. Reporters and others who visit Ellis Island regularly and have become used to the babel of tongues and the strange costumes have never seen anything to equal the kaleidoscopic scenes of the last few weeks. "Surely," the visitor exclaimed involuntarily, "we are becoming the melting pot of the nations."

In March there were 132,397 arrivals. From this great number about eleven thousand Americans returning from foreign tours must be deducted. Over one hundred and eight thousand were classed as immigrants. This is over twice as many as came in the four weeks of February, when the figures stood 44,397. The majority of the March arrivals were Italians, less than half of whom could read or write. Next in numbers on the list came the Austrians, who numbered 19,488; then the Russians, the Greeks and the Germans. There were comparatively few English, Irish or Scotch. Out of two thousand Englishmen only four could be classed as illiterate. The arrivals from the British Isles were mostly skilled artisans. The Italians also had quite a number of men skilled in the use of their hands, who would be gradually absorbed into the mechanical trades. A large majority of the April influx, however, is classed as unskilled labor.

All the visitor to Ellis Island is able to do at first is to stare in open-eyed astonishment at the size of this endless wave of humanity passing, passing from dawn till dark before the quick-eyed inspectors, who try to separate the sheep from the goats in so far as our very liberal immigration laws will permit, and who often detect the criminal and the diseased where the less experienced would fail. Then the first question of the many which he will ask rises to his lips: "Where are all these people going? Will they stay in the city and add to the terrible state of congestion with which it is afflicted, or will they go to the farms?"

Detention Ward. These People Have Not the Necessary $25 to Gain Admission

The answer in many cases is found on the dress of the immigrant himself, who has a label sewed bearing in large letters the name of the town for which he is destined. At present there are large numbers making their way to the Northwestern States; many stop at Chicago, while numbers of the Jewish immigrants settle in the large Eastern cities, especially New York, the life in the country or the smaller towns having little attraction for them. Relatives and friends of the new arrivals usually take care of them until they can find work, and in some cases come on to New York to meet them. A surprisingly small number of the March and April immigrants, about ten per cent., were in doubt as to the exact spot in Uncle Sam's dominions they would make their home.

The sentimental revival of Dutch interest in America during the Hudson-Fulton celebration may account for the number of well-to-do immigrants who are now coming over from Holland. Recently a whole village came, led by their pastor, to make their homes in one of our productive farming regions, and there are new arrivals from the land of dikes and Van Dykes every week. Most of them come in the second cabin of the great steamships and are thrifty and intelligent, bringing money enough to start in some small business. A large majority of those who come from other countries, however, rarely have much above the twenty-five dollars required by the immigration laws in order that the new arrival may not become a charge upon the community.

R. S. B.

THE American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. David James Burrell, D.D.*

A LITTLE SANCTUARY

TEXT—Ezek. 11:16
"I will be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries whither they shall come."

IN the land of Chaldea, by the banks of the river Chebar, a band of Jewish exiles were accustomed to meet for the worship of God. To them came this promise. In dreams and visions of the night they saw the gilded towers of the Temple in Jerusalem shining in the sun; they heard the ramshorns calling and longed with a great longing to fall in with the multitudes that went to keep holy day. Blessed memories of happiness gone by! "We hanged our harps on the willows and wept when we remembered Zion!" It was to these sequestered exiles that God said: "I will be to you as a little sanctuary." The promise is rich in comfort for three kinds of people particularly:

First: To Christians in small churches.

There is a little lonely fold,
Whose flock one shepherd keeps,
Through summer's heat and winter's cold,
With eye that never sleeps.

You may find them everywhere, these little lonely folds; out on our frontiers, in schoolhouses by the crossroads, and in "the regions beyond," where converts from paganism gather under the shadow of banyan trees. To them the promise comes, "Thus saith the Lord, I will be unto you as a little sanctuary."

I sometimes fear we overestimate the relative importance of the city churches where God is worshiped in magnificent surroundings and with imposing rites. They occupy a great place in the newspapers and in the denominational Year Books; but who shall say that the sum-total of the influence of the secluded groups is not more significant in the sight of God?

We call them "little churches"; but perhaps the old-fashioned people who sing threadbare tunes to the accompaniment of a cabinet organ stand for a higher type of piety than those who live in closer touch with the world of affairs. The great promise is theirs, "I will be to them as a little sanctuary"; a promise which is paraphrased by our Lord in the words, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." God's arithmetic is not ours. Numbers count for little; and pomp and circumstance find no favor in his eyes.

Strength Not in Numbers

We call them "weak churches," too; but possibly our mode of calculation is at fault. The power is in the battery, not in the wires; and God sometimes generates a mighty current in an unlikely place. It is his province to "save with few or with many." Wherefore the church of a thousand members may be weak, while the one that has but a score may exert an influence far and wide.

It was a lonely little church of only eleven members that, coming down the outer stairway from the upper room in Jerusalem, went forth to the conquest of the world, animated by the promise, "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom!"

It was a lonely little church that assembled once by the riverside near Philippi in a place "where prayer was wont to be made"; yet God used it as a radiating centre for the diffusion of the Gospel throughout all Europe.

It was a lonely little fold of hunted Christians that gathered for worship in the catacombs beneath the Imperial City; but it wielded a greater power than Cæsar and his courtiers whose chariot wheels rumbled above their heads.

How insignificant in point of numbers and material strength were the Conventicles among the Scottish hills; but God was unto them as a little tabernacle, and the world pays tribute to their fruitful faith. Thus not infrequently the numerical minimum has turned out to be a dynamic maximum. The Vaudois, the Puritans, the Lollards, the Huguenots, the Covenanters, and the despised "beggars" of Holland are in evidence. God with a few makes an army, of which one shall chase a thousand and two shall put ten thousand to flight.

* Pastor Marble Collegiate Church (Reformed Church in America), Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, New York City.

Second: The promise is for Christians in sickrooms. It is one of the pleasures of my ministry to keep in touch, by means of a printed sermon every week, with many parishioners near and far who, by reason of their infirmities, are deprived of church privileges. It has been a pleasure beyond all words to give them a few crumbs of comfort in their lonely hours, mayhap to lighten the burden of their secluded lives. God bless my cloistered congregation! I receive letters from them, now and then; and what love of our great Master breathes through all! What faith! What simple acquiescence in his holy will!

The Sufferer at Heaven's Gate

I have found the story of one such cloistered saint in a tract called The Dairyman's Daughter, published nearly a century ago. It is one of the simple annals of the poor, written in terms quite antiquated and likely to provoke a smile. The story runs on this wise: A message came to the pastor of the village church at Arreton, in the Isle of Wight, calling him to a humble home of sorrow. He found there an invalid girl who, to use her homely phrase, had once been "all for the world and pleasure, for dress and company," but whose life had been changed by a sermon on the text, "Be ye clothed with humility." Since then her quiet influence had been a blessing to the neighborhood. Her life was now slowly fading away, and she was looking forward with a great longing to the Land of the Leal. Sitting by the fireside, supported by pillows, she said with a patient smile, "My heart and my flesh fail; but God is my strength and portion. In the fulness of Christ I have found all that my poverty could need; and in his bosom I have found a resting-place from sin and sorrow." The minister repeated his visit again and again, and went away saying, "Verily, this is the house of God; this is the gate of Heaven!" On his last visit he read by her bedside, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law; but thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!" whereupon "her eyes opened and something like a ray of divine light beamed from her countenance," as she whispered, "Victory! Victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ!" and then, "He deals very gently with me"; again, "His promises are yea and amen"; and finally, "All's well!"—A hundred years and more have passed. The cottage where she dwelt, with a rose bush over its door and old-fashioned flowers in the garden, is still kept as a memorial of her. To the multitude of sufferers who are shut in, like the Dairyman's Daughter, the promise "I will be unto you as a little sanctuary" brings joy unspeakable. "All's well!" The Lord is their light and their salvation. Theirs is the peace of God that passeth all understanding. They are indeed "shut in"; but, like Madame Guyon behind her prison bars, they sing the song of patience and resignation to their Master's will.

A little bird am I,
Shut in from fields of air;
But in my cage I sit and sing
To Him who placed me there;
Well pleased a prisoner to be,
Since, O my Lord, it pleaseth thee!

If they are "shut in" they are also shut out: shut out from the busy world, shut in with Him who giveth songs in the night.

Third: The promise has a still larger application; it brings a message of strength and courage to all who live and labor in a narrow sphere.

How many there are who feel the straitness of their limitations! They long to make life tell; but their ambition is clogged and hampered as with a ball and chain. They are "cabined, cribbed, confined"; and, like the starling in the Sentimental Journey, they beat their wings against their cages crying, "I can't get out!" Nevertheless, a life thus circumscribed has great compensation.

To begin with, there is the assurance of the divine Presence, "Lo, I am with you alway." It is worth remembering that when Paul complained that, at h trial before Nero, all his friends forsook him, he wa moved to add, "Notwithstanding the Lord stood wit me and strengthened me." It is under such cond tions that we come into closest intimacy with Hir We become acquainted with friends not in a crow but in some trysting place. It is related of Thoma à Kempis, who wrote the Imitation of Christ, tha oftentimes when walking with his companions in th garden of the monastery, he would glance at the sun dial and say, "Dear brethren, I must go; there Someone waiting for me in my cell."

A further compensation is in the assurance divine protection and guidance. God's watchcare singularly over his "hidden ones," those who are h "in the secret place of his pavilion," hid "in the ho low of his hand." And he guides them in all the ways. The child who was cast adrift in a bask among the bulrushes on the Nile was not forgotte of God. Nor was he forgotten when later he playe in the palace halls, nor when he pursued his studi in the University of On, nor when he assumed h place in public affairs with the prospect of the vic royalty of Egypt before him. But then came th break in his life! He found himself alone in th desert of Midian. Was God still with him? Ye guiding his feet when he led his flocks to pasture a really as when he was in training for the thron And of this fact God gave him assurance at th burning bush, when he said: "I Am That I Am. Ar certainly I will be with thee!"

Divine Reinforcement Assured

And there is still another compensation in the fa that wherever our lot is cast, God is preparing u for something further on. Our place is divine assigned and strength is assured according to ou day. Our life here, in any case, is not really livir but only getting ready to live. We are serving a apprenticeship, learning how to do things so tha we may be skilled and equipped for the doing greater things. It may be that Tabitha, the woma of Joppa whose life was devoted to making garmen for the poor, had longings for a larger sphere usefulness; but when she lay in state the poor who she had befriended came, like courtiers to a roy catafalque, and holding up the garments which sh had made paid tribute to her faithfulness. She ha passed on to promotion. I doubt not there was place for Tabitha's needle in that larger life whe the service chevron is accorded to all who, with th resources at hand, faithfully serve their God.

The point of supreme importance to those who ca themselves Christians is to make their influence te to the utmost, here and now, in praise of Him wh loved us and gave himself for us. "Let your light shine before men that they may see your good work and glorify God."

In a lighthouse, somewhere on a lonely rock, th keeper mounts the stairs to kindle his light. His a secluded life. As in a treadmill, day by day, h pursues his monotonous round; filling the lam trimming the wick, polishing the reflector, kindlin the light. He hears no voice of thanks or encou agement; but far out on the waters there is many sailor who shades his eyes to catch the gleaming that light. Let the lonely plodder be patient; in du time his reward will come. And the reward is nev for conspicuous success, but always for faithfulnes "Well done, good servant! Thou hast been faithf in a few things, I will make thee ruler over mar things."

Jesus bids us shine, with a clear, pure light,
Like a little candle burning in the night.
In the world is darkness; so we must shine,
You in your corner and I in mine.

Get ready for promotion! All heaven is in th word, "Well done!" The man in the workshop, th housewife in her humdrum round, the servant wh can only "stand and wait," the Christian who kee his light burning in a little place, these will present find their joy in some larger parish and in great tasks. Wherefore, wherever God has placed yo let your light shine! This is the sum and substan of duty.

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" on Next Page]

Mr. Roosevelt at the Sorbonne

T is the habit of ex-President Roosevelt, when he speaks in public, say something that compels attenon. His recent address before a disnguished audience at the Sorbonne, Paris, marked the climax of his ublic utterances abroad. His selection f topics took a wide range. Good tizenship, he declared, was essential the success of a republic. The good tizen must be one who is willing to things and not a mere spectator or itic. Among the qualities of good tizenship, he placed the highest estiate on the "will and the power to ork, to fight at need, and to have lenty of healthy children." Not only ust the good citizen be a worker, but e must be strong and brave, and be eady to serve his country, if the need rise.

"The good citizen," he said, "will deand liberty for himself, and as a matter of pride he will see to it that others eceive the liberty which he thus claims s his own. Probably the best test of rue love of liberty in any country is he way in which minorities are treated n that country. Not only should there e complete liberty in matters of relion and opinion, but complete liberty or each man to lead his life as he deires, provided only that in so doing e does not wrong his neighbor."

He believed that every honorable ffort should be made to avoid war; but no self-respecting individual or elf-respecting nation can or ought to ubmit to war." He denounced in unieasured terms the sin of "race suiide." It was "a curse to any nation" nd if allowed to prevail "it will be an dle waste of breath to prate of our chievements, or boast of all we have one."

The "idle rich" next received attenion. "I decline to recognize the mere nulti-millionaire, the man of mere vealth, as an asset of value to any ountry, and especially as an asset to ny own country. If he has earned or ises his wealth in a way that makes im of real benefit, of real use—and uch is often the case—why, then he loes become an asset of worth. But it s the way in which it has been earned r used, and not the mere fact of vealth, that entitles him to the credit." The man who piles up a great fortune, vhile returning no corresponding benefit to the nation, he regarded as "an nworthy citizen, neither to be admired nor envied." He deprecated the rrogance that would look down upon r crush an equal because he is poor, nd the envy or hatred that would destroy a man because of his wealth. The rich exploiter of those less fortunate than himself was on a level with he greedy demagogue who excited the penniless to plunder the prosperous.

He spoke a good word for arbitraion. Nations should cultivate high deals; but he did not believe in preachng weakness, individual or national. 'We sincerely and earnestly believe in peace; but if peace and justice conflict, we scorn the man who would not stand for justice, though the whole world came in arms against him."

Mr. Roosevelt's speech took his audience by storm and was frequently interrupted by applause. It lasted an hour and three-quarters. It was, in many respects, the crowning speech of his life.

A Practical Discourse

One stormy day the children were amusing themselves indoors, playing church. "Now, Florence," said Theodore, "I'll be the minister and tell you what you must do, and you'll be the people, and you must listen and do what I tell you." Climbing up on a chair, he began his sermon. "Florence, you must be a very good girl and do whatever your brother wants you to. If he wants your playthings, you must let him have them, and if you want any of his, you just let 'em alone."

The Children's Pulpit

PEACE DAY

By Rev. J. M. FARRAR, D.D.*

IN the library of a New York merchant, David L. Dodge, the world's first peace society came into existence. Wednesday, May 18, is known as "Peace Day." A day when we are to think and talk about peace more than any other subject. This Lord's Day, this fifteenth of May, is Whitsunday. You do not know what Whitsunday is? It is the day when many churches celebrate the coming of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. The Holy Spirit and Peace Day! How glad we should be to celebrate both days in the same week! The Children's Pulpit hopes that soon each day of the three hundred and sixty-five days of each and every year will be known as Peace Day.

Here is the wrong way to be a peacemaker. A missionary was praying and talking with an Indian chief who was dying. The missionary said: "You have been in many wars, but now before you die you should forgive all your enemies and be at peace with them." The answer was: "I am at peace with my enemies, for I have killed all of them." Some one has called this "graveyard peace." Over their graves we could not write: "Blessed are the peacemakers."

. . .

HERE is the right way to be a peacemaker: "I was a peacemaker to-day," said little Amy. Her mother asked: "What makes you think so?" "'Cause there was something I didn't tell," replied Amy. This is one of the best ways in the world of being a peacemaker. Right there and then Amy became one of the "children of God." 'Cause there was something she didn't tell.

Another way to be a peacemaker is by forgiving those who talk too much. Can you forgive those who say mean things about you?

A story is told of Peter Miller, a plain Baptist preacher of Ephrata, Pa., in the days of the Revolutionary War. Near his church lived a man who abused the pastor in every possible way. This man was arrested for treason; that is, for not being true to his country. He was tried, found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged. Peter Miller, the old preacher, started out on foot and walked the whole seventy miles to Philadelphia that he might plead for the man's life. Washington heard his plea, but he said: "No, your plea for your friend cannot be granted." "My friend!" said the preacher; "he is the worst enemy I have." "What!" said Washington; "you have walked nearly seventy miles to save the life of your enemy? That puts the matter in a different light. I will grant the pardon."

. . .

THE pardon was made out and given to Miller, and he at once started to walk to a village fifteen miles off, where the execution was to take place that afternoon. He arrived just as the man was being taken to the scaffold. The condemned man, as he looked out over the crowd, saw Peter Miller coming up, and he said: "There is old Peter Miller. He has walked all the way from Ephrata to have his revenge by seeing me hanged." He had scarcely said the words when the pardon was presented by the dear old preacher of peace. The life of the traitor was spared, and the preacher proved he was a child of God. "Blessed are the peacemakers."

. . .

SHALL I tell you a story in which to hold the sermon? On the peak of the Andes Mountains, fourteen thousand feet above the level of the sea and on the line which marks the boundary between the republics of Argentina and Chile, has been erected one of the most striking monuments in the world. For more than a century the boundary line between Argentina and Chile had been in dispute. (Get your maps and find these countries.) A wise man who loved peace proposed that the dispute be settled by arbitration. (Turn to your dictionary and learn the meaning of arbitration.) The two governments agreed to ask the King of England to be their arbitrator. The King worked hard and drew a line of separation that made all happy. So very happy were they to be at peace that all agreed to settle by arbitration all their disputes for the next five years. Soon they found that they did not need so many soldiers and many of them were sent home to work and care for their families. Boys and girls shouted for joy when fathers came marching home. Several large battleships were soon sold and the money was used for building docks. The two nations, growing in wealth and strength, bid fair to outstrip all the other countries of the South American continent.

. . .

THESE Spanish-Americans have warm hearts and great love for peace. When they sign a treaty they are not satisfied to tie a piece of red tape around the peace papers and lock them up in a vault of the State department. That might do for North Americans, but to them it seems a very dull and stupid way. To let all the world know that they are at peace they have made a colossal statue of Christ, twenty-six feet high, and standing on a granite hemisphere symbolizing the world. This they have set up upon the Andean peak, three miles above the level of the Pacific Ocean. Into the pedestal they cut an inscription in Spanish, which, being interpreted, reads: "These mountains will crumble to dust ere Argentines and Chileans break the peace which at the feet of Christ the Redeemer they have sworn to keep." Peace Day is a good time to tell this story to your friends.

* Pastor First Reformed Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. TEXT: "Blessed are the peacemakers." Matt. 5:9.

In the Quiet Hour

MANY a man and woman (writes Rev. Dr. Robertson Nicoll) feel that they would not flinch from martyrdom if only they themselves might arrange the stage and the spectators and make a glorious, heroic end. But often God gives you the pang without the palm. He elects you to some obscure agony. No one else suspects that you are resigning the treasure which is dearer than your life. No one else notices that you are being nailed to the cross. Many a philanthropist delights to devote his time and fortune to some popular cause. Many a soldier will enlist in a crusade under the banner which is already gilded with the sunshine of victory. But more often the Commander of the faithful allots you just a sentinel's place in the holy war. He calls you to consecrate yourself to some quite humble endeavor, and in your lifetime you will never watch it succeed.

God claims you for an unpopular duty, a forlorn venture. He links your mission, it may be, with men who disappoint you or betray you, who make your labor of love appear no better than a pitiful, sordid failure. Many a man would rejoice to spend himself in helping those whom he cares for, especially if he can do it in the way which appeals to him. What if God bind up your lot with the loveless and the thankless? What if he bid you dedicate your best years to some fretful invalid, some selfish relatives, who scarcely realize how much they exact and are barely grateful? Yet our devotion remains impure if it depends upon human gratitude. When we have grace to lavish our spikenard ungrudgingly on those whom the Lord has given us to cherish, not because they are attractive or hopeful or even thankful, but simply because he has put them into our keeping, then, indeed, we do it unto him.

The tokens and indications of the divine will are seldom doubtful to those who humbly seek to know it, so that they may follow it with full purpose of heart. The heavenly voice which claims the sacrifice reveals the altar. We need not say lo! here, or lo! there; it is generally not far distant—here, by our very doorway, or there, among our own kith and kin. But the essence of God's election is that the altar is not where we might expect and the offering is not what we would prefer. And the joyful acceptance of his blessed will becomes part of our surrender, without which it cannot be perfect. No consecration is complete so long as it is made reluctantly. General Gordon reached the conclusion of the whole matter when he said, "I learned that to be like Christ, we must not only have our will subordinated to his, but we must be delighted to have it so." Bind this sacrifice with cords, even to the horns of the altar.

Anvil Sparks

..ONE little sin will hide God's whole face.

..GOD puts our greatest duties nearest to us.

..HEAVEN finds a new joy every time a sinner repents.

..ANGELS like to visit in the home where Christ is loved.

..NOTHING makes us richer that does not make us more thankful.

..OUR tears are round to remind us that God loves the whole world.

..THE man who improves his talent always gets God's reward for doing it.

..THERE may be many good qualities in a miser, but his greed for money obscures them all.

..MANY a man has become a lover of the Bible by hearing some infidel talk against it.

..ONLY from the vantage point of heaven can we discern who are the truly great on earth.

..To fill the measure even full is all that God asks of anybody, but when he gives, he runs it over.

HALLEY'S COMET NOW NEARING US

By Samuel Phelps Leland, A.M., LL.D.,

Professor of Astronomy

HALLEY'S comet, which is now attracting so much attention, is especially interesting from the fact that one week hence, on the eighteenth day of May, our earth is expected to pass through the tail of the wonderful traveler.

The comet is now in near proximity to the sun, and will then be on its return journey into space. It is now visible in the early morning in the eastern sky, about an hour and a half before the sun, and a little north of the sun's path. It is visible to the unaided eyes, if the sky be clear.

An Early Aspect of the Comet

This comet belongs to a large family known as "periodical comets"; that is, those comets that perform their vast revolutions and make their returns to our sun at nearly regular times. During the last century, we were visited by several of these which blazed with extraordinary splendor, and were visible for several days, and even weeks, to our unaided eyes. The most remarkable were in 1807, 1811, 1812, 1819, 1823, 1830, 1835, 1843, 1844, 1845, 1847, 1850, 1853, 1858, 1860, 1861, 1862, 1863, 1864, 1874, 1881, 1882, 1883, 1884, 1886, 1889, 1892, and several others since that date. Besides these, a goodly number of small comets have been visible to the unaided eyes.

While comets revolve in orbital paths, like planets, and while many of them can be calculated, they differ from the planets in several characteristics. Flammarion notes these differences. He says:

> Four principal characteristics distinguish comets from planets. 1st. Their nebulous aspects, and their tails, often considerable. 2d. The length of the elliptical orbits which they describe. 3d. The inclination of these orbits, which, instead of lying in the plane of the ecliptic, or at least in the zodiac, like those of the planets in general, are inclined at all degrees up to a right angle, and sometimes carry the comets to the polar constellations. 4th. The direction of their motions, which, instead of being performed in the same direction as those of the planets, are, some direct, others retrograde, and appear to be strangers to any unity of plan. From these circumstances the certain conclusion follows that comets have not the same origin as the planets; that they did not originally belong to our solar system; that they travel through immensity; that they may be transported from one sun to another, "from star to star," and that those which revolve around our sun have been caught in their passage by his attraction, having had their course curved and closed by the influence of the planets of our system.

Comets are so awe-inspiring, as they sweep in their majestic orbits across the sky, that the imagination is aroused, and ignorant and superstitious persons invest them with attributes they do not possess. Comets usually consist of a head or nucleus, more or less brilliant; and most of them have luminous trains, known as tails. The head consists of an aggregation of meteoric masses in a state of high temperature. These masses are in rapid motion around a common centre, like floating chips and particles of sawdust in a whirlpool of water. These nuclei are of vast size, but the several particles composing them are individually very insignificant. Should our earth, or any other planet of its size, come in contact with the head of a comet, probably the only effect would be a meteoric shower, the ashes of which might be detected floating in our atmosphere. Compared with a world, the amount of matter in a comet is insignificant indeed. But contact with the nucleus of a comet is a very improbable event. Taking into account the vastness of space, and the known laws governing the movements of comets and planets, and all the probabilities, it is estimated that such a contact with our earth could not occur within the next 100,000 years! The amount of matter in a comet is so small that its attractive force could not deflect our earth in any conceivable degree from its orbit.

What is known as the tail of a comet has been the subject of much speculation and investigation. Two theories have been put forth, one of which may be true, but probably the real truth lies in both. The tails of comets in nearly every case stream out like banners of fire from the side of the comet opposite to the sun. Occasionally, a comet appears with more than one tail. In such a case, a tail may come out from the side of the comet, but never from the side next to the sun. It is also well established that the solar space is filled with attenuated gases, of almost inconceivable rarity. These are known as nebulous matter. One position taken by scientists is that the comet's tail is composed of certain attenuated gases, among which, the spectroscope has detected traces of hydro-carbons, with cyanogen, sodium, calcium and manganese. These are so rarified that only traces are detected. These are thought to be emanations from the nucleus, and are acted upon by some magnetic repellant forces from the sun, that drive them from the heated head of the comet. There are many facts sustaining this hypothesis.

Another explanation is that, as space is filled with nebulous clouds, and the passage of the nucleus through this matter causes waves or vibrations, the sun's rays upon these waves make reflection upon the nebulous clouds, and what seems a tail is only reflected light from the disturbed mass. This clearly explains why the tail is on the side opposite the sun. Both of these explanations seem necessary to illustrate fully the nature and behavior of comets' tails.

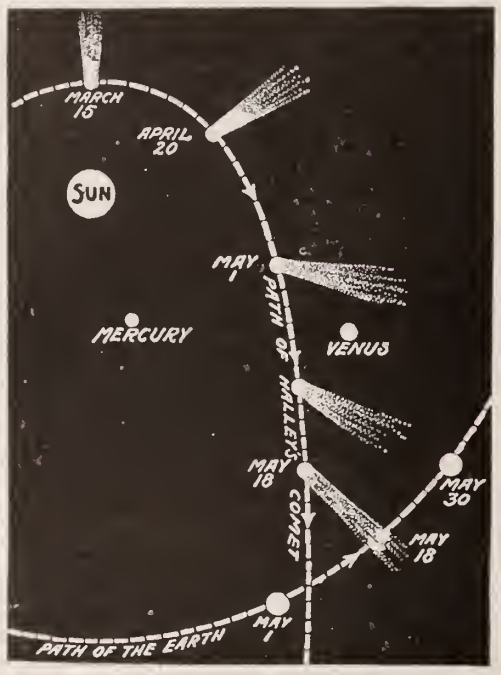
Its Tail, Millions of Miles Long

If we accept the assumption of the burning gases in the first hypothesis, it relieves us of any anxiety as to the consequences that might follow the passage of our earth through the tail of Halley's comet. These gases are so attenuated and rare that they could not penetrate our atmosphere lower than fifty-five miles above the earth's surface. Our atmosphere below that altitude is one hundred times denser than the gases in the comet's tail, and these gases could not penetrate our atmosphere, although we were dashed together in the comet's tail. If the other explanation is true, then our earth would be no more affected than it would be by reflected sunbeams, or by their negation, a shadow.

It is probable that when Halley's comet passes across the face of the sun on May 18 its tail may lie across the path of the earth through which our globe may pass between the hours of 9 and 11 A.M. Unless we mortals shall be on watch, we will be unconscious of its passage. It is not certain that the earth will come in contact with the tail. If the comet shall be high across the sun, the tail will be above us; and if low on the sun, it will spread its flaming banner across the sky below us. The combined mass of 100,000 comets the size of Halley would not equal that of our earth. In 1861 our earth passed through the tail of the great comet of that year in the night, and no one knew about it, except the astronomers who were on watch.

In any event, apprehension is needless. There is not the slightest danger of any catastrophe. Our great earth will sail on in its orbit, without even unfurling a signal flag to the blazing comet as it passes by. It will be a magnificent spectacle while it remains visible to an admiring world.

The Comet, (<) Photographed at Yerkes Observatory



The Path of the Comet, Where it Nears the Earth

GENERAL COMMENT ON CURRENT TOPICS OF THE DAY

—An April blizzard in the Central Western States did much damage to vegetables and fruits. Snow, cold rains and night frosts were experienced in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, southern Indiana, western Kentucky, southern Missouri, and Arkansas.

—Suicides are becoming alarmingly prevalent in Russia. In one day, recently, eighteen were reported in St. Petersburg alone, mostly women. This epidemic of self-destruction is supposed to be due to neurasthenia and melancholia. One case was that of a young girl, heiress to $10,000,000, who had entered into a "death compact" with two others. All three died the same day.

—Perhaps the oddest reason ever given for a pastoral resignation was that offered by a Jersey City clergyman lately, who retired because, being bald, he constantly caught cold. He might have worn a wig or a skull-cap, or even had the church heated; but the bare pate and the drafty building he regarded as a combination impossible to be borne and incompatible with good preaching.

—At this time, when we hear so much about the higher cost of living, we have heard very little in regard to increase of wages to meet the greater demand on the workers' purse. It is, therefore, of interest to learn that one company, the Oriskany Malleable Works Company, at Utica, N. Y., has made a voluntary advance in wages of from ten to fifteen per cent. The employees had made no request for an increase, but when each man opened his envelope he found more money than he expected, a note explaining that the wages were raised to meet the increased cost of living. It is a fine example that has been set by the company and it is to be hoped it will prove contagious.

—Are we, as a nation, unkind to our heroes and unappreciative of great achievements? Is it true that there are many Americans living and walking in our streets to-day who have rendered signal services in a variety of ways which, if they had been performed in any other country, would have entitled them to distinctive recognition? England, as well as other European powers, honors her great ones by loading them with titles in token of national appreciation. We, of course, have neither titles nor decorations; but why should the republic be ungrateful? It is sadly true that we have inventors, artists, painters, authors, scientists and philanthropists who, had they been in other lands, would have been publicly distinguished long ago, while here they are forgotten. Such is the simplicity of our system, which abjures all class distinction. Even if it should be satisfactorily proved to any accredited body of scientists that Peary found the Pole, his courage and daring would probably have no reward, except in the admiration of his countrymen and the historical record of the fact itself.

—Germany is still discussing the overwhelming public repudiation of Professor Arthur Drews, of Karlsruhe, in Berl a few weeks ago, some of the details of which have appear in The Christian Herald. Drews, it will be remembere was the "eminent scholar" who set out to prove that no su person as Jesus Christ ever existed and who forgot that the f record of Christ's accusation, trial and death was recorded the Talmud. Further details concerning this sensational infic have now come to hand. He lectured in several German citie claiming that Jesus was a legendary character derived fro Jewish and heathen myths; but when he came to Berlin, t organization known as the "Positive Christian Union of Be lin" brought about his Waterloo. At a great mass meeting number of speakers, including Pastor Le Seur, Councilma Eismann, Licentiate Munn, Pastor Israel, Dr. Philipps, D Faber and others, both ministers and laymen, addressed t masses, all taking the same theme: "Jesus Lives." The whc city rose in approval. To-day the Christian religion is e pounded in twenty thousand German churches. Even t Socialists sustain it. The "Liberal Christian Union" h 125,000 adherents and in the German rural districts Christi organizations are numerous. The demonstration, as a whol was the most impressive ever witnessed in the German capita It was a spontaneous uprising of all denominations to testi to the strong Christian faith of the German people.

MY VISIT TO FOUR AFRICAN KINGS

From Photographs by the Author

King Manzengunya

King Ziki

King Budzi

By Rev. ROBERT WODEHOUSE,

UMTALI, AFRICA

OUR food boxes are packed, our blankets and small tent are rolled and strapped in waterproof sheets, ready for a long and trying journey into a country infested with wild animals. It takes several days before the boys get used to their loads. A halt is made at the Mutambarra Mission, where within eighteen months a new mission, fairly well equipped, has sprung up. At present there is a good day school for boys carried on by Mrs. Buchwalter, and a girls' school by Miss Bell. A new church has been put up and is filled every Sunday with dusky worshipers.

When the first temporary church was put up here, it was not known that King Mutambarra could not attend, as the ground was said to be bewitched! A new site was chosen, to which the church was moved, and now the king comes to the Sunday services. The industrial department is making rapid progress; the boys are learning to make brooms and to use the plow. The heathen method is to chop the ground with a big hoe, twelve by eight inches. They have plenty of cattle and can easily train them to pull the plow; so that Missionary Buchwalter is not only a messenger of the Cross, but a civilizer, opening up the way for commerce and trade.

Early in the morning we are again on our way across rugged mountains and down into the fertile Odzi valley, where mahogany and baobab trees abound. At mid-day we come to a mineral stream so warm that the boys cannot hold their hands in it. At nightfall we come to a kraal on the banks of the Odzi under some spreading trees. Our little green tent is pitched, and the evening meal prepared. Meantime, we exchange cheap muslin or salt for native meal for our boys. Everything is carried on by way of exchange. The carriers sit chattering around the fire, and when the pottage is ready it is taken out of the pot and put on to branches of trees, which answer the purpose of plates; and from this mess of red pottage each takes a little piece with his hand and dips it into a little gravy, made of beans or some other vegetable. After the meal, hands are washed, the large central fire is started and is kept burning all night, being our protection against wild animals. Around this fire, all gather for the evening service. Within half an hour they are rolled in their blankets sound asleep, with feet to the fire. The heathen are invited and in most cases come to these services, and in this way the precious seed is sown.

The following morning on we go, reaching the valley of the Sabi River, and descending into its sandy bed, which we traverse for miles. Crossing the river, our donkey fails us and we are dropped into the water, and helped out by the natives. A few minutes later the missionary's clothing is out to dry on some friendly bush, while he rests under a spreading tree. As soon as the clothes dry, away we go again, taking a kettle of water with us for the evening meal.

The country we are now in is a dry and thirsty land. We have to make a forced march of twenty-five miles before reaching the Devuli River. We go about twelve miles, camp under an immense baobab tree and cross the Devuli River early next morning. The day is very warm. We travel faster than our carriers and discover, near evening, that the wrong footpath has been taken and we are lost! No one can enter into that experience who has never been lost at night-time on the African veldt. There is an intense loneliness, which sometimes drives one mad. Fortunately there were two of us and we wandered on, hoping to come out right. Several times we were in dangerous positions—once making straight for a precipice! How earnestly we strained our eyes looking for a fire, and how intently did we listen for a human voice! At last we saw a fire in front of a hut. Blessed sight! No fire ever seemed more welcome. To this fire we went and in a few moments had made arrangements with one of the natives to pilot us. So with blanket over his shoulder, assegais (spears) and battle-ax in hand, away he went. About 8 P.M. we marched into Johannes' kraal, tired and hungry, for we had not eaten anything the whole day.

Johannes was sitting around the camp-fire with some of his leading men. When he saw us he sprang forward with a welcome on his lips. Soon we had two cups of warm milk. Did ever milk seem so refreshing? But we were separated from our food and blankets and had no idea where they were. What was to be done? Johannes procured a bundle of long grass and spread it out on the ground, and with our saddles as pillows we lay down to sleep. He made a big fire close by and then lay down himself near to the fire. Soon we were asleep. About midnight there was a tumult. The dogs began barking. Every one was awake in a moment. What was the matter? The first thought was wild animals. It proved to be our own carriers. We were glad to have our blankets, as the air was damp with dew and it was cold.

From this point we visited King Budzi, a day's journey from Johannes' kraal. The "Great Place" is on a flat-topped hill, which gives a commanding view of Budzi's realm. Soon he was on the spot to greet us, and a few minutes later we heard the bleating of a goat and knew that the king's gift was on the way. Our business was securing mission sites. Yes, he was willing, all right! "Then," we urged, "you must proceed with us to the native commissioners and say so yourself." A few minutes afterward, he returned to say that a messenger from the native commissioner had just arrived, calling him to a great meeting of several kings on the following Wednesday with the government representative. We looked at each other and said: Is this not strange—Wednesday! Why, that is the same day we had arranged to arrive at the commissioner's. A providential coincidence!

We arrived in due course on Wednesday and pitched our little tent under a great rock on a rugged kopje. Soon the air was rent by the weird, wild heathen chants of the various tribes. We knew the kings were arriving. They came to the same hill and camped close to us, so that soon the smoke of their camp-fires was curling up and commingling with ours; and messengers were sent to us for a little salt. How these heathen people prize salt! Even more than sugar. Four great heathen kings had arrived. Each one represented an immense territory and a large population. There was Budzi, tall, lean, with a weak amiability, still with cunning strongly marked on his face. There was that old warrior, Ziki, a very positive and determined character, strong and athletic, with a voice of thunder. He boasts of the many men he has laid low with his spear and battle-ax. There is Masuka, reticent and politic, or rather, I should say, diplomatic; and Vellum Mabeka, an old and agreeable man.

It was a picturesque sight to see all these kings squatted on the ground with their counselors (indunas) around them. Mr. Jackson, the government representative, gave Mr. Greely and myself seats of honor at his side.

Various matters of state were discussed and then Mr. Jackson turned to me and said: "Now, Mr. Wodehouse, what is your request?" "Sites for mission stations," I replied. My first request was to secure permission in Budzi's country, and when the matter was submitted to the King, his reply was: "What can I say? The umfundisi (missionary) comes to me every year. I am willing. I must agree."

We next asked Ziki, and with a voice of thunder he replied in one word: "Andede!" ("No!") As a matter of form, I asked Masuka and Vellum Mabeka, but I felt sure they would be influenced by that thunderous "No" of Ziki's. This concluded the business for the day. We retired to our various camps—not to sleep, though; for a heated and stormy debate continued in the camps of the kings all through the night. I knew some great question was agitating them. Johannes, in the morning, came and saw that it was on the subject of the missionary's demand. When Ziki got back to his camp, his counselors took exception to his decision not to have a missionary, and pressed him hotly on the matter. Said they: "Budzi has agreed to take a missionary; why can we not have one? Are you going to rule the country without us? We tell you that we want a missionary." This was kept up the whole night, and near dawn a compromise was arrived at. King Ziki said: "I will agree to take a missionary next year, if Budzi gets on all right with one."

You may imagine how we felt. Here was a battle royal between God and Satan—light and darkness. Satan has reigned sole master and ruler in these regions for centuries and will not give up easily.

A further surprise awaited me. I had not been home more than two weeks, when a special messenger was sent on foot over one hundred and fifty miles to inform me that Ziki had completely capitulated. After we left, he requested Charlie Sidembu, our native worker in that neighborhood, to come up and settle at his "Great Place," where there were many people. To this Charlie responded readily, so that we have now in that section of the country the consent of three important kings—Manzengunya, Budzi and Ziki. The others will follow.

The Help-Bringer

UPON this frame by pain and toil harassed,
Death falleth softly like a shining veil
Through which we see the figure nobly cast
Of one who did great deeds. At his command,
Corn-bearing ships to famine-lands set sail—
Our country's banners flying at the mast.
Through these poor hands the bread of life has passed
To starving millions. His endeavors clothed
Great hordes of desolated, naked folk.
The sick, the outcast, and the prisoner
Found shelter, ministry, uplift through him;
And little children of the tenements
Found play amid the daisies and the grass.

Now, where he lieth in his cerements,
The kindly thought of thousands weaves a pall
Fragrant and fair as were the flowers that bloomed,
And that the children brought him at his call
To spread above him ere he is entombed.
And o'er his grave the shining veil of death
Floats, soft and luminous, betwixt our sight
And all that once was he save his great deeds
Which greatly met the great world's bitter needs,
And which must live forever in the light—
Must live, though he and those he helped are dust—
For deeds like these the great God holds in trust.

—MYRTA LOCKETT AVARY.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

A Great Spiritual Campaign

TO take the world for Christ in a single generation! This tremendous and unexampled enterprise—the grandest campaign of all history—will begin in earnest with the assembling of the World's Missionary Conference in Edinburgh, Scotland, a few weeks hence. The spiritual forces of all Christendom will there be represented. Plans will be formed and ways and means discussed, and God's people in all lands will be invited to co-operate in this supreme effort to carry out the Great Commission.

Several years ago, it was believed that 1915 would be early enough to call such a conference; but events in all parts of the missionary world have moved with such rapidity that the most discerning students of our times agreed that it should be held sooner by five years. The aggressive advance of Mohammedanism makes insistent the question: Shall Africa be Mohammedan or Christian? The religious, educational and political changes at present so profoundly moving China, India, Turkey, Persia and Egypt reveal the most amazing opportunity that has ever confronted the Church of Christ. Delay at so crucial a moment would be disloyalty to the most precious interests of the Kingdom. There should result from this conference a more comprehensive grasp of the whole problem of world evangelism than ever before. It should result in a marked increase in the number of volunteers for service at the front, in a wiser disposition of Christianity's aggressive forces, and in a phenomenal outpouring of treasure to carry on the campaign to a successful issue.

Possibly the most notable meaning of the conference is its service to the cause of union among the people of God. The drift toward common ground in faith and the fervent desire for comradeship in service are not only noticeable; but concrete examples of both have occurred in many cases, both on the home and foreign fields. This intimate co-operation in planning to save the race must result in a blessed vision of the Master's prayed-for oneness of all his people. It will thus illustrate and promote the glorious ideal for which all believers stand—the hastening of the coming of his Kingdom.

The Lion-Hunter in Paris

WHEN Mr. Roosevelt recently faced, in the great amphitheatre of the Sorbonne, the most brilliant audience France could assemble—the very flower of her culture and science—he rose to the grandeur of the occasion. It was no common speech that he delivered, but a philippic, so filled was it with moral invective. In that hour and a half, which saw the climax of his oratorical efforts abroad, he gave to the European world his views on citizenship, work, wealth, progeny, patriotism and political and religious freedom. He expounded the modern moral law of civilized nations, of States, of communities and individuals, and did it all with such characteristically Rooseveltian energy and earnestness that he seems to have fairly carried the Parisians by storm as he did the Egyptians at Cairo a week or so before. He is truly the most versatile of living Americans, in whatever role he appears, whether as author, soldier, statesman, hunter, traveler, naturalist, lecturer, philosopher, or moralist. Little wonder that the Sorbonne cheered him to the echo. Conquering lions in the African jungle was a small thing in contrast with the conquest of the literary and scientific lions of Paris. That speech was the oratorical event of his life!

The Churches and Tuberculosis

A LARGE part of Jesus' earthly ministry was devoted to healing the sick. When in seventy thousand Christian pulpits the best ways of fighting the white plague, tuberculosis, were set forth on a recent Sunday, they were clearly in line with the work of the Master himself. The pulpit has always stood, as it always should stand, for humanity and for the assuagement of suffering, and these thousands of assemblages, uniting in prayer at the same hour for the healing of the nation and the staying of the plague, lent an influence to the efforts of science that cannot fail to bring a response from a prayer-hearing God. Where Faith and Science join hands in a common cause, the result is assured. By all means, let the churches keep up the campaign vigorously, by praying and working, until the object is accomplished.

Our Celestial Visitor

HALLEY'S comet, which will be at the outer threshold of our atmosphere next week, is not a new-comer, but an old acquaintance. The time has passed ages ago when its appearance in proximity to our orbit could excite terror and apprehension. In an excellent article printed in this issue, Professor Leland, a recognized authority on astronomy, tells all there is to know of this particular sky traveler and his wanderings, which have been recorded, as some writers assert, at regular 77-year intervals during 2,400 years past, although its periodicity was not discovered until 1682. When it becomes fully visible on May 18, let us hope that the weather will be clear and favorable so that all may see this "pilgrim of space."

Astronomical figures may well surprise us by their magnitude. According to the reckoning of scientists, the comet is traveling through space at the rate of 150,000 miles an hour. This month, its speed will be reduced from 1,679 miles per minute to 1,556 miles. On May-day, it was distant from us 63,000,000 miles, and on May 18 it will have approached within 12,000,000 miles. This, however, is fifty times further away from us than our satellite, the moon. The hour of the comet's brightest visibility will be 9 o'clock P.M., May 18, when it will be seen in Europe, Asia, Africa, California and doubtless other parts of the United States sweeping along at 150,000 miles per hour. Few, indeed, are living now who saw its last appearance, and when Halley's comet comes again, the babes of to-day who may then survive will be very old men and women. Will they know more than we know of these mysterious visitants of the skies, and of the operation of those divinely instituted laws—"the ordinances of the heavens"—that guide the stars in their courses? We believe they will, as all through the ages God has been ceaselessly revealing himself to man in his marvelous works. "An undevout astronomer is mad," wrote the poet Young. Surely, no one can view this latest visitor of the heavens without a feeling of reverence for the greatness and wisdom of the Creator and Controller of the universe, who has set all the stars in their courses and who guides them with a skill that is wholly beyond our limited human comprehension.

Coal

WHILE the government is receiving hearty support in its popular fight to prevent the exploitage of our national resources, it is cheering to turn to the figures given by Richard Hamilton Byrd on the coal measures of Alaska. Mr. Byrd is evidently well informed on the subject; yet his statements have been sharply criticised in Congress as exaggerations. He estimates that the total coal resources of Alaska, which are in danger of being controlled by greedy private interests and which belong to the nation, exceed two thousand billion tons! As we have consumed in the last ten years only 3,000,000,000 tons, it is evident that there is enough coal in our "farthest north" territory to supply the needs not only of this nation but of the whole civilized world for an indefinite period. Some of his figures are astounding in their magnitude. There are, he says, eight great Alaskan coal fields, aggregating 8,106,880 acres. Of these only 769,280 acres have been surveyed, the coal in which the government estimates at 15,104,500,000 tons. This, he declares, can safely be multiplied a hundred times, to arrive at an approximation of the fuel in the unexplored region. There are 99,000,000 acres of "totally unexplored territory in which coal is known to exist." To permit these vast deposits of the world's fuel to pass into the hands of exploiters would be a robbery so gigantic as to be unimaginable. The people, under standing the magnitude of their interests, and th danger which menaces them, will jealously watc the outcome of the struggle to preserve them. A the other features of the conservation campaign ar dwarfed to insignificance by the coal interests, i these figures are anywhere near the actual fact

Patient Service

AN old painter of Siena, after standing for long time in silent meditation before his can vas, with hands crossed meekly on his breast an head bent reverently low, turned away, saying "May God forgive me that I did not do it better! We may all say that of our past service; not dis pondently, but hopefully, believing that he will no only forgive us, but enable us to do better the thing that remain to be done. He calls us to no strange impracticable tasks, but to the steady tread of th patient servant, the faithful doer of daily good "Patient continuance in well-doing," that is al That is not too much for any of us. Let us ste out strongly, bravely, steadily. Look no longe with sad eyes at the failures of the time gone by.

"Go, sin no more"—these are the Saviour's words.
The past is past. True life is here and now.
With seal of God's forgiveness on thy brow,
Greet life's new morning, happy as the birds
That lift their songs when sunshine fills the air.
For God is Love, and love is everywhere.

General Notes

—FOR THE MOMENT, Paulhan is king of the air. He won th $50,000 prize by his flight from London to Manchester—a dis tance of 186 miles—defeating White, the English aviato Paulhan's success is regarded as demonstrating the practicabilit of regular long-distance aviation under favorable conditions May we not expect soon to hear of aeroplane flights from Ne York to Washington?

—AT A RECENT meeting of the Jewish societies in Berlin report were received relative to conferences with the Turkish authoritie on colonization. Representatives of large Jewish organization agreed that a union of Jewish colonization interests was advisable Speakers favored the Jewish settlement in Syria and Palestine and contended that the labor centres in the United States are nov overcrowded with Jews. It was explained that, as a whole, thes societies had no views in common with the Zionists, who are look ing forward to the re-establishment of the Jewish State in Pales tine.

—WOMAN SUFFRAGE sustained a set-back in the New Yor Legislature on April 27, when the lower house refused to dis charge the Judiciary Committee from further consideration o a resolution granting women the right to vote. The Suffragist will now focus their efforts on the State Senate, where th resolution has not yet been disposed of. During the debate i the Assembly, some very plain arguments were employed One opponent of the resolution said he wanted his wife a home; he did not want her to become liable to jury duty, nor t be locked up all night, serving on a mixed jury when her chil dren needed her at home. There were enough men to do man' work, etc. Another legislator said his mother and sisters ha threatened to turn him out if he voted for woman suffrage, an a third laid down the general principle that babies were o more importance than ballots. It was perhaps in the mind o some Solon to enliven the discussion by suggesting that th "big hat" craze had been the real cause of the set-back, whic had indefinitely postponed the day of victory.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, May 11, 1910

	PAGE
May Flowers	Cover
Immigration's High-Water Mark (Illustrated)	455
A Little Sanctuary. Sermon. By Rev. David James Burrell, D.D.	456
The Children's Pulpit. By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	457
Mr. Roosevelt at the Sorbonne	457
In the Quiet Hour	457
Halley's Comet Nearing Us (Illustrated) By Professor Samuel Phelps Leland, A.M., LL.D.	458
My Visit to Four African Kings (Illustrated)	459
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	460
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	461
The World's Missionary Congress (Illustrated)	462
Two Successful Christian Organizations (Illustrated)	462
Prominent People Talked About (Portraits)	463
Revival at East Orange, N. J. (Portraits)	463
Our Mail-Bag	464
Famous Christian Testimonies (Portrait)	464
Puzzling Feminine Problems (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	465
The Strawberry Handkerchief (Serial Story)	466, 467
The Folly of Anger. S. S. Lesson	468, 469
The Funeral of Prince Ito (Illustrated)	470
A Question of the Hour. By Howard H. Russell (Portrait)	471
Our Financial Department	472
Young People's Societies	474
A Young Preacher (Portrait)	475

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Funeral of Mark Twain

SAMUEL LANGHORNE CLEMENS, known universally as Mark Twain, quietly passed away at his beautiful home in Redding, Conn. The funeral service was held at the Brick Presbyterian Church in New York City, April 23. Besides the relatives, most of the leading literary men of the country who could get there were present. The service, which lasted only twenty minutes, was of the simplest character. The Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke read a Scriptural lesson, which led into his address, in which he said among other beautiful things: "Those who know the story of his friendships and his family life know that he was one who 'loved much' and faithfully, even unto the end. Those who know his work as a whole know that under the ambient and irrepressible humor which was his gift there was a foundation of serious thoughts and noble affections and desires. The mark of this higher humor is that it does not laugh at the weak, the helpless, the true, the innocent; only at the false, the pretentious, the vain, the hypocritical. We may say without doubt that Mark Twain used his gift, not for evil, but for good. The atmosphere of his work is clean and wholesome. He made fun without hatred. He laughed many of the world's false claimants out of court, and entangled many of the world's false witnesses in the net of ridicule. In his best books and stories, colored with his own experience, he touched the absurdities of life with penetrating but not unkindly mockery, and made us feel somehow the infinite pathos of life's realities. No one can say that he ever failed to reverence the purity, the frank, joyful, genuine nature of the little children, of whom Christ said, 'Of such is the kingdom of heaven.' Now he is gone and we are glad for his sake that, after many and deep sorrows, he is at peace, and, we trust, happy in the fuller light.

Rest after toil, port after stormy seas,
Death after life doth greatly please.

When Dr. Van Dyke had finished his address, Rev. Dr. Joseph S. Twitchell, of Hartford, offered the prayer. Dr. Twitchell had solemnized the marriage of Mr. Clemens, and had held the funeral services of the dear wife, and three of the children with which the union was blest. Dr. Twitchell, who was to have accompanied the body to Elmira, was called back to Hartford by a telegram informing him of the critical illness of his wife, and hurried from the church to his home, where his wife passed away. As Mark Twain was so democratic in his spirit, it was wisely arranged that all the people of the city who cared to might look upon his dead face. On the coffin plate was written "Samuel Langhorne Clemens, Mark Twain, 1910." It was our privilege to be among the first to look upon the dead author, who, clad in a suit of white and with bushy white hair and white mustache, seemed to be asleep. As we remembered how keen he was in intellect, how tender he was in sympathy, how perfect was his Americanism, how broad was his humanity; as we recalled his hatred of shams, his love for the truth, his love for children, and as we thought of his wit which set the whole world laughing, and made it better by the laugh, we breathed our tribute of gratitude and love. Mark Twain's writings had so much of seriousness under their humor that they are likely to be read to advantage a thousand years from now. Dr. Van Dyke introduced his funeral address by a reference to the payment of a debt of a quarter of a million dollars for which the author was morally but not legally responsible, and which it took him several years to remove, which was typical of the incorruptible integrity of the man. And the minister suggested that in the settlement of the indebtedness, his dead friend had followed out the injunction of the New Testament:

Provide things honest in the sight of all men. (Rom. 12:17.)

Funeral of "Mark Twain" in New York City, April 23

Death From a Pineapple Sting

Mrs. Helen M. Mitchell, a widow of Brooklyn, was preparing a pineapple for supper, and in handing it one of the thorns pricked her right hand. The spot became inflamed, but she paid no attention to it till the excruciating pain and rapidly swelling arm drove her in haste to the physician. The physician soon discovered that she had a case of blood poisoning and that he would have great difficulty in saving her life. He did everything that medical skill could suggest, but failed, and the woman died. Whether the thorn contained a poison natural to it, or a secretion from some deadly tropical insect such as the tarantula, is not known, as the pineapple spine was thrown into a refuse can by the woman, and carted off in the garbage wagon, and no examination of it could be made. By how slender a thread does this human life hang! A breath of poison in the air, the puncture of a needle, and all is over. What an uncertain and unhappy existence this would be if we did not know that there is something so much more real and substantial in the other life, which we enter through the gateway we call death.

For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away. (James 4:14.)

Howard University's Carnegie Library

President Taft and Andrew Carnegie spoke the other day at the dedication of the Carnegie Library at Howard University, Washington, D. C., the cornerstone of which Mr. Taft laid a year ago. President Taft said: "We do not envy Mr. Carnegie his money or the fortune that has attended his efforts. The thing we do envy him is the happiness that it must give him to do so much good for his fellow-men as he is doing every month in the year." Mr. Carnegie in his brief talk referred to the free library he made use of when a poor little messenger boy, and of his determination that if he ever got rich he would bring books to the common people of his country. It was a commendable ambition, and one that has brought untold blessing to this generation. He said that he owed everything in the world to the books he had read. There is one Book, the Book of books, which has been the inspiration of the highest art, the foundation of the truest literature, the basis of the best government, the life of the noblest civilization, the hope of the race. It is the guide to youth, the inspiration of manhood, the comfort of age. Any library, containing however many millions of volumes, is only a warehouse of ink and paper without it, and any library with it is enriched by the wisdom of the ages.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. (Ps. 119:105.)

Sermons on Tuberculosis

Those having charge of the war against the great White Plague requested the pastors of 70,000 pulpits in the country to preach a sermon on April 24 upon the danger and cure of tuberculosis. Many of them responded to the request. Among them the Rev. Dr. C. F. Aked, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, New York, said that he himself had been confined to his bed a year with consumption and had been cured by God's fresh air and sunshine and by nutritious food. His experience gave a new hope to those who have friends afflicted with this disease and to those who are fighting it for the public good. It is a compliment to the church that it should be asked to aid in the destruction of this greatest physical enemy of the race. Christ's ministry was one of physical healing, and so was that of his apostles. In most instances Christ cured the body in introducing the cure of the soul. By this fight against the great White Plague the American pulpit will have a blessed ministry of mercy, and will open the way for the cure of hundreds of thousands of souls that will turn to the church in contact with Christ's life for physical and spiritual health. And Jesus will say to the multitudes through the church that which he said to the woman who touched the hem of his garment:

Thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague. (Mark 5:34.)

Gardener Bower Bird

Mr. A. E. Pratt, the well-known naturalist and traveler, who has made expeditions to the wildest parts of the world, on a recent journey of exploration discovered the home and habits of the gardener bower bird, which he thus describes: "In ascending the western slopes of the Central Arfak Mountains from the north coast of Dutch New Guinea, on our way to the interior, we were fortunate in seeing several bowers of the rare 'gardener bower bird.' The brilliant colors are true to nature. They are little heaps of blue, yellow and red flowers, and seeds and black fungi, most daintily arranged in separate heaps to make a simple but beautiful entrance to the bower, a garden laid out with artistic precision; and in it the 'bower bird,' with crest erected, dances to his mate. The bower itself is five feet long and two feet high, and is built of dead twigs, supported in the centre by a cone, woven all around with an amazingly fine black, hairlike lichen; in fact, it is so finely and skilfully worked that it is almost difficult to believe that it has not been done by the hand of man." God made the little bird the architect with the plans for the home, the mason to build it, the gardener to plant the seeds of beautiful flowers, the husband to provide for his mate, and the father to arrange for the family. And in his happy service, the bird suggests the responsibilities and privileges of man as husband and father. The bower bird, in his love-making and his attempts to please and entertain his mate, might be copied to advantage by some of the husbands of to-day. The Hebrew nation made provision for a long honeymoon, in which the groom, in imitation of the bower bird, was expected to make his bride supremely happy.

When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall he be charged with any business: but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken. (Deut. 24:5.)

Blizzard Kills Fruit

The early spring had brought out the blossoms in the orchards and the plants from the ground in many parts of the country, and then the frost and the snow late in April caused widespread destruction. At the present time it is estimated that the following damage in money has been sustained by the various States: Iowa, $10,000,000; Indiana, $5,000,000; Michigan, $6,000,000; Nebraska, $2,000,000; Wisconsin, $3,000,000; Kansas, $10,000,000; Texas, $2,000,000; Illinois, $2,000,000; Ohio, $2,000,000; Minnesota, $1,500,000; Kentucky, $1,500,000. Beside the damage to orchards, many gardens and fields of oats and cotton were spoiled. We hope the damage has been overestimated. There is prodigality of life in nature. As though to mock the vanities and ambitions of earth, myriads of buds, insects, the young of animals, and children drop out of life at the start. Why, we do not know; the fact exists. Despite the destruction of the blizzard, there will be fruits, vegetables, bread and clothing enough and to spare. Job thus refers to the severe side of Jehovah's energy:

For he saith to the snow, Be thou on the earth. By the breath of God frost is given. (Job 37:6, 10.)

THE WORLD'S MISSIONARY CONGRESS

IN the beautiful old city of Edinburgh, the ancient Scottish capital, next month will be gathered a remarkable assemblage. About twelve hundred delegates, representing the whole of Protestant Christendom, will meet to plan the speedy conquest of the world for Christ! Every Christian is vitally concerned. Men and women will be there from the "far-flung battle-line" of missions—honored pastors, missionary secretaries and consecrated business men—all intent on the one absorbing purpose of making known to every creature the salvation of God in the present generation.

Rev. Henry K. Carroll

It is one of the most gratifying features of the approaching conference that the missionary societies of the continent, which have hitherto held aloof, are taking an active share in its labors. The work of preliminary investigation has been entrusted to eight commissions, composed of twenty persons each. Information has been secured from missionaries, native Christians, officers of missionary societies and students of various phases of missions. The results of their researches will form the basis of discussion. While it is expected that all missionary boards will be represented in the conference, its action on whatever subject will bind no one. Although merely advisory, it must exert a powerful influence in shaping future policies.

The work of the eight commissions may be briefly outlined as follows:

I. On Carrying the Gospel to All the World. The number and distribution of missionary forces, both foreign and native; the number of churches, stations, Sunday Schools, and other agencies; the circulation of the Bible and other literature, including a knowledge of the unoccupied fields.

II. On the Native Church and Its Workers. The line of inquiry in this case will bring out the present situation in reference to self-support; the various hindrances to the development of the native church and how these may be removed.

III. On Education in Reference to the Christianization of National Life. The urgent educational demands of China and many other countries constitute in themselves sufficient occasion for calling a world conference.

IV. On the Missionary Message in Relation to Non-Christian Religions. The aim here has been to translate the Gospel into forms of thought familiar to the various peoples, and to find those elements of Christianity which in all parts of the world have proved most convincing to non-Christians.

V. On the Preparation of Missionaries. The course of study in most theological seminaries should undergo important changes in order that the expecting missionary may receive proper equipment. This commission will suggest such modifications as are adapted to meet this demand.

VI. On the Home Base of Missions. This is perhaps the most important commission of all. A noble beginning has been made by such agencies as the Young People's Missionary Movement, the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and the Student's Volunteer Movement. This commission has studied how to spread missionary intelligence, promote intercession, enlist personal service, increase contributions, and fill the home ministry with the missionary passion.

VII. On the Relation of Missions to Governments.

VIII. On Co-operation and the Promotion of Unity. It is believed by many that to harmonize, federate and unify existing agencies, would result in more than doubling their power and efficiency.

Besides the discussions of the reports of the eight commissions, which must necessarily constitute the chief business of the conference, inspirational addresses by some of the ablest and most experienced missionary workers will occupy the evenings and other hours in the Assembly Hall, Synod Hall and other auditoriums. These will deal with the opportunities, resources and responsibilities of present-day Christians. The main object of these addresses will be to broaden the outlook, revive the zeal, and strengthen the faith of the leaders themselves. It is felt by all that the real success of the missionary movement is conditioned on the reality and depth of the prayer-life and the faith and ideals of the workers. Hence, devotional addresses and special prayer will intersperse the other exercises.

The conference will be in session from the 14th to the 24th of June. It is expected that fully two hundred and fifty societies will be represented. The number of official delegates will probably not exceed twelve hundred. The proceedings of the conference will be published in nine volumes, at a probable cost of about $3.75; but a single booklet will be published (in which the story of the great conference will be told) at a price within the reach of all.

Assembly Hall, Edinburgh

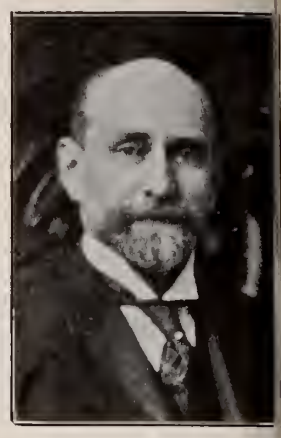
Many months ago the management issued a world-wide call to prayer that the approaching conference might realize its vast possibilities. Shall not every loyal soldier of the King respond with daily faith-filled petitions that, in the language of the call, "the conference may lead to a deeper sense of the oneness of the task which confronts the Christian Church in the non-Christian world, and to a close co-operation in the effort to accomplish it"?

J. B. PHILLIPS.

. . .

The Conference Officers

THIS is the third in the series. London first originated the idea, in the general missionary conference held in that city in 1888. The second was held in New York in 1900. The initiative for the third conference was taken by the joint action of the Scotch and American Foreign Missionary Societies. The officers of the present conference are:



Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D.D.

President — The Right Hon. Lord Balfour, of Burleigh, K.T.

Vice-Presidents— The Right Hon. Lord Reay, G.C.S.I.; The Right Hon. Sir John Kennaway, Bart., C.B., M.P.; Sir Andrew H. L. Fraser, K.C.S.I., LL.D.

The American Executive Committee are: Chairman, Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D.D.; secreta H. K. Carroll, LL.D.; members, Rev. Thomas Barbour, D.D., Rev. James L. Barton, D.D., R Harlan P. Beach, D.D., Hon. Samuel B. Capin, D. Rev. Henry N. Cobb, D.D., Mr. W. Harry Gra Rev. Walter R. Lambath, D.D., Rev. R. P. Mack D.D., Rev. W. Douglass Mackensie, D.D., Mr. Si McBee, Mr. John R. Mott, M.A., Mr. William Schiefflin, Ph.D., Rev. Paul de Schweinitz, D. Rev. Robert E. Speer, M.A.; Rev. Alexander Su erland, D.D., Rev. Canon L. Norman Tucker, M. Mr. R. M. Williams, Rev. L. B. Wolf, D.D., Mr. Jo W. Wood, Mr. J. Campbell White, New York.

If the world is to be saved in the twentieth c tury, it must be accomplished by the co-operation all Christians who love the Lord Jesus Christ sincerity and truth. Some common ground which men may meet in the spirit of brotherh must be found. This is the true meaning of World Missionary Conference: to devise means a plans to hasten the advancement of the kingd of God. The movement is the harbinger of a g rious Gospel day. The hour has come for pron and vigorous missionary action. The morni breaks, the dayspring arises, and we hear the vo of the Eternal God urging to Christian unity. T evangelization of the whole world is an espec trust. May the incense of prayer arise for gr and mighty results through the World Missiona Conference.

MARY BARTON COOKMAN

TWO SUCCESSFUL CHRISTIAN ORGANIZATIONS

A. M. ROBLEE, of St. Louis, has sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD an interesting account of the Brotherhood Bible Class of Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church of that city. In his letter he says:

"This class was organized a little over two years ago, with twenty members. It now has an enrolment of over three hundred men. The large enrolment was reached by the members working with great enthusiasm in a contest between the 'Reds' and the 'Blues,' the first contest being to reach an enrolment of one hundred men. Any man can join the class by attending three meetings and expressing a desire to join. The class meets at 9.30 every Sunday morning, in a large, separate room. The first fifteen minutes are occupied in singing Gospel hymns. One-half hour is occupied in study of the International Sunday School Lesson. No questions are asked the class members, and there is no discussion, the teacher presenting the lesson by the lecture method, using maps, etc.

"The class is called 'The Class That Does Things.' It is the aim to have an entertainment, lecture or social for the members and their families once a month. There are three permanent committees: Membership, Social, and Relief. Special committees are appointed to look after entertainments and other lines of work which may be taken up. Copies of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are distributed to members of the class each Sunday morning. This paper has been a source of great interest and inspiration to the members and their families."

The Famous Brotherhood Bible Class of Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church

. . .

Y. M. C. A. Branch 5,000 Strong

THERE is a lesson in the efficacy of personal work for every Sunday School, church and religious organization in the achievement of the West Side Young Men's Christian Association, No. 318 West Fifty-seventh Street, New York, the me bers of which by "personal work" have pushed enrolment beyond the 5,000 mark, making it largest Y. M. C. A. branch in the world. On Dece ber 31, 1909, the enrolment was 4,689—high-wa mark up to that time. "Personal work" meth were used by the members, who buttonholed frie and pointed out the advantages of a Y. M. C. membership. A large bulletin was posted e day, stating the increase. Soon the enrolment carried beyond the 5,000 line by the moment gained.

The Educational Department carries on largest work of its kind in the country, with 2, men enrolled in evening classes t year, and the numbe now larger. The Au mobile School alone an equipment valued $15,000, and in six ye 4,247 men have b graduated. In the e cational work there thirty-eight teach employed and forty- classes conducted. December 31, 19 there were 2,445 gy nasium members. der the direction of Religious Work Depa ment, nine hundred four meetings were h last year, three hund and four being s meetings in vari parts of the city.

PROMINENT PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

Judge Ben. Lindsey

The Poet Bjornson

Copyright by Pach Bros.

Governor Charles E. Hughes

Copyright by Clinedinst

Senator Leroy Percy

F there is one judge whose name has become a household word in this country, it is the Hon. Benjamin ndsey of Denver, Col., who has gained ne for his court and whose method dealing with youthful delinquents is ng copied far and wide. In fact, he far better known than some jurists o decide cases involving millions, or o guard the constitution in Washgton. His articles have been printed our foremost magazines and if the counts which have been written of man and his work were gathered y would make a small library. He now in the East to make arrangents for the publication of a book on ich he has been engaged for some he past. The judge's methods were sidered revolutionary at first, and re was much shaking of heads by wiseacres who would have pursued old method of treating a boy who d committed his first offense as an claw, destined to prey upon society ever, and consequently fit only for prisonment. The judge found a ter method. He knew that every l has the spirit of mischief, and that ny petty offenses are committed in spirit of bravado, rather than from y settled criminal instinct in the 's make-up. He put boys on their nor when no one but the judge would dit them with having any, and in great majority of cases he has not n disappointed. He has given hunds of youths in trouble a helping nd and they are now making firstss young citizens. Judge Lindsey s many years before him in which develop his juvenile court system, he was only born in 1869. He is a tive of Tennessee. He was educated the public schools. He became judge the County Court and judge of the venile Court in Denver in 1900, and rtly after originated his famous stem. He has written a book on the problem of the children, which has been widely read, and he is also the author of several laws passed by the State Legislature of Colorado, such as the Juvenile Court Law, and others of a sociological nature.

. . .

THE appointment of Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York to succeed the late Justice Brewer in the United States Supreme Court is a fitting recognition of distinguished ability and of valuable public services. There are many who will regret Governor Hughes' decision to withdraw from the tumultuous life of politics. His retirement is a distinct loss to the Empire State, to which he has given a clean, efficient, upright administration. He has been the foe of gambling and of graft in every form, and it would be difficult to point to any instance in his career as Governor that has not been marked by careful and conscientious consideration of the people's interests. In the opinion of many good citizens, Governor Hughes is a public servant who might have measured up to the Presidential stature; but all dreams or ambitions which he may have cherished in that direction are now laid aside. Yet, even though he may withdraw from the activities of public life, he will still remain an imposing figure and one for whom the American people will continue to entertain a warm personal interest and a generous admiration.

. . .

ONE of the most hard-fought Senatorial contests in recent years was the one in Mississippi, which resulted in the victory of Hon. LeRoy Percy, a noted lawyer of that State. Senator Percy succeeds Senator Gordon, whose farewell speech, pleading for the abolition of all sectional lines and feeling, caused such favorable comment. Senator Percy is confident that the people of his State are with him and has even declared his willingness to stand again for election within a specified period in order that no one can doubt his right to Senatorial honors. His frankness and fearlessness have won him many friends both North and South.

. . .

HARDLY had Mark Twain passed away before another great figure in the world of letters, which has no geographical divisions, laid down his work and went over to the great majority. Bjornstjerne Bjornson, poet, novelist, dramatist, reformer and publicist, died on April 26. It is a long row of titles, yet the great Norwegian deserved them all, as he had won a reputation in each sufficient for any man to be acclaimed above his fellows. Strictly speaking he was a man whose activities will be identified with the nineteenth century, for ill health for several years has prevented him from carrying on the various lines of work he loved so well, and several times when he has been ill the papers have had rumors of his death. Although famous throughout all Scandinavian countries, he has been almost equally so in Great Britain and America, and especially so in France. In fact, a number of years ago a prominent French writer referred to Bjornson as "the Hugo of the North." He was born in December, 1832, at Kvikne, Oesterdalen, Norway. His father was pastor of the small village church. He was an imaginative youth and dearly loved to listen to stories of the Bible heroes and to the weird historic and legendary tales of the Northland. The beauty of the country about Noesset, where the family moved while he was yet a small boy, left a lasting impress on his poetic mind. He was educated at Molde and the University of Christiania. He began to write early, and his peasant stories written before 1860 have hardly been surpassed. Then he made his home in Rome and in Copenhagen. In Italy he composed Kong Sverre and Sigurd Slembe, considered two of the noblest productions of Norwegian literature, and on his return he was granted an annual pension by the Parliament of Norway. He became interested in politics and for a time was an ardent radical. He came to America in 1880, and for several months lectured in different cities of the United States. Then he took up his abode in Paris. His later works dealt largely with sociological and religious questions.

All Scandinavian countries were plunged in mourning when the news was flashed over the wires from distant Paris that the great writer was no more. The King of Norway sent a message of sympathy to Bjornson's widow in which he said that his death was a loss to Norway which could not be repaired. The Storthing, the parliament of Norway, voted him the unusual honor of a State funeral and tributes were paid to his memory by the president of the Storthing and by several deputies.

Although a Norwegian by birth, he spent several years in Denmark, where he was universally honored. It was arranged to receive the body at Copenhagen with royal honors and to transport it on a warship to Christiania, while a fleet of Danish warships acted as the escort. The streets were hung with mourning emblems, which were all the more effective from the fact that they were a true outward sign of the inward grief of all classes of people from King to peasant. Many came in from outside districts to see the funeral procession pass from the railway station to the docks.

REVIVAL AT EAST ORANGE, N. J.

HE recent evangelistic services conducted jointly in East Orange, N. J., by the Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church and the Park Avenue Church of the Disciples of Christ proved to be the largest and most interesting religious undertaking ever attempted in that city. ant Colfax Tullar, who has had general charge evangelistic work for twenty years, and who is member of the former church, conducted each vice. He was assisted by his associate, Isaac H. redith, the singer, and Mrs. Ida Hirst Gifford, pianist, as well as the pastors of the two urches—Rev. Dr. William Wallace Youngson and v. L. N. D. Wells. Afternoon services, which consted of prayer and Bible reading, were held at the thodist Church, while the evening services were nducted at the Church of the Disciples. The ening meetings were largely attended. Over one ndred confessed Christ.

Mr. Meredith's choir of 150 male and female ces was chosen from the best singers in each of two churches. Everybody in the audience sang, nt and sinner alike, and the large edifice fairly verberated.

Isaac H. Meredith — Grant Colfax Tullar

Several special meetings were conducted during the series, one of the most noteworthy being a musical service entitled, "The Story of the Pink Rose." The church was decorated with six hundred beautiful pink roses, which were distributed the next day to the "sick, sorrowful and sinful" of the Oranges and Newark, by one hundred volunteer workers.

Another special meeting which attracted widespread attention was the great mass meeting for men only. Mr. Tullar spoke on the subject "Soul Poison," choosing his text from Ezek. 18: 20, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Another feature was "The Big Meeting for Little Folks," ranging in age from six to sixteen years. Fully five hundred children listened with rapt attention to the address by Mr. Meredith. The movement was brought to a successful close on Sunday, February 27, when nearly the entire day was devoted to service. The programme commenced with a "Sunrise" service. In the afternoon, the Bible Schools of both churches held a rally meeting in the Disciples Church. No collections were taken at these meetings. Before the movement started, sufficient money was contributed to defray all the expenses.

Questions and Answers

In forwarding MSS. to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, enclose stamped envelopes for return, if unavailable.

I. L. H., Windsor, N. Y. What is the proportionate ownership of wealth and land in England? And where does the financial thermometer stand in the United States of America?

We have been unable to secure statistics on the ownership of land in England. Write to the Secretary of the Treasury for information in regard to United States finances.

P. A. N., Danville, Ky. Do the second and fourth verses of the sixth chapter of Genesis warrant the belief that the "sons of God" and the "daughters of men" were two distinct types of people—superior and inferior?

The "sons of God" were the descendants of Seth, who had maintained, in a measure, their true spiritual filial relationship to God by obedient, upright lives, and who could still look up to him as a Father. On the other hand, the Cainites, by godlessness and disobedience, had been cut off from this spiritual relationship, and in the reckoning of genealogy from Adam, the Sethites had disowned the descendants of Cain. Alienated from God, the offspring of Cain became the "children of men." This is the view taken by leading scholars, though there are others who hold differently.

S. V. C., Lakeville, Nova Scotia, Canada. Tell me through the columns of OUR MAIL-BAG what the Prince of Wales' given name is, and his eldest son.

The full name of the Prince of Wales is George Frederick; his eldest son's name is Albert Edward.

A. M. H., Cincinnati, O. What would one have to do to become a missionary? I live in Cincinnati and am a girl of seventeen.

Write to Mr. A. P. Fitt, Moody Institute, Chicago, or to Secretary, Oberlin College, Oberlin, O., for instructions as to course of training necessary. Communicate also with the mission board of your own denomination.

L. H., Wilkesbarre, Pa. Are I. Peter 3: 3 and I. Tim. 2: 9 to be taken literally—as forbidding the wearing of jewelry and fancy clothes?

There is no injunction against neatness and suitable apparel. The warning in the passages referred to was directed against vanity and inordinate dress, and the foolish adornments which prevailed in the society of that age.

C. F. W., Hamilton, N. Y. What means the term Latin-American?

Latin America is the term used for "the nations south of the United States whose people are mostly descended from a union of the Latin races of the Old World with the native races of the new." The Latin races of the Old World are those races whose languages have been derived from the Latin, such as the Italians, Portuguese, Spanish, French, etc. The Spaniards and Portuguese were the Latin races most closely identified with Latin America.

A. J. M., Philadelphia, Pa. Why the difference in the language used in the Lord's Prayer as given by Matthew and Luke, and why the fact that the sentence in the everyday version "forgive us our trespasses," etc., does not appear as part of the work of either of the two inspired writers? If it be said that the three versions mean exactly the same thing, why does Luke's report of the words dictated by the Lord himself not take in the closing sentence "for thine is the kingdom," etc.? I have sought this information from ministers, and not having received a satisfactory answer, I now apply to you.

There is no absolute evidence that the prayer was taught on one occasion only. Matthew reports it as given during the Sermon on the Mount, and Luke (who was not one of the twelve) places its delivery after the close of the Galilean ministry, but mentioning no time or place. Many of the best scholars regard the position of the prayer in Matthew as unhistorical and give the preference to Luke, although it by no means follows that even he gives the original form. If delivered on more than one occasion, the prayer may have had one form for a small group of disciples, and another form for the whole body of Jesus' followers. And this might account for the presence of a clause in one version which was absent in the other. The word "trespasses" may be regarded simply as a variant. Furthermore, it is conjectured that Luke made certain changes in the expressions of the prayer, to make its meaning clearer to Gentile hearers. Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem, is the first writer who expressly mentions the use of the Lord's Prayer in religious worship, but it was not generally used in Christian churches during the early days. There is no evidence that it was employed by the apostles. Luke omits the closing doxology, and although it appears in Matthew's Gospel as we now have it, it is not to be found in any of the early manuscripts, and is probably an interpolation due to liturgical use.

W. C., Western, N. Y. 1. Where is Martinez de Campos, who commanded forces in Cuba during the rule of Spain? Tell something of his life. 2. Is Spain a republic or monarchy? 3. What is its general religious faith?

1. General Martinez de Campos died in 1900. He was born in 1831, and first served in the war in Morocco in 1859-60. He distinguished himself in the Carlist war in Spain. He commanded in Cuba in 1877, where he defeated the insurgents, and again in 1895. He left before the war with the United States began. 2. Spain is a constitutional monarchy. 3. The Roman Catholic is the State church. There are only a few Protestants.

A. C. R., Toronto, Ont. I have a $50 Confederate States of America bill dated Richmond, February 17, 1864, and payable three years after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States. Can you tell me, through THE MAIL-BAG columns, if this has any market value and where I might dispose of same?

It is only worth a few cents, as there are a great many of the bills in existence.

S. A. S., Chicago. Tell me who Nobel is that made provision for the Nobel prizes. Where born and nationality.

Alfred J. Nobel was a Swedish scientist, the inventor of dynamite. He died in 1896 and left his fortune of $9,000,000 to found a fund the interest of which should be distributed to those who had mostly contributed to the good of humanity. It is divided into five prizes: For the most important discovery in physics, the most important chemical discovery, most important medical discovery, one to the person who in literature has done the most excellent work of an idealistic tendency, and one who has done the most for peace. Full information may be obtained from the Board of Directors of the Nobel Institute, Stockholm, Sweden.

J. L. G., Pigeon Forge, Tenn. Do we at this day and time have such an affliction (or anything corresponding to it) as being "possessed of evil spirits"? Was, or is it a disease of the body, mind, or soul? Which?

All the evangelists wrote of this affliction as by no means rare or astonishing, but rather as a very sad but common form of human suffering, which science in our own day would be apt to refer to some obscure disease, such as epilepsy, hysteria, St. Vitus' dance, mania in some form, or chronic melancholia. There are certain physical conditions to-day in which the worst part of the victim's nature is actively disclosed and a demon seems to master the man. There are some who take the view, however, that demoniac possession was peculiar to that age; that it was a state kindred to madness and one in which self-consciousness and individuality were obscured and the whole being was under the domination of an evil power; but the modern idea is that disease and vice and long habits of sin and indulgence were of themselves sufficient to create the condition described in the Gospels.

H. H. W., Trenton, N. J. Are Galloway and Galway two words for the same district in Great Britain?

No. Galloway is a district in southwest Scotland on the English border; Galway is in Ireland and there is a city of that name.

Amos H., Andover, O. Almost all that we know about prehistoric races is speculative. Science has supplemented these speculations by the testimony of the rocks and caves, and by the various monuments and inscriptions found in Egypt, Bahylonia, and Assyria; but the amount of information is still meagre. There is a mention of giant races, who lived before the Flood (see Gen. 6: 4), but nothing is known of their origin. The Bible itself gives no clue to the age of the human race. It merely says: "In the beginning." Ussher's chronology, based largely on Jewish chronology, is at variance with the chronologies of Petavius, Hales, Jackson, and Bunsen. As an example: Ussher places the Creation of Adam in 4004 B.C.; Bunsen, 20,000 B.C.

H. M., Halifax, N. S. Where in Africa is Rorke's Drift and when did the famous battle of the name occur?

Rorke's Drift is on the boundary of Natal and Zululand, South Africa. A small number of British soldiers here beat back a large Zulu army and saved the colony, January 22, 18[illegible].

J. L. C., Chambers, Neb. Who is the author of the lines, "The mills of God grind slowly yet they grind exceding small"?

They are from the German poem, "Retribution" by Friedrich von Logau, which Longfellow translated. The next line is: "Tho' with patience he stands waiting, with exactness grinds He all."

R. B., Worcester, Mass. What does our word sacrament come from?

It comes from the Latin sacramentum, meaning an obligation or oath. Less often a mystery.

Famous Christian Testimonies

W. Allen White

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, owner and editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, is a national character. His magazine and newspaper work has made him one of the foremost of American writers, and his books are read everywhere. His treatment of the problems of the day is bold and original and his literary work proves him a close and observant judge of human nature and of social conditions. To Editor White was addressed the question:

"Is the spirit of Jesus more dominant in business and public affairs than when you entered active life, and is it an advantage or not for a public man to-day to be known as a professing Christian?"

His reply, which is given below, is one that will merit careful reading. It is the answer of a keen and comprehensive observer and accurately reflects the religious progress which is so marked a feature at the present time.

THE EMPORIA GAZETTE

December 20, 1909.

"I feel entirely sure that there never has been a time in the history of the world when the Christian message was more deeply embedded in the life of the people than it is to-day. More and more are our institutions reflections of the spirit of Christ. More and more are the relations of the people to one another honest and kind and simple. I think there never has been a time in the world when all men had so much good will toward one another, nor when this good will was so much a part of human institutions, political and commercial and religious.

"It seems to me that the time has passed when the Sunday School politician or business man may be sneered at. It was a fashion twenty years ago to sneer at Sunday School men, but to-day more and more the bad man is getting out of politics and the good man is taking his place, and generally speaking, the good man is anchored to some church or creed which he is not at all ashamed to proclaim and testify to."

W. Allen White

Miscellaneous

L. G. P., Batesbury, S. C. No.

If F. D. G., Louisville, Ky., will send full name and address, we will send reply by mail.

If M. E. J., Farwell, Minn., will send full name and address, we will send reply by mail.

Subscriber, Oakdale, Calif. Certainly, Baptists are Protestants, and good Protestants, too.

C. M. S., North Bend, Ore. We have never seen the expression abbreviated. Probably the first letters of the words would be used, but it would be practically meaningless.

If Davis P., of Washington, D. C., will send full name and address and repeat question we will give answer in full. We cannot answer anonymous communications in THE MAIL-BAG.

Reader. The passage in Rev. 20: 5 is found in the Greek Testament, and there is no authority for the statement that it was inserted by those who translated the Greek into English.

J. L. A., Philadelphia. No one can dogmatize concerning the millennium. It is the duty of Christians both to work and pray and look for the second coming, and to carry out the work, meanwhile, of preaching the Gospel to all nations.

W. B. G., Somerset, Ky. There is nothing definite known regarding Jesus' boyhood after twelve years, up to the time when he began his public ministry. There are traditions which state that he went to India, but nothing authentic on the subject.

Mrs. H. S. F., Asseo, Minn. There are many passages on the subject. See Rom. 16: 20; II. Cor. 2: 11; II. Tim. 2: 26; James 4: 7; Eph. 4: 27, etc. When Christ is in the heart and controlling the life, the enemy is powerless. He may set snares and temptations in our path, but he cannot enter the heart without our consent.

Tom C. H., Wilmington, N. C. History shows that there have been excesses on both sides, Catholic and Protestant, but these are things of the long past and it is right that they should be now left to a kindly oblivion. It is no part of the duty of a Christian pastor to stir up strife but to preach Christ and him crucified. Separationalists may take the other view; but in this Republic, where all religions are tolerated, is folly and wickedness to incite sectarian animosities.

J. L. H., Paces, Va. There is certainly nothing wrong in violin or banjo playing. The enjoyment of music is one of the most agreeable of pleasures. You should make an effort to attend church, even if you cannot attend regularly. The Scripture admonishes us not to "forsake the assembling of ourselves together," and there is a special blessing on the observance of the ordinance of religion — "honoring the Lord in his temple." We know there are many situated so that they cannot attend regular service, and we sympathize with them in their deprivation of a very great privilege. One may be a Christian and yet not be perfect. There is no one perfect, save one, that is, God.

O. E. G., Grand Rapids, Mich. In my youthful days, I found the enclosed lines in the Sabbath Day Miscellany, in my father's library. They impressed me so deeply that I committed them to memory:

Could we with ink the ocean fill,
And were the skies of parchment made,
Were every stalk on earth a quill,
And every man a scribe by trade;

To write the love of God above
Would drain the ocean dry;
Nor could the scroll contain the whole
If stretched from sky to sky.

There are several variants of the same in circulation. The original is said to have been written on the walls of a cell.

Puzzling Feminine Problems

Women in Council

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

WE have not yet had time enough to receive many letters for this new department, so interesting to every woman and so likely to useful to mothers and daughters, but a few have me in from which quotations are made this week. ere is a problem that puzzles one woman. Can ou who read offer her a solution?

. . .

Discouraged Husband "In our married life of fifteen years no two people in the whole world have had more happiness an Ed and I. We started out together with a nall capital of money and a big fund of courage, od cheer and confidence in God and ourselves. We lled together, both of us energetic, both willing to ork, both trying to save a little and invest our savgs for the future. We have three children—two ys and a girl—and we have been blessed with alth and a measure of prosperity. A year ago my sband was persuaded to put everything he had to are in the purchase of a mill and machinery. It as one of those old-fashioned mills that grind by ater-power; very few of them are left in our part the country. Ed knew nothing out the business, and, of course, ither did I. We mortgaged our tle home, and, to make a long story ort, have done nothing but lose ery month in the last twelve. We e poorer than when we began. I am t so discouraged as my husband is. e has lost his grip, says he has ined us, and sits in the house from orning till night, hardly speaking, metimes smoking his pipe and somemes reading trashy novels. He is so oss to the children that they are fraid to come near him. Whenever nybody knocks at the door, we both el sure it is a collector coming with dun. What to do next is our ques on; but my husband has not the solution to answer it. The mill ands idle and is the monument of our lly."

What counsel have you to offer this ife and husband? How are they to xtricate themselves from their slough f despond? Why does a man break own completely when things go rong, while a woman generally has fficient elasticity to try again? Any ne who can contribute so much as a entence or two in illumination of the erplexing condition in which this arried couple are placed should post letter to the editor of this page beore the week ends. Here is an exract from another and different kind f letter:

. . .

A Good Example "When my good man is away, as he often is on business for several eeks at a time, I am at pains to keep up our habit f family prayers. The children and I read a chapter of the Bible verse about in the morning after reakfast, after which we kneel and repeat "Our Father in Heaven" in concert. My cousin Rufus nd his wife, who are not church-going people, are o visit us before long and will arrive when my husband is on the road. I do not like to conduct prayers in their presence, nor to let the children ee that I feel shy in doing so. The children are keen observers, although they are young, and if nother has prayers in a bedroom they will guess hat she is ashamed to have them before Cousin Rufus. Tell me what to do."

The only thing to do is to go on with the family ife as usual when guests are in your home. They are at liberty to absent themselves from prayers, if hey choose. You are not at liberty to omit a custom that is not only beautiful and hallowed, but inks your home life with God and heaven. Consider that you now have an opportunity to set a good example.

A third letter, and, by the by, the only remaining one from which a quotation can be made this week, outlines a wife's embarrassment when she has a social disposition and her husband dislikes company. Here is her dilemma:

. . .

Who Shall Be My Escort? "Before our marriage, John was my most devoted attendant everywhere. He went with me to call on friends, to evening socials, and such places of amusement as we both enjoyed, and seemed to have as much satisfaction in going about as I did myself. We had been married hardly a month when he declared that his intention was to settle down, and said it was a waste of time and strength either to entertain friends or visit the neighbors. As for concerts and socials, John flatly refuses to accompany me to them, although he does not object to my going with any one else who asks me. A young man in the neighborhood, who is evidently sorry for me, has volunteered his services; but I do not like to be seen too often with him when I have a husband who is perfectly able to be my companion, if he were not, unfortunately, too selfish to give me pleasure."

In this case the husband is much to blame, and should not forget that he is pulling out a plank from the edifice of his home, which may result later on in its desolation. The wife is right in her conviction that her husband should be her ordinary escort in public.

. . .

The Quick Retort People of hasty tempers that go off at a touch and explode like powder on which has dropped a lighted match ought to be careful not to speak without thought. We seldom regret what we do not say, but many a time we are humbled and sorrowful because of a quick retort that should not have left our lips. Strangely, the temptation to utter hasty words assails us oftenest when we are in the company of those whom we love best. It is almost impossible in the close intimacy of family life to avoid differences of opinion and consequent friction unless people are gifted with great amiability and considerable self-control.

Children should be taught that it is a defect in character to be careless of the feelings of others. As for being proud of a quick temper and pluming ourselves upon inability to control it, we ought to regard such an attitude as a sign of weakness. One almost never hears any one boast of being patient, gentle and tranquil, the passive virtues being thought by many to be much less grand and noble than their opposites; yet "better is he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city."

. . .

May-Time Pleasure "Do you recall," said one friend to another the other day, "the May-times of our youth?" The women who were talking together were both past their meridian, although they were active in everything in which their juniors engaged. Occasionally they enjoyed dropping into reminiscences of the past when they had been children at school in the middle of the last century. To their granddaughters the period seemed as remote as that of the Roman Empire. In reality, contrasted with the long record of history, the time was very brief. Longer or shorter, as they glanced back over fifty years their life's morning loomed vividly in recollection. This was the special topic of their talk as they recalled a certain May festival in which one of them had been queen of the flowers and the other a fairy queen. Two stout old ladies now, becomingly dressed in black silk and soft lace; two little dainty figures arrayed in white, one wearing a wreath of flowers and the other carrying a slender wand in that past spring day. Yet the same consciousness that had been theirs in childhood was theirs in life's afternoon.

"Whenever I think of our May-times," said the one who had first spoken, "my thought goes back to your mother sitting up in bed after an illness and stitching rows of green ivy leaves all around the sheer white skirts of your costume as the fairy queen. I have the picture of her before my eyes. How children take for granted the many little things their mothers do for them! They never seem aware that efforts cost anything, if it be a mother who plans and toils for them."

"Ah," said the other, "it comes back to us later. I wonder whether my grandchildren would enter into a May-queen festival with a tithe of the ardor and excitement it brought to us in those long-past golden days!"

She was answered by a rush across the threshold of merry young girls who had hurried from school to tell grandmother and aunty about the wonderful schemes on foot for combining the crowning of a May-queen with a picnic to the woods. The voices were as eager, the faces as bright, the laughter as mirthful as these had been in the days the old ladies remembered. Each coming generation lives again the sweet old story that is ever new, of life, love and gladness. The May-time never ceases to be the blissful tocsin that rallies the joyousness of youth.

GATHERING WILD-FLOWERS

The darlings all return once more
When Spring comes tripping to the door;
The dandelions star the grass,
O'er valley low and mountain pass;
By trodden way and lonely place
Some flower uplifts a smiling face;
And cheerily the children run
To gather blooms beneath the sun.

BY STARLIGHT

By Eleanor R. Johnson

PILGRIM, despair not, though all hope seem gone;
The night is darkest just before the dawn;
And even if this one should appear to be
The everlasting night, eanst thou not see
The stars, the beacon stars that shine above?
They teach thee, Pilgrim, Faith and Hope and Love.
Faith, that the God who these created hath,
Lord of all Life, and even Lord of Death,
Is all omnipotent to give to thee
His noblest creature, immortality.
Hope, that beyond each immemorial star
Thy heaven and thy dear Lord and Father are;
Love, all-abiding love, for this thy Lord,
Who is by all these mighty stars adored,
Who holds within His hand thy petty fate;
Love for thy Father, all-compassionate,
Who sees and pities us, his children frail,
And makes these stars across the heavens sail
That we, in looking up, may surely know
Them sent to guide our footsteps here below.
Pilgrim, look up! Behold the beacons shine!
What better proof eanst have of Love Divine,
That cares for thee, than that through all the night
Thy God hath sent the stars to give thee light?
Pilgrim, look up! And, kneeling, turn thy face
Toward the sky as toward a holy place,
And pray, O Pilgrim, pray that thou mayst be
A star, a beacon light, for all to see
And learn divinest Faith and Hope and Love
From thy clear shining, like the stars above.

The Strawberry Handkerchief

A Tale of Colonial Days in Old New York

By AMELIA E. BARR

CHAPTER TEN

The Unknown Helper

WITH all her charms around her Lady Rose entered. Her smile made sunshine on her face, her eyes rained sweet persuasion, her exquisite form clothed with captivating fitness in a blue cloth suit—its jaunty pilot coat lined with white satin, and trimmed with gold lace and gold buttons bearing the Harley crest. On her head was a sailor's cap of blue cloth, gold-banded and tasseled, and at her throat there was a small golden anchor fastening the flowing ends of her white satin neckerchief.

Swift and graceful as a bird, her movements gave no one time to meet her. She was at the breakfast table when Virginia rose with a joyful cry of welcome. She lifted her mouth for Virginia's kiss, and as their faces touched found a moment in which to whisper: "Everything is to our wish, my dear."

"Sit down with us, my dear," said Madame; "a cup of coffee will do you good."

"Indeed," she cried with a pretty exaggeration, "I am thankful to be again among the affectionate mortals who drink coffee."

"You must have had coffee in Boston?"

"I assure you, Madame, the Bostonians drink little coffee. Tea is tho fashionable drink. Now and then I smelled the dear little brown berry, and at intervals I even tasted it, but coffee like this, Madame!"

"If they get it from Java, it is all right," said the Captain.

"Faith, Captain! I would not say as much as that. Coffee is a dangerous drink, especially in such times as these."

"Dangerous! All nonsense!"

"But, Rose," asked Virginia, "why is coffee specially dangerous in these times?"

"Because the little spirit in the berries is a radical, rebellious spirit. Just as soon as men get dissatisfied, and begin to talk treason, and riot and rebel, they fly to the coffee houses. They must have coffee. Look at the New York merchants!—every one knows that all their treason was hatched at Burns' coffee house, and the Merchants' coffee house, and such like places."

"My word!" cried the Captain, "I never heard the like. What a pot of mischief thou hast been brewing every morning, Katrina."

"Yes, and you see what has come of it," answered Rose, nodding her head with an air of absolute conviction. "In plain truth, coffee is a treasonable drink. It makes men dissatisfied and unruly."

"But you like it, my dear—how is that?" asked Madame.

"I own the fault, Madame. It is my temper. Naturally I am unreasonable and unruly."

By this time Virginia was weary of Rose's badinage. Her anxiety about her own affairs was so great that she could hardly bear the loitering at the breakfast table. With eyes full of pathetic entreaty she looked into her friend's face. Rose only answered with an assuring smile. Virginia said it of the delaying drink, "she was sure coffee was quarrelsome—even selfish and ill-natured."

"Such foolish words you talk, Virginia," interrupted Madame. "It is a good spirit that dwells in the little brown berry. So social, so kind, so generous! Yes, that is so!"

"We will allow its goodness, Madame, and to the last three words she gave an air and tone that said as plainly as speech, "Be patient."

Virginia was comforted by them, and she answered Rose's question in a manner not anticipated. "Miss Colden told me, Rose, that you wrote pretty verses, and that her father thought you might write stories well."

"You should not have let Miss Colden slander me, Virginia. Rose Harley write books! And of all indiscretions, write poetry! Sure, if I did not sleep for a three months, I should never come to that pass! And if it were really so, my friends ought not to let me go abroad—the next of my caprices might be the state of matrimony." And she drew Virginia's head close, and whispered a few words so softly in her ear that only one of them, "Arent," was distinguishable. Both girls laughed, and Rose looked round the table with such speaking, beaming eyes that Madame was nonplussed, and let the coffee she was pouring into the Captain's cup overflow the brim. For in that steady glance something was told with all the swift, mystical intelligence of a dream. A moment or two of absolute silence followed, and then Madame turned, looked round the room, and asked with an air of perplexity, "What is it?"

It was apparently Batavius; and as soon as he saw Lady Rose, he had an intention of silently withdrawing, for he was wearing a shabby and unbecoming suit; but Rose was too instantly sensible of his presence to permit this runaway vanity.

"Here is Captain De Vries," she cried. "Now we shall have some sensible conversation."

And Batavius could not resist such flattering words. He came forward with all his natural self-satisfaction, explaining—in spite of Rose's petulant denials—the impropriety of his rough dress in her presence, and his desire to present himself in all the extraordinary splendor due to the proudest moment in his life. And greatly to Virginia's surprise, she made room for his chair at her side, and advised him to ask Madame for a cup of her excellent coffee. With many apologies Batavius refused the coffee, and Rose nodded her handsome head with an air of satisfaction. "I was sure you would refuse," she said.

Then Captain Van Vroom took up the explanation, while Batavius stroked his chin with his left hand, and assumed a thoughtful, critical attitude; and Madame and Virginia wondered what this sudden friendliness of the once scornful beauty might mean.

"There may be something in Lady Rose Harley's deductions," said Batavius with slow, considering speech.

"Something!" cried Rose indignantly; "there is everything, I assure you. Just remember what coffee drinkers New Yorkers are—and no doubt that fact accounts for their behavior."

"Well, then," asked Madame, "did the Bostonians, drinking tea, behave better?"

"There is where my argument fails," said Rose unblushingly. "I am bound to say their recent conduct has been abominable. We were told that Boston—or towns near it—added to all the mummeries of New York the absurdity of a funeral for Liberty. It was a childish thing to do, and my father was amazed that men of wealth and position should have taken part in it."

"The men of wealth and position knew what they were doing," said Captain Van Vroom. "Such mummery they needed not. No, indeed!

Continued on next page

A kiss, a hug, and Baby slips off his mother's lap into a bowl of clean, warm water.

There he finds two wonderful thing—a Sponge and a cake of Ivory Soap.

Mother squeezes the sponge and water runs all over baby's arms, his legs and his little pink toes.

Then she takes the soap, does something with it—and baby is covered with a soft, creamy substance that takes all the dirt away and makes his skin as smooth as satin.

Baby squirms and splutters and splashes. But he enjoys it. So does his mother. So does everybody else.

There is nothing in all this world that is cleaner or sweeter than a clean baby; and there is no better way to keep a baby clean than by the regular use of Ivory Soap.

Ivory Soap . . . 99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in y Church or Sunday School, and e for every person when you can t "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very l songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, I.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED. Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free. VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

PATENTS that PROTECT Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stam R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D.C., Dept. 36, Est. 1

Come Girls—get together and have a Taffy Pull. Make the taffy with Karo. See how smooth and golden it pulls. How delicious it tastes. How wholesome it is. Karo Fudge too—simply perfect—and Caramels and Butter Scotch.

Karo

CORN SYRUP

Eat it on Griddle Cakes
Hot Biscuit
Waffles

Use it for Ginger Bread
Cookies
Candy

* Send your name on a post card for Karo Cook Book—fifty pages including thirty perfect recipes for home candy-making.

CORN PRODUCTS REFINING CO.
Dept. O. P. O. Box 161. New York

The Strawberry Handkerchief

Continued from preceding page

Their patriotism was founded on justice and fed by reason and common sense. With the mass of people this is not so. By their feelings they are led. Reason they do not listen to—like children are they. Facts could not make them feel the touch of slavery but they understood the funeral at the presence of the rich and great ath. When a man is educated, facts and reasons will lead him—the uneducated must be moved through their feelings. What say you, Batavius?"

"Well, my Captain, I was—as you know—born and christened in Amsterdam. I am a sailor, a coffee broker and a man of trade. And I am against all this quarreling with the government. It breaks up friendships. Old friends get out of my way, as if they owed me money. Business affairs all go backward. Men will not work, and are poor as a matter of course—pigeons ready cooked do not fly into the mouth. I say nothing against liberty. Liberty may be very good, but it is no good for us. There it is! For twenty years I have heard New York grumbling at the government, so then I know what to think of affairs in A.D. 1765"—and Batavius shrugged his shoulders in hopeless disapproval of the insubordinate New Yorkers.

"You are speaking for a purpose, Batavius, and I like it not," said the Captain.

"But, sir, such sentiments are wise and prudent," answered Rose, "and I am sure Captain DeVries can be trusted with any kind of sentiments." Then turning to Virginia she said, "But Virginia, you have a sensible lover, and I hope you approve his opinions," but to these words she added a look which not only asked, but commanded opposition. And Virginia understood the situation, and answered with spirit, "I hate them!"

"Oh, fie! Is that how matters stand? What will it mean when you are married I wonder?"

"I will tell you in plain Dutch what it will mean," replied Batavius. "It will mean that my Virginia will change her opinions when she changes her name."

"Virginia will never change a letter of her opinions. She likes not your opinions. They are not the truth!" and Virginia emphasized her statements by a decided little blow with her hand on the table; the cups and the glasses echoed it, and Rose exclaimed:

"Bravo, Virginia! I like to strike fire from a soul; the spark fell on fine tinder this time! And how pretty you look when you blaze!"

"Come, come," said Madame, "you grow too close to quarreling." And she broke by a glance the Captain's interference.

"Batavius," he said, "I have listened to you. I like not your words."

"Captain, I am a sailor and a coffee broker, also I am a Dutchman born in Amsterdam; and my experience—for I am a man of experience—has taught me that trade and commerce are opposed to what men call liberty and patriotism."

"That is not the truth, Batavius. It is even a gigantic untruth! Commerce and trade feed liberty, and nurse patriotism, and when they are wronged, find the ways and means to defend them."

"La, gentlemen, do not quarrel! Virginia also is flaming. I only am cold, and reasonable, and inclined to keep the peace."

"I will see that you all have tea in the afternoon," said Madame.

"Katrina, I will drink only chocolate this night, and I will go into the city now, before Lady Rose has time to give the good drink a bad character."

Madame went out of the room with her husband, and when she returned, she found Batavius still lingering. "Art thou not going?" she asked crossly. "A great deal Virginia and Rose have to talk over and arrange. Weddings are not made without talk and trouble."

"As it is my wedding, moeder, that is to be talked over, it is proper I should remain."

"How mistaken you are!" cried Lady Rose. "You have nothing to do with your wedding, except to make Virginia the necessary promises. From this day, Virginia comes into authority; complete obedience is all that will be required of you."

"There is a good fire in the best parlor, and the room is warm, and the key in the door," said Madame, "and if you girls will go there with your secrets, I can get the breakfast things cleared away."

"Oh, you good moeder!" exclaimed Virginia; "so kind, so thoughtful are you!"

Then Batavius made elaborate adieux, and with a daring born of that impudent bravado which always chooses some unlucky moment, he came towards Virginia. The intention to embrace her was so evident that the girl turned pale and shrank aside, and Rose stepped quickly between them.

"Oh, Captain!" she exclaimed, "let me make you sensible of the importance of your presence to-night. My father and Captain Robert Lawson are coming to pay their respects to Captain Van Vroom and yourself. I own that I have made this interview seem important to them, for Lawson is about to sail for India with troops for General Clive. So it is to seas quite unknown he is going, and I ventured to tell him you knew all about the winds and tides and best harbors of that strange land. Upon my honor, I think I gave you credit for knowing something of the language of the people. Indeed, Lawson is most anxious to meet you, and I must confess that I assured him, not only of your knowledge, but of your good-nature—and so pledged my own honor for your willingness to instruct Captain Lawson."

To be continued

Northern Baptist Convention

THE sessions of the Northern Baptist Convention will be held in Chicago, May 6 to 13. The meetings will be held in the large Bartlett Gymnasium of the University of Chicago. There are one million and a quarter of Baptists in the territory covered by the Northern Baptist Convention. The Southern Baptist Convention will meet in Baltimore immediately after the great meetings in Chicago. The Baptists of the South, like those of the North, are profoundly interested in a forward movement in missions, and the former will endeavor to send sixty additional foreign missionaries for the coming year. The Baptists of the North talk of sending one hundred additional foreign missionaries for the coming year. The president of the Northern Baptist Convention is Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago, who will deliver one of the important addresses. The Baptists of Chicago manifested great enthusiasm in arranging for the convention. Professor Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago is chairman of the Committee on Arrangements. All delegates bear their own expenses, except the missionaries and the speakers, who are entertained by the Chicago committee.

The new plan of the annual budget and the work of the Apportionment Committee, in apportioning the amount to be raised for missions for each State and for each church, has been a great success. There will be interesting reports from the General Council of the Baptist Brotherhood, the Convention Executive Committee, the Finance Committee, the General Apportionment Committee, the General Committee on Christian Stewardship, the Commission on Ministerial Relief Agencies, Commission on City Mission Problems, the Social Service Series, etc.

The Baptist Year Book, just published, gives the number of Baptists in the United States at 5,266,369; 49,045 Baptist churches, and 33,909 ministers. The sum of $24,122,911 was raised for all purposes last year.

WARREN G. PARTRIDGE, D.D.

The Howard Watch

The American returning from Europe likely as not brings home a HOWARD. Perhaps he better appreciates this American Watch when he finds it the finest practical timepiece to be had in London, Rome, Paris or Berlin.

To be sure, it has no chimes, no music box, no cuckoo attachment, but it is marvellously accurate in recording time—and the American is just hard-headed enough to think that is what a watch is for. Europeans also are becoming so sordid and Americanized that they begin to think so, too.

This is quite a change from the day when the rich American, buying here at home, insisted on a European watch.

Times change—and timepieces. The HOWARD watch is the same price in all countries, and it comes through the U. S. Custom House duty free. A HOWARD is always worth what you pay for it.

The price of each HOWARD is fixed at the factory and a printed ticket attached—from the 17-jewel (double-roller escapement) in a "Jas. Boss" or "Crescent" gold-filled case at $40 to the 23-jewel in a 14-k. solid gold case at $150.

Not every jeweler can sell you a HOWARD Watch. Find the HOWARD Jeweler in your town and talk to him. He is a good man to know. Drop us a postal card, Dept. W, and we will send you a HOWARD book of value to the watch buyer.

E. HOWARD WATCH WORKS
BOSTON, MASS.

Floor Polish OF QUALITY

If you have never used Butcher's Boston Polish on your floors, you do not know what it is to have a Perfectly Finished Floor. There are imitations, but none of equal excellence.

It is the STANDARD in the different trades, throughout the UNITED STATES and CANADA

When finishing your floors use BUTCHER'S BOSTON POLISH and be convinced of its merits.

Send for our free booklet

The Butcher Polish Company
356 ATLANTIC AVENUE, BOSTON, MASS.

Does your church use INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS? If not, send us $4.75 for a tray (like cut) and 36 plain glasses. Or $5.25 with 44 plain glasses. Money refunded if not entirely satisfactory. Over 6,500 churches use.

THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE CO., Box 125, Lima Ohio

5 Fine POST CARDS FREE
Send only 2c stamp and receive 5 colored Gold and Embossed Cards FREE to introduce post card offer.
CAPITAL CARD CO., Dept. 132, Topeka, Kan.

WHILE WAITING

Instead of keeping unemployed the funds you expect to have use for later, let them bear earnings at 5 per cent, until such time as you are ready for them. We can handle your temporary investments as profitably for you as more permanent accounts. Your funds may be deposited or withdrawn on any date. Earnings credited for full time.

5% A YEAR

Established 17 years and conducted under N.Y. Banking Dept. Supervision. Our record is open to public examination in their files.

Assets over - $2,000,000
Surplus and Profits, 150,000

Write for Booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings and Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d St. and Broadway, New York

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

POST CARDS

10 Birthday, 10 cts. | 10 Decoration Day, 10 cts.
10 Rose, 10 cts. | 10 Fourth of July, 10 cts.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

6% NET
For 35 years we have been paying our customers the highest returns consistent with conservative methods. First mortgage loans of $300 and up which we can recommend after the most thorough personal investigation. Please ask for Loan List No. 701. $25 Certificates of Deposit also for saving investors.
PERKINS & CO. Lawrence, Kans

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c. Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD. Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

Mother says: To make good gravy, thicken with Kingsford's Corn Starch, not flour—flour makes lumpy gravy and that raw taste.

Kingsford's Corn Starch

is the best thickening for all gravies, soups and sauces.

Send a post card today, and we will mail without charge our remarkable little Cook Book "O."—"What a cook ought to know about corn starch."

It contains one hundred and sixty-eight of the best recipes you ever tried.

T. Kingsford & Son
Oswego, N.Y.
National Starch Co., Successors

CLEAR THE COMPLEXION
SWEETEN THE BREATH
WHITEN THE TEETH

Established 30 years. Our name guarantees quality. Don't accept the carelessly prepared substitute.

10, 25 AND 50 CENTS
If not found at druggists, sent by mail on receipt of price
REQUA MFG. CO., 1186 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Hunyadi János

Natural Laxative Water

Recommended by Physicians
Refuse Substitutes
Best remedy for CONSTIPATION
AT ALL DRUGGISTS

Varicose Veins.

If you know you have Varicose Veins, don't "let it go," for such things if left to themselves do not get better, but worse. Begin now wearing our Seamless Heel and save yourself years of suffering. The best treatment yet discovered by medical science for troubles of this sort. Illustrated booklet, prices, self-measure directions gladly sent free.

ELASTIC STOCKING

Curtis & Spindell Co., Elastic Weavers, 202 Oxford St., Lynn, Mass.

ELECTRO-SILICON

restores the natural lustre of SILVERWARE easily and quickly; does not scratch or wear. Bright housekeepers who demand the best, quickest and cheapest use Electro-Silicon—the standard for over 40 years.

Send address for

FREE SAMPLE

Full Sized Box, post-paid, 15 cts. in stamps.
The Electro Silicon Co., 30 Cliff Street, New York.
Sold by Grocers and Druggists Everywhere.

Buy "Kalamazoo Komfort" Now

Enjoy that luxurious rest and relaxation which gives renewed energy and makes the hot, sultry days cool and delightful. Be truly comfortable when reading, resting or ill. The expense is only nominal. Our reclining chair, automatically adjusting itself to every position, will do all this for you. Write us for free trial offer and catalogue No. 148, showing ten models of this chair and sixty other designs of summer furniture. Ask your dealer for Superior Quality lawn furniture and make your home comfortable, attractive and distinctive.

Each Piece Trade-Marked and Guaranteed

KALAMAZOO SLED CO., 595 Third St., Kalamazoo, Mich.

VACUUM WASHER 30 DAY TRIAL

To prove to every reader of this magazine that she can wash clothes with least work and wear with

Syracuse "EASY" Washer

we will ship one on 30 days' trial and pay freight both ways if you do not find it far better than any you ever tried. Easy pumping motion. Water heated in rust-proof tub. Cleanses laces, clothes, carpets. Write for free booklet, valuable recipes and trial offer.

DODGE & ZUILL
535 K Dillaye Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.
Toronto Branch, 92 Olive Ave., L. G. Beebe, Manager

AGENTS—My Sanitary Coffee and Tea Makers produce a pure, sweet cup. Needs no settler nor strainer and never wears out. Saves tea and coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight. New inventions. Send 15c for 50c size of either, postpaid, or will send sample of both for 25c. Without question the two best selling articles ever invented. Order both.

COFFEE MAKER

TEA MAKER

Dr. Lyons, 1480 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

MAKES and burns its own gas. Produces 100 candle power light—brighter than electricity or acetylene—cheaper than kerosene. No dirt. No grease. No odor. Over 200 styles. Every lamp warranted. Agents wanted. Write for catalog. Do not delay.

THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, Ohio

ROWBOATS $20 UP

20 DIFFERENT DESIGNS

Can ship immediately in any quantity. Need No Boat House. Never Leak, Rust, Check, Crack or Rot. Every boat has water-tight compartment, so cannot sink. Demonstrator Agents Wanted in Every Community. Write for Free Illustrated Catalog and Special Prices. [35]

Michigan Steel Boat Co. 332 Bellevue Ave., Detroit, Mich.

ORIENTAL POLISHER

FOR SILVER STILBOMA AND GOLD

A Prepared Chamois Skin without grit or acid to make old silver look like new. It's a wonder—wears for years. Price 50c. Half Size, 25c. Sample 4c. Agents Wanted.
THE STILBOMA MFG. CO., Cleveland, O.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

A convenient and effective remedy for Coughs and Hoarseness. Invaluable in Bronchial and Lung Troubles and to Singers and Speakers for clearing the voice. Entirely free from opiates or any harmful ingredient. Price, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per box. Sample mailed on request.

JOHN I. BROWN & SON, Boston, Mass.

Sent on Approval. Send No Money. $2.00
WE WILL TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. Hair Switch
Send a lock of your hair, and we will mail a 22 inch short stem fine human hair switch to match. If you find it a big bargain, remit $2.00 in ten days, or sell 3 and GET YOUR SWITCH FREE. Extra shades a little more. Inclose 6c postage. Free beauty book showing latest style of hair dressing; also high grade switches, pompadours, wigs, puffs, etc.
ANNA AYERS,
Dept. 84 19 Quincy St. Chicago

THE FOLLY OF ANGER*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

"THE wrath of a king is as messengers of death." So it proved in the case of Herod. He was a tetrarch, a prince royal, who ruled over not a whole kingdom, but a part. His territory was Galilee and Perea. He was an immoral man, living unlawfully with Herodias, his brother Philip's wife. For this he was rebuked by John the Baptist. Previous to the rebuke, Herod had listened with pleasure to the preaching of John, who had been called to his palace as a sort of court preacher. Probably Herodias sat beside Herod on such occasions, for we know that Drusilla sat by Felix when Paul preached, and Bernice by Agrippa. The royal pair were angered by John's rebuke, and as a result John was cast into prison. That prison was fully described in the lesson for April 17. Herodias only waited for an opportunity to bring about the death of John. She waited about one year.

It was the occasion of the king's birthday, and he made a feast for his courtiers, and wine flowed freely. Then it was that the king made a request of his daughter-in-law, the young Salome, that he would not have made if he had been sober; but being drunken, he sent for Salome to come in and dance before himself and his friends. If the girl had not been the vile daughter of her mother, she would have declined the summons. Vashti, the queen, had refused to come to the feast which King Ahasuerus had prepared for his friends because it was not reputable for a woman to do so.

The Death of John the Baptist

Salome came at the request of Herod, and she so pleased the king and his friends by her dancing that the king made a foolish offer to give her anything she should ask for, even to the half of his kingdom. That was just like a drunken man.

The girl was beside herself with her opportunity, and ran to consult her mother about what she should ask for. The moment for revenge had come for Herodias and she said: "Ask for the head of John the Baptist to be given to you on a charger [platter]." And Salome tripped back to the king's presence to make the demand. And the king, although regretting what she asked for, sent to the prison and had John beheaded, and his head was brought in on a platter and given to Salome, and she carried it to her mother. How gruesome the sight of two women with that gory head for their very own!

The disciples of John were permitted to take the headless body of their master and bury it. And then they came and told Jesus. How sorrowful must Jesus have been then!

In front of an old ruined abbey in a secluded glen in Europe there is a stone statue of a headless man, holding in his hand a plate on which is his own head. And there is a legend that the daughter of Herodias was put under the same curse as the "Wandering Jew" of Jerusalem, doomed to live and wander for centuries without growing old, not allowed to rest, and always hearing the cry behind her "Go on, go on!" After eighteen centuries of weary wandering she comes at last by accident to the foot of this statue and sees in the dead face a look of sympathy and pity. She prays that the curse may cease, and that she may lie quickly. As she glances into the sp ng at her side she perceives with n- speakable joy that she is ra lly growing old, and almost in a mo nt her hair has turned white. She an now hope for pardon and the lor d- for rest of death. The legend is l a picture of the remorse of unpard ed sin following us in this world an he other. Only the pardon of Christ an give such a heart hope and rest.

What God Says to Us About Being Angry

Make no friendship with an a ry man, lest thou learn his ways, an et a snare to thy soul. Prov. 22: 2 25. An angry man stirreth up strife, a l a furious man aboundeth in trans es- sion. Prov. 29: 8. Let every ma be swift to hear, slow to speak, slo to wrath: for the wrath of men wo th not the righteousness of God. J es 1: 19, 20.

"Do you think it would be w ng for me to learn the noble art of lf- defense?" asked a youthful Chri an of his pastor. "Certainly not," re ed the minister. "I learned it in y th myself, and I have found it of at value during my life." "Indeed, r h Did you learn the English syste or some other?" "Neither; I lea ed Solomon's system." "Solomon's ys- tem?" "Yes, you will find it laid wn in the first verse of the fifteenth p- ter of Proverbs: 'A soft answer n- eth away wrath.' It is the best sy em of self-defense of which I have ny knowledge." There are some boys nd girls and other folks who do not ow that this is a brave method of def e; they actually think it is rather w- ardly. Yet it often takes the l ve heart to give the soft answer.

A merchant once had a dispute th a Quaker about a bill. The mer nt said he would go to law about it. he Quaker tried all means to keep im from doing so. One morning he Quaker resolved to make a las t- tempt and he called at the merch t's house and asked the servant i is master was at home. The mer nt heard him, and knowing his ice called out from the stairs: "Tell at rascal I am not at home." The Qu er, looking up at him, calmly said: " ll, friend, God grant thee a better m d."

The merchant was struck with he meekness of the reply, and he l ed into the disputed bill, and found at the Quaker was right, and he as wrong. He called to see him, and, er confessing his error, he said: "I ve one question to ask you: 'How re you able so often to bear my a se with patience?'"

"Friend," said the Quaker, "I ill tell thee: I once had as bad a te er as thou hast. I knew that to yie te this temper was sinful, and I fi nd that it was unwise. I noticed that en in a passion always spoke loud, a I thought that if I could control ny voice I should keep my passio I have, therefore, made it a rule er to let my voice rise above a ce in key, and by carefully observing is- rule, I have, by God's help, mas ed my temper."

"To make a quarrel needs, in ed. two; but to make peace needs ly one."

Are Quarrels and Revenge Wo While?

Jerrold and Dickens once had a ll- ing out. After meeting several es with averted and unrecognizing es, one day being in a club together, ter more mutual coldness, Jerrold ud- denly swung round, held out th hands with moist, beaming eyes nd

Continued on next page

* International Sunday School Lesson for May 22, 1910. The Death of John the Baptist. Matt. 14: 1-12. GOLDEN TEXT: "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh a city." Prov. 16: 32.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 467, and write them for full information.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

sa: "Let us be friends again—life is n long enough for this."

ut better than stopping quarrels a revenge is not to allow them space in ur hearts and lives. It is such an ea y process to get them started. Two bo s were talking together, when one of them said: "I wish I had all the pa ure land in the world." And the ot r said: "I wish I had all the cattle in he world." "What would you do th ?" "Why, I would turn them in your pasture land." "No, you w ldn't," was the reply. "Yes, I w ld." "But I wouldn't let you." "I w ldn't ask you." "You shouldn't do it he screamed. "I should." "You sh 't." "I will." And then they m e at each other and began to fight. et any one pick up a carpenter's sa and feel of it, it will be found cold. L that same saw be used to cut a bo d in two, and it will be found to giv hot; the faster one saws, the hoer the saw grows. We saw with wo ds when we quarrel—the more we sa the hotter we grow. No wonder ou faces grow red; anger makes our he ts beat faster. A distinguished Fr nch physician said: "Anger has in ce ain cases torn the fibres of the he t, and even opened the ventricles." Re y, the horse tamer, says: "An an y word will raise the pulse of a ho e ten beats." How much more se ous must be the effect of angry wo ds on people! Corisart, physician to apoleon, said: "A fit of anger may pr uce rupture of the heart and ca e sudden death." Other physicians have said that anger poisons the blo d more or less. The physical dange s not often considered, but only the mo al. It must now be reckoned as do ly dangerous. A "grudge" in the he t, like that cherished by Herod an Herodias, was comparable with a de -seated cancer. We read in the Bible: "Anger resteth in the bosom of fools." (Eccles. 7: 9.)

Whatever ye are, be kind, boys!
Be gentle in manners and mind, boys!
The man gentle in mien,
Words and temper, I ween,
Is the gentleman truly refined, boys!

Is it to be supposed that Herodias gloated when the head of John the Baptist came into her possession? Some one has said: "Revenge is sweet." It is so only to small souls. Even one who is not a Christian should deny this. Julius Cæsar, when the head of Pompey was presented to him, wept and said: "I seek not revenge, but victory."

"Vengeance Belongeth Unto Me," Saith the Lord

A young man had some cause of complaint against an old man, and he resolved to get revenge. He came with murderous intent to the out-of-way cabin where the old man lived. "At least let us pray together before you execute your design." Then the old man began to pray in this way: "It is no longer necessary, O God, that thou shouldst defend this young man, and declare thyself his protector, since he has taken upon himself the right of seeking his own revenge." The young man fell on his knees beside the old hermit, and prayed for pardon for his wicked thought, and declared that he would no longer seek revenge.

Bible Readings on Anger and Revenge

Cease from anger, etc. Ps. 37: 8.

He that is slow to anger, etc. Prov. 14: 29.

Wise men turn away wrath. Prov. 29: 8.

Avenge not yourselves, etc. Rom. 12: 19.

Let all bitterness be put away. Eph. 4: 31, 32.

Put them all away, anger, wrath, malice, etc. Col. 3: 8.

Thou shalt not take vengeance, nor bear any grudge. Lev. 19: 18.

AN ACCOMPLISHED CHINAWOMAN

MISS TYE LEUNG is the first Chinese woman to enjoy the distinction of being an employee of the United States Government. She is a young lady of twenty-one years, who ha had an interesting history. Nine yea s ago she was rescued from a da erous position by the Occidental Bo rd of Missions, and she has had the go fortune to be in charge of this boa d ever since. She has been given a od education and speaks English quite as fluently as she speaks her native tongue. Her present position is that of assistant to the matron in charge of the new immigration station on Angel Island. A large number of Chinese men and women are detained at this station while waiting for investigation regarding their eligibility to become residents of the United States. Hardly any of them can speak a word of English, and the immigrant commissioner, Mr. North, felt that it would be a good thing to have a Chinese young woman to act as interpreter and to assist the matron on the island. Mr. North naturally turned to the mission board for information as to where he could find such an assistant, and little Miss Tye Leung was at once recommended to him. She was glad to accept the position and is filling it in a very satisfactory manner. She is a living illustration of the good our foreign missionaries do in their helpfulness to the girls of China, hundreds of whom they have rescued from lives of misery or slavery and developed them into intelligent and Christian young women.

Tye Leung

J. L. H.

EVANGELISM IN NEW YORK

—THE FIFTH annual report of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City shows extensive and varied lines of effort, attended with marked success. There were held 1,957 meetings betwen June 14 and Septmber 13, 1909, with a total attendance of 289,559, of whom 61,270 were children and 15,179 were big boys. The meetings were held in 57 centres: 10 in tents, 24 in shops, 20 in the open air, and 3 in halls. The services were conducted in seven languages: English, Italian, Finnish-Swedish, Bohemian-Slovak, Spanish, Polish, and Hungarian.

The "STANDARD'S" Weekly Specials

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS SPECIAL UNDERWEAR SALE

If you are a customer of the "STANDARD'S," you know what wonderful Money-Saving Values we always give. If you have never ordered from these "Weekly Specials," do so now—to-day.

Dainty Combination

1186. Front of corset cover made of beautiful Swiss openwork embroidery run with ribbon. Arm holes edged with Val lace. Wide circular drawers with full 6-inch ruffle of Swiss embroidery. Ribbon-run beading at waist. Unusual value. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. . . . Special: $1.39

Cambric Drawers

1179. Fine Cambric Drawers employing a deep 7½-in. ruffle of fine embroidery headed by 5 pin-tucks. Shaped to fit smoothly over hips and cut full and wide. Neatly made; 69-cent quality. Lengths 23 to 27 inches. Special: 49c

Dainty Gown

1142. Dainty Gown of splendid quality soft-finished cambric. Yoke of beautiful openwork Swiss embroidery, ribboned beading and hemstitched tucking. V-shaped neck and sleeves edged with a neat ruffle of Swiss embroidery edging. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Special Price: 68c

FREE

Write for FREE yearly subscription to the "Standard Style Bulletin." Shows all the late New York Styles. Sent to you for One Year FREE on request. Write To-day.

Special Gown Value

1128. Trimmed Gown of Fine English Long-cloth. Beautifully embroidered yoke of dainty Swiss openwork finished with clusters of pin tucks, Val lace edging and ribboned beading. Sleeves have deep ruffle of sheer lawn edged with Val to match. Value $1.50. . . . . Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Special: $1.00

Princess Slip perfectly fashioned to insure the smooth-fitting lines necessary for wear under your lingerie dresses.

1158. Princess Slip of sheer Batiste, in white, blue or pink. Yoke of three rows of Val insertion, with lace-edged neck to match, and ribbon beading used to gather the fullness. Fitted flare skirt with ruffle, employing a cluster of narrow pin-tucks and Val lace edge. Closes invisibly in back. Cut on perfectly proportioned lines and fits without a wrinkle. . . Excellent value: $1.25 Sizes 32 to 44 bust.

SPECIAL

Good Serviceable Cambric Drawers 25c.

1184. Of good cambric and very neatly made. Shaped to fit smoothly over the hips and cut full and wide. Deep tucked ruffle edged with torchon lace. Each seam carefully sewed. Reg. 35c value. Special: 25c Lengths 23 to 27 inches. Not Illustrated.

Swiss Embroidery Corset Cover

1163. Made of beautiful Swiss embroidery in pretty openwork pattern. Back and front alike. Run with dainty ribbon. Armholes edged with pretty Val lace. An exquisite garment made of good material. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Special: 49c

Special Value in Dressy Petticoat

1116. Exquisite Dressy Petticoat. Of fine soft cambric with deep 17-inch flounce. Flounce elaborately trimmed with 9 double rows of Val lace forming panels with crochet lace medallion. 6-inch lace ruffle of 4 rows of Round Mesh German Val lace. $2.00 quality and style. Lengths 38 to 44 inches. Special: $1.19

Lace-trimmed Cambric Corset Cover

1154. Corset Cover made of fine soft cambric, with 5 rows of baby Cluny insertion inlaid in the front. Neck and armholes edged with Val lace to match. Ribbon beading finishes neck. Dainty, effective style. Good 35c value. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Special: 29c

STANDARD MAIL ORDER CO.
161 WOOSTER ST.
NEW YORK CITY.

YOU TAKE NO RISK when you deal at the "STANDARD." The "STANDARD" guarantees you "Entire Satisfaction or your money promptly refunded." We cannot AFFORD to have you displeased.

FAMILY FOOD

Crisp, Toothsome and Requires no Cooking.

A little boy down in N. C. asked his mother to write an account of how Grape-Nuts food had helped their family.

She says Grape-Nuts was first brought to her attention in Charlotte, where she visited.

"While I was there I used the food regularly. I gained about 15 pounds and felt so well that when I returned home I began using Grape-Nuts in the family regularly.

"My little 18-months-old baby shortly after being weaned was very ill with dyspepsia and teething. She was sick nine weeks and we tried everything. She became so emaciated that it was painful to handle her and we thought we were going to lose her. One day a happy thought urged me to try Grape-Nuts soaked in a little warm milk.

"Well, it worked like a charm and she began taking it regularly and improvement set in at once. She is now getting well and round and fat as fast as possible and on Grape-Nuts.

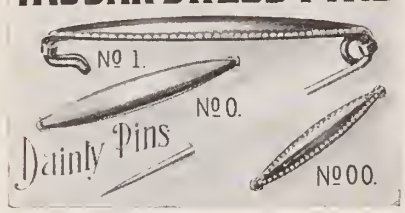
"Sometime ago several of the family were stricken with La Grippe at the same time, and during the worst stages we could not relish anything in the shape of food but Grape-Nuts and oranges, everything else nauseating us.

"We all appreciate what your famous food has done for our family."

Read "The Road to Wellville," found in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

VASSAR DRESS PINS



Plain or Beaded Edge

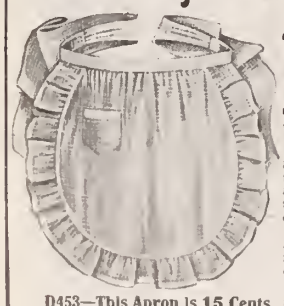
Pins for collars, cuffs, waists, etc. Made of tempered steel with coil spring and needle points that will pass through the stiffest linen without tearing it.

Nickel Plate, Jet or Dull Black, either pattern, four on card for 10 cents; 14 K. Roman Plate or Bright Rolled Gold that will keep bright for years, two on card—25 Cents.

If your dealer does not keep them, send price—mentioning size and style wanted, and dealer's name, and we'll mail them to you. Money back if not satisfied.

Consolidated Safety Pin Company,
202 Farrand St., Bloomfield, N. J.

This Pretty Dimity Apron



15c.

We Pay Postage

You cannot buy this apron elsewhere for less than 25 cents. We want to send you our free Style Catalogue No. 66; that is why we make this great offer.

D453—This Apron is 15 Cents

Pretty circular apron twenty-one inches long, of narrow crossbar dimity, wide ruffle, pocket and strings.

Money returned at once if not satisfactory.

Send for our great free Catalog No. 66 to-day; it is full of wonderful values like the above.

Martin's
SUIT & WAIST HOUSE

Fulton St.
Brooklyn
NEW YORK
CITY

HALLOWED HYMNS NEW and OLD

By I. ALLAN SANKEY, son of IRA D. SANKEY

OVER 1000 CHURCHES USING IT

256 Pages, 100 New Songs, Responsive Readings

$25. per 100, not prepaid. 35c. per copy by mail

Returnable samples mailed to "earnest inquirers"

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago

Save Steps between kitchen and dining room. One trip with Wheel Tray sets table. Another clears it. Stands beside table for serving. Beside sink while washing dishes. Price $10, exp. paid. Circular
WHEEL TRAY CO., 435C West 61st Place, Chicago, Ill.

The Funeral of Prince Ito

(From a Correspondent in Japan)

THE funeral of Prince Ito, the greatest statesman of modern Japan, took place lately. The official ceremony was held in Hibiya Park, here in Tokyo, but we did not feel like intruding at such a time of national grief, and so simply stood on a corner near the park and watched the cortege as it passed. The rites were Shintoist, and were carried out with all the symbolism of that old faith.

First came bearers of green branches and the characteristic strings and figures cut out of paper; then walked a long line of men carrying planted flowers. The priests and High Priest followed, and after them were the floral pieces sent by the various nations. There next marched over a score of men of rank, bearing each upon a velvet cushion the decorations and insignia of the late Prince.

Carrying Prince Ito's Bier

It is customary, on the death of a great man, to promote him in rank as a last tribute of honor, but in Ito's case there was practically no higher rank left; he had received them all during his life. After more priests came the bier—a miniature house, with latticed sides, borne on the shoulders of thirty men, while on either side walked the honorary pall-bearers, six generals of the army on the right and six admirals of the navy on the left. The son and members of the family came immediately after, and then followed on foot the Upper House of the Diet—all the Lords of the Realm—and the entire Lower House. One would scarcely in a lifetime see such an assemblage of prominent men. Sailors and soldiers brought up the rear.

Three days before, we had attended the imperial review of troops on the Emperor's birthday, and the contrast in the bearing of the soldiers was striking. Then they marched by with the famous "goose step"—swinging arms, raised knees and pointed toes; now they almost slunk along, fairly out of step, with muskets inverted and banners drooping. It was a picture of the sense of loss of the whole nation. Of course, in a monarchy, everything which any subject accomplishes goes to the credit of his sovereign. Admiral Togo was more of a hero in America, after the Russian War, than he was in Japan; and it is hard to separate the work of such a statesman as Prince Ito from the administration of his Emperor, but it is certain that for more than a generation he was the right arm of the throne. When he returned to Japan, after running away to Europe, it was as a young man with one life-purpose—to see this land opened to all the arts and commerce of the Western World. His brilliant gifts were soon recognized, and he rose steadily till he at last became Prime Minister, a position which he held, I think, five times. Undoubtedly his greatest work was in the forming of the constitution. He was the dominating genius of it all. The Emperor recognized this fact by presenting him with the building in which the constitution was drawn up, and having it moved to the country as Prince Ito's summer villa. It is a significant fact that he died a poor man after a long life of public service, spent within easy reach of tainted money. His broad-mindedness clashed with the old religious interests in the sharp contest as to the guarantee of religious liberty in the constitution, and, with imperial support, he carried the day.

* * *

As Resident-General in Korea he met a most delicate situation with firmness and far-sightedness, and I am sure will go down into history as a true friend to Korea. At the time of his death he was President of the Privy Council, the so-called Elder Statesmen of Japan. The "era of enlightenment" owes more to him than to any other subject of the empire; and it may be many generations before there arises as great a statesman and patriot as this "Bismarck of Japan."

REV. CHARLES WHEELER IGLEHART.
Aoyama, Tokyo.

Is Union Orthodox?

Editor Christian Herald: In your March 2 issue there is a reply to a correspondent's question to which I wish to call attention in the interest of truth and the Gospel. The statement is made: "Princeton and Union, we believe, are mainly orthodox, and teach the essentials of the Christian religion." This is true of Princeton, but not of Union. Union Theological Seminary is splendidly equipped, and under very able control; but it has departed so far from many of the vital truths held in common by the evangelical churches that it scarcely deserves to be called Christian at all. Paul says that Christianity stands or falls with the doctrine of the resurrection (I. Cor. 15:16, 17); and assuredly His vicarious sacrifice is a truth written in red throughout the Old Testament and the New, neither of which know anything of a sinner's development without his being born again. One of those connected with the institution is known to have made the remark: "Next to Jesus Christ, Thomas Paine is one of the most misunderstood personages of all history."

EDWIN J. REINKE,
Pastor James Evans Memorial Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Among the Workers

—GROUPS OF STUDENTS in 539 theological educational institutions took voluntary I study last year. They were of all shades of ligious belief.

— THE PEOPLE of Porto Rico have been wide awake lately, while Hon. William Jenr Bryan has been flitting from one end of the i to the other. They flocked to all his meet and listened to the story of the Prince of I and the value of the Pearl of Great Price. N visiting the island has ever made such an im sion for good.

—ON SUNDAY, April 10, Rev. Dr. Ake the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, New responding to an appeal for funds to bu new church, raised $162,000 in a forenoon lection. Mr. J. D. Rockefeller had promis double their gift, which makes the total lection foot up the very substantial sur $324,000.

—MISSIONARY WALTER B. WILLIAMS, G Cess Mission, Cape Palmas, Liberia, West rica, appeals for the support of two native Bible-women. Their annual support probably be between $60 and $100 per There are some 400 or 500 Kroo wome Grand Cess, who can neither read, write, sew, and who wholly lack Gospel teaching —SENATOR LORIMER of Illinois has introd in the Senate a bill granting longer tim duty to letter-carriers who are required to on Sunday. The effect of this measur passed, will be that the government will to employ substitutes in place of the men take their off duty time on Sundays. It the direction of reducing Sunday labor.

—THE ANNUAL CONVENTION of the Nat Federation of Gospel Missions will be he Columbus, O., May 31 to June 5. The Wesley Chapel Methodist Church has bee cured for the use of the convention. Sup tendents, missionaries and Christian wo from all parts of the country are expect be present. Rev. James Haig, Superinte of the Union Mission Association of Colu has charge of the arrangements.

—THE COLLEGEVILLE SUMMER ASSEMBLY, posed of interdenominational conference Christian workers, will be in session from Ju to August 5, at Collegeville, Pa. The spe include Rev. W. J. Dawson, D.D., former England; Rev. John A. Hutton, M.A., of Gla General Ballington Booth; Rev. Arthur J. S of New York; Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D., of Broo Rev. George Handy Wailes, of Philadelphia, will conduct daily Bible studies, and Pr Lincoln Hall, of Philadelphia, musical direct — THE Third Annual Conference on Su Evangelism and Open Air Work will be h the Moody Church, Chicago, of which Dr. Dixon is pastor, May 31 and June 1, 2 a Among the speakers will be Evangelist J. W Chapman; Len G. Broughton of Atlanta, (who was recently called to the pastorate o F. B. Meyer's church in London); Canon I Hague of Canada; L. T. Townsend of Bo George G. Mahey of Scranton, Pa.; T. T. Sl of London, Ont., and others. Dr. D. B. To will have charge of the singing.

—EMPEROR WILLIAM of Germany took a tive interest in the recent demonstratio Berlin against the infidel lecturer, Drews, lately caused a sensation by his public ments that Jesus was a "myth" and tha such character ever lived. The Emperor instructed his court chaplains who we to speak at the great mass meetings that being held to repudiate Drews and his in ties: "Tell them that the words of Jesus his life. His words live in our hearts to-d in the simple fishermen's hearts who them."

—ON FRIDAY afternoon, May 20, in co tion with the World's Sunday School Co tion, there will be a parade such as has before been known in the District of Colu About 10,000 men, members of adult classes, will form in line, with 10,000 w members of similar classes to review the they go by. Every State and Territory i Union, all the provinces of Canada, Mexico, and other countries will be repres in this parade. The District Sunday S Association will award a banner or othe tinction to the school making the best sho

ENDURING

AS THE PYRAMIDS IN MEMORIAL

TO PERPETUATE THE MEMORY OF THOSE LOVED AND HONORED. EVERLASTING MONUMENTS ARE PARTICULARLY APPROPRIATE • MORE BEAUTIFUL THAN MARBLE • MODERATE IN COST • IN A WIDE RANGE OF SIZES AND DESIGNS DELIVERED ANYWHERE

WRITE FOR DESIGNS, DESCRIPTIONS AND PRICES • STATE APPROXIMATE SIZE OR VALUE • REPRESENTATIVES WANTED IN EVERY COMMUNITY.

MONUMENTAL BRONZE COMPANY.
355 A HOWARD AVENUE · BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

The Question of the Hour

By Howard H. Russell, Associate Supt., Anti-Saloon League of America

In the United States, during the last two years, twenty-five thousand saloons have been blotted out. With an average frontage for each saloon of thirty feet, a total frontage of one hundred and forty-two miles has been swept away. At last, also, the consumption of drink shows a substantial decrease. After an appalling yearly increase in beer consumption for four decades, in 1909 the flood of beer receded 2,400,000 barrels. At three feet length to each barrel there was a falling off last year of a row of barrels one hundred and thirty-six miles long. The "hard liquors," whisky, brandy, and other fierce spirits have fared still worse. The slump in consumption began in 1908, with a decrease of 12,000,000 gallons. Allowing a lineal foot to the gallon, the twenty millions of gallons decrease in the two years would fill a tube 3,787 miles long—a pipe-line longer than from ocean to ocean!

Howard H. Russell

Is this attack now being made upon the liquor traffic a mere spasm? Is it a "wave" which will sweep back and leave the country as drunken as before? Let me encourage our CHRISTIAN HERALD constituents to believe we are now engaged in a war which will conquer and utterly abolish the beverage liquor traffic. These are the grounds for our hope:

The swiftly advancing civilization must leave the saloon behind. Improved sanitary and humane regulations now forbid spitting in public places; provide sanitariums to prevent the spread of the white plague; inspect the meat and milk supply, and destroy infested food; enjoin appliances for the safety of employees; forbid the employment of young children and compel their attendance at school; restrict the materials of building construction, compel provisions for exits and fire escapes and conserve the forests, fuel, and waterways. Many other injunctions and prohibitions protect the people in their enjoyment of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Cruelty to the brute creation likewise is prohibited by law. In the atmosphere of such a sentiment of carefulness for the rights of all created things, such a fertile source of crime, poverty, and disease, such a monstrous social, commercial, and moral peril as the saloon cannot long survive.

A second ground of hope is found in the character and methods of the Anti-Saloon organization. At last, regardless of sectarian or political affinity, there is a practical union of all opponents of the beverage liquor traffic. In action, the temperance sentiment heretofore engendered and now through unity of endeavor rapidly increased, is applied in an elastic way to national, State, and local issues. The thermostat of public sentiment gauges the legal progress. The contest is made a universal and constant struggle. With Catholics and non-Catholic orders acting together wonderful results have been achieved and are sure to be increased. Democrats lead the fight in the South, Republicans in the North, and members of both parties forget political differences and together smite the liquor traffic at Washington. The flagrant lawlessness of the traffic is everywhere checked. Voting areas for popular option are everywhere extended. Saloon abolition wherever tried is found every way beneficial. Brewery stocks are rapidly declining. A million dollars a year for the fight now is easily raised by all branches of the anti-liquor army. New plans for both moral and legal suasion are evolved as they are needed. The banners read: "All at it, and always at it!" "Unity, persistency, victory!"

These are the sources of power, the promises of permanency, and the pledges of final and universal victory. The anti-saloon propaganda is not a "wave" or "tide" with a flow and ebb. It has the steady and boundless power of a broad, deep and all-conquering ocean current. The liquor traffic is doomed!

THIS IS NOT A WRITE-UP

WE have received a letter from one of our subscribers who takes us to task for permitting what he calls a write-up to be published in our columns of reading matter, referring to these Advertising Talks. He seems to think that these talks are being paid for by some one whose true purpose will ultimately be revealed.

Now, we did not suppose that any one thought these talks could have any other purpose than that which was stated upon their face; that is, safeguarding the interests of our readers. But here it seems is one subscriber who has been all this time holding us under suspicion of an intention to mislead our readers. We wonder if there are any more like him. If so, we wish they had written us so that we might at least have explained our position.

We are doing our best to safeguard the interests of our readers by investigating all of the advertisements which appear in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. When we find that an advertiser is not reputable, we exclude him from the columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. In doing this, we refuse many thousand dollars' worth of advertising in the course of the year. Our advertisements are distinctly advertisements, but only those of a high class character are permitted to be published in our columns. They are edited like our reading columns, solely in the interest of our readers. We did not suppose anybody thought otherwise.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement.

Dinner is Always Ready

Dinner, luncheon or supper meals for unexpected guests. All of them are ready to be served in a minute when you have a few cans of Van Camp's on the shelf.

Now, on the verge of summer, let us again remind you what our help can mean.

In our famous kitchens are many good cooks. They are sorting and soaking — boiling and baking — beans for a million homes.

They skim the steaming kettles, face the fierce ovens, watch the whole process for hours.

As a result, when you want to serve beans, you can take them from the pantry shelf.

And those beans are the best that were ever baked. Home-baked beans cannot compare with them, because every home lacks the facilities.

Van Camp's are baked by live steam. They come out nut-like and whole — not mushy and broken. And all are baked alike. The tomato sauce—like the pork—is baked with the beans, to permeate them with its zest.

These beans are sealed up and then sterilized, Thus their savor and freshness remain unchanged until you open the can.

Letting our chef bake the beans. (80)

But the great fact is that Van Camp's digest easily, and other beans don't, as you know. Home-baked beans ferment and form gas. Many a stomach can't digest them at all.

We apply a terrific heat by using super-heated steam. Thus we make them more digestible than if you baked them all night in a home oven.

Van Camp's are an every-day food—a food that all can eat, and that all people like. They contain —with the pork—every food element required by the human body. They are richer than beef in nutriment, and they cost but a third as much.

The best possible way to cut down on your meat bills is to serve beans that your people like.

Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE PORK AND BEANS

The National Dish

But don't judge Van Camp's by other ready-baked beans. Compare them with others and note the difference yourself.

We pay for our white beans — picked out by hand — four times what some beans cost. We spend for tomato sauce — made of whole, vine-ripened tomatoes—five times what common sauce costs.

It is worth insisting on Van Camp's to get such beans as these.

Three sizes: 10, 15 and 20 cents per can

Van Camp Packing Co., Established 1861 Indianapolis, Ind.

Himalaya Cloth

TRADE MARK

An Exact Reproduction of the Fashionable Rough Silks at about One-quarter of Their Cost

27 inches wide 35 cts. per yard 75 shades and colors

Everywhere the popularity of this distinctive fabric is growing for all purposes where expensive silks have heretofore been used. Besides possessing their brilliancy and beauty, it launders perfectly and is ideal for almost every kind of Spring and Summer apparel, daytime or evening, at a fraction of the cost of silk.

You can select no more beautiful nor more appropriate material for Suits, Coats, Evening and Automobile Wraps, Gowns, Shirt Waists and Children's Dresses than Himalaya Cloth.

Its excellence is due to the peculiar character of the rough yarns, the care used in weaving and the perfect finish. Never wears fuzzy. Even experts can hardly distinguish it from the fashionable rough silks costing $1.00 to $1.50 per yard.

Do not be deceived by imitations of Himalaya Cloth which may be offered. For your protection see the word "Himalaya" stamped on the selvage. Insist upon it.

Ask for Himalaya Cloth at the wash counter of your dealer. If it is not in stock, write us giving his name.

FRED. BUTTERFIELD & CO., 725 Broadway, New York, Bradford, Eng.

We buy bonds in large amounts after rigid examinations

You, who may want a bond or two, cannot afford to make these investigations for the sake of being assured a safe investment.

Neither have you the facilities nor the experience necessary.

But you can buy a single bond from us, if you wish—a bond we know all about and can recommend.

Whatever we offer we believe is safe. Our investigations, our experience and our standing as a bond firm fully safeguard any funds you may invest through us.

If you have $1000 or more which you wish to make earn all it can consistent with safety, write us and we will send you complete data regarding such bonds as we now have to offer.

Write to-day for latest bond circular No. B-47.

N. W. HALSEY & CO.

Bankers

Dealers in Government, Municipal, Railroad and Public Utility Bonds

New York: 49 Wall St. Philadelphia: 1429 Chestnut St.
Chicago: 152 Monroe St. San Francisco: 424 California St.

Protect your home against germ infected water—install a "Fulper" Filter.

"The Filter that Filters"

The clearest spring water frequently contains millions of bacteria. Water filtered at a distance often becomes laden with germs before it reaches your home—through leaky conduits and other causes.

The only sure way to protect your family against germ-laden drinking-water is to filter it—in your home—through the "Fulper" Stone of the

FULPER Germ-proof Filter

and Cooler Combined

The "Fulper" Stone is a fine, dense, natural stone, specially processed to prevent the passage of the smallest bacteria. It is 100 per cent. efficient.

Our Free Book, "Nature's Laboratory" tells of the dangers that lurk in impure drinking-water. It also gives numerous tests, by an eminent bacteriologist, which prove the efficiency of the "Fulper."

Trade Mark

IMPROVED NATURAL STONE GERM PROOF FILTER Fulper Pottery Co. Flemington, N. J.

The "Fulper" is made of glazed stoneware, in two parts. Family size, $3.85; separate ice chamber, 55 cents. If your dealer hasn't the "Fulper," send us the money, with his name, and we will see that you are supplied.

FULPER POTTERY CO., 27 Main Street, Flemington, N.J.

Your Guarantee Established 1805

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Window-glass lamp-chimneys are cheap, as paper-soled shoes are cheap—cheap to buy, but dear to use.

Macbeth on a lamp-chimney means it is made of tough glass, clear as crystal and that it won't break from heat.

Best grocers and lamp stores sell Macbeth Chimneys.

My lamp-chimney book insures your getting the right chimney for any lamp. It is free. Address

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

Limitations of Savings Banks

WE have received a letter from one of our subscribers which suggests a point of interest that should be considered by our readers who are content to accept the small interest offered by savings banks. This subscriber had written us concerning a defunct company, in the stock of which he had been induced to invest upon reading a glittering prospectus wherein he was promised a profit out of all proportion to safety. He said in part:

"I am a poor A. M. E. pastor and invested $50 with them last summer. The receiver states that the stockholders will not receive anything, as the company was a complete failure. I have a small deposit with the ———, and also a deposit with the ———. They write regularly, tell when interest is due me and give me a chance to increase deposits or withdraw interest or principal. In our local banks, I cannot average two per cent. interest on account of having to move and always in the middle of a calendar year. Thanking you, I am, etc."

Now, here is a case which amply illustrates the importance of looking thoroughly into the character of a financial proposition before investing in it. Those of our readers who have carefully followed this series of articles will remember that we have advised our readers to leave stock investments alone. Had our friend confined himself to a consideration of bonds, or had he been even content to deposit his money with those investment companies which offer mortgages on metropolitan real estate as security, he might never have sustained the loss which has apparently meant so much to him. People as a rule are too prone to accept as trustworthy anything that is printed. Had an utter stranger approached him upon the street and asked him for $50 to invest in some proposition of which he had never heard, he would most likely have refused to do so without having made a thorough investigation, but upon receipt of a highly colored prospectus sent out by a company of which he had never heard, he was willing to invest his money merely because the appeal carried with it the prestige of printers' ink.

However, the point upon which we wish to enlarge is that brought out by the last sentence of his letter, "In our local banks, I cannot average two per cent., on account of having to move and always in the middle of a calendar year." The question arises, why invest any considerable amount of money in savings banks at all? To be sure, money invested in a properly authorized savings bank is esteemed to be safe, but the profit realized upon the transaction by the depositor is generally so small as to make it hardly worth consideration.

Average Amount of Savings

That the average amount of savings bank deposits is increasing is indicated by the last statement of the National Monetary Commission, which shows that in American savings banks it is almost four times as great as the average for Europe, Asia, Africa, Oceania, Canada, etc., and that the average deposit per capita is almost six times greater in the United States than in the other parts of the world mentioned.

One American in every six of the total population has money in a savings bank and the average deposit is $381.28. In the rest of the world, the depositors number one in every eight of the population and the average sum to their credit is $101.66.

The average rate of interest paid on savings accounts by the banks is 3.55 per cent., and over forty per cent. of the banks pay no interest on ordinary deposits.

Now, if one is content merely to save money, the savings bank is undeniably the very best means towards accomplishing that end, but no one ever became rich merely by saving money. Money, if properly placed, becames an earning force, and those who are acquainted with its power know how quickly an interest account increases the size of an original capital. It, therefore, behooves every one in possession of a sum of money to see that it earns the greatest amount of interest compatible with safety.

The writer of this article was recently in conversation with an official of one of the best known and most conservative savings banks in New York City, and when the writer complimented him upon the large crowd of depositors waiting in line to deposit money, he replied: "Yes, it is an inspiring sight, but as a matter of fact, we are over-deposited. We have so much money on hand and there are so few securities in which we are allowed to invest it, that we find difficulty in earning a sufficient profit to pay those depositors the full amount of their interest. From one standpoint, we would be glad not to have quite so many standing in line and we have seriously considered the advisability of reducing the interest rate."

The Bank's Attitude

Here is well indicated the attitude of the savings banks. There are many good securities in which they might invest their deposits, but the restrictions of the law do not permit them to take advantage of these opportunities, and so being compelled to earn a small amount of interest, they find it necessary to pay the depositor a still smaller amount for the use of his money. From the standpoint of the depositor, this is well enough while the amount of money in the bank is small, but when it has grown large enough so that the depositor might invest it in safe securities, which pay a higher rate of interest than the savings banks, then he is losing money on his deposit every day he allows it to remain in the bank.

For instance, a bank may pay the depositor two per cent., as in the case of our friend whose letter is quoted above, or even 3.55 per cent., the average indicated by the National Monetary Commission. In order to pay this percentage it must re-invest this money at a higher percentage in safe securities in order to make a profit. But why should not the depositor invest the money in those safe securities himself and thus earn the profit which is subtracted by the banks? There are many such securities in the form of bonds issued by reliable houses or savings and loan concerns, or associations of the better class.

Many of these savings and loan associations are subject to the banking laws, but their operations are conducted upon broader lines than those followed by the banks. For instance, we know of several concerns which make a specialty of the small loan business. Banks, as a rule, prefer what is known as institutional business. They would rather lend money on an extended scale to some large concern and enjoy a small profit therefrom. Whereas the loan associations, by extending credit to the user of small amounts of money and by turning the money over and over many times, manage in the end to make a greater profit.

In this respect they are following the example of the Credit Foncier of France, which has been noted for the number of its small loans. Of course, the safety of such business depends largely upon the judgment of those in charge of such a savings and loan institution. However, the loss is extremely small. One such concern stated the other day that in one and one-half million dollars loaned since 1905, the total loss was less than $200.

FOR REAL COMFORT WEAR THE NEEDRAW

Boston Garter

Velvet Grip

Most comfortable with either knee or full length drawers. You cannot feel it. Insist on having the

Needraw

Good All the Year Round.

Conforms to contour of le perfectly. No metal touches the fle

Cotton, Nic. Plate, 25c. Silk Pd't, Gold Pl., 50c. Mailed on Receipt of Price.

GEORGE FROST Co., Makers, Bost

Guaranteed Mortgages

THE New York Mortgage Co.'s "First Mortgage Bonds" will be found, upon investigation, the most form of investment, offering the same facilities, advant security and income, whether your capital amounts to $ $10,000. Our Bonds and Mortgages on New York City Suburban Real Estate yield investors.

5 to 5½ Per Cent. Ne and have an absolute guarantee from this Company payment of both interest and principal when due.

These "Trust Bonds" are secured by first mortgages d ited with the Windsor Trust Co. of New York, and he them for the protection of bond-holders.

Issued in amounts of $100 and multiples thereof. able at holder's option upon short notice. Payments and upwards will be received by the company at any ti suit the convenience of investors. Interest begins at and is payable semi-annually.

UNDER SUPERVISION OF NEW YORK BANKING D

Free Booklet giving full particulars, addres

NEW YORK MORTGAGE

DEPT. D 1475 BROADWAY NEW YORK

CHRISTIAN HERALD BOND BOOK

WE have received so many request for copies of the financial article which have been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, that we hav thought it wise to preserve them in pamph let form, for the convenience of reade who may wish to secure a complete set.

Any reader may secure a copy of thi useful booklet without charge, by for warding 4c. in stamps to cover postage.

Address CHRISTIAN HERALD Dept. 96. Bible House, New Yor

GENUINE HAND WOVEN PANAMA

RARE BARGAIN IN GENUINE PANAMA HATS

Panama Hats more popular than ever—the rage this summer. By importing large quant we can sell direct to user for this surprisingly low p These hats are warranted genuine all hand-wov unblocked, and can be worn in that condition by Gentlem Ladies and Children. Easily blocked in any shap style. Just as serviceable as the $10.00 kind; the differ only in fineness of weave. Assorted sizes. Weight only Sent prepaid, $1.00. ORDER TO-DAY. Satisfac on receipt of Guaranteed. Supply Lim

Panama Hat Co., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York

Theodore Roosevelt's

Own Account of His African Trip Now appearing in

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

is the most popular magazine contribution for y and of great interest to a LARGE NUMBER OF READERS. 100,000 subscription orders already pl —Here is a Great Opportunity for Subscription Ag Liberal cash commissions and many extra p are offered those who can devote even a little to soliciting subscriptions. REPRESENTAT WANTED IN EVERY TOWN OF AMERICA.

For particulars, address at once Desk

Scribner's Magazine, 155 Fifth Ave., N.Y.

The NEW Way to Buy Real Estate for Profit

We have a Plan for Selling choice Building Lots in the Ten best Towns along a new $100,000,000 Railway, which Eliminates Speculation and Assures Exceptional Profits.

American Financiers Pronounce the Plan the only New and Valuable Real Estate Thought of this Generation.

We Want you to Know all about this Plan, and of the Location and Description of our Building Lots in these New Towns in the Rich, newly-opened Northwest United States.

A Book of Facts, Containing full Information and Authentic Maps of each of the Ten Young Cities, will be sent FREE. The Book, on Account of the Originality and Popularity of the Plan, has been Copyrighted.

The Investment Opportunity of a Lifetime!

A new Transcontinental Railway, costing $100,000,000—

Millions of new homes and farms for the fast increasing population—

Thriving new cities springing up in this Great Empire, along the new railway—

A new plan of Investment, by which one choice building lot in each of TEN of these progressive young cities can be secured for $50 down—

These are briefly the features of the investment opportunity of the age—

The Rich, New Northwest

When the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway opened its line from the Missouri River to the Northwest Pacific Coast, less than one year ago, the richest, undeveloped region in the world was thrown open.

Gold, silver, copper, lead and coal abound throughout Idaho and Montana. The mineral wealth of the new district is beyond computation.

The largest bodies of white pine timber in the world lie tributary to the new railroad, which pierces the heart of this timber region.

Farm lands along the new railway rival in productivity the soils of Iowa and Illinois. Last Fall the United States Government opened up three million acres of fine land along the new railroad, all of which has been taken up by thrifty American farmers. There were twenty applicants for each farm.

A flood of immigration surged upon and overflowed the new country as fast as the railway line was built. Countless thousands have already entered it and established homes. Yet the new line is hardly completed and immigration increases daily.

None but those who have seen this rich, new region can fully appreciate the magnitude of its resources, or the rapid industrial development that is now taking place.

Ten Industrial Centers

The new railroad is 1399 miles long. It joins the old line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway at Mobridge, So. Dak., and extends to Seattle and Tacoma.

There are 229 towns on the new line, from which we selected the ten most promising and progressive—six are railroad division points and four are county seats. Clad in overalls and jumper, riding construction trains, our president was the first passenger over the line to the Pacific Coast. That was May, 1909. He spent two months on the way, investigating conditions.

Before investing a dollar in these towns we knew its possibilities; were convinced that its progress would be certain and fast.

The index of growth is the number of banks, and their resources; the grain elevators, lumber yards, saw mills, mines, branch railways, car shops, freight receipts, surrounding trade territory, etc. These are sure indications of city building.

The towns are rough, like all cities in their early years. Local citizens are making money; they haven't reached the stage of spending it for artistic appearance. Yet the towns have municipal improvements equal to Eastern cities many times their size and their volume of monthly business is astounding.

Choice Lots Secured

We bought our properties on a wholesale cash-price basis. Our own engineers surveyed and platted these building lots. The price we ask for them is lower than the appraisal of adjoining lots.

Property on Main street in one of these towns, in the vicinity of lots we are selling, has, within the past 30 days, sold for $100 a front foot. ALL of our lots are well located.

The New Plan

By the new plan, each investor secures one building lot in each of the ten towns.

Moreover, the investor may buy these lots now and investigate later. Go out and see the towns on your summer vacation trip or investigate in any other manner.

If dissatisfied, all payments will be refunded, provided we are notified within six months of the date of first payment. This is incorporated in the contract.

A third feature of the Plan insures your life FREE. For, should a purchaser die during the payment period, all further obligations will be cancelled and a warranty deed given his estate for the ten properties he holds, provided as much as $500 has been paid.

Under our ten-town investment Plan, when one of these industrial centers again doubles in population, the investor's property in that town alone will be worth more than the total cost of his ten building lots.

Six of the ten chosen towns have doubled in population in the past twelve months. All of them have grown astonishingly. Some will certainly become large cities. Keep your lot in the town that grows fastest, sell the remaining nine lots, and with the proceeds go into business in the biggest town, where you have held valuable property!

$50 Down Secures Ten Lots

Ten building lots—one lot in each town—may be secured for $50 down. As soon as the first payment has been made you may sell or transfer, if you choose, any number of your building lots.

Our agents in each town—a National or State Bank—will care for your property as willingly and as capably as they handle our business. The balance is payable in monthly installments of $25. The total cost of the ten lots is but $1,000, averaging $100 each. There are no taxes or interest to pay, no notes to sign, no building restrictions.

When payments have all been made a Warranty Deed and Abstract of Title for each building lot will be given you.

Each allotment of ten building lots has the same value. We have grouped them in that way. Two corner lots and one preferred business lot are included in every allotment. By the authentic town maps furnished, purchasers can see the location and size of their lots. There are no preferred allotments.

The man who buys now and "forgets" for three years that he has the properties will find that his holdings have ripened into an exceedingly profitable investment.

Copyrighted FREE Book

We wish to send you our Book of Facts which sets forth in type and pictures: (1) The rapid development of the new Northwest. (2) The amazing growth of the ten most promising towns. (3) A full explanation of the ten-town investment proposition we are offering, and all about our company.

We believe that never in the history of this country has so good an investment opportunity been offered.

Population alone creates land values in cities. No other cities are increasing in population so fast as the young cities along this new transcontinental line; no other property has increased so rapidly in value as the property in these towns where, by our plan, building lots can now be bought at a low price.

The Ten Towns

MOBRIDGE, So. Dak.—Has grown faster in first three years than Omaha did in first ten years. Distributing point on Missouri River where wholesale industries are being established. Division on main line; terminal of two branch lines. Car shops, round house, storage depot, 16 miles side track. R. R. Co. spent $2,000,000 here. Center of fertile farming country. Our lots lie in 2 blocks of Main street, 4 blocks from depot, near business center.

McLAUGHLIN, So. Dak.—Center of stock-raising and fine agricultural district. Fastest growing town on main line. Terminal of Cannon Ball River branch railway. Our lots lie next to heart of town, on both sides of Main street, 4 blocks from depot.

McINTOSH, So. Dak.—16,000 farmers took up Indian land here last fall. 10,000 farms are being put under cultivation. County seat and Railway Division point. Railway industries, numerous grain elevators, banks, lumber yards, municipal improvements, etc., indicate town will again double its population in 12 months. Our lots abut on Main street, 4 blocks from depot.

LEMMON, So. Dak.—Named for George E. Lemmon. Less than three years old. Has electric lights, fire department, graded streets; three banks, with resources $500,000; 4 grain elevators, 6 hotels. Freight shipments exceedingly large. Our lots abut on Main street, less than 1 block from depot.

HETTINGER, No. Dak.—County seat. Has 4 banks, 6 lumber yards, 5 grain elevators, substantial brick blocks, many civic improvements. State Experimental Station here. Our lots lie close to railway, 6 blocks from Main street, near new high school, in best section of town.

REEDER, No. Dak.—In the heart of wheat belt. Has 4 grain elevators; 3 banks, one with $100,000 resources; 5 lumber yards; substantial stores, houses, churches, schools; lignite coal and tile clay plentiful. Our lots lie on both sides of Main street, 3½ blocks from depot, between central business section and high school.

ROUNDUP, Mont.—Mining center where R. R. Co. invested $1,000,000 in coal fields. Pay Rolls at mines, $100,000 per month. Lumbering, cattle-raising and agriculture are other important industries. Graded, macadamized streets, electric lights, water works and other municipal improvements of cities 10 times as large. Our lots lie on both sides of Main street, adjoining new court house square.

THREE FORKS, Mont.—At the confluence of 3 Rivers. A natural trade center. Railway Division Point, with car shops and round houses. Two branch lines projected. A great country for fruit, grains and vegetables. Our lots lie near depot, but 5 blocks from main street.

DEER LODGE, Mont.—County Seat—railway division point. Car shops employ 300 men. Surrounding territory rich in mineral and agricultural resources. Electric lights, water works, sewerage system. Our properties are 4½ blocks from business center, 6 blocks from Court House.

ST. MARIES, Idaho.—At confluence of St. Joe and St. Maries Rivers. Near largest body of white pine timber in the world. Center of growing lumber industries. One of the new saw mills at St. Maries to have a pay roll of $300,000. Branch Railway here, as well as transcontinental line. Extensive gold, silver and copper mines in the surrounding mountains. Rich bottom lands produce enormously, grain, fruit and truck. 300,000 acres of fine Indian land close to St. Maries just settled upon. Town has electric lights, water works and other public utilities. Our properties lie within 3 blocks of Main Avenue in the best section of the town.

NOW IS THE TIME

We are selling but a limited number of our lots.

Hence, the advisability of prompt action by those interested in this investment proposition.

In case of over subscription, applications will be filled in the order received.

We reserve the right to reject applications or to increase the price of our properties at any time.

Reservations may be made by wire or letter—or by coupon No. 1, here attached. Those who wish to do so may make personal application at our offices, 308 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. The Reservation Coupon (No. 1) brings to you our contract of sale for examination, and execution (if satisfactory to you). Also, full information about the properties on sale, and about our Company, with which is associated more than a score of successful business-men of integrity and prominence.

The Inquiry Coupon (No. 2) brings our copyrighted book, free, with full information, but does not bring contract of sale.

NORTHWEST TOWNSITE COMPANY
302 Chestnut Street
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.

References:
Merchants' National Bank, Philadelphia, Penn.
Geo. B. Haynes, Immigration Agt., C. M. & St. P. Ry., Chicago, Ill.
Dun or Bradstreet

No. 2---Inquiry Coupon

NORTHWEST TOWNSITE COMPANY
302 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, Penna.

Gentlemen:—
You may send me further information regarding your properties, with maps.

Name.....

P. O. Address.....

No. 1---Reservation Coupon

NORTHWEST TOWNSITE COMPANY
302 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

Gentlemen:—Reserve for me temporarily one allotment of ten building lots as offered in your advertisement in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and send complete additional descriptions of your properties, with contract, which I will execute, if found satisfactory.

Name.....

P. O. Address.....

Send contract to.....
Give name of Banker or Express Co.

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

A Measure for Prayer*

TO pray for power simply for the sake of power, is unchristian. To pray for "might," in order to fight the battle of the Lord more and more bravely, is noble.

The Ephesians were to pray for might, so that they could grasp the great faith which receives Jesus into the heart as a permanent dwelling-place. Only thus could they hope to know, "with all the saints," the greatness of his love. Only thus could they be "filled with the fulness of God."

It is charged against us Christians that we do not pray as did the Christians of a century or more ago. The cold finger of science has pointed another way. We are told that if, as we assert, the plan of events was laid out in the beginning, our prayers can not change them. Therefore why pray?

There is an old story of colonial days which illustrates this point.

A farmer started out one morning to plough in a distant field. He bade his wife good-by and then took his gun down and laid it across his shoulder.

"You have prayed to God for protection," said his pious wife. "Can you not trust him? Remember that if it was foreordained that an Indian should shoot you to-day, all your precautions are useless."

"Very true," responded her husband, with a twinkle in his eye. "But what if it were foreordained that I was to shoot the Indian first?"

It is undoubtedly God's purpose that many of his blessings shall be preceded by prayer on our part.

But it is not only in order that we may secure blessings for ourselves that we should pray. The true abandonment of earnest prayer lifts up the whole man. The idea of communion with a Being infinitely wise and infinitely pure must have an ennobling effect upon character. A man, it is said, is best known by the company he keeps, for his nature is probably akin to that of his chosen mates. If he chooses to be much in company with his Maker, it is a sign that he desires to be like him; and the more he is with him the more likely he is to resemble his great Companion. If it is true that the trend of the modern so-called religious life is away from prayer, let us do all in our power to reverse it. Away from prayer is away from God.

All of the great preachers have been men of prayer—Wesley, Whitefield, Finney, Edwards, Moody, Phillips Brooks; and many great statesmen, authors, poets—men in all the walks of life—are pictured by their biographers as often at prayer. Washington at Valley Forge; Lincoln during the Civil War; Robert E. Lee; Stonewall Jackson; Gladstone; McKinley, and many others.

One of the wise old preachers has quaintly said: "Whatsoever it is that presses thee, go tell thy Father; put over the matter into his hand, and so shalt thou be freed from that care that the world is full of. When thou art about to do anything, go tell God of it, and thou hast done for the matter of caring; no more care, but quiet, sweet diligence in thy duty, and dependence on him for the carriage of thy matters. Roll thy cares and thyself with them all on thy God."

And while we seek for help, let us not forget the praise due our Maker. In Browning's poem,

> Morning, evening, noon, and night,
> "Praise God!" sang Theocrite.

In his greatness, he ceased to praise as he had done in his poverty, and the angel Gabriel sent him back to his "poor trade" that he might learn to praise again, for that is the best use of our life—to praise God.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, May 22. TEXT: Eph. 3 : 14-20.

What Is a Christian?*

CHRIST told the young ruler that to be a Christian one must not only keep the commandments, but he must dedicate all that he has to God's service and "follow him."

Some have interpreted this to mean that we are literally to give up all our property, throw ourselves on the community for support, and go from place to place preaching the Gospel.

The Oriental religions usually impress this method of service upon their believers. The consequence is an enormous population of mendicant eremites, who devote their lives to reflection upon Buddha or Brahma, or "the Understanding Dream between the breaths and faring beyond this world"; or something else equally inane and foreign to common sense.

Christ meant nothing of this sort. His advice to the young ruler was of the particular kind required by him. It was not intended to be generally applied.

Turn to the words of Christ and see what he thought a Christian should be. Look first at the Sermon on the Mount.

A Christian must be humble; he must mourn his sin in meekness; he must seek after righteousness, as the hart panteth after the water-brooks; mercy, purity, the love of peace and active work to secure it everywhere in the world, must characterize him; he must set an example to others, for when he professes Christianity, he becomes as a city set on an hill, and he must "let his light shine."

Again, he must keep his temper; he must have no quarrels; he must not be satisfied with obeying the letter of the law, but he must see that his heart is washed clean of sin in its most inward parts and he must cast sin from him even though it cost him an eye or a hand. This hatred of sin underlies everywhere the Master's preaching.

It may be remembered that it was said of a distinguished public man: "We love him for the enemies he has made."

The Christian will perhaps have enemies. Christ has no part with Belial, and the hosts of Belial will war against Christ's people.

Find any cause upon which bad men are united in hatred, and it is pretty sure to be of Christ. Thus the liquor-dealers, almost to a man, hate the temperance cause; and thus those who expect to make money out of war hate the peace societies.

Beware of the arguments of those whose pockets will profit by the success of the cause which they espouse. Their eyes are likely to be blinded so that they cannot see clearly.

But turn again to the words of Christ in his greatest discourse.

A Christian will love even his enemies. In short, he, if he be a thorough Christian, will be perfect even as God is perfect.

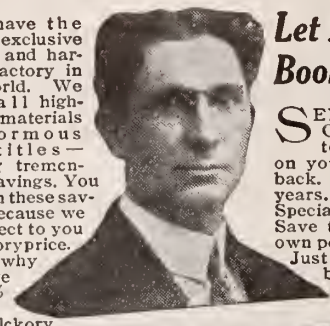
He will bestow alms, but he will not give boastfully nor for effect; he will pray—not to be seen of men, but bowing low before his Maker, alone in the great presence; he will fast, but not for effect. He will not strive to lay up earthly treasure — perhaps the most important advice of all, in this age of materialism. After providing for one's living and the needs of old age, why should men seek to pile up millions? We cannot serve God and Mammon.

And so on, through all of that wonderful sermon. Study it, and you will learn better than in any other way what it is to be a Christian.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, May 22. TEXT: Acts 26 : 24-29.

Any Church wishing to use the individual Communion Service, the sanitary method of observing the Lord's Supper, can secure a trial service from the Thomas Communion Service Co., Lima, Ohio. See their advertisement on page 469.

Here's Good News on M 1910 Split Hickory Buggie



We have the largest exclusive vehicle and harness factory in the world. We buy all high-grade materials in enormous quantities—making tremendous savings. You share in these savings because we sell direct to you at factory price. That's why we save you 25% on any Split Hickory Vehicle you want—from our 125 styles.

Let Me Pay Postage on My Big, Ne Book of 125 Styles to Your Hon

SEND me your name now. I'll send you my bo Choose the Split Hickory you want. I'll guaran to save you 25% on the retail price. Try it 30 da on your own roads. If it isn't all you expect—send back. If you want to keep it—I'll guarantee it for 2 years. If you decide to take my Split Hickory Auto-S Special—I'll save you $26.50. Buy direct from the facto Save the in-between profits. Keep them at home in y own pockets.

Just write me now—a postal. Know my offers before y buy. Just a penny to find out how to save 25% on buggy you want. Write me.

H. C. Phelps
Manufacturer of Split Hickory Vehicles

The Ohio Carriage Manufacturing Co.
Station 236, Columbus, O.

30-Day Fr Road Test

2 Years' Guarantee

Save $26.50 Cash

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL We will ship y "RANGER" BICY E on approval, fr ht prepaid to any place in the United States without a cent deposit in advanc d allow ten days free trial from the day you receive it. If it does not suit y in every way and is not all or more than we claim for it and a better bicycle than you c et anywhere else regardless of price, or if for any reason whatever you do not wish to k it, ship it back to us at our expense for freight and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We sell the highest grade bicycles direct from f ry to rider at lower prices than any other house. /e save you $10 to $25 middlemen's profit on every bicycle. Highest grade models th Puncture-Proof tires, Imported Roller chains, pedals, etc., at prices no higher than ap mail order bicycles; also reliable medium grade models at unheard of low price

RIDER AGENTS WANTED in each town and district to ride and exhibit a s le 1910 "Ranger" Bicycle furnished by us. You v e astonished at the wonderfully low prices and the liberal propositions and special offer w ill give on the first 1910 sample going to your town. Write at once for our special offer.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our cat ue and learn our low prices and liberal terms. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles er your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail store ill be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, rs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual p s.

DO NOT WAIT but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fu of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

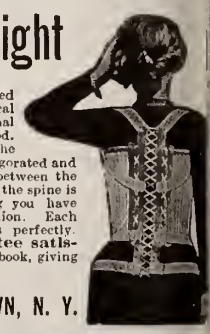
MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. D-71, CHICAGO, IL

NOT LIKE THIS

LIKE THIS

Crooked Spines Made Straight



If you are suffering from any form of spinal trouble you can be relieved in your own home without pain or discomfort. A wonderful anatomical appliance has been invented by a man who relieved himself of Spinal Curvature. Its results are marvelous. It is nature's own method. Eminent physicians are endorsing it. The Sheldon Method relieves the pressure of the affected parts of the spine, the whole spine is invigorated and strengthened, all soreness is taken out of the back, the cartilage between the vertebrae is made to expand, the contracted muscles are relaxed and the spine is straightened. There is bright hope for you, no matter how long you have suffered. We have strong testimonials from every State in the Union. Each appliance is made to order from individual measurements and fits perfectly. There is positively no inconvenience in wearing. We guarantee satisfaction and let you use it 30 days. Write for our new book, giving full information and references.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO., 207 17th ST. JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

A Flying Start

We are organized to promote successful poultry culture. You can get flying start as a poultryman and make profits sure by using the

Rancocas Strain White Leghorn HATCHING EGGS We have over 10,000 Laye

RANCOCAS EGGS HIGHEST FERTILITY

The laying propensity of our S. C. White Leghorns is indestructibly fixed. They are n bred for "fancy" purposes. Ours are thoroughly bred utility birds, "the kind that l the eggs." We have 10,000 layers, and establish every year more paying egg far for beginners and introduce more vitality into flocks of expert poultry raisers th any other farm in the country. You can avoid all hatching losses by ordering da old-chix from us. Any size shipment from 25 upward, all sturdy and vigoro Breeding stock, any quantity. Complete instructions for beginners—care, feedin etc. No charge. Write for circular giving our plan and prices.

INTERNATIONAL POULTRY SALES CO.
J. M. Foster, President, Box 160, Brown's Mills in the Pines, N. J.

BEEKEEPING its pleasures and profits, is the theme of that excellent and handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on trial for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page book on bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name this paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, Ohio

LAWN FENC Many designs - Cheap wood. 32 page Catalog free. Special Prices Churches and Cemeteri Coiled Spring Fence Co Box D Winchester, In

A YOUNG PREACHER

A BRIGHT young boy of sixteen years has recently received a local preacher's license from the New Haven

Francis Willard Rollins
The Boy Preacher

District of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is Francis Willard Rollins, of Bakerville, Conn., son of a Methodist preacher. He is still at school. That the lad is physically vigorous is evidenced by the fact that he walks a distance of five miles to Torrington High School and five miles home again every day of the school year. He professes no knowledge of theology but says quite simply in straightforward manly fashion, "I believe I know what God wants us to do and what he'll do to us if we don't do it."

The boy has been brought up in an atmosphere of religious fervor. His father is a Methodist preacher who has been in evangelistic and mission work in large cities and has held important pastorates in various parts of New England. In his father's absence the boy preacher has occupied the pulpit, he has conducted prayer meetings and services of the Christian Endeavor Society, and has occasionally preached in neighboring towns. After his graduation from High School, he expects to enter Wesleyan University, and later hopes to take a course at the Theological Seminary.

The boy's mother died when he was but six years of age. Four years later his father married a niece of Russell H. Conwell, the noted Baptist preacher of Philadelphia. M. K. H.

CALLED HIGHER

Mrs. Susan Lapham (77), at Macedon, N. Y.
Cynthia Latham Case (84), at Burkett, Neb.
Mrs. Sarah Morse Paine, of St. Joseph, Mich.
Mrs. Mary J. Ives (82), of Jacksonville, Fla.
James H. Kerr, of Slipping Rock, Pa. (85).
Mrs. Harriet Clemens Moore, of Lincoln, Neb.
Marion M. Elliott (56), at San Diego, Calif.

Christmas morning, 1909, at Macon, N. C., Miss Harriet E. Nowell (56).

Mrs. Jane A. Minor was called home on May 25, 1909. She was one of the saints of the earth.

Mrs. Margaret A. Hungerford died at Westfield, N. Y., December 20, 1909. She was born September 9, 1829.

James Curry, of Pawnee City, Neb., departed this life January 2, 1910, lacking nine days of being eighty-seven years of age.

Rev. James W. Raynor, of Montrose, Pa., entered into the joys of eternal life January 7, 1910, in his eighty-eighth year.

Mrs. L. M. Raymond, of Warrensburg, Ill., was called to the higher life November 16, 1909, aged ninety-three years.

Wesley Davis, of Richland, Mo., died January 27, 1910, aged seventy-two years. He was a consistent Christian.

Benjamin Waters Phillips, of Green Valley, Knox County, O., was called home January 17, 1910, aged seventy-eight years.

Elisha Clark died at Chatham, N. Y., January 10, 1910. He was a subscriber to this paper for twenty years or more.

Mrs. Robinson, of Ayers Cliff, Quebec, Canada, passed on to her eternal home on August 19, 1909, at the age of seventy-nine.

Died February 5, 1910, Carrie M. Bettys, of New York City, member of Calvary Baptist Church, at the age of sixty-two years.

Rev. Samuel H. Beaven died in Minneapolis, Minn., in January, 1910, after an illness of over ten years. Up to the time of his sickness he had been engaged in city mission work in Minneapolis.

Mrs. Joseph Briggs passed away at her home in Plattsville, Colo., October 12, 1909, at the age of sixty-seven.

Mr. W. W. Dennen, of East Poland Me., died in August, 1909. He had long been a reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Miss Almira Westcott, of Plainfield, Ill., "passed on" February 14, 1910. An earnest reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; a missionary of the paper also.

Mrs. Caroline Pillow, aged eighty-three years, died at Wilkinsburg, Pa., Sunday, 1:18 A.M., January 30, 1910. Mrs. Pillow was the widow of Captain Henry Pillow.

Miss Martha Seaman, of Wantagh, L. I., entered into rest in December of 1908. She was secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society of Wantagh for nearly twenty years.

Entered into rest, Mr. William Gardner at his home, Ontario, Ind., at the age of eighty-four. He was a devoted reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for over twenty years.

Mrs. T. B. Seaman, of Wantagh, L. I., entered into heavenly rest March 10, 1910. She was loved by all who knew her for her Christian character and loving and kind disposition, especially to the needy poor.

Rev. Charles McKelvy, member of the California Conference, died some time ago at the Pacific Old People's Home, San Francisco, where he had been the efficient and highly esteemed superintendent for nearly a score of years.

Mrs. Isabel Lewis (79), of Pacific Grove, Calif.

Mrs Mary C. Park, of De Soto, Mo., passed to her rest on November 18, 1909.

Died January 24, 1910, Mrs. Hermon Osgood, of Lower Cabot, Vt., aged sixty-three years.

Wm. Cooke, of Tuscarora, Pa., died recently, aged sixty-five years.

Mrs. Rebecca Largent, in Butler, Mo. She died as she had lived, triumphantly in the Christian faith.

William N. Gesner, late of Whitneyville, Conn., passed away at Alna, Me., on February 26, 1910, in the ninety-fourth year of his age.

Mrs. Thomas Egerton, of Galt, Ontario, departed this life February 15, 1910, aged seventy-two years. For eighteen years a reader of this paper.

Rev. Henri Gelan, pastor of the First German Baptist Church, of Hoboken, N. J., died on Wednesday, March 16. He was born September 13, 1863, in Bischweiler, Alsace, when it was still a province of France, and he was a descendent of the Huguenots. The years of his youth he spent in Paris. In 1883 he came to this country and settled in Lynn, Mass. He studied at the Newton Theological Institution. He took charge of a French-American church in Stryker, Ohio. Being fully conversant with the German language, and having a strong inclination for the German work, he entered it in 1896 and served as pastor in Bridgeport, Conn., Winona, Minn., Arnprior, Ont., Hepburn, Pa., and Hoboken, his last charge, from whence his Lord took him to himself.

The Arm of the Lord

LET us cling to the arm
That is mighty to save,
To the arm of the Lord let us cling.
He will help us to ride
O'er the treacherous wave,
And His Spirit will help
Timid hearts to be brave;
To the arm of the Lord let us cling.

When we think of our sins
We are tempted to doubt;
To the arm of the Lord we must cling.
Faith in God and His Son
Puts temptations to rout,
Though in legions they come
From within, from without;
To the arm of the Lord we must cling.

There's forgiveness with God,
When repentant we cry,
In the name of His Son, whom He gave:
On this promise of God
We can ever rely,
We will treasure the word
Till we gather on high,
Holding fast to the arm that will save.

Come to Jesus, oh come,
Though your sins weigh you down;
Come to Jesus and trust in His love.
For a penitent soul
There is never a frown—
There's a welcome instead,
And a robe and a crown,
And a home in the mansions above.

Passaic, N. J. JOHN M. MORSE.

The Mattress That is Built—Not Stuffed

Ostermoor $15.

Ever Toss on Your Bed at Night?

Possibly you blamed yourself, or your dinner, instead of the guilty mattress. But---if the mattress soothed, you wouldn't toss, you'd sleep. Logical---isn't it? To put it another way---when you go to bed on an Ostermoor, you do sleep---because the Ostermoor compels relaxation. The moment you lie down the only consciousness you have is that of absolute comfort, and the sensation blends quickly into sound, refreshing slumber. One million people know this. The reason lies in the construction of the Ostermoor. Place four thousand sheets of filmy, downy cotton, built (not stuffed) into an evenly tufted, soft, elastic mattress, and you have a sleep producer miles ahead of the old-fashioned stuffed horse hair, or stuffed cotton mattress usually sold. Follow common sense --- sleep on an Ostermoor.

Our 144-page Book with Samples—Sent FREE

MATTRESSES COST
4 ft. 6 in.,	45 lbs.	$15.00
4 ft.	40 lbs.	13.35
3 ft. 6 in.,	35 lbs.	11.70
3 ft.	30 lbs.	10.00
2 ft. 6 in.,	25 lbs.	8.35

All 6 ft. 3 in. long
EXPRESS CHARGES PREPAID
In two parts, 50 cents extra

The Ostermoor Mattress is not for sale at stores generally, but there's an Ostermoor dealer in most places ---the livest merchant in town. Write us and we'll give you his name. But don't take chances with imitations at other stores--make sure you're getting the genuine Ostermoor---our trademark label is your guarantee. We will ship you a mattress by express, prepaid, same day your check is received by us, when we have no dealer or he has none in stock.

OSTERMOOR & CO., 115 Elizabeth St., N.Y.
Canada: Alaska Feather & Down Co., Ltd., Montreal

"GOOD FOR A LIFETIME'S BED TIME"

"SAVE-THE-HORSE" SPAVIN CURE.
REG. TRADE MARK

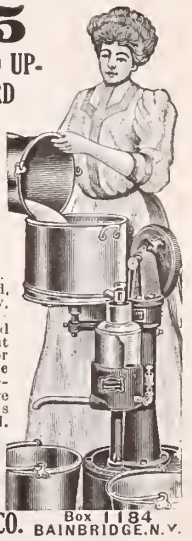
THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK
Chickasha, Okla., Dec. 24, 1909.
Troy Chemical Co., Binghamton, N. Y.
Check for $10 enclosed. Please send me two bottles of "Save-the-Horse." Have had splendid results from your medicine
Yours truly, H. B. JOHNSON
96 Munn Ave., Newark, N. J., Dec. 4, 1909.
Troy Chemical Co., Binghamton, N. Y.
Some time ago I purchased a horse, believing him to be a real good one. At the time I did not know that he had been fired and blistered. He became very lame from a bone spavin and the prospect of getting him right was not very favorable, owing to his advanced age.
However, having a bottle of "Save-the-Horse" on hand, of which I had used very little in satisfactorily curing puffs on another horse, I ventured to think it would help the spavin on my new purchase. I was ashamed to drive the horse in the daytime, he was so lame. I used more than half the bottle. Suddenly, about ten days after, the horse forgot his lameness, and to this day he acts and goes as sound as a colt. Now, should you want a recommendation you are at liberty to refer to me. Respectfully yours, JOS. WM. BURTON.

$5.00 a bottle, with signed guarantee or contract. Send for copy, booklet and letters from business men and trainers on every kind of case. Permanently cures Spavin, Thoroughpin, Ringbone (except low), Curb, Splint, Capped Hock, Windpuff, Shoe Boil, Injured Tendons and all lameness. No scar or loss of hair. Horse works as usual.
Dealers or Express Paid.
Troy Chemical Co., 39 Commercial Ave., Binghamton, N.Y.

TRAVELING SALESMEN

Earn the Biggest Salaries of any class of men in the world. Over 600,000 employed in the United States and Canada. The demand for good salesmen exceeds the supply. We will teach you to be one by mail and assist you to secure a good position through our FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.
We receive calls for thousands of Salesmen and have assisted thousands of men to secure good positions or better salaries. A great many of our graduates who formerly earned from $25 to $75 a month, have since earned from $100 to as high as $500 a month and expenses. Thousands of good positions now open. If you want to secure one of them or increase your earnings our Free Book, "A Knight of The Grip," will show you how. Address nearest office for it today.
Dept. 496 NATIONAL SALESMEN'S TRAVELING ASSOCIATION
Chicago, New York, Kansas City, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Atlanta.

$15.95 AND UPWARD
AMERICAN SEPARATOR



THIS OFFER IS NO CATCH.
It is a solid proposition to send, on trial, fully guaranteed, a new, well made, easy running separator for $15.95. Skims hot or cold milk; making heavy or light cream. Designed, especially for small dairies, hotels and private families, different from this picture which illustrates our large capacity machines. The bowl is a sanitary marvel, easily cleaned. Gears thoroughly protected. Western Orders filled from Western points. Whether your dairy is large or small write us and obtain our handsome free catalog. Address:
AMERICAN SEPARATOR CO. Box 1184 BAINBRIDGE, N.Y.

AGENTS—$33.30 A WEEK

Why not make it? Jack Wood did it! He writes—"Hurry up 100 more—sold first lot in 2 days—best seller I ever saw." Hundreds of agents coining money—$5.60 worth of tools for the price of one. Wonderful invention—drop forged from finest steel. Nickel Plated all over. Astonishing low price to agents—1,200 ordered by one man. Get our grand confidential proposition quick. Sample free—don't delay—experience not needed—write at once.
THOMAS MFG. CO., 2124 Wayne St., DAYTON, OHIO

20 Beautiful Post Cards 10c
No Two Alike—Latest Designs
Lovely assortment of 20 Artistic Birthday, Friendship, Good Luck, Roses and Flowers in exquisite colors, all for only 10 cents, if you answer this ad. immediately.
J. H. Seymour, 255 W. Eighth St., Topeka, Kan.

PLACE YOUR TRUST IN FAIRBANK'S SOAPS

Gold Dust

GOLD DUST is an antiseptic washing powder that works wonders. It not only removes the visible dirt and grease, but goes deep after every hidden particle and minute impurity—sterilizes as well as cleanses—and leaves everything it touches clean, pure, wholesome, safe.

If you want to reduce the muscular effort of household cleaning, let GOLD DUST show you the way.

Don't use Naphtha, Borax, Soda, Ammonia or Kerosene. The Gold Dust Twins need no outside help.
For washing dishes, scrubbing floors, cleaning woodwork, oilcloth, silverware and tinware, polishing brasswork, cleaning bathroom pipes, refrigerators, etc., softening hard water, washing clothes, and making the finest soft soap.

"Let the Gold Dust Twins do your work"

Fairy Soap

Plenty of second grade soap masquerades under strong perfumes and dyes, and sells at a fancy price.

FAIRY SOAP—is white—undyed—and is made from edible fats. It costs but 5c a cake because it contains no needlessly expensive perfume.

FAIRY SOAP—the handy, floating, oval cake—is daintily wrapped in tissue and packed in a carton.

When you want all soap and no sham, order FAIRY SOAP.

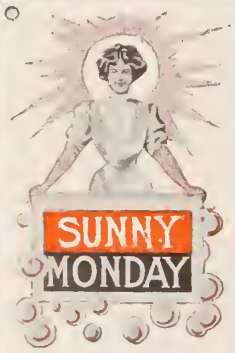
Fairy Soap was granted highest possible awards at both St. Louis and Portland Expositions.

"Have You a little 'Fairy' in your home?"



Sunny Monday

Laundry Soap

Avoid rosin soaps!

True economy means the saving of clothes—not soap. When clothes cost dollars, where soap cost cents, it pays to know what kind of laundry soap you introduce your clothes to.

Sunny Monday Laundry Soap *(N.R.) is a clothes-saver. It will double the life of your clothes.

Sunny Monday *(N.R.) will not shrink your flannels, will not make your woolens harsh and "nettley," nor will it fade your colored goods.

*N. R. means "No Rosin." Sunny Monday Laundry Soap contains no rosin. Rosin cheapens soap but injures clothes.

"Sunny Monday Bubbles will wash away your troubles"

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY—MAKERS—CHICAGO

Christian Herald

$1.50 a Year—5c. a Copy
Published 52 Times a Year

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH, JR.

New York, May 18, 1910

VOL. 33—NO. 20
Offices: Bible House, New York

From the painting by H. Valkenburg

FIRST STEPS

Questions and Answers

In forwarding MSS. to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, enclose stamped envelopes for return, if unavailable.

W. S., Grand Forks, N. D. As "Mark Twain" has just passed away, it might be of general interest to show us the origin and significance of Mr. Clemens' pen name. I have searched my dictionary—unabridged, too—and encyclopedia and find nothing to the point.

"Mark Twain" is one of the calls of the leadsmen on the Mississippi steamers. The call "Mark Twain" meant to mark "two fathoms." Mr. Clemens first signed the name to articles written for the Territorial Enterprise of Virginia City, Nev.

N. E. McK., Millanville, Que., Can. 1. What are the Biblical grounds against polygamy? 2. What is the difference between "apostle" and "disciple"?

1. Although polygamy was a prevailing custom in the ancient East (and is so still, to some extent), many if not a majority of the Israelites had a single wife. (See Prov. 12: 4; 19: 14; 31: 10.) In Gospel times polygamy had almost died out. (See Matt. 18: 25; Luke 1: 5; Acts 5: 1.) It is notable that no case of polygamy among the Jews is mentioned in the Gospel narrative. Christ in his teachings impliedly condemned polygamy as contrary to the original purpose of marriage. (See Matt. 19: 3-9.) Paul's teaching is also clear on the same subject. (See I. Cor. 7; Eph. 5: 23; Eph. 4: 4.) 2. An "apostle" is "one sent to minister," or "one with a mission," while a "disciple" is a learner, a follower, a believer. A disciple of Christ is any one who believes his doctrine and emulates his example: an apostle one with a special work to do. The two terms, however, are very often employed interchangeably.

A. R., Housatonic, Mass. 1. Was the late Dr. Klopsch a doctor of divinity or an M.D.? 2. What church did he attend? 3. What is the correct pronunciation of "Klopsch"? 4. What did Italy do to show her gratitude for his co-operation after the great earthquake?

1. Dr. Klopsch was a doctor of philosophy and a doctor of laws. 2. He was a member of the Methodist Church and one of its lay preachers. 3. The name is pronounced as spelled, with the "c" silent. 4. The King and Queen in a personal interview expressed their thanks and appreciation of his great work after the earthquake and in the time of stress which followed.

J. L. C., Norman, Calif. 1. When and by whom were the first Bibles printed in America? 2. What was the price of a Bible at this time? I heard the statement made recently that the first Bibles were printed in this country in 1734, and it took the wages of a laboring man fifteen years to pay for a Bible at that time.

1. Bibliophiles for a long time contended that the first American Bible was printed by Robert Aitkin, of Philadelphia, in 1781. Isaiah Thomas in his History of Printing says that Kneeland & Green, of Boston, printed an edition of the Bible for Daniel Henchman. It bears the date of 1761, and is a copy of a London Bible, put secretly through the press, as the Bibles were allowed to be printed in Scotland and England only by those who had the privilege from the Crown. 2. We do not know the price of the Bible. This is an overstatement, because Bibles were quite common in the early colonies.

L. A. C., Narvon, Pa. How much postage must be put on letters and United States postal cards or any class of mail matter to send to foreign countries, and to what countries can you send mail at the same rate as over the United States?

You can send a letter to Mexico, Canada and any part of Great Britain for two cents. Letters may be sent to Germany for two cents, but are only taken on steamers landing at German ports. The fast steamers sail by way of England and take only letters bearing five-cent stamps. All other foreign countries and colonies five cents. Postal cards take a two-cent stamp in all cases, even Great Britain, where the two-cent stamp takes a letter of one ounce.

M. M. B., Waterbury, Conn. What is the Christian argument against suicide?

That life is given to us as a trust, indeed as our greatest trust; that we must keep it and use it rightly and be responsible for it. We are here by the will of the Almighty. We are set in the path of duty and to please our whim, or at the call of some allurement, we must not abandon our post. There is something here for each of us to do, both in developing the best there is in ourselves and in helping others. Till God wills it, we must abide. Job said, when tempted to die: "All the days of my warfare would I wait till my release should come." (Job 14: 4.) "Do thyself no harm," said Paul to the jailer at Philippi (Acts 16: 28). Every man who is sane knows that he has no right to take his life in his hands and fling it away. Human nature is weak; but just at the moment of our greatest weakness, we get divine reinforcement and reassurance if we ask for it.

J. L., Rayland, O. 1. Name the books written by Roosevelt. Is he writing a book of his travels in Africa? 2. Who is the present poet laureate of England?

1. The books by Theodore Roosevelt are: Winning of the West, History of the Naval War of 1812, Hunting Trips of a Ranchman, Life of Thomas Hart Benton, Life of Gouverneur Morris, Ranch Life and Hunting Trail, History of New York, The Wilderness Hunter, American Ideals and Other Essays, The Rough Riders, Life of Oliver Cromwell, The Strenuous Life. He is also part author of the following: Hero Tales from American History, The Deer Family, Outdoor Pastimes of an American Hunter. Scribner's Magazine has been publishing the account of his travels in Africa. 2. Alfred Austin is poet laureate of Great Britain, appointed in 1896.

R. W., Roanoke, W. Va. 1. Will you please describe the battle of Saratoga? 2. When were North and South Carolina separated? 3. How many constitutions have we had? 4. How was Paul executed and by whom?

1. There were two engagements near old Saratoga. General Burgoyne in command of the British forces encamped at Saratoga on September 14, 1777. On the 19th was fought the Battle of Bemis' Heights, with both sides claiming the victory. On the 7th of October was fought the Second Battle of Bemis' Heights, or Saratoga, in which Burgoyne was defeated, and ten days later he surrendered with 5,642 men. He had lost 4,000 in the campaign. 2. There was no formal act of separation of one colony or State from the other. In a charter of 1663 Charles II. of England made a grant to Earl Clarendon and others of the country called Carolina, really North Carolina. The original charter was withdrawn and in 1730 the Crown divided Carolina into North and South Carolina. Although this was the formal act, the people of the two parts seemed to have been conscious of separate interests and existence some time before. 3. We have only had one national constitution. In 1789 enough States had adopted it to permit it to go into force. 4. No one knows the exact manner of Paul's death. Some say he was beheaded; others simply state that he died a martyr, and one or two imply he died a natural death.

Subscriber, Oakwood, Mo. Please explain Matt. 16: 18. Is the Christian Church founded on Peter as the "Rock," or on Christ the Rock?

The passage in question is one usually referred to in support of the claims of the Roman Church, but it is quite certain that whatever power or authority was granted to any of the apostles was shared by all in common. The church was built upon twelve foundations (see Rev. 21: 14) and not upon Peter alone, but upon all the apostles (see Eph. 2: 20). The language of Matt. 16: 18 is metaphor. Besides, Peter never claimed or exercised any power different from his associates.

P. P. T., Freeman, S. D. Is it possible for any one, in the Gospel dispensation, and not believing in Christ, to be saved?

We can set no limit to the mercy and pardoning power of God. In all ages and in every nation he has raised up witnesses to himself. If the question refers to one who, living in Gospel times and having heard the message of salvation, wilfully ignores or rejects it, we might have reasonable doubts, although we are not to judge in such matters; but if he be in a portion of the world still in heathen darkness, the case is different. To deny the possibility of salvation to the heathen who have never heard the Gospel is opposed to the spirit of both the Old Testament and New Testament. The earliest Christian teachings held that the Holy Spirit exerted an influence upon the unevangelized by means of reason, and that those who lived pure, upright lives before God might be called, justified and saved. Justin Martyr, Clement, and still later, Zwingle, taught this doctrine, and believed that the moral and pure among the heathen might be accepted for the sake of Christ's finished work and atonement. Job was an Arab, of a heathen race; yet he is represented as a man of perfect integrity and under divine protection and blessing. Paul's exposition in Rom. 2: 14, 26, 27, which holds that those not being under the law (of Christ) may be a law unto themselves.

Abbie A. K., Amiret, Minn. Please explain John 3: 6, (2) 3: 19, and (3) the clause of Matt. 1: 20. 4. Why does Tischendorf say the Hebrew, or Christian, God is wholly masculine?

1. Jesus here stated an impressive general proposition: that a thing partakes of the nature of that from which it proceeds. By "flesh" he meant not the mere material body, but all that comes into the world by birth, as contradistinguished from "spirit," which is born of the Spirit and not of flesh. 2. Those who, knowing good from evil, preferred the latter, were condemned by that fact. This should be read in the light of the passages immediately preceding, from v. 16. In this case, it was the rejection of Christ, "the Light of the world." 3. The revelation to Joseph was to reassure him, as the passage itself clearly explains. 4. Man's likeness to his Maker consisted not in physical form or intellectual attainments, but in the divinely implanted "moral disposition of the soul," and in the love of knowledge, justice, righteousness and truth. Thoreau's remark refers to the ancient anthropomorphism which in almost every age has represented divinity in human form and with human characteristics (anthropopathy), probably because the finite spiritual human mind cannot conceive of God otherwise. The Hebrews were expressly warned against this in Exod. 20: 4, 5.

J. C. P., Capelsie, N. C. What kind of a needle was our Lord talking about when he spoke of the rich man and said "it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle," etc.?

Some travelers write that the "needle's eye" was and still is a common Eastern name of a small wooden gate or wicket which remains open after the larger gate in the city wall is shut for the night. The saying quoted in the passage was a proverb used in the Jewish schools to denote anything very difficult, or practically impossible.

Famous Christian Testimonies

Norman Hapgood

AS editor, author, critic, Mr. Norman Hapgood has been for the last ten years or more one of the best-known figures in the field of American periodical literature. His acute powers of observation and his keen judgment of men and motives have been sufficiently demonstrated in the influential pages of Collier's Weekly, of which he is editor. Mr. Hapgood's wide range of personal acquaintance, and his familiarity with those who are the acknowledged leaders in political and social thought and action in this country, marked him as a man peculiarly qualified to answer the question below:

"Is the spirit of Jesus more dominant in business and public affairs than when you entered active life, and is it an advantage or not for a public man to-day to be known as a professing Christian?"

Mr. Hapgood's reply is given below in full:

My Dear Sir: New York, December 17.

I feel sure that the spirit of Jesus is much more dominant in politics, business, and international relations than it was fifteen or twenty years ago. In politics, the interest in the welfare of the humble has been shown in the increasing support given to disinterested leaders and liberal measures. There have been many set-backs, as was shown only the other day in San Francisco, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, but in spite of these set-backs, progress is unmistakable. In business the change is decidedly more marked. There, too, there is much to do. The contest now going on in Illinois over the limitation in the working hours for women in certain employments, is an illustration; but nothing is more inspiriting than a thorough study of what employers are now willingly doing for their employees that they would have thought outrageous exactions a dozen years ago. The passage of the pure food law was a notable mile-post in the progress of honesty in business.

In international relations the value of peace is appreciated more widely every year.

Yours sincerely,

Norman Hapgood

Miscellaneous

Mrs. M. S., Englewood, Ill. It is Christian without Christ. It substitutes the human for the divine will. It does not teach the Atonement as the orthodox Christian churches teach it, nor does it believe in conversion in the same sense in which they do.

Mrs. S. D. T., Dresden, Kas. 1. Your letter is appreciated. Some circuses may be educational and instructive and without objectionable features; but there are others—and I fear the majority—that are demoralizing to the young. 2. We know nothing of the teacher in question.

A. G. B., Mabelvale, Ark. The general assumption of Biblical students is that although Cain, Abel and Seth are mentioned, there was a large posterity of Adam, not mentioned in the Scriptures, and that of neeessity there must have been intermarriages. This is practically made clear when we read that Cain, after the murder of Abel, went to the "land of Nod" (which means "exile"), and there took a wife and built a city. By that time, the posterity of Adam had doubtless spread over considerable territory.

J. G. B., Hanover, Va. Judas was discussed in THE MAIL-BAG recently, covering the same points mentioned in your question. His motive in joining the Twelve can only be conjectured. He may have been genuinely drawn by the preaching of the Master, or he may have been led by cupidity or ambition. Although there is no special record in his case, it is inferred that he shared the tasks of the other disciples and exercised the same powers.

S. S. G., Glenn, Calif. The leading Baptist quarterly of the United States, the Christian Review of January, 1855 (p. 23), said that the claim to the distinct and unbroken existence of a church substantially Baptist from the time of the apostles down to our own can not be sustained. This view is also taken by Cutting in his book entitled Historic Vindication (1859.) The whole subject is one which has been a disputed issue for generations and is likely to be affected, one way or the other, by any new expression of opinion.

NEW YORK, MAY 18, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

The Emperor of Japan

A Shinto Temple in Kyoto

Okuma, the "Grand Old Man" of Japan

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood

THE "STARS AND STRIPES" IN JAPAN

Rev. Francis E. Clark

By Rev. FRANCIS E. CLARK, LL.D.

MUCH foolish talk about war between the United States and Japan has arisen of late, and our papers have had more or less to say on the subject. The testimony of a recent traveler in Japan on this score may be of some value, and may help to dispel any lingering idea on the part of my fellow countrymen that "Japan is spoiling for war."

I do not pretend to have any inside political information, for though I had an audience with his Majesty, the Emperor, and an interview with Count Okuma, Japan's greatest living statesman, I had no conversation with them on international subjects. But I did have some opportunities to know how the people of various classes feel toward America.

From the Cleveland six hundred and fifty Americans landed at Nagasaki and Kobe and Yokohama last January, by far the largest body of tourists that ever visited these ports at the same time. In every place, as well as in Osaka, Tokyo and Kyoto, we were received with the utmost cordiality and enthusiasm. Not a discordant note was struck during the two weeks the Americans were in Japan. At every street corner crowds of Japanese awaited us, waving as many American as Japanese flags. I never saw so many American flags in my own country in the same length of time as during those two weeks in Japan. Over the principal streets of their cities great arches were erected, on which were always entwined affectionately the Stars and Stripes and the Sunrise flag of Dai Nippon.

The crowds on the streets cheered the Americans continually, shouting "Banzai! Banzai!" (May you live ten thousand years!) I did not hear of a single insult or derogatory remark, though such remarks would not have been surprising. We should have heard them, probably, if 650 Japanese had suddenly invaded an American city.

Not only did the crowd cheer the Americans, and show their cordial friendliness in every possible way, but more formal welcomes were not wanting. The Cleveland had scarcely come to anchor in Nagasaki Harbor when a large delegation of the leading citizens of Nagasaki, in tall hats and Prince Albert coats, climbed aboard the ship, and the mayor, in an eloquent address, offered the freedom of the city to the Americans, and made them feel that they were welcome from the first moment they stepped ashore on the soil of Japan. This was followed by a public meeting in one of the large halls in Nagasaki, when most cordial expressions of friendship and admiration for America were voiced by the leading citizens.

In Kobe and in Tokyo there were other formal meetings of welcome, when the mayor of the cities, the members of the common councils, the presidents of the boards of trade and others came together to express in every possible way their regard for the visitors and for the country from which they had come.

Still another reception was held at the beautiful villa of Count Okuma, the "Sage of Waseda." Nothing could have been more friendly than his words, and nothing more laudatory of America. In private conversation he afterwards assured me of his personal happiness in meeting so many Americans; and certainly the lavish bounty with which he received them left nothing to be desired, and showed his deep personal interest in their coming.

After this reception came another one on the following day in the largest theatre of Tokyo. Here the mayor and councilmen were present, and nearly a score of eminent Japanese citizens who had made the tour of America on the recent great business men's excursion. Count Shibusawa, the mayor of Tokyo, addressed us, and, as I had been asked by my fellow passengers to reply to these addresses of welcome on this and other occasions, I took special note of what was said, and detected, in all the addresses, not a single discordant note, nor anything that showed aught but the utmost friendliness for America and Americans. This reception in the theatre was given by the municipality of Tokyo, who had entertained the tourists at dinner at the Imperial Hotel immediately before.

The Beautiful Gate of a Temple at Nikko

On still another occasion, I had the opportunity of learning something of the friendly feeling of the people of Japan toward America at a banquet which, as one of the vice-presidents of the American Peace Society, I was asked by the Kyoto Peace Society to attend. "Here were gathered in the Kyoto Hotel," as I had occasion to write recently, "at a banquet that would have done credit to the Waldorf-Astoria, some twenty of the leading business and professional men of Kyoto, in many respects the second city of importance in the empire. The governor and mayor, though detained by illness, were represented by their deputies, and the president of the Chamber of Commerce and other leaders in the government, in the education and the business of the city, expressed themselves in the warmest terms towards America and Americans. They spoke of war between the two countries as an almost unthinkable crime." This banquet was presided over by the president of the Common Council of Kyoto. The speeches were all of the most cordial and unequivocal character, lauding the blessings of peace, the benefits of arbitration and conciliation, and inveighing against the horrors and the idiocy of unjust war.

At this time Secretary Knox's note about Manchuria had just been published in Japan, and was creating more or less excitement in official circles; and

Continued on page 495

THE
American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Bishop H. W .Warren*

PARTNERSHIP WITH GOD

TEXT—1. Thess. 2:12 (R. V.)
"Walk worthily of God, who calleth you into his own kingdom and glory."

IF I were to quote all the promises of co-operation, and give all the instances of partnership, between God and man that are given in the Bible, there would be no room for comment. From the time that God walked with Adam in the garden in the cool of the day, clear down to the time when Jesus left his disciples, saying "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," his saying has been evidently true: "Without me ye can do nothing." It only remains for us to illustrate, and make actual in our experience, the amazing possibility of such a partnership.

It is worthy of immortal memory that the lofty exhortation of the text to walk worthy of God was not addressed primarily to such great souls as Socrates, Aeschylus, Aristides the Just, but was presented as a possibility, and hence a duty, to the common people of Thessalonica; and kindred exhortations were addressed to the people of Corinth, Ephesus and Colosse and the degenerate cities of that day. After enumerating some of the most debasing and degrading sins of a lost humanity, Paul says to the Corinthians, "And such were some of you; but ye were washed, but ye were sanctified, but ye were justified, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and in the Spirit of our God." And to men of that class who were redeemed he offers this divine partnership with the infinite God. Surely no gospel of higher ideals could be presented to men. In what respect and in what departments are we in such partnership? In every respect and in all departments.

God the Principal Partner

Whether one adopt the theory of an absentee or the truer one of an immanent God, this co-operation of God with man is evident, either by the action of imposed laws and forces, or by personal power. One can think of no field of endeavor where man alone is sufficient. There must be a world that man did not make on which to labor. There must be air to breathe, forces and laws in full play, or man's endeavor is nought. Paul may plant and Apollos may irrigate, but it is all in vain unless God give the increase. Man is indebted to Him who constantly upholdeth all things by the word of his power for the constancy of nature. That sown seed is not of man's creation. He hides it in the ground and goes away and forgets it. But the Author of life remembers, and laws chemical, vegetable and vital are in full play in the dark ground, and at length the joy of harvest comes. Man has done so little that he scarcely seems to have been in the business at all.

Man makes a little world to sail the seas instead of realms of space. In a hundred days more or less it is at port thousands of miles away. But did he make the seas, the rivers in them and in the voyaging air by which the transit was made? No; but he is in partnership and entitled to use the resources of the firm.

There are about ninety millions of people in this country, more or less given to toil. They are in the fields, factories, mines, on the seas, everywhere. But there is an agile force that does more work than every man, woman and child of them all. It is steam. By it the train flies over the mountain and plain, the factory wheels are whirled, the mines are worked. But does man make every drop of water with this capability of intense expansion? No; but he is in partnership and is entitled to use the resources of the firm. Only let him walk worthy of God, the other partner.

A Union of Illimitable Resources

Man needs to make a way for his hurrying tides of commerce through the long miles of the heart of a mountain. He can not tear away the solid rock with his delicate fingers. And the pick swung by his sturdy arms makes scarcely any impression. But he reaches the solid, quiescent stick of dynamite far into the unbroken solidity of the rock and bids it turn itself into an airy gas, with particles so abhorrent of each other that they make a pressure of 80,000 pounds to the square inch. No rock, even buttressed and weighted down by miles of mountains, can stand such a pressure; and so the way is torn open. But did man make the irrepressible gas? By no means. But he is in partnership and entitled to use the resources of the firm. O miner man, walk worthy of God, the other partner.

Man is in haste and the mobile air but slowly carries his words at the rate of 1,090 feet a second, and he wants to send them instantly. He finds in earth, air and sky an ocean of force ready to do his bidding, and in a little pipe under a city street there are thousands of voices flying, and over continents and under seas his words are swiftly going. Did man make the unthinkable swiftness of electricity? By no means; but he is in partnership and is entitled to use the resources of the firm. Oh, whoever thou art lifting lips to the phone, or putting fingers to the telegraphic key, walk worthy of God, the other partner.

The Wonders of God's Chemistry

But swiftness is not the only serviceable quality of electricity. I know a factory making six thousand barrels of cement a day. They need 50,000 horse power to operate the mill. There is no room for them in the narrow space, and they could not be used if room was abundant. So men go away two hundred miles to the mountains and find a waterfall thundering in its might. They harness this power, set it to raking up electricity out of its boundless ocean, and send it the two hundred miles on three slender wires, turn the 50,000 horse power into one hundred and twenty dynamos, and the work is done. But did man make those lofty mountains, did he make the distant ocean, did he bring millions of tons of water hundreds of miles and make the infinite realm of gravitation to pour power down the cataract? By no means. But he is in partnership and entitled to use the resources of the firm. Oh, engineer in so many realms, walk worthy of God, the other partner.

This co-operation is seen as clearly in man's mental realms. The special office of the Comforter is to lead into all sorts of truth. How immeasurably was Paul enlightened in his three days in Damascus and his three years in Arabia! He recognized the true way to superhuman wisdom when he prayed that God would enlighten the eyes of the understanding of the Ephesians. Every teacher knows that boys converted while at school show a quickened intelligence and larger grasp of their studies. Converted heathen immediately show a brighter mind even in worldly things. Christian writers have thoughts the world will not willingly let die. All the great poets are in this helpful partnership. Milton, Shakespeare, Browning, Tennyson, Lowell, and Longfellow have eminence and write things worthy of immortality, while Byron and his ilk write things that ought to die. Milton prefaces his great work with this prayer:

> And chiefly thou, O Spirit, that dost prefer
> Above all temples the upright heart and pure,
> Instruct me, for thou knowest; . . .
> . . . what in me is dark
> Illumine, what is low raise and support;
> That to the height of this great argument
> I may assert eternal Providence,
> And justify the ways of God to men.

Bunyan equally seeks help for a work many times more widely read than any other book of English origin. When the moulders of this nation met in Philadelphia in 1776 they all felt that the issues involved were too great for human wisdom; so they sent for William White, rector of Christ Church, to lead them in prayer. The result was the Declaration of Independence and later the Constitution of these United States, which William Gladstone says "is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man." And the book of Scripture inspired of God, profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, is read by increasingly multiplied millions year by year. What holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit still lives with increasing power. Let it not be supposed that that partnership closed with the closing of the so-called canon. Glorious is the fact that God has spoken to men in times past in diverse manners by the prophets, but far more glorious the fact that he now speaks to us by his Son; and this speaking is to continue to the end of the world. Great as is the power of the other partner in the realm of gravitation, steam, explosives, rivers in ocean and air a electricity, it is even greater in the realm of mi Man could not originate, find or even imagine great thoughts of his own priceless worth, a wh world not being legal tender for a single soul; co not imagine the unity, omnipotence, omnisciene infinite love accessible by every seeking soul; but is in partnership and is entitled to use the resour of the firm. Oh, active thinker, walk worthy God, the other partner.

Still more evident is the fact of partnership the realm of the will. As Paul says, "It is God w worketh in you both to will and to work for his g pleasure." Nebuchadnezzar, backed by all kin authority of armies and the fiery furnace, could break down the will of the three Hebrew childr nor of Daniel, determined to pray. It is too m to expect the will of a slave to stand against the v of a king backed by such various powers. But was in partnership with one whose will is supre and was filled with the knowledge of his will in spiritual wisdom and understanding, to walk wor ily of the Lord, strengthened with all power u all patience and long suffering with joy.

Of course, in the great work of the spirit rea partnership with God is necessary. The new cr tion is beyond the ability of man.

> How helpless nature lies
> Unconscious of her load!
> The heart unchanged can never rise
> To happiness and God.

We are to be born not of the flesh but of the Spi We are to become partners of the divine natu We are made partakers of Christ and of the H Ghost. It is a life so high that the best blood, hi est culture, and ability of Nicodemus to be a ruler the Jews could not attain that lofty life. Even must be born of the Spirit. To them who belie on Christ, to them gave he power to become children of God, with all the power of heredity flo ing from Father to child. Such lofty heights of are unattainable by unaided man. But he is partnership and is entitled to use all the resour of the firm. Oh, child born of the Spirit, w worthy of God, the Father.

Working Into the Eternal Plans

Now we see how God can call such lives into own kingdom and glory. They are his children, t are filled with the knowledge of his will, they h worked into his eternal plans, they can be taken i heaven and made to sit down on the throne w Christ and not be ashamed. They bear his ima they have been co-workers for the same ends, the fore they are fittingly with him, where he is, a behold his glory.

That glory is so resplendent that Moses could see it and live. Covered with the hand in the cl of the rock, and seeing only the back, not the fro of the passing radiance, his own face shone so t the people could not bear to look upon it. The gl into which God invites all his partners is unspe able.

> To form a robe of light divine,
> Ten thousand suns around him shine;
> But oh, the glories of his mind
> Leave all our wandering thoughts behind.

In ending we will not forget what was said in beginning, that all the humble, lowly and oppres sons of sorrow and toil are invited into this kingd and glory. The lower and lowest helps in the ma rial realms are not more willingly and abundan given than the higher and highest helps in the Spi realms. Nay, the higher, the more willingly giv While God is glad to say concerning Bezaleel, have filled him with the Spirit of God in wisd and in understanding, and in knowledge, to dev skilful works, to work in gold and in silver and brass and in cutting of stones for setting," he far more glad to see Shadrach, Meshach and Ab nego withstand the king's commandment, and far more glad to change a persecuting Saul int preaching Paul and constantly to strengthen him an ability to do all things.

How shall such lofty partnership be attained a maintained? First of all, hold vividly clear that other partner is more than willing to enter the uni

Continued on next page

* Bishop Warren is one of the ablest and most eloquent leaders in American Methodism.

Partnership With God

Continued from preceding page

oof of this is seen in his glad co-eration in every available way. He nds with outstretched hands, say-g, "Come unto me, all ye that are ary and heavy laden."

Next, remember that the terms of e compact must be mutually accepta-e to both parties in the firm. Un-ly purposes and souls cannot be in rtnership with a holy God. The ad partner must dictate the condi-ns. Even Christ must say, "Not y will, but thine, be done."

These points being accepted, get in-nate with God. Study his plans; e how he makes grass and trees to ow, how the grain is multiplied a ndredfold, how the rivers run into e sea and are all brought back again equal rivers in the upper air, how seeks by every provision to enlarge d uplift man's thought and to purify d recreate his spirit.

, then, wish more for God; burn more with desire;
Covet more the dear sight of his glorious face.
ay longer, pray louder for the sweet gift of fire
To come down on thy soul with its whirlwinds of grace.

d loves to be longed for, he longs to be sought;
For he sought us with such longing and love;
e died for desire of us, wonderful thought!
And longs for us now to be with him above.

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

ipsy Smith's Work Abroad

INCE his American campaign ter-minated, Gipsy Smith has been iding missions in various parts of ngland. His first meeting took place Hanley, Straffordshire, in the centre "the potteries," which has a popula-on of about fifty thousand. It was at his city that the great crisis in the ipsy's life occurred. His old friends eceived him with great cordiality. rom Hanley he went to Halifax, in orkshire, where he also had a very uccessful mission. From Yorkshire e went to Hull, where Rev. J. H. owett at a great gathering number-ig upwards of 2,000 referred to him s "one of God's great gifts to this eneration." His next important mis-ion was held in Paris (France), being ne first Protestant mission ever held n that country. The Paris newspapers ommented very favorably on the mis-ion, which was pronounced by every ne to have been a wonderful success. he evangelist is looking forward to nother visit to the United States, here he expects to speak in most of he large cities on the Pacific coast.

A. SHELDRICK.

What Will Become of Our Children?

WRUNG from the lips of the mothers of men,
Charged with an anguish no others may ken,
ises the heart cry of Rachel again,
What will become of our children?

Drink-shadowed firesides of village and farm
Summon the guards of the hearthstone to arm,
Lifting to heaven that cry of alarm,
What will become of our children?

Down in the hell of the city retreat,
Voiced in the jargons of alley and street,
Rum-ridden millions the question repeat,
What will become of our children?

Slaving for sustenance others should earn,
Buying with blood what the dramshop will burn,
Robbed of their birthright to play and to learn,
What will become of our children?

Troubled, the far-visioned prophets of state,
Ask themselves, How can the nation grow great?
Ask, as they scan the red records of fate,
What will become of our children?

Gird thee, O Church! and arouse thee, O State!
Else be the woe of the millstone thy fate!
Banish the Beast! Let the glad years relate
What will become of our children.

—REV. HENRY HAYDEN BARSTOW.
State Treasurer, New York Anti-Saloon League.

The Children's Pulpit

APPLE BLOSSOM SUNDAY

By Rev. J. M. FARRAR, D.D.*

AN apple orchard in blossom is one of the most beautiful sights on all this earth. I hope my juniors are all enjoying this beautiful world made more beautiful by its apple blossoms. If you had known you were going to visit this world what would you have brought with you? God knew you were coming and he sent with you the three things you need most for a happy visit. First, a portable house, called a body, in which to live. It is built to last from seventy to one hundred years. Second, an intellect to help you to enjoy the world and the people you are visiting. It shows you how to see and enjoy the best things in the world. Third, a spirit that keeps you from getting lost in this world. This spirit tells you to enjoy this life, but not to forget that the world from which you came, and to which you can return, is more beautiful than this one.

. . .

HAD you known you were coming, what birthday gift would you have selected? A small boy said, after his mother had punished him: "If I had been given the choice of a mother, I would have taken grandma, she is so good to me." When he grew older he knew better. There is no friend like mother. What would have been your choice of a birthplace? Would you have selected the city or the country? Our text answers the question as I would answer it. It tells of the beautiful birthplace of a little girl. "I raised thee up under the apple tree." The apple tree probably grew by the corner of the house where she was born. This text is part of a wonderful song-story. With her husband she had gone back as a bride to the old home. He pointed to the apple tree where she was born; the same apple tree under whose shade they had often sat, and where he had told her of his love. Do you wish you had been born under an apple tree? You can if you will. The Bible says you must be born again, born a second time. You can select your second birthplace. The Bible says Christ is like an apple tree. "As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons." To be a child of God you must be born again, born in the likeness of Christ. Our Christ is the tree of life. To be raised up under his love is what God means by, "I raised thee up under the apple tree." Possibly, when your visit to this world is ended and you return home to heaven, you will sit down under the shade of a tree by the river of life and talk to Christ about his love. I hope the tree of life in Paradise will be like an apple tree in blossom.

. . .

APPLE blossoms are beautiful, but there is something more useful to follow. After the blossoms come the apples. Apples are blossoms filled with fragrance, sunshine, nectar and colors from the rainbow. In Europe, before our ancestors became Christians, it was the custom when a child died to put an apple in his hand with which to play in Paradise. There is a legend that represents the Angel of Death, whose duty they believed was to separate the souls from the bodies of those who are dying, holding an apple close to the one who is about to depart from life. This in order that the first thing the spirit would see in the new world would be a beautiful apple. "As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons." We as Christians expect to see Christ first in heaven. "As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons."

. . .

IT is time to close, but I must give you two minutes in order to tell you a quaint apple story. If your father and mother came from the country they will tell you how, as children, they played under the apple trees. They put sticks for legs in big apples and set them up as animals. With a little imagination added to the apples and sticks they soon had a menagerie. This quaint play has an interesting origin. In the early days, the people of Athens had a place for worship just across the river Esopus. They took sheep across the river as a sacrifice to their gods. There came a very heavy storm and the river was so swollen that the worshipers could not take the sheep across. Some one recalled that the Greek word for sheep was the same word that meant apple. Then they put wooden legs on the apples and offered them as a sacrifice. They used the same word and believed their gods would not know the difference. Once a year they put apples on legs and sacrificed them in commemoration of this occasion. Children playing under the apple trees are still commemorating the old Greek sacrifice.

. . .

CHRIST is compared to an apple tree, he is so beautiful. But we must not put these apple blossoms, with which our church is decorated to-day, in place of Christ. We do not worship apple blossoms, but we use them and enjoy their great beauty as a reminder of Christ, and of how we can be "born again" under the beauty of his love. After your apple blossom service take these flowers to the sick, take arms full of them to the children's ward in the hospital. It would be fine to read to the sick while they look at the blossoms and enjoy the fragrance. In your Bible you will find apples spoken of eleven times.

* Pastor First Reformed Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. TEXT: "I raised thee up under the apple tree." Solomon's Song 8:5.

Nordau on the Theatre

PROFESSOR MAX NORDAU, who is recognized throughout Europe as a distinguished scientist and whose books on sociological studies have been widely discussed, has lately been considering the claims of the theatre to be regarded as "a means of culture and education." The conclusions reached by this great thinker and writer are deserving of attention. He says:

"My moral education has remained untouched by the theatre; and the only effect which the theatre would have upon me would be a feeling of repulsion and contradiction, for my moral opportunities were always the very opposite of the morals of the dramatic heroes. . . .

"Outside of the handful of youthful dreamers the theatres are attended by a public which has no spiritual attributes, a loose and lax crowd which follows the stream of every fashion and drags after it; a public which only seeks to while away its weary hours and to escape boredom; which only wishes to be entertained and is anxious to have its feelings tickled; a public which above all wishes to laugh. What plays are they which the masses flock to attend, which the occupants of the boxes, of the orchestra seats and the galleries alike are so eager to witness? Burlesques, vaudevilles, especially merry comedies, for the people still feel diffident in going to open buffoonery, even though their inclinations tend that way. After the plays which are calculated mainly to furnish laughter, the people go to see such plays as arouse their curiosity, or appeal to the not altogether worthy sentimental feelings of the inhabitants of large cities. These are the plays which are very rich in scenery and in beautiful, many-colored costumes, especially gorgeous costumes of women, and are replete with either extravagant festivities or counterfeit poetry. Very pleasing to this audience are also such plays as arouse the passions. What has all this to do with culture and education?"

This is Dr. Nordau's closing paragraph: "The modern theatre serves as a place wherein the writers can show their pride, can satisfy their egotism and their chase after money; and it also serves as a great money-making business. But to the interests of the highest strivings of culture, and to the cause of education, the modern theatre is of no value whatsoever."

Anvil Sparks

..GOD'S telephone in the soul is conscience.

..HELL has a branch office in every carnal heart.

..WE are most like God when we can most forgive.

..CHARACTER writes its name on the visage in indelible ink.

..IT is much easier to love some people than it is to agree with them.

..THE one who has suffered has a key that can unlock many hearts.

..THE old man is a drunkard because the boy took his first drink.

..THE Bible teaches that the way we treat the poor is the test of our loyalty to Christ.

..THE problem of to-day is not how to reach the outcast poor, but how to reach the poor rich.

..HE who said, "In my Father's house are many mansions," had not where to lay his head.

..THERE'S many a murderer who's never been hanged, but no man can escape the Judgment Day of God.

..YOU have a husband you want to see saved; so does God. Are you willing to have that husband convicted of sin through your lips?

..THE Holy Spirit is not a power that you and I can get hold of and use according to our ignorant will; the Holy Spirit is a power that should get hold of us and use us according to His infinite will.

NEW YORK'S MAY-DAY PARADE

FOR centuries people of the English speaking races have associated May Day with festivals of flowers, parades of happy children, and trips to the spring woods, where the first of the wild blossoms are peeping from mossy nooks and the trees are covered with their crown of fresh green leaves. In the last few years, however, there has grown up an observance of the day imported from Continental Europe, which has nothing in common with the joyous festival as known to history, song and story. It is rather a parade and festival of discontent with the present social and governmental conditions in all lands, whether they be monarchies or republics. This May Day demonstration was started by the Socialist party of Europe, and now it has become a recognized feature of their propaganda in this country. It is sometimes referred to euphemistically as the May-Day Labor Parade, but it has little in common with the real Labor Day of September. Those who marched recently in New York did it to show their devotion to the cause of Socialism, while those who fill our streets from curb to curb in September are American working men of all types of political belief, who do not care to have their own particular day turned into an occasion to advance the political ideals of any one party.

The parades of May Day being composed largely of Socialists from Russia, Germany and other continental States where there is perhaps more cause for such demonstrations than there is here, they employed many of the devices used to attract attention to their movement in the old country. There were flags with their red grounds of sinister significance and bearing devices which struck the American bystander with surprise as he saw them borne into historic Union Square, and saw the innumerable banners and placards bearing inscriptions in foreign tongues, and as one division after another swept by, wearing white caps which looked peaceful enough, but wearing the ominous red bands and sashes, he became thoughtful and pondered then, if he never had before, certain grave questions which are forcing themselves to the front in our national life.

While other cities have parades of more or less magnitude that of New York, on account of its great foreign population, was by far the largest. As May Day this year came on Sunday the organizations, which had the matter in charge, were obliged to put it one day sooner and parade on Saturday afternoon, April 30. Permits for a Sunday demonstration would not have been granted without a strong protest on the part of a large proportion of the community, who still have the American aversion to turning Sunday into a day of parades.

The most exciting moment of the day was when the police came into conflict with a band of Russian Socialists on their way to join in the demonstration. The city had given permits to parade on the condition that no red flags be carried. This party of or hundred and fifty marched uptown with dozens red flags flying. The police stopped them nea Seward Park and ordered them to furl their re flags. The marchers refused. Fifteen policemen led by a lieutenant, at once closed in on them, an the flags were hastily furled. A great many of th organizations carried red banners on which variou mottos and inscriptions wer displayed, and though the ge eral effect was red, it was n interpreted by the police as violation of the requirements the permits.

There were two parades, or uptown, the other downtow There were about thirty thou sand marchers in the dow town demonstration, and a fe thousand in the uptown parad Most of the streets covered b the larger parade were on th East Side, but they crosse over and marched up Fift Avenue from Tenth Street t Twenty-third, and then cam back Fourth Avenue to th Union Square plaza, where the were dismissed beneath th very shadow of the hero equestrian figure of Washing ton.

Most of the marchers wo white caps and the bakers wer in white suits. The shirtwais makers had out a large delega tion, the women, of whom ther were many in line, wearin white caps with red bands, an broad red sashes across thei shoulders or around thei waists. Every band played th Marseillaise.

The uptown parade had large number of young me who carried brooms, and one organization ca ried a banner with the device "Clear The Way. They marched down to Union Square, where a join mass meeting was held with the Socialist organiza tions, which had come up from the lower part of th city. After a number of speeches by various speak ers most of the marchers and the audience began t leave within an hour to enjoy the half holiday in th parks and other resorts.

The May-Day Paraders Crossing Union Square, New York

Our Largest Warship

SHIPS of our navy which for a brief space have borne the proud title "of most powerful of the fleet" must now give place to the Florida, which has just taken the first plunge into the blue waters.

The "Florida," Our Biggest Battleship

The Florida is a vessel of 9,000 tons, 1,000 more than the big Utah. She will have four propellers to propel the mass of steel and iron through the blue waves of the Atlantic and Pacific and distant seas, for every ship that has "Old Glory" at the masthead usually gets around the world before her days are done. She will not be completed until summer of next year, for a warship is not built in a day. In fact, the Florida was authorized by Congress in 1907, and the keel was laid in March of last year. As it is, she takes the water in record time. She is 520 feet long and a little over 85 feet wide. Her draught is 27 feet 3 inches. She has a belt of armor eleven inches thick amidships. This belt is eight feet wide. Above this is another belt eight feet wide, but only nine inches thick. The great turrets are armored with eight and twelve inches of steel. The armor which protects the lighter batteries is a half foot in thickness.

The armament of the Florida will consist of ten ten-inch guns in turrets. Two of these turrets are forward and three aft. All can be fired as a broadside, and will be able to hurl 8,500 pounds of metal if fired together. There will be fourteen five-inch guns, four three-pounders, four one-pounders, two torpedo tubes, two machine and two field guns. Built in an American navy yard from designs by American naval constructors; built by our own mechanics, under supervision of men trained in our naval academy. she is a ship of which every one who owes allegiance to the Stars and Stripes may well be proud.

. . .

A Woman Sculptor's Triumph

ONE of the most unusual awards ever announced in the American art world was recently made to the youngest of a large number of competitors. Miss Belle Kinney, a young woman of twenty-three years, was awarded the contract for making ten statues of "The Women of the Confederacy" to be placed in the capitals of all the Southern States, except South Carolina. The work calls for ten monuments. The sculptor's design, of which she made the model in five days, represents three figures of heroic size. A figure representing Fam is in the centre, while on the left is a dying soldie On the right is a Confederate woman. The figure are shown together on the battlefield. The dyin color-bearer is raising the battle-flag with his las strength, while the woman is placing the palm o victory on his breast. Miss Kinney was born i Nashville, Tenn. She was only ten years old whe she won a medal for a portrait bust. While student at the Chicago Art Institute, her work wo her a scholarship. J. L. H.

The Women of the South

Copyright Frederick O. Benim

Edward, King and Peacemaker, Dead

"I HAVE DONE MY DUTY," HIS LAST WORDS—GEORGE V. ASCENDS THE THRONE

EDWARD VII., King of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India, died in Buckingm Palace, London, at 11.45 o'clock the night of May 6. His Majesty d been sick only a short time, with ailment which at first was diagsed as bronchitis, but which afterards developed into pneumonia. our of the ablest physicians in his alm were in constant attendance, but eir skill proved unavailing. He had ught a cold while on a visit to Saningham Palace a week before, where inspected certain changes and alterions that were being made in his agnificent Norfolk home. It was a ason of raw, damp weather and the ng caught a chill, which speedily deloped into a serious sickness. During e few days of his sickness at Buckgham Palace, to which he was reoved, he bore up with remarkable rtitude. Even after his doctors had sisted that he should not leave his om, he continued to receive persons ncerned in business of State, and to scuss matters of public importance th keen interest. He was evidently solved to continue the performance his public duties to the nation to the ry last.

On Friday morning, May 6, the avest fears of the doctors were conmed. A noted throat specialist, Dr. omson, had been added to the four nsulting physicians, Drs. Laking, id, Powell, and Dawson. Dr. Thomn made an examination and found at the seat of trouble was in the ngs, and that the whole system of e sufferer had been subjected to such strain as to preclude the practicality of any operation.

When the news of the King's critical ndition was made public, there was universal expression of sympaetic interest throughout the United ingdom. All classes, without disnction, united in this demonstration, d prayers were offered in thousands churches for his recovery. A multide of callers visited the palace, the ont of which was crowded the whole ay long. None were admitted within e palace, except the officials of the ourt, and only members of the royal mily had entrance to the King's lite, where the doctors were grimly ghting the battle for the King's life.

During the day, several brief bullens were issued by the physicians and ere was a hope that the King might ally. The sufferer sat up at times in chair; but as night came on, he beame too weak to do this and remained in bed. In conscious intervals he showed an interest in those around him, and it was evident that his mind was still with his public duties. In a moment of great depression he said to his physicians: "Well, it is all over; but I think I have done my duty." This was one of his ast utterances, although he rallied lightly about ten o'clock and appeared o recognize his family. Then he apsed into unconsciousness.

Queen-Dowager Alexandra

At night, the crowd in front of the alace grew larger. All eyes were vatching the ensign on the tall flagtaff, and when it was seen to dip at unset, the word went out over the ast gathering that the end had come —the King was dead! But this miske was soon explained by the police nd sentries, who told the anxious rowds that what they had seen was merely the customary dip of the flag at sunset.

At nine o'clock the members of the Cabinet were summoned to the palace, and a little later, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the primate of all England, came down from his palace at Lambeth to attend at the royal bedside. All the members of the reigning family, except the Duchess of Albany, were at the palace. The evening hours passed slowly, with the capital and the whole country tensely eager for news.

As midnight approached it was evident that the end was near. The King had frequent choking spasms, and was growing momentarily weaker. The last scene came at 11.45 P.M., when in the presence of his family and physicians, Edward VII. passed away.

Half an hour elapsed before the outside world was informed of the King's death. Then Lord Knollys, the King's Private Secretary, walked into the business chamber of Buckingham Palace, and said to the waiting group of officials and members of the press: "Gentlemen, His Majesty is dead!"

A little later, the physicians issued the following official bulletin:

"May 6, 11.50 P.M.—His Majesty the King breathed his last at a quarter to twelve to-night, in the presence of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales, Princess Royal the Duchess of Fife, Princess Victoria and Princess Louise the Duchess of Argyll. (Signed) LAKING,
"REID,
"POWELL,
"DAWSON."

The Attorney-General and Home Secretary, who were also in the palace, immediately telegraphed official notices to all the chancelleries and foreign offices throughout the world.

When the end came, there were present at the King's bedside, besides the immediate kindred of the King, only the Duke of Fife, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the four physicians.

The Prince of Wales, the King's eldest son, succeeds automatically to the throne, as George V. His first official act as monarch was to send the following telegram to the Lord Mayor of London, in compliance with an ancient British custom:

"I am deeply grieved to inform you that my beloved father, the King, passed away peacefully at 11.45 to-night. (Signed) GEORGE."

King George will be formally proclaimed as monarch in the throne room at St. James' Palace, according to the ancient formula prescribed for such occasions, after which he will address the privy councillors.

The Late King Edward VII.

Born November 9, 1841 Died May 6, 1910

The Late King's Public Career

The late King was born in Buckingham Palace on November 9, 1841. His mother, Queen Victoria, was then twenty-two. His birth was hailed with great rejoicing by the British people. On January 25, 1842, he was christened with great ceremony under the historic banners of St. George's Chapel, and given the name Albert Edward. The first was in honor of his father, the Prince Consort, of whom the King often spoke later in life as "Albert the Good."

From babyhood he was carefully trained by the Queen for the great position he was to occupy. He was born Duke of Cornwall, for, odd as it my seem, the title of Prince of Wales is created by royal patent. He was four weeks old when he received the title by which he was known until eight years ago. He was also made Earl of Dublin.

At an early age he was placed under the care of a tutor. Edward liked mathematics, geography, history, and could speak French, German and Italian while but a small child.

The young Prince sat by the throne when the declaration of war against Russia was read at the opening of the Crimean War. It is probable that at that time his interest in the French nation, which has done much in later years to keep the peace of Europe, first took root, as the British and French armies fought side by side on the wild plains of the Crimea.

He met the Emperor and Empress of France when they visited England and made his first visit to France in the summer of 1855. He returned there at frequent intervals in his after life and was very popular in Paris, and in no place outside of Great Britain is his death so keenly felt. On November 9, 1858, he became of age and was made a knight of the ancient and illustrious Order of the Garter.

His education, however, was not over, and he attended courses in chemistry at Edinburgh University, making his home within the gray walls of Holyrood Palace, the home for centuries of Scottish Kings over whose country he was destined to rule, for in his veins flowed the blood of the royal Stuarts. From Edinburgh he went to Oxford University, where he made a specialty of natural science. One of his chief instructors was Goldwin Smith, who at this writing is lying at the point of death in his home in Canada.

In 1860 he made his memorable visit to this country and to Canada. He was received at Quebec by thousands of loyal and enthusiastic Canadians. He came to Washington as the guest of President Buchanan, and planted a tree by the grave of Washington. Home once more in England, he entered Cambridge University, spending his vacations in learning the life of a soldier in a military camp in Ireland. He married the Princess Alexandria of Denmark in 1863.

In 1875 Victoria was to be proclaimed Empress of India and the Prince was delegated to visit that country. On this journey he displayed so much statesmanship, so much tact in dealing with the Indian princes, that from that time he was marked for a more prominent place in offices at home. He did much for agriculture, and aided every cause that had for its object the bettering of the condition of the poor. To the day of his death he had no greater friends than the lowly.

In 1901 Victoria died and he became King. His illness postponed his coronation and he was not crowned until August, 1902. In the eight years of his reign he has proved himself the greatest diplomat of his time and won the title of the "Peacemaker of Europe." He was in reality the Foreign Office, so great was his ability in smoothing out international tangles. At home also he was the peacemaker between conflicting parties, and at this time of the constitutional crisis his greeting hand will be sorely missed.

King George V.

Who Now Ascends the Throne

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Roosevelt on the World's Peace

MORE notable than all of his other speeches abroad, Mr. Roosevelt's address before the Nobel prize commission at Christiania is one that should earn for him the gratitude of peace lovers throughout the civilized world. He had the courage to tell the commission, in the plainest, practical language, what others had merely dreamed of and spoken of as the world's desire, yet so remote as to be unattainable.

His speech was the high-water mark of Roosevelt ian argument, being both logical and full of earnest conviction. Peace, he declared, is never the highest good unless it comes as the handmaid of righteousness. Secured through cowardice, or national effeminacy, or at the sacrifice of the virtues, or by means of injustice and oppression, it was a positive evil. As the head of a great nation, he had advocated peace, but never at the cost of honor or rightful interest.

First among the implements of peace, he ranked arbitration treaties. These could provide for almost every contingency likely to arise that might disturb international equilibrium, except in cases where the national honor and existence were absolutely imperiled by some act of deadly hostility. He advocated the development of the Hague tribunal as a world-court of arbitral justice. In planning this world-court, the statesmen of the nations might profitably study what had been accomplished by the United States Supreme Court in securing peace and good relations between the different States. The Hague Court, he also believed, might find in the methods laid down in our Constitution for preventing interstate friction a reasonable groundwork for the plan it would have to adopt on a larger scale.

Armaments, which have expanded beyond all reason, should be checked by international agreement. No power could take such action alone, without placing itself at the mercy of some rival. The remedy he offered was a League of Peace, "not only to keep the peace among themselves, but to prevent, forcibly if necessary, its being broken by others." This League would possess executive power, the lack of which has made the Hague tribunal abortive. Were the great nations that sincerely desire peace and oppose aggression to combine, the result would be assured.

Let us hope that these strong, brave words from a plain American citizen will not be without their influence. With a Peace League such as Roosevelt suggests and a world-court behind it, to apply the principles of law and equity, and with power to enforce its decrees, we should at last begin to feel that some day, war would be no longer looked upon as the "game of kings and cabinets," but as a hideous crime, abhorrent and wholly inexcusable.

The American Exodus

THERE has been such a rush to our shores of immigrants from the Old World, as was described in a recent issue of this paper, that comparatively little attention has been paid to what may well be called the American Exodus, that remarkable movement of prosperous American farmers from Central and Western States into the wheat-raising lands of Canada. Of course it has been mentioned from time to time and the magazines have had an article dealing with the subject once in a while, but the recent reports are startling nevertheless.

At a conservative estimate one hundred thousand Americans have gone over the line into Canada and have taken with them the great sum of five hundred million dollars to put into Canadian farms. Very few of those who went had less than a thousand dollars ready to invest and some of them have bought ranches costing many thousands. Canada has welcomed them, and they have made just the kind of settlers she needs to build up her great agricultural districts. We have heard of one town where every one in it had been born in the "States" except two, and these were government officials. These expatriated Americans believe that they can better themselves north of the line, so we cannot complain. It is our loss, but Canada's gain. A large number of Canadians have been coming over the line to engage in business, so this interchange will have one good effect, and that is, cementing the friendship of these two progressive nations of the North American continent. Canada is building herself into a great nation, and her progress is watched with pleasure by the American people. While annexation talk is never heard here at present, our interest is just as keen, especially as the land of the Maple Leaf is annexing so many of our best type of farmers and business men.

Pulpit and Prize-Ring

WE hear of a general and rapidly growing movement of protest among churches of all denominations against the proposed desecration of the Nation's birthday by a prize-fight in California between two notorious pugilists. Many clergymen and evangelists, it is said, are preparing to invade San Francisco for the purpose of a counter-demonstration. Tents will be pitched near the prize-ring, and it may even happen that the "roped arena," as the fighters call it, will be a ring within a ring, being completely surrounded by masses of Christian people, who will emphasize their protest by religious services at which brutality, and especially prize-fighting, will be unsparingly denounced. An evangelistic procession will probably be an incident of the occasion. This spectacular crusade against the revival of pugilism in America may not be without good results. We seriously doubt, however, that it will dissuade the California authorities. Large revenues are involved in this particular affair, and soon thousands of moving picture shows will be demoralizing our young people with pictures of the encounter. If the churches could stop these degrading exhibitions, they would be dealing a deadly blow to vice by taking away its source of support.

The Highest Profession

WE note that several of our contemporaries are actively discussing the question: "Is the ministry a profession?" One of these publications is evidently in doubt or disposed to sit on the fence, for it concludes: "The less the minister thinks of his responsibility as a 'profession,' the better for him and his people." Another and of a different denomination, holds that no good can result from any minister's attempt to succeed by means "other than those that are natural," and the result of "earnestness, sagacity and a wise choice of ways and means." Both are right, yet not wholly right—and rather misleading. We have always been impressed with the conviction that the work of the Christian ministry was and is the highest of all professions. To be thoroughly effective it requires not only selection and training, but that deep, earnest purpose and consecration that comes of a special call to a work that is surely the greatest to which an intelligent human being can be devoted—the work of saving souls. The minister should strive to equip himself at all points and by every means within his reach that he may be a master workman, with the skill and ability that can only come through proper preparation. Here and there we may find a preacher who, through native talent and adaptability, added to a heart spirit-filled and overflowing with love for the work, makes a deep impression. But such cases —like Moody, Gipsy Smith and Varley—are the exception. It is the faithful, well-equipped pastor who does the best and most lasting work, not the preacher whose discourse is a mosaic of other men's thoughts and illustrations and who has had no training and therefore has no capacity for original treatment and presentation. As to the spiritual "call" to the ministry, we do not believe God ever calls an inefficient, nor one who is incapable of doing the work for which he is needed. Newton called preaching "the worst of all trades, but the best of all professions." Luther held that the messenger of grace should have the skill to teach the unlearned. The grandest thought can easily be spoiled by feeble, illiterate expression, if the speaker's mind be a "poor box." The words of life flowed from the lips of Jesus in wisdom and eloquence, and with dign and deliberation and absolute freedom from extrav gance. He was the preacher's perfect Model.

The Children's Home

SPRING has set the hillside and terraces all aglo at Mont-Lawn. In the cottages and dormitori busy workers are engaged in preparing for the co ing of the first contingent of our little guests a f weeks hence. Never has the Children's Paradi looked more beautiful than now, with its wealth natural attractions. It was Dr. Klopsch's best l loved charity, and we believe that the many tho sands of our readers, through whose generosity t Home was created and supported, will continue th benefactions, in view of the great blessing Mo Lawn has been to the children of the tenemen We hope to accommodate 3,000 little waifs the this coming summer, and we cordially invite all our friends to join with us in making this the b year the Home has ever known—a blessing alike the child-beneficiaries and to the donors. Eve contribution will be at once turned over to the office of the corporation of "The Christian Herald Ch dren's Home" and acknowledged in the columns THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Dangerous "Cults"

JUDICIOUS observers have marked with so concern the increasing interest in the mystic a the occult. One pretentious cult in New York w shown to be guilty of practices that boded little go to the participants; and the professor who mani ulated the puppet strings behind the scenes for t edification of the credulous dupes in front, was proper object of attention for the police. The East Indian casuists entrap the shallow and hal taught with their wiles and sophistries, their flue use of obscure terms, and their ecstatic rhapsodi Soon we find the dupes—who are mostly women, the way—parroting the leader's inane repetitio of "the seven infinities," and the "mystic circles the ineffable ego, who is the projection of the ato up to the Over Soul," and similar absurdities. usually results, after a brief experience, in revulsi and disgust, which come with disillusionment a the return of common sense. For the genui Oriental religionist we have respect, but for t cheap fakir, who makes merchandise of his pr tended faith and uses it to conceal worse practices as some in New York are now accused of doing—t sooner he is thoroughly unmasked the bett American women, who have been patronizing the esoteric teachers, should be warned by the New Yo developments that there is a double danger in all ing themselves with forces that are totally u American, from any conceivable point of view.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, May 18, 1910

	PAGE
First Steps	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	478
Famous Christian Testimonies (Portrait)	478
The "Stars and Stripes" in Japan (Illustrated) By Rev. Francis E. Clark, LL.D.	479, 495
Partnership With God. Sermon By Bishop H. W. Warren	480, 481
The Children's Pulpit. By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	481
Nordau on the Theatre	481
New York's May-Day Parade (Illustrated)	482
Our Largest Warship (Illustrated)	482
A Woman Sculptor's Triumph (Illustrated)	482
Prominent People Talked About (Portraits)	483
Mr. Roosevelt and the Missionaries (Illustrated)	483
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	484
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	485
Problems of Women Folk (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	486
Our New National Museum (Illustrated)	487
The Strawberry Handkerchief Serial by Amelia E. Barr	488, 489
Not by Bread Alone Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	490, 491
Central America's Earthquake	492
A Missionary Martyr (Portrait)	492
The South and Prohibition (Portrait) By Captain Richmond P. Hobson	493
Young People's Societies	494

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Weston Ends His Journey

EDWARD PAYSON WESTON, the veteran pedestrian, came swinging down Broadway, New York City, amid the cheers of tens of thousands of people, escorted by police and stepping to the music of a brass band ahead of him. He entered the City Hall, having made the last lap of his journey of 3,600 miles from his starting point on the Pacific at Santa Monica. Mayor Gaynor with the committee of reception stood at the top of the City Hall steps, and seizing the hand of the veteran hero said: "I am mighty proud of you. The entire world ought to be proud of you for what you have done. You started on February 1 at four o'clock at the other end of this vast continent and got here May 2 at ten minutes after three o'clock. That was a marvelous performance and never has anything like it been done before in the history of the world by a man of your years or by a younger man. You are a benefactor of the human race. Your worthy example will make people go out into the open air and walk. If the present generation follows your teaching they will live to be one hundred years instead of fifty. I have here on behalf of the committee of welcome a good sized purse, and I am glad to be able to hand it to you." The mayor then presented Weston with $400 gold and a gold-headed cane. The recipient made a reply, in the midst of which he was overcome with his feelings and wept like a child. Weston carried a letter from Mayor George Alexander, of Los Angeles, Calif., to Mayor Gaynor, and also one from Postmaster Flint of Los Angeles to Postmaster Morgan of New York. Weston undertook to walk from ocean to ocean in ninety days. It took him just seventy-eight days of walking. He did not walk on Sundays, but left them as days of rest. This walk of 3,600 miles by this old man of seventy-one years was more than a feat. It was an example to the young of the sanest and soundest kind of athletics; the victory of a man of correct habits and clean life, with a body under splendid care and development, and indomitable will and industry. In this age of rubber tires, soft cushions, swift moving vehicles, luxury and ease, it is truly refreshing to see a man over threescore years and ten with such physical stamina and independence. In a busy age of rush and competition, in which the old are so often pushed to one side, this aged hero with his white hair and pink complexion reminds us that there are many beyond the meridian of life who are seventy, seventy-five, even eighty years young. Weston in his journey across the continent has many qualities necessary for a successful journey from the cradle across this planet to the great sea. The walk of the pedestrian and the journey of life are suggested by the word of the Lord to Abram:

Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breath of it; for I will give it unto thee. (Gen. 13:17.)

Copyright by Paul Thompson

Weston× Presents Letter of the Mayor of Los Angeles to Mayor Gaynor of New York

Eaten by Cannibals

Details of the eating by cannibals recently of the Rev. Horatio Hopkins and his assistant, the Rev. Laurie McPherson, missionaries on Savage Island, were brought by the ship Mary E. Winkelman, which arrived at Mukilteo, Wash., from the Tonga Islands in the South Sea. The natives said that Messrs. Hopkins and McPherson were teaching in the mission building when two hundred unconverted savages howling war cries and brandishing clubs and spears descended on them and took thirteen prisoners. The missionaries had twenty converts in their group, only nine of whom escaped. Both missionaries were bound and left lying on the beach in the tropical sun for some time, while the native captives were carried inland. The cannibals then returned, took the two missionaries to the crater of an extinct volcano, and there with dancings and feastings devoured the bodies of those men of God. And yet in the face of this savagery and danger brave men and women will stay in and go to these islands and preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ to them, and save them as so many thousands have been under the wisdom and heroism of modern missions to a good civilization and a Christian life. In the most sacred place in the gratitude and memory of the Christian Church, there ought to be enshrined the names of the true men and women who count not their lives dear but freely lay them down for Christ.

And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death. (Rev. 12:11.)

Kaiser Warns Against Beer

Emperor William has just expressed his keenest condemnation of the beer drinking habits of German students. His criticism did not take the form of an ex cathedra denunciation like his strictures on gambling and high living in the army, but was addressed to a son of Professor Erhardt, who is a freshman at the Freiburg University, and who had just joined the Students' Corps, in which the ability to guzzle great quantities of beer is one of the first qualifications of popularity. The Emperor warned the young man against the damage the drink habit would bring to him individually as a student, and urged him to let beer alone. In the letter he also brings the charge that the general use of beer, especially among the young men and students, had caused a deterioration in the physical and mental stamina of the German nation, in consequence of which it was unable to compete successfully with England and America in the battle of life. The Kaiser also pointed out the fact that the Germans, with their increasing world enterprise, would find much of their work in tropical latitudes, whose climate is so deadly to those who have been addicted to the use of alcohol. There has not been a more sensational event in the temperance battle for the past decade than this letter of the Kaiser against beer. The liquor men of America have tried to make the Germans believe that loyalty to their Fatherland required of them the championship of beer and succeeded in coaxing and tricking hundreds of thousands of Germans, many of them our best citizens, into a friendliness for their iniquitous plans. The saloon men have insisted that the German nation was great on account of its beer, when the fact is the nation is great in spite of its beer habit. The saloons of America could not have received a much more dangerous stab than the one just inflicted by the Kaiser's pen. The Emperor's warning is in imitation of the Lord's demand of abstinence on the part of the priest entering the tabernacle:

Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee. (Lev. 10:9.)

Preaching Christ

Rev. Malcolm James McCloud, former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Pasadena, Calif., has been called to the pastorate of the Collegiate Reformed Church of St. Nicholas, New York City, which was made vacant about two years ago by the death of Dr. Donald Sage Mackay. In his first sermon to his new congregation on Sunday, May 1, he said, among other things: "I can do nothing without your faith and prayers. If we preach the riches of culture we are competing with the college, and the college has the advantage. If we preach the riches of literature, we are coping with magazines, and the magazines can beat us; but if we preach the riches of Jesus, we have no rivalry. It is a great, holy, blessed, wonderful monopoly. The preacher's message covers the whole stretch and area of human life." Miss Helen Gould and her former Sunday School teacher, Mrs. Russell Sage, occupied one of the pews and gave assent to the warm evangelical views which met such a response in the hearts of the sincere followers of Christ. No more wholesome doctrine can be preached to the congregations of wealth, intelligence and culture, or in fact to any congregation, than that presented by the new pastor of the church in New York.

But we preach Christ crucified. (I. Cor. 1:23.)

Rewarded Rescuer of Bag

Through an open drawbridge a woman fell by accident into the canal at Trenton, N. J., and was drowning. George Washington McIntyre, a newsboy only eight years of age, known as "Reddy Tough," jumped into the canal, kept the woman from sinking, and got her part of the way to shore, when those on the bank pulled them both out. "Yellow" Dunn was playing ball with "Reddy" when the accident occurred, and, noticing the woman's handbag floating on the water, jumped in and made for that and saved it, paying little or no attention to the woman who was drowning. The first thing the woman did when taken out of the water was to ask for her purse, which contained $200. "Yellow," taking off his hat, politely said: "Here it is, lady; I almost drowned getting it out." The woman, opening the bag, took a new five dollar bill out and handed it to "Yellow" as an expression of her gratitude for having saved her money; but to little "Reddy," who had saved her life, she did not give a penny, only said, "Thank you, my little man." We trust there was some mistake in the newspaper report, because it is hard for us to think that any person, man or woman, young or old, could be so lost to gratitude and so frozen with avarice as to act in such a manner, contrasting her greed for money with the little newsboy's heroism, and yet her conduct suggests that of thousands of people who count health and even life as secondary to the bag with money in it floating on the water. This class is described by the prophet:

From the least of them even unto the greatest of them every one is given to covetousness. (Jer. 6:13.)

Egyptian Goddess Stolen

A dainty bronze statuette, representing an Egyptian goddess, was stolen from the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York the other day by a vagabond, and left at a pawnshop in the Bowery for fifty cents. A diligent search for it by Officers Neggersmith and Sneidecker, two detectives in the Police department, led to its discovery and return to the museum. The wretch who stole it has not yet been apprehended. It was the limit of effrontery for a man to come off the streets of a busy money-getting city into the museum that ministers to the highest and most beautiful in the human soul, to find something to steal. And his effrontery was only equaled by his depravity. And yet this poor tramp did in a blundering way what so many well-dressed and highly respected people are doing all the while—mocking all of the nicest proprieties and intellectual and moral privileges by taking the property of their fellow-men without rendering an equivalent; and though living in fine houses and driving their automobiles, they belong in the same class morally with the miserable scoundrel who stole the Egyptian statue and sold it for fifty cents.

Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbor, neither rob him. (Lev. 19:13.)

PEOPLE WHO ARE TALKED ABOUT

Photos by Paul Thompson

Prince Tsai Tao and Escort

The Late J. Q. A. Ward

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Skala

PITTSBURG was startled recently by the murder of a city missionary, Frank Skala, who labored among the foreigners there. Mr. Skala was born in Bohemia, and came to this country when about nineteen years of age. He was then an infidel, and was converted under the preaching of a Bohemian missionary, Rev. Vaclav Losa, and became a zealous Christian and energetic worker. On Sunday, April 10, he conducted religious services at Woods Run, in Pittsburg, in a mission of the Congregational Church. He also taught the Sunday School. A foreigner, who was a stranger, heard Mr. Skala preach, and stayed for the Sunday School class. After the services, Mr. Skala and another missionary started to walk home, and the stranger followed them. When only about thirty feet from the chapel, the stranger shot Skala in the back, and wounded the other missionary. Skala died in a few minutes. The assassin was arrested. It is not certain whether the man's mind was unbalanced, or whether the crime was the result of bigotry and religious fanaticism. There are over 200,000 foreigners in Pittsburg and Allegheny County. They are, for the most part, members of the State churches in Europe, and when any of their race are converted to Protestantism here, they are bitterly persecuted by their own countrymen. Converts lose their places in the mills and factories, because bigoted foreign bosses discharge them. They try in vain to secure work to support their wives and children. The murder of Frank Skala shocked the foreign-speaking people who attend the Christian missions. He was a remarkable young man, well educated, enthusiastic as a mission-worker and popular as preacher, teacher and superintendent of the Mission Sunday School. He was a free speaker and a man of blameless life. Mr. Frank Skala left a wife and a little child, about seven months old. Mrs. Skala was a valuable co-worker, assisting her husband in all his missionary labors. The Presbyterians have appointed her as a regular missionary worker. Mr. Skala seemed to have foreseen his death as a martyr. He thrilled his hearers that last Sunday, as he described the twenty-seven Christians who perished in Bohemia about three hundred years ago as martyrs of their faith.

WARREN E. PARTRIDGE, D.D.

AMERICA lost its greatest living sculptor May 1 when John Quincy Adams Ward la aside his chisel forever. For thirty years his fa has stood unchallenged by American and forei critics, and he kept at work almost to the day of h death. He left unfinished a small statue of Augu Belmont. Mr. Ward was born in Urbana, O., 1830. He studied only in America. His first no worthy work was the Indian in Central Park, N York. He also made statues of many of our famo generals and Presidents.

. . .

—PRINCE TSAI TAO, uncle of the Emperior China, has been visiting the United States at t head of a delegation of Chinese officers to inspe our army organization and equipment and to stu our militia. He visited Annapolis, and was mu impressed by our corps of "middies." Later he we to Sandy Hook, visited West Point and review some of the crack New York regiments. One of l officers said our cavalry was the finest he had ev seen, and he had attended several reviews abro

MR. ROOSEVELT AND THE MISSIONARIES

COLONEL ROOSEVELT'S first stop at a station of the American Mission in Egypt was at the frontier outpost on the Sobat, where he found four men and two women laboring to enlighten and uplift the naked savages. The primitive people of these Niloid tribes are not yet susceptible to education and they are being reached through industrial and medical work. The ex-President was especially impressed with the broad influence of the medical missionary and he often referred to it in the speeches which he made further down the Nile Valley. In Khartoum he made an address to the Syrians and Egyptians who had been educated in the Syrian Protestant College in Beirut and the College of the American Mission at Assiut, Egypt.

In addition to these speeches in behalf of the American Mission in the Sudan, he also made two addresses in Egypt. Time did not permit his visiting the college for young men at Assiut, so both of his visits were to schools for girls and young ladies. It was indeed an encouragement to the education of women that the ex-President of the United States should visit two of the prominent schools that are laboring against great odds for this purpose. First he visited the girls' school at Luxor. Here, in the vicinity of the magnificent tombs and temples of the ancient Rameses, is the prosperous school in charge of Miss Buchanan. After inspecting the school Colonel Roosevelt visited the chapel where the students and friends of the school were gathered to hear him. In his address he praised very highly the work of the school and expressed much gratification that here the girls were taught not only arts and sciences, but also the essentials of home-making.

Roosevelt with President of Assiut College and Consul

On the twenty-eighth of March he spoke at the new college for young ladies at Cairo lately opened. There were about one thousand people present.

In opening his speech the ex-President praised the work of the American Mission throughout the Nile Valley. He encouraged the education of women by saying that no nation can rise to permanent greatness unless the woman is fitted and able to play her part nobly and with dignity. Emphasis was laid on the fact that the college is not only teaching literary exercises but each of the girls is allowed to do her share of the housework. In speaking of toleration in religion he said: "I am glad that in this school there should be one-third of the pupils who are Mohammedans and that the other two-thirds include Jews and all sects of Christians. In the first place it is a fine thing because you owe it to those among whom you go to set for them the broadest, truest example of broad human fellowship." He commented on the progress of Egypt along sanita and health lines. He also cited the benefit of t example of the mission schools to those of the g ernment. He urged the Christians in public serv to conduct themselves as Christians so that the na might gain even greater respect.

When the ex-President arrived at Cairo he w introduced to Dr. Henry, the medical missionary charge of the Assiut Hospital. "So you are the m who has been treating those three thousand patie up there at Assiut, are you?" he said. The doc confessed that he was in charge of the medical wo "Well," said the renowned hunter, "if a very pro Bostonian had not told me that it was improper say 'Bully,' I would say 'Bully for you, Dr. Henry

The American Mission in Egypt is supported the United Presbyterian Church of North Ameri but the native church in Egypt fostered by this ganization is so prominent and extensive that it known as the Protestant Church of Egypt. The s tions of the American Mission extend from Al andria to Doleib Hill on the Sobat River, betwe five and six hundred miles above Khartoum. Un its care are the naked savages of the upper N tribes and the direct descendants of the oldest civ zation in the world.

EARL C. ELDER

Assiut College.

Addressing Americans in Cairo

Colonel Roosevelt on Steps of Girls' College

Our New National Museum

By WALDON FAWCETT

THE United States government has recently taken possession of a new structure that ranks as the finest museum on this continent, if not in the world. This imposing new edifice at the national capital has more than ten acres of floor space, and it has been designed as the permanent repository of the millions upon millions of relics, trophies and curiosities in the possession of the nation—a collection to which Uncle Sam is constantly adding through gift and purchase. Although this is but a detail in this whole vast museum project, it may be mentioned that one of the functions of this massive new pile will be to afford an exhibition hall for the hundreds of interesting natural history specimens obtained by Theodore Roosevelt during his famous hunting trip in Africa.

While, as has been said, the Federal government has taken possession of its costly new temple of ancient and modern wonders and the public is being admitted to this educational Mecca, the statement should be qualified in some respects. The new structure of the site of many of the most imposing government buildings. A short distance south of the new structure is the red edifice which constituted the old home of the National Museum, and which, for all that it was accounted a mammoth in its day, now appears pigmy beside its new neighbor. Near at hand also is the home of the Smithsonian Institution—the parent of the National Museum.

Zoology is picturesquely taught by mounted specimens of birds and animals, and ethnology dramatically interpreted by wax figures of Indians garbed in the gaudiest traditional raiment. The progress of invention is chronicled by the original models of all notable inventions, such as the telephone, typewriter, sewing machine, phonograph, telegraph. Especially notable is it that the provision of the new museum home has made possible the realization of a long-existing dream for a National Gallery of Art. Although nobody ever heard much of the fact, because the pictures were stored away, Uncle Sam has long been granite and marble and steel and concrete is virtually completed, to be sure, but it is not fully furnished. To move into this new home the millions of objects which it is designed to house is a Herculean task. The nation's foremost museum has been adding to its collections at the rate of something like a quarter of a million objects each year for more than a score of years past. The ordinary "moving day" would suffice for the transfer of such an accumulation to new quarters. Knowing that the public was naturally impatient for a peep at the new treasure house the officials decided to throw open its doors as soon as enough of the trophies could be put in place to make a respectable showing. Thus certain sections of this new headquarters of "Uncle Sam, Curio Collector," are now open and other sections or rooms will be opened as rapidly as their contents can be arranged. By next Christmas or early in the year 1911 the whole vast house of history and research will be in order.

The New $3,500,000 National Museum at Washington, D. C.

The new National Museum, which has been in course of erection for nearly six years, cost about $3,500,000. The monster new curio cabinet was built by Bernard R. Green, the man who a few years ago won fame by building the Library of Congress. The new museum covers more ground than any other building in Washington, except the Capitol.

The new building—its myriad windows letting in a flood of light from all sides—is located on the Mall, that great oblong park which extends from the White House to the Capitol, and which it is expected will one day be the possessor of a valuable and constantly growing collection of pictures. Within the past few years a number of notable additions have been made to this art collection through the donations of public-spirited men and women.

CALLED HIGHER

Paulen Smith Johnson (5), of Klondike, Ore.

Mrs. Luke Shinar (62), of Manistique, Mich.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dickey (90), of Massillon, O.

Mrs. Mary Wenner Mitchell (79), of Dimmick, Ill.

Mrs. E. L. Emmons, of Bridgeport, Conn., on January 25.

Mrs. Delila Miller, of Goshen, Ind., called home, March 24.

J. D. Kelpatrick, of Sparrow Bush, N. Y., died February 8.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Baker, of Wilton, N. H., died on April 29, at the age of seventy-nine years. She was a successful teacher of long experience.

Mrs. Jane Kaighen Corlett, aged ninety-nine. She lived in New York City from 1827 until her death. A member of the Methodist Church for over seventy years.

Mrs. George C. Hough, of Maxboss, N. D. She was a member of the Episcopal Church, and a fine Christian character. For years a faithful reader of this paper. She was buried at her old home, New Richmond, Wis.

Miss Lewisella Lehman, of Chicago, Ill., died April 1, 1910. She was buried at Versailles, O.

Mrs. G. L. Ellis, of Martin, Tenn., passed away April 16, 1910. She was the wife of Rev. G. L. Ellis, a Baptist minister of Martin.

Mrs. M. A. Blackard, of Potts Camp, Miss., after an illness of eight days, departed this life March 31, 1910. She was preceded to the House of Many Mansions by four little children, and was followed three days later by her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Floyd.

Mrs. Ellen Moore, of Falls Creek, Pa., was called to her heavenly home April 10, 1908. She was a good Christian woman and always loved THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and was very much interested in all the good work it did for humanity and gave to every needy cause when she felt able to contribute her mite.

When—

appetite suggests something good—when health dictates something nourishing — when bodily strength demands something sustaining — in short, when you're hungry.

Uneeda Biscuit

(Never Sold in Bulk)

5¢ a Package

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

HALLOWED HYMNS NEW and OLD
By I. ALLAN SANKEY, son of IRA D. SANKEY
OVER 1000 CHURCHES USING IT
256 Pages, 100 New Songs, Responsive Readings
$25. per 100, not prepaid. 35c. per copy by mail
Returnable samples mailed to "earnest inquirers"
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago

POST CARDS
10 Birthday, 10 cts. | 10 Decoration Day, 10 cts.
10 Rose, 10 cts. | 10 Fourth of July, 10 cts.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

PATENTS that PROTECT
Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps.
R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D. C., Dept. 36, Est. 1869

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

"Porosknit"
Summer Underwear
FOR MEN FOR BOYS

Porosknit Union Suits, being light weight, thin and elastic, never pull open between each button. ¶ The open texture lets air cool your body. ¶ Wear Porosknit two-piece or union suit garments and know true cool comfort.

When Buying Insist On This Label — TRADE MARK "Porosknit" REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. — It Is On Every Genuine Garment

Any Style in Union Suits
For Men, $1.00 50c. For Boys
Any Style Shirt and Drawers
50c For Men For Boys 25c
Buy from nearest dealer. Send for Illustrated Booklet FREE
CHALMERS KNITTING CO., 30 Washington St., Amsterdam, N.Y.

Are you going to build or remodel your old building? If so, write today for FREE sample and convincing proof that

BISHOPRIC WALL BOARD

Is Cheaper and Better Than Lath and Plaster

This practical substitute for lath and plaster is easily nailed to studding. Being applied dry, it is at once ready for decoration—paint, paper or burlap. Saves time and labor; is clean and sanitary; proof against cold, heat, dampness, vermin.

Bishopric Wall Board is made of kiln-dried dressed lath, IMBEDDED in hot Asphalt Mastic, and surfaced with sized cardboard; is cut at the factory into uniform sheets 4x4 ft. sq. and three-eighths of an inch thick. These sheets (delivered in crates) are easily and quickly nailed to studding ready for wall paper, paint or burlap.

Guaranteed Proof Against Moisture, Heat Cold, Sound and Vermin

Will not swell, shrink, warp, crack, flake or blister; is clean, sanitary and odorless. Being a non-conductor, saves fuel and keeps out summer heat; also deadens sound.

Its Many Uses—Bishopric Wall Board is used for dwellings, pleasure, health-resort and factory buildings, new partitions in old buildings, finishing attics, cellars, porches, laundries and garages.

Price $2.50 per 100 sq. ft. or $6.40 per crate of 256 sq. ft. f. o. b. factories New Orleans, Cincinnati, or Alma, Mich.

BISHOPRIC SHEATHING

Cheapest and Best for Frame or Stucco Buildings, for Cement Exterior Work

Bishopric Sheathing is made of same materials and in the same way as Wall Board, but finish is not necessarily so fine and therefore costs less; is proof against heat, cold, dampness, sound and vermin. Makes the best insulation. Cheaper and better than lumber. Does away with building paper. Our free booklet fully explains its many uses and advantages over lumber in both frame and cement construction. Also used with excellent results as a lining for dairy barns, poultry houses, stables or other outdoor buildings.

Price $2 per square of 100 sq. ft. or $5.12 per crate of 256 sq. ft. f. o. b. New Orleans, Cincinnati, or Alma, Mich.

Bishopric Roofing

Composed of felt and Asphalt Mastic flaked with mica. Never needs paint. Makes a neat, clean, artistic, durable roof. Guaranteed proof against cold, heat, moisture, wind and weather; will not crack, curl or break.

Write to-day for free samples and booklet describing Bishopric Asphalt Mastic Products—Wall Board, Sheathing, Roofing.

DEALERS, WRITE FOR PROPOSITION

The Mastic Wall Board & Roofing Mfg. Co.
40 East Third Street, Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS
IF I KNEW YOUR NAME

I would send you our Valuable Sample Outfit Free this very minute. Let me start you in a profitable business. You do not need one cent of capital. Experience unnecessary. Big Profits. Will give you credit if necessary. Premiums Free. New plan, goods shipped prepaid. LISTEN-Mary Brennan, Mass., gave up $10 a week job to come with us. Last week she made $30 in 3 days. You can too. George Gilbert, formerly Chief of Police, Ohio, made $1000 in his spare time. Write me now for Free Outfit.
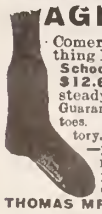
Wm. H. DOTY, Treas., 125 Doty Bldg., Boston, Mass.



AGENTS—$1.33 Per Hour

Comer made it, so can you. Swain says, "Best thing I ever struck." Easy money maker. High School boy sold 36 boxes in 2 days—profit $12.60. Agents get big repeat orders—build up steady business. Everybody wears hosiery. Guaranteed for 4 months against holes in heels and toes. Send right back to us if not perfectly satisfactory. J. R. Valentine sold 800 pairs in 50 hours—you can do as well—yes—better. Worn goods replaced free—no experience needed—we teach you everything. Here's your one big chance—don't lose it—write today. Free samples.
THOMAS MFG. CO., 1924 Wayne St., DAYTON, OHIO

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES
VISIBLE WRITERS
or otherwise

L. C. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.
¼ to ½ M'F'RS PRICES
Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY
PRICES $15.00 UP
First Class Machines Fresh from the M'f'rs—Write for Illustrated Catalog 71
Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

5 Fine POST CARDS FREE
Send only 2c stamp and receive 5 colored Gold and Embossed Cards FREE to introduce post card offer.
CAPITAL CARD CO., Dept. 132, Topeka, Kan.

BE AN ILLUSTRATOR—Learn to Draw. We will teach you by mail how to draw for magazines and newspapers. Send for Catalog
SCHOOL OF ILLUSTRATION
Office 44 Page Bldg.
Chicago, Ill.

The Strawberry Handkerchief

A Tale of Colonial Days in Old New York

By AMELIA E. BARR

"YOUR ladyship confers on me a great pleasure," said Batavius. "All my knowledge and experience—and I am a man of experience—I put at Captain Lawson's service. But as to the language, very little of it is known to me. What I needed I learned, no more, for I cared nothing for those dirty pagans. Often I was told I had better learn to talk with them, but I always said to myself, 'No! If they wish to talk with Batavius De Vries, they can learn English.' Now I am sorry."

"Then you will be here to-night?"

"Of that there is no doubt. At your service, my lady."

She permitted him to reach the door, then recalled him. With eagerness he answered the summons, and she said shyly and softly:

"Captain De Vries — I wish — oh, dear!—I am afraid to ask you"—and she stood before him, with her eyes veiled and cast down, and a pretense of vacillation and indecision that was exceedingly attractive. Batavius was delighted. Here was a lady of noble birth afraid of him. He drew himself up to his full stature, and said with an assuring kindness of tone and manner:

"Whatever you wish, Batavius De Vries will be proud to grant."

Then she suddenly threw up her head, and the splendor of her eyes into his. A flash of lightning could hardly have affected him more. He trembled, he wished to fall at her feet, to kiss the hem of her garment. It was a moment of heavenly enchantment; he was dumb under its bewitching spell.

"I wish—oh, Captain—I wish so much that you would wear the suit you wore when I last saw you."

"Oh, my lady!"

"And the red neckerchief—and the red sash. Captain Lawson admires a well-dressed sailor, and in that dress you looked like one of the sailors of the brave old times—knights of the sea, you know."

"Oh, my lady!"

"Thank you. Good-by. Come, Virginia."

Silently, hand in hand, they went to the parlor. Virginia now hoped to end the long suspense and uncertainty of her position. The last hour it had been almost unbearable, and she could hardly acquit Rose of unkindness in prolonging it by her chattering at the breakfast table. Even when they were alone with the world locked out, Rose seemed loath to begin the conversation. She enthused over the blazing hickory logs—over the dancing sunbeams—over the comfortable chair into which she had cuddled her little form, and then noticing Virginia's look of anxious inquiry turn to one of grief and injury, she stopped suddenly, and stooping forward until she could take her friend's hand, asked, "What is vexing you, darling? Let me tell you soberly, you ought to be very contented."

"Rose, how can you ask? What you can tell me is life or death to me, and you say not a word to quiet my anxieties. Oh, Rose, whatever you have to tell me, speak it plainly. I am past hoping and surmising."

"My sweet Virginia, I have nothing to tell you, except what I told you in my first letter. When you are a bride, there will be no bridegroom. Batavius will be miles and miles away. Is not that enough?"

"But I want to know——"

"I dare be bound you do—so do I. But my father insisted that you should know nothing about it. Need I remind you of the temper New Yorkers are in about the kidnaping of their citizens for English men-of-war? Father says, in Gloucester, a man found guilty of aiding in the abduction of a fisherman got forty lashes, and was also fined so heavily that it will take him four years of hard labor in prison to pay the fine."

"We ought to have considered these things."

"To be sure, but we are still among the multitude who do the things they ought not to do, and leave undone the things they ought to do. I thought of nothing but the joy of ridding you of the nasty creature, but my father saw at once that the faintest suspicion of your connection with the matter would be worse than death to you, and to your dear father and mother. I was going to England, where the affair will be considered a joke, or a clever bit of loyalty. It will really be a feather in my cap, and I shall be a heroine on a small scale—but you! Here in New York! Oh, Virginia, the terrors of death would be nothing to your sufferings—the scorn and disdain of the women who would cease to know you, except as a mark for outrageous insult—the bitter contempt of the men, who are growing hotter colonials hour by hour, and who grudge every man to England, now that they believe every man will be needed to fight colonial battles. Really the position was not thinkable. Your fine would be in accordance with your father's estate, and the dear old Captain would be left in his old age penniless, and shorn of his honorable name—your dear mother——"

"Oh, Rose, Rose!"

"The idea sprang from nothing but evil, and if father had not interfered, who knows where it would have ended? In the common jail certainly; for these colonials are a suspicious lot, and somehow their suspicions go straight to the truth."

"Am I to know nothing, then, of what has been done?"

"I will tell you that father was delighted to catch Batavius for the service, and he can not escape father. As for you, go on with the preparations for your marriage, precisely as if you desired and expected to be Mrs. Batavius De Vries."

"How can I?"

"Oh, be as forlorn and melancholy as you choose! I think you are a little ungrateful! I have had much anxiety, and father has taken the journey to New York when we might as well have sailed from Boston—and now—when I am dying to be at Aunt Portman's, I must delay ten days more, in order to lure the bird decently into the net. Upon my word, Miss Virginia, if I thought Joris would be as little grateful as you are, I would swear off kind deeds for ever. They are a dangerous luxury. May I never be tempted again into their unthankful business!"

"Have a little patience with me, Rose. You do not know how much I have suffered."

"I myself have not been reclining on a bed of roses."

"I have lost Joris through this business."

"Fiddlesticks! If so, he is easily lost; and as men go—better lost."

"He threw my Strawberry Handkerchief at my feet—he tore it in two also."

"Some day he will fall on his knees to pick it up."

"Do you know anything, have you heard anything of Joris?"

Continued on next page

Reduce the Cares

of housekeeping. One decidedly practical way is to use Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk in all cooking where milk or cream is required. Results will be more satisfactory than with most "fresh" milk. The convenience and economy will please you. Dilute Peerless Milk with water to any desired richness.

GROWING CHILDREN

The Period when the Nervous Activi is at Its Greatest

"Against the practice of giving tea coffee to children, we cannot speak strongly. Childhood is the period whe nervous activity is at its greatest. The is ever busy receiving new impressions. flex action, co-ordination of muscles, an special senses are all under a special c of training.

"The nervous system is pushed t utmost capacity, and long is the list of tims that follow its over-stimulation. these little people nothing but harm come from the use of such cerebral st lants as tea or coffee. Bad, then, as practice is, let us as physicians be aggre in its prohibition.

"Do not be satisfied by answering when asked as to their use; but let us t the families with whom we come in co that such practice is evil. We speak emp ically, because not only among the poor uneducated, but among the rich, who sh know better, this practice is marvelo prevalent."—The Home Doctor.

Children like a warm beverage for b fast and it is well for them to have it i drink is a food and not a drug.

Postum is made to supply a rich nou ing liquid food with a crisp coffee taste those who cannot and should not use co Analysis shows it to contain about fou per cent. of muscle-forming elements 66-11 per cent. of energy and fat-produ elements, which go to nourish and sus the delicate nerve centres throughout body and from which the vital energy ceeds.

The success of child or adult dep largely upon proper sustenance for the b Children who depend upon the intelli of their elders to furnish them with g food, deserve our most careful attention thought.

Read "The Road to Wellville," foun pkgs. "There's a Reason."

EARN 5%

on your savings. They should yield as large return as consistent with safety.

Deposited with our Company, they are free from speculation while earning 5 per cent. every day left in our care. The security back of them is of the very best—Selected mortgages upon New York and Suburban Real Estate. Earnings are remitted by check quarterly, semi-annually or compounded if desired. We have never paid less than 5 per cent for 17 years.

ASSETS over - $2,000,000
SURPLUS and PROFITS, 150,000
Under Supervision of New York Banking Dept.

The Industrial is a strong, progressive, carefully managed Savings Institution that merits your investigation. Write for booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings and Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d Street and Broadway
New York

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS-LOAN NEW YORK CITY

No Organ Money

Write to Estey for a good si gestion how to get good money the purchase of a good organ Church or Sabbath School.

Address Estey Brattleboro,

LYON & HEALY'S
GOOD CHURCH ORGANS
At Reasonable Prices

We make a specialty of large reed organs, voiced closely resemble pipe organs. These church organs will found much richer in effects than any cheap pipe organ.

Let us tell you what our $450 Cathedral Organ w furnish in the way of musical effects.

Illustrated catalog free. Styles from $100 to $500. Pa ments spread over 2 years when desired

Fine Folding Organs $37.50; Fine Parl Organs $45.00; Good Second-Hand Orga at half price.

LYON & HEALY, DEPT. F5575, CHICAG

SIX New Doilies, Briggs Alphabet Catalog of Stamp Patterns and a year's subscription Ingalls' Fancy Work Book—all for 10 Address J. F. Ingalls, Lynn, Mass.. Box

STAMPS 100 all different, Album and Hinges only 1 30 Sweden 10c—1000 all different st $2—20 different foreign coins 25c. We buy stamps coins—Buying Lists 10 cents. Toledo Stamp Co., Toledo, O

The Strawberry Handkerchief

Continued from preceding page

"He is remarkably well and happy." "I thought of him as poor and nely, and on the way to all the ters of a life of warfare in India." "He has more than heart can wish his eyes stand out with fatness. I nember that description, Virginia, ause when the archdeacon used intone it, I always expected him to e the pronoun 'I,' 'I have more in, etc.' In truth, Joris has the inise of London society. He is the lo of all fashion, and his dashing acity carries everything before it. e young women adore him, the mid-aged sing his praises, the men by all he does, and quote all he says. er since the day of Buckingham, d before that, London has gone mad er a handsome young fellow; and as, the old town does not grow ser!" "Who told you these things, Rose?" "My aunt, who also is one of his arers. Are you not pleased?" "No." "What for? You ought to be." "He is in temptation. He may do ong." "Do not be good beyond measure. ery young knight of the olden time nt through his temptations." "If you have ever been in love, e——" "My dear Virginia, no woman was er so much in love as I am. I have ndensed the whole world into one n, with the non-interfering addendm of a sympathetic father. I live f this one man. I love him, as you ver knew how to love, beyond all siderations and conditions, beyond t scorn of man, or the favor of man, vhout care for poverty or sickness, o even old age. I have considered ery likelihood, and I see that my le glorifies every situation." Rose, are you dreaming?" Wide awake, my precious." And his name?" His adorable, delightful name is ent." Oh, Rose, Rose! And what will yr father say?" I am blessed with sensible relatis; that is, they can take in two ses of a question—their own, and snebody else's side. I have told fatir, and he behaved in a most delhtful way." What did he do?" Kissed me." What did he say?" He asked me all about Arent. And I at down on his knees, and stroked h face, and told him; and by-and-by hgot to laughing at me,—but he was gd Arent was a sailor—and when Arnt boarded us at the Sea Gate, al brought our ship up the river himsf, father stood at the wheel beside hi, and fell dead in love with him. 'Our Arent is a splendid sea dog,' he sd, and I gave father a long, sweet ks, and began to walk on my tiptoes, al father laughed, and told me to cue to flat-feet awhile. So I sat dn again on his knee, and asked hi straight if I might marry Arent Vn Vroom? And he looked at me uil the tears were in both our eyes, a said he did not think I could find a better, brighter, honester young fow. And I said I would be of age in three months, could I marry him tn? And he said 'Yes,' but he wld like to be present. Then I a ed him if I could have my mothe fortune without any bother or hdrance, and he said, certainly, he wld instruct Moser to that effect. Tn I asked him if we could have S bright for our home, because Seabght is a beautiful castle on a high bf near the sea, and I could watch Arnt come and go from its windows. Al he laughed and asked if there was a other trifle I cared for? Then w both laughed, and he said, 'Your dling mother left all and married me for love, Rose, and I promised her that the little babe on her breast should do the same. To my beloved Alicia I keep my promise this day, and I am thankful to you, Rose, for making it so easy to keep.' Was not his behavior beautiful and fatherly?"

"If my father had only been as reasonable!"

"Circumstances alter cases."

"His dislike of Joris was absurd."

"Say rather, his liking for Batavius."

"But, Rose, what will your aunt say? There was a duke in question, was there not?"

"He is now out of the question. And aunt has an accommodating temper. She says second-bests are often the luckiest."

"And she will accept Arent?"

"Virginia, she will go crazy over Arent. She will move heaven and earth to help him. But she need not saddle herself with that task. She has an old cousin on the Admiralty Board, and if he wants a peaceful nightcap, he will have to give Arent his ship. And then Arent will put on the blue and gold, and wear epaulettes, and write R. N. after his name; and in the chancel of St. Margaret's I shall meet him."

And at these words the wonderful young lord of the sea entered the room, throwing wide the door with the air of a man who wanted endless spaces, and suffered no impediments. His eyes fell instantly on Rose, and all that was divine and immortal in Arent Van Vroom sprang into his face. The next moment Rose's arms were around his neck, and her lovely face between his hands, and he kissed her and kissed her till the room was full of joy and of low laughter and of little sounds of happiness, for which there are no explaining words on this plane of humanity. So that Virginia wondered to see them in an atmosphere of their own, lighter and lovelier than the rest of the room; and she walked softly and closed the door, as if the place had suddenly become sacred and secret, not understanding yet that love, when it is perfect, has cast out fear and has nothing to hide or to be ashamed of.

"Think of me only with love and joy. In four short weeks we shall meet again!"

"The tide serves," he said, "and all are on board—in half an hour we shall be afloat. Oh, Rose of the World! Oh, my Rose!"

"Arent!"

"My sweet sister! Did you think I had forgotten you? No!"

"Oh, Arent, have you no word of pity for me? You know I dislike Batavius—to marry him will kill me."

"Then for heaven's sake, marry him not. I can give you six minutes, Virginia—run for your cloak and hood. Come with me. No one shall prevent it." To be continued

A Noble Bequest

A NOTED attorney, D. S. Atkinson, of Greensburg, Westmoreland County, Pa., died recently and left his entire estate, amounting to about $200,000, for the erection and maintenance of a Young Men's Christian Association building in memory of his wife and daughter, who preceded him in death. B. R.

Missionary Progress in Peru

—MISSIONARY A. R. STARK, of Callao, Peru, writes acknowledging a gift of money for the work in Peru. He adds: "It is now many years since THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sent its first gift for the Gospel in Peru. During all these years we have been able to report steady extension. Last year was a notable one. Throughout the agency we circulated over 47,000 copies of the Word of God in many tongues."

The "STANDARD'S" Weekly Specials

Look for the "STANDARD'S Weekly Special" advertisement every week, just as soon as you get The Christian Herald. It always offers you interesting Money Saving Bargains. Satisfaction guaranteed on every purchase or your money refunded.

3330. Dutch collar prettily designed, inlaid with Cluny lace. Very popular and an excellent value. Special . . 25c

3327. Jabot and stock neatly trimmed with lace. Stock shows four rows of pin tucks. A neat, dressy style. Our Special Price..... 25c

3302. Handsome yoke and stock of exquisite Irish crochet lace. Beautifully designed and of splendid quality. 85c value Special..... 58c

3413. White Wash Belt with dainty embroidery pattern. Edges neatly bound. Handsome pearl buckle and detachable "hook on" clasp. Special 25c

3301. Charming Head Scarf of exquisite soft silk "Mousseline de soie." A delightful, soft, brilliant texture, with beautiful hand tinted colored Dresden borders. Size 19½ x 66 inches A distinct novelty. $1.50 value. Special, 89c

FREE Have you written for your FREE yearly subscription to the "STANDARD STYLE BULLETIN?" If not, write NOW—TO-DAY. To delay even a day may mean that you will forget it, and you surely want to see all the very latest New York styles. Write for FREE yearly subscription to-day.

STANDARD MAIL ORDER CO.
161 Wooster St.,
NEW YORK CITY

3331 Box of Ruching Six neck lengths of assorted fancy ruching, per box of 6.... 25c

3305. Hand Embroidered Dutch Collar and Jabot. Edged with fine "Baby" Irish Crochet. Very Smart style. Special, 25c

3306. Hand Embroidered Jabot. Exquisitely trimmed with thread lace and Irish Crochet Medallions. Special, 25c

3320. Hand Embroidered Jabot. Laid in six plaits and finished with lace. Special 25c

3410. Wash Belt of fancy white silk finished belting in damask Jacquard pin dots. Natural pearl buckle and detachable "hook on" clasp. Special, 18c

An Ever-Dry Salt Only 10c a Year

You can have salt on your table like the salt you see in hotels—salt that always flows freely, never clogs. Yet it isn't mixed with starch.

You can have the finest, purest, saltiest salt that was ever made. And the cost is only 10 cents per year over soggy, coarse, impure bag salt.

Simply ask for Shaker Salt.

Purified Salt

Every table salt save Shaker contains considerable gypsum. And gypsum is plaster of Paris—a pebble former—the basis of gravel and gall stones.

We remove this gypsum by an elaborate process—the only one known—and we own it. Shaker Salt is safe; but every substitute contains this dangerous impurity. We can prove this by Government tests.

Sanitary Salt

Shaker Salt comes in a paraffined box, proof against dampness, odors and dirt. It can't be contaminated. Each box has our patent spout for convenience in pouring.

You can get this fine grained, dainty, dry salt anywhere if you insist on it. You would not then go without it for fifty times what it costs.

Sold by all good grocers. Price (east of the Rockies) 10 cents per box. Be sure of the name—Shaker Salt.

MAGAZINES & BOOKS FOR LIBRARY SLIPS ONE IN EVERY PACKAGE

Diamond Crystal Salt Co.
St. Clair, Mich.

Makers of the only salt 99 7-10 per cent pure as proved by Government tests.

(31)

SUN PASTE

It Shines the Best Whichever Way You Look At It

The shine is blackest, the shine is brightest, the shine is quickest, and above all others it is absolutely dustless. Just what you want for your stove, isn't it? Get it the next time, and you will be convinced and delighted.

MORSE BROS., Props., Canton, Mass., U.S.A.

Are You Well?
Have You a Good Figure?

You can surprise your husband and friends by giving 15 minutes a day, in your room, to special directions which I give you to strengthen vital organs and nerves, so you are relieved of chronic ailments. Your body can be rounded and you can have as good a figure, as gracefully carried, as any woman of your acquaintance.

A pupil who was thin writes me:

"I just can't tell you how happy I am! I wore low neck and short sleeves the other night and I was proud of my neck and arms! My busts are rounded out and I have gained 28 pounds; it has come just where I wanted it and I carry myself like another woman. My old dresses look stylish on me now. You remember I have not been constipated since my second lesson and I had taken something for years. I guess my stomach must be stronger too, for I sleep like a baby and my nerves are so rested. I feel as if I had missed so much enjoyment in life, for I never did have such good times before. I feel so well all the time."

I have built up thousands of women why not you? Write me, and if I cannot help your particular case I will tell you so.

I give each pupil the individual, confidential treatment which her case demands.

SUSANNA COCROFT
Dept. 18-H. 246 Michigan Ave., Chicago

Note: Miss Cocroft's name stands for progress in the scientific care of the health and figure of woman.

$15.95 AND UPWARD
AMERICAN SEPARATOR

THIS OFFER IS NO CATCH. It is a solid proposition to send, on trial, fully guaranteed, a new, well made, easy running separator for $15.95. Skims hot or cold milk; making heavy or light cream. Designed, especially for small dairies, hotels and private families, different from this picture which illustrates our large capacity machines. The bowl is a sanitary marvel, easily cleaned. Gears thoroughly protected. Western Orders filled from Western points. Whether your dairy is large or small write us and obtain our handsome free catalog. Address:

AMERICAN SEPARATOR CO. Box 1184 BAINBRIDGE, N.Y.

BEEKEEPING its pleasures and profits, is the theme of that excellent and handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on trial for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page book on bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name this paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, Ohio

PATENTS That Protect and Pay
Advice and Books FREE.
Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services.
WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D.C.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' Oh, something new—The MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but you can't see them—they are invisible. I would not know that I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right."

The MORLEY PHONE

makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it. Over One Hundred Thousand Sold. Write for booklet and testimonials.
THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 702, Perry Building, Philadelphia

A Sample of Page Fence FREE

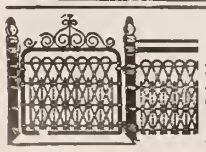
Send for an actual sample of the world-famous Page Woven Wire Fence. See the Basic Open Hearth Page Wire—the strongest fence wire in existence! See the wonderful Page Knot—the knot that can't come off! Get a Free copy of the Quarter-Centennial Catalog of Page Fence, explaining its amazing durability, elasticity and economy. Just a postal. Address: (3)
PAGE WOVEN WIRE FENCE CO., Box 213 H, Adrian, Mich

Get Book on "BRECO"

Write Now—Samples Free—Book Free. Direct from factory—$1.36—$1.66—$2.26 per Roll. Freight paid to west boundary line Minn., Iowa, Mo. and north of south line Tenn. Reliable high quality. Guaranteed waterproof; fire-resisting; durable.

Rubber Roofing Freight Prepaid

The Breese Bros. Co.
Roofing Dept. 77, Cincinnati, Ohio



LAWN FENCE

Many Styles. Sold on trial at wholesale prices. Save 20 to 30 per cent. Illustrated Catalogue free. Write today.
KITSELMAN BROS.
Box 302 Muncie, Indiana.

I Can Reduce Your Flesh

Would you like to reduce it by natural means and in a scientific, dignified manner?

I have reduced 25,000 women in the past seven years by a few simple directions followed in the privacy of their own rooms.

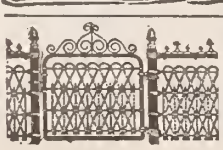
I can reduce you and at the same time strengthen stomach and heart and relieve you of such chronic ailments as rheumatism, indigestion, constipation, weak nerves, torpid liver and such difficulties as depend upon good circulation, strong nerves, strong muscles, good blood, correct breathing. You can be as good a figure as any woman of your acquaintance. Why not?

One pupil writes:

"Miss Cocroft, I have reduced 78 pounds and I look 15 years younger. I have reduced those hips and I feel so well I want to shout! I was rheumatic and constipated, my heart was weak and my head dull, my liver all clogged up and oh, dear, I am ashamed when I think how I used to look.

Send 10 cents for instructive booklet showing how to stand and walk correctly.

SUSANNA COCROFT
Dept. 18-H. 246 Michigan Ave., Chicago
Author of "Character as Expressed in the Body," Etc.



LAWN FENCE

Many designs Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries.
Coiled Spring Fence Co.
Box D Winchester Ind.

NOT BY BREAD ALONE*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

JESUS twice fed multitudes with loaves and fishes. The first time there were five thousand men, besides women and children (probably few); and the second time there were four thousand men, besides women and children. In the first instance Jesus used five loaves of bread and two small fishes; the second time he used seven loaves of bread and a few small fishes. The first feeding was at the head of the Sea of Galilee on the grassy plain just beyond the little town of Bethsaida Julias, and six miles northeast of Capernaum.

The second feeding was in the semi-pagan region called Decapolis, the place of ten cities, located on the eastern side of the Sea of Galilee. Probably it occurred on a grassy plain beside the sea. The two events were probably a few weeks apart. Between the two events Jesus visited the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and restored to health the daughter of the Syro-Phœnician woman. In both cases Jesus had gone aside for rest. In Capernaum he had been doing so many works of teaching and healing together with his apostles that "they had no leisure so much as to eat." They therefore had taken a boat to cross the sea, seeking a place of rest. But the people in Capernaum saw them on their sea flight, and, being unwilling to let Jesus escape them, they went around by land six miles and stood together in a throng to meet Jesus when his boat should land. After that there was no rest for him that day, for until the going down of the sun "he had compassion on them and healed their sick." The "second evening" was drawing near—some time between three and six o'clock. Jesus was reminded by his apostles that it was time for the people to return to their homes, particularly as they had been all day without food. But in his loving kindness Jesus was not willing they should go away empty, hence the wonderful miracle of feeding. The grassy plain was suddenly transformed into the appearance of a flower garden as the people at the command of Jesus seated themselves on the grass in rows, in companies of fifty and of a hundred, their brightly colored garments making them seem like flowers scattered through the green grass. "But where is the bread to come from?" the apostles asked Jesus, and they reminded him that it would cost two hundred pennyworth of bread (between thirty-five and fifty dollars), and they had no money, and there was no place in which to buy such a quantity of bread, certainly not nearer than Capernaum. Evidently they took no account of the granary of heaven.

The Boy with the Loaves

They presently discovered a boy who had five loaves of bread and two small fishes, but that was hardly enough for five people, to say nothing of the five thousand, beside women and children. (The loaves were probably a thumb's thickness and ten inches in diameter, the shape of large crackers.) But under the touch of Christ and with the blessing of heaven each morsel was increased a thousand fold, so there was enough for all and to spare; so that after all had eaten to the full twelve small baskets of fragments were taken up. Then the apostles had their share, and if any still was left, doubtless it was given to the hungry fishes in the sea, or possibly the boy's basket was filled, so that he should not be a loser through the benefactions of Jesus. And when the multitude had feasted and had departed, Jesus went up into the mountain to rest and pray, and the disciples re-entered the boat for a restful sea trip.

The feeding of the four thousand followed after three days of teaching and healing on the part of Jesus. He had gone on a mountain to rest, but the people, hearing of the wonderful cure he had made of a deaf and dumb man, brought all of their lame, dumb, maimed and blind to him, and he healed them, more than could be brought in one day; three days were required. When they saw the dumb speaking, the maimed whole, and the lame walking, and the blind seeing, pagans though they were, they glorified the God of Israel. At the end of the three days Jesus saw a hungry multitude around him, and he was entreated by the apostles to send them to their homes, but Jesus answered: "I have compassion on them; if I send them away fasting they will faint in the way." And so again the table of the Lord was spread in the wilderness. The people at the command of Jesus sat down upon the green grass. The story of bread which the apostles had—seven loaves and a few small fishes—at the touch of Jesus and by the power of heaven was increased at least six hundred times. There was no lack of food, for after all had eaten and were filled, that which was gathered up filled seven large baskets. And the people returned to their homes refreshed in body and spirit.

The Vacation Season

Observe and do not forget it that Jesus had on both occasions of feeding put forth his efforts at times when he had intended to rest. There is nothing said about his being weary at the close of his ministrations; but on the contrary, he was ready for future service, going to the help of his apostles as they were caught in a storm at sea, after the first feeding, and after the second feeding crossing to Magdala (Magdala), where many opportunities of being helpful awaited him.

We are now approaching the vacation season, and many of us have already made our plans for "rest." Would it not be well for us to think how we can put into our summering the joy of loving service, following in our small way the manner of Jesus? By way of contrast we will tell that one Christian woman said to us, "I have loaned out my canary, chloroformed the cat, discharged my cook, and bid good-by to the Ten Commandments, and now I am off for the country." Possibly some one will say: "She could not have been a Christian." Yes, she was, but all we can say for her is that she did not mean exactly what she said. It was an unfortunate way of telling about her freedom from care, and liberty to rest.

Thoreau said: "I wish to begin this summer well, to do something worthy of it and me, to transcend my daily routine and that of my townsmen, to have my immortal life now in the quality of my daily life. I pray that the life of this summer may ever be fair in my memory. May I dare as I have never done. May I purify myself anew as with fire and water and soul and body. May my melody not be wanting to the season. May I find myself to be a hunter of the beautiful that nothing escape me. May I attain to a growth never attained. May I be eager to report the glory of the universe. May I be worthy to do this, to have gotten through with regaining human values, so as not to be distracted from regarding divine values. It is reasonable that a man should be something worthier at the end of the season than at the beginning.

In this connection we recall the noble summer work of Dr. Klopsch at

Continued on next page

* International Sunday School Lesson for May 29, 1910. The Multitudes Fed. Matt. 14: 13-21; 15: 29-39. GOLDEN TEXT: "Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life." John 6: 35.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

Mt-Lawn. How could he, a man of so many cares and of large affairs, giv his time and strength to the poor ch ren gathered there? We have see him go back and forth on the tra s with them as their tender protecr. We have seen him leading and pa cipating in the games of the childre on the lawn. We have seen him wa among the children as they sat at the ables eating their fill in "Fort Ploy." We have seen him stand in fro of them at the Children's Temple, speking inspiring words to them, and joi ng with them in their songs. What wod liberty to sit in his arm-chair on cool veranda have been to Dr. Klosch with the luxury he found in doig good at Mont-Lawn? How profita e, how enjoyable he made not only his wn summers, but those of others! He ives in the hearts of the Mont-La n children, and it is fitting that his gra overlooks Mont-Lawn.

A group of young people went one sum er to the mountains. They were all eachers in Sunday School classes at me. On the first Sunday in their mo tain retreat they felt lonely when Sunay School time came around, and the made inquiries about Sunday Schols in the neighborhood, thinking the might visit them. They were tol that in several country districts not more than five or six miles distant Sunay Schools were held in school hoes, and they determined to visit the, and, if possible, be helpful. Sor of them were beautiful singers, and they delighted the scholars and tea ers with their songs. One of the number was a blackboard artist, and he always drew a picture, carrying with her a portable blackboard. Fw others were skilled in teaching, and they generally gave the lesson. In this way new ideas and beautiful des were given to the teachers and scholars. The visitors themselves beca an greatly interested, and to see hon Sunday School teacher or scholar bec me the object of almost every kin they took through the week. As a r sult the Sunday School work of the whole region received a new impet . The visitors found themselves nor the less rested, but on the contra , they were made stronger and hap er through their efforts to help oth s. True it is, there is nothing nor debilitating, tiresome and degrading than idleness. There is no greater int erence with a good time than to hav nothing to do that is worth while doin. Mere summer amusements and rec ations cannot rest those who are job-hearted and earnest.

Not a Large Capital

Let no one be discouraged from trying to be helpful to others either at hom or off on vacation by the thought that he has only a few talents.

What if the little Jewish lad
That summer day had failed to go
Down to the lake because he had
So small a store of loaves to show?

If from his home the lad that day
His five small loaves had failed to take,
Would Christ have wrought—can any say?—
This miracle beside the lake?

In an English town there lived an old woman past seventy years of age. She was poor and feeble. Her pastor preached a sermon on foreign missions which so interested her that she offered herself as a missionary to Africa. But she was gently told that she could not go and that, instead, she might pray for the cause and send her alms. So she began saving her pennies, anxious to do something for the missionary work. In that same place lived a rich young nobleman who cared more for his dogs than for religious enterprises. He heard about the old lady, and he went to see her one day. He found her in tears, utterly disappointed and discouraged. She said that the people only laughed at her, and that all she had gathered together as the fruit of so much pains amounted to but a few shillings.

"My barley loaves are worthless," was her despairing cry. That very night she died. The next day found the young lord sitting silently and alone, with his head bowed, held by his hands. The Spirit of God was moving on his heart. The result was that he wrote a letter offering himself as a missionary to Africa.

Have not you one "barley loaf," or two, or more, that you can offer to Jesus that he may bless them to some good end?

Golden Text Illustrations

"Jesus said unto them: I am the bread of life." He spoke these words to a company of people in Capernaum on the day after he had fed the multitude of five thousand. Some of them were the very same people who had shared in the feeding. They imagined that Jesus might repeat his wonderful deeds of the day before, and so in the early morning they went again to the grassy plain near Bethsaida. But when they found him not, they returned to Capernaum and sought him, and found him in the synagogue, for it was the Sabbath Day.

Their interest was more in miracles than in Jesus, and Jesus himself recognized this, and he proceeded to show them that they were caring more for temporal things, such as bread for the body, than for eternal things, bread for the soul. (About all there is to be seen in Capernaum to-day are a few carved stones—the lintel with a pot of manna and a bunch of grapes—supposed to be a part of the very synagogue in which Christ preached. We discovered a souvenir hunter hacking at the stones, and shamed her into stopping.)

OUR GUARANTEE AND FINANCIAL ADVERTISERS

We have received a letter from one of our subscribers who calls attention to the time limit of two months in our guarantee and then asks what we would do if he were to buy some bonds of one of our financial advertiser and that financial advertiser were to fail a year or so after the purchase.

In the first place, the failure of a bond house would not necessarily depreciate the value of the bonds of other properties issued by it. The probability of any of our financial advertisers failing in business is very small. None but conservative financial advertisers are permitted to use the advertising columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Again, the nature of a bond purchase is such that it would be difficult for us to arrange a specific guarantee that would cover all cases. A bond is not like an article of perishable merchandise, the ultimate value of which can be determined at once. A bond must stand the test of years, and the best we can do to safeguard the interest of our readers is to make sure in the first place that the financial advertisers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are reliable.

Our guarantee is really meant to protect our readers against fraud. An advertiser might be unfortunate enough to fail, and such a failure might be honest enough in itself and not the result of fraud.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement.

We Built a Boiler With Windows in It

We learned by experiment that some boilers get twice the heat out of a ton of coal that others get. It is largely a matter of harnessing the fire and getting the most out of it while it is still hot.

So, to be beyond theory, beyond guesswork, we built a boiler with windows in it.

Through these windows we proved our experiments and perfected the new "RICHMOND" which, in actual practice, developes double the efficiency of ordinary boilers. And the day-after-day saving in coal will prove this to you, just as the windows proved it to us.

"RICHMOND"
Boilers — Radiators

From ash-pit to radiator, the "RICHMOND" system embodies the newest and best that is known in heating. It is the crystalization of a hundred ingenuities — a hundred economies. It is adaptable to a three-room bungalow or a mammoth palace—to steam heat—hot water heat—direct or indirect.

Write Us

If you contemplate installing a heating system, steam, or hot water—direct or indirect—in your home or building, large or small, write us. Ask for catalog 245. Be fair enough to yourself to learn of a system which, by inventive ingenuity, saves its own cost, pays its own maintenance.

Address in the West

Cameron Schroth Cameron Co.

Western Distributors for "RICHMOND" Boilers and Radiators

245 Michigan Street, Chicago

By building a boiler with windows in it, we learned certainly about drafts, water circulation and fire travel which enabled us to perfect a heating system which doubles efficiency and halves the fuel bill.

We found, through the windows that the flue is more important than other makers dream.

So, by patient experiment, we perfected a "diving flue" which costs us three to seven times as much as other makers spend for smoke-connections and makes it that much more efficient.

The "RICHMOND" "diving flue" takes the gases and smoke which would ordinarily pass up the chimney and sends them back, mixed with fresh oxygen, to burn anew.

For every shovel of coal you put in the fire-box this "diving flue" sends half a shovel back from the chimney.

The "Diving Flue"

The "diving flue" is our own invention. It is exclusive. It can be found in no boiler save the "RICHMOND."

The fuel economy it brings, more than repaid the experiment of the boiler we built with windows in it.

But the "diving flue" was not the only outcome of this experiment.

We learned more about drafts than had ever been written on paper.

We learned how to increase our heating efficiency from 90 square feet to 128 square feet without adding to the size or cost of the boiler.

We learned how to build a cross circulation water way which does for the water circulation what the "diving flue" does for the fire travel.

We learned how to arrange doors and drafts and dampers so that tending the fire becomes a simple, easy, exact science, instead of a difficult, haphazard uncertainty.

Self-Cleaning Surfaces

We learned how to make 90 per cent. of our surfaces self-cleaning—so more efficient.

And in countless ways, the boiler with windows enabled us to save half your coal, double ease, flexibility, satisfaction—without increasing the first cost of the heating system to you.

The "RICHMOND" heating system as perfected to-day represents the climax of inventive skill—a system that repays the pains we put into it every day you use it.

The "RICHMOND" system is small enough for a three-room bungalow. Big enough for a building that measures its floor space by the acre.

THE McCRUM-HOWELL CO. Park Ave. and 41st St., 245 Terminal Building, New York

MANUFACTURERS OF

"RICHMOND" Boilers and Radiators

"RICHMOND" Enameled Ware, Bath Tubs, Lavatories, Sinks—"RICHMOND" Suds Makers—"RICHMOND" Suction Cleaners—"RICHMOND" Stationary Vacuum Cleaning Plants.

FIVE PLANTS:— Two at Uniontown, Pa.—One at Norwich, Conn.—One at Racine, Wis. One at Milwaukee, Wis.

Retired Ministers and School Teachers will find it to their advantage to write me if in search of light

Remunerative Employment.

STACEY WILSON

253 Broadway, New York

20 Beautiful Post Cards No Two Alike—Latest Designs 10c

Lovely assortment of 20 Artistic Birthday, Friendship, Good Luck, Roses and Flowers in exquisite colors, all for only 10 cents, if you answer this ad. immediately. J. H. Seymour, 255 W. Eighth St., Topeka, Kan.

Save Steps between Kitchen and dining room. One trip with Wheel Tray sets table. Another clears it. Stands beside table for serving. Beside sink while washing dishes. Price $10, exp. paid. Circular WHEEL TRAY CO., 435C West 61st Place, Chicago, Ill.

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

Wear-Resisting Concrete Finishes

TRUS-CON FLOOR ENAMEL becomes part of the concrete itself, hardens with age, and is water-proof. Will resist wear and will not peel off or crack.

TRUS-CON FLOOR ENAMEL produces a tile-like surface, which is sanitary and easily cleaned by washing. It is damp-proof, stain-proof, prevents formation of concrete dust on cement floors.

TRUS-CON WALL FINISHES are sanitary, make concrete walls damp-proof, preserve the beautiful grain of the masonry and lend an air of cheerfulness with its delicate tints.

TRUS-CON Finishes are furnished in many delightful colors. Write us condition and size of surface to be finished and we will send free trial sample and booklet and color card free.

TRUSSED CONCRETE STEEL CO.
443 Trussed Concrete Building. - Detroit, Mich.

CARTER'S
REG U.S. PAT. OFF.
UNDERWEAR

Carter's is exclusive in design, fabric and finish. Pure, sterilized, white garments, with fine invisible ribs; dainty and durable yet full of style. The most dependable of any underwear in the world at the price.

Millions already wear Carter's, but we want thousands more to try it this spring. Send us your name and address, and let us send you samples of our unique new crochet finish — the finish which resists wear and laundering. Something new and beautiful. Write today.

Made in Union and Two-piece Suits for Women and Children. Union Suits for Men. Also Infants' Shirts and Bands, Silk, Wool and Cotton.

For sale by nearly all first-class dealers. Refuse substitutes. Look for the Carter Trade-mark. Don't forget the samples of crochet finish

THE WILLIAM CARTER CO.,
Sole Manufacturers
78 Main Street
Needham Heights, Mass.

5%

Three important things this Company offers you:

1—A Liberal Interest Rate.
2—Absolute Security.
3—Your Money on Demand at any time.

It would be hard to find a more nearly ideal investment for idle capital or savings.

You can open an account at any time—withdraw at any time, without notice—

And your money earns 5% interest for every day it is in our hands.

This Company has been in business for 14 years. It is strong, conservative, ably managed.

Write to-day for the Booklet—you will be interested.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

Dessert Book Free

What shall we have for dessert or salad?—is answered over a hundred times in the new illustrated Knox dessert book. Also many recipes for candies better than "fudge" or "Divinity." For the name and address of your grocer we will send you the book free. If he doesn't sell Knox Gelatine, we will send a full pint sample for 2c. in stamps and his name, or for 15c. a two quart package.

Knox Pure Plain Sparkling Gelatine
55 Knox Ave., Johnstown, N. Y.

Central America's Catastrophe

PEOPLE of Central America are used to "slight" tremors of the earth, as if the surface of things had become uneasy and was seeking to readjust itself for another period of rest; but it has been many years since there has been such a terrible earthquake as that of May 4, which destroyed the larger part of Cartago and devastated the greater part of Costa Rica.

In the old volcanic region of Costa Rica shocks have been felt for some time past and they have been increasing in violence. In four weeks over thirty quakes were recorded. These did much damage and filled the people with fear, but no lives were lost.

It was known that something was wrong at Cartago when the telegraph wires all went out of commission at once between the city and the nearest telegraph station in Nicaragua. Soon the news was brought in that the ancient and picturesque city was a heap of ruins and that at least five hundred of its people were buried beneath the fallen walls, while the injured and homeless were numbered by thousands.

This report reached San José, thirteen miles from Cartago. San José was badly shaken and the people left it as rapidly as they could get a few effects together, making for the open country anywhere to get away from falling walls.

The shock heaved up the surface of the streets of Cartago at seven in the evening, and at once there ensued a scene of terror only equaled by those in Sicily during the great disaster. People ran hither and thither, seeking relatives and missing friends. Hundreds dug heroically in the midst of falling buildings to rescue loved ones pinned beneath the débris of floors and fallen roofs. The cries of the panic-stricken people as they rushed wildly from street to street added to the terror of the black night, for scarcely a light was visible, except for a fire here and there which cast a weird and fitful glare over the searchers in the ruins. The prisons were partly destroyed and the inmates thus freed began to loot the half-ruined houses until the sharp crack of muskets in the hands of guards called to the scene put an end to their depredations.

Among several of the handsome public buildings which have crumbled to a shapeless mass is the Central American Peace Palace recently built by Andrew Carnegie. It had just been finished, and elaborate plans had been made for the coming dedication. It cost a quarter of a million. The Central American Court had just tried to bring about a peaceful solution of the trouble in Nicaragua and had just communicated with Secretary Knox before the shock came.

Cartago stands in an imposing situation, 6,000 feet above the sea, on what has been called the backbone of Central America, and is a noted health resort. It was an active, bustling city of quite European aspect, despite the fact that most of the houses are low—not more than a story or two.

The city was founded in 1563 by that intrepid adventurer Don Juan Vazquez de Coronado, who left his impress upon Central America and Mexico, and it had many ancient structures of interest to American tourists, many of whom were delighted to spend days in its health-giving atmosphere. It was originally the capital of the country, but eighty-seven years ago the seat of government was changed to San José. The whole country thereabout is volcanic and such seismic disturbance as has tumbled the city to the earth is liable to occur at any time. The shock of May 4 was felt at a number of points in Nicaragua, near the boundary of Costa Rica.

Our national government is much interested and has sent experts to investigate conditions in the earthquake districts. The minister of Foreign Affairs for Costa Rica informed the Washington authorities of the disaster shortly after the earthquake, in which he stated that the city of Cartago was ruined.

A MISSIONARY MARTYR

MISSIONARY WM. C. TERRIL, Superintendent of the M. E. Mission at Inhambane, East Africa, writes: "I wish to acknowledge the receipt of the recent favor sent by you for Mr. Andrew H. Dawley, for the support of scholarship No 88, Nwambiya. In the name of the mission and its workers I thank you most sincerely for the interest you have in the spread of the Gospel news in the fields that we are pleased to call foreign as well as in the homeland. I will write to Mr. Dawley by the next mail and thank him for this gift.

Missionary Runfeldt and His Pupils

"I am sure that you and your readers will rejoice with us because of the opening of our Boys' Training School. We opened March 3 with an attendance of twenty picked boys. Others are coming each day. We had to begin before the temporary buildings were completed, but we made a fair beginning, and the interest of the boys in their work is full of cheer to us. A 'Praise Service' was held and throughout the prayers and remarks, the one thought expressed was that the time of great light had come to this part of Africa, because many prayers for the school had been offered ever since this work began. The joy that lit up the faces of those who were present was sufficient to repay the physical toil that the school has thus far given the missionaries.

"I enclose this time a picture of the staff of workers in our printing department, where we have printed in six different languages during the past year pages amounting to 686,880. I am sorry to report that the manager, who sits in the centre of the picture, Rev. C. H. G. Runfeldt, died with blackwater fever on the 9th of January, this year. He worked until the last and gave himself for this people."

Among the Workers

—MR. JOHN H. CONVERSE, of Philadelphia, has just been translated into the higher life. He was the son of a minister, and was born in Burlington, Vt., in 1840. Graduating from the University of Vermont in 1866, he soon afterward entered the employ of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and in 1873 became a member of the firm. He was vice-moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly and chairman of its Business Committee, besides holding many other important offices. He gave liberally to all good causes, contributing at least $50,000 every year for evangelistic work. His business standing was of the highest.

CORNISH

Cornish Instruments for real merit, are unexcelled by any other, whatever the price, or name or reputation.

Sent to ou for a Ye 's Free T al

We will nd direct fro ur Factory any Cornish pla or organ that y ay select fro our catalog, on ny terms of ay- ment tha on may ch se with the d cet understand! hat If the instr ent does not co up to your est expectation you will be unc no obligations at- ever to ke It, and that the

Trial Will Cost You Absolutely No ng

If the instrument does not prove better value for the money than you can get anywhere else—if it is not as good an instrument as you can buy for one-third more than we ask—if at any time within a year you feel that you have not a good bargain, send it back; we won't find one word of fault with your decision, and you will not be one cent out of pocket for freight for use of the instrument.

Two Years Credit If Nee

We Save You $100 and More On a Piano

We Give You a Legal Bond of Inde ity

Easy Terms

Buy On The Cornish Plan—Save One-Third

which holds us to this offer. Yo nothing. We as all responsi ty, because we kn about the great of material and manship in pianos and organs we know all about th sweet, rich tone of our instrumen and we know what a er of a million fied purchaser of them.

If you keep the ment it will cost Rock-Bottom tory Price, cent more, and y receive with Bonded Guar which insures the ment for 25 against defect in ial or workmansh

Chapel Style

Discounts To Religio and Charitable Institu s

Send For The Cornish Book

Don't think of buying before reading it. It is the handsomest piano and organ catalog ever issued. It explains things you ought to know whether you buy from us or not and it is yours for the asking. Write for it now and please mention which you are interested in —piano or organ.

CORNISH CO. WASHINGTON, J. Established Over Half A Cen ury.

Hammo-port
TRADE C/G QUALITY MARK

No need to pay the high price couch or bed hammocks. The i proved 1910 Hammo-port is b ter in every way—less expensive. Back rest justable to any position, use as a wind shield back rest. The patent spring cannot sag and support 450 lbs. Use as a hammock or bed outdoor sleeping. Solid colors and handso stripes, positively fast colors. Guaranteed sa factory or money back. Buy from your deale we will ship complete, east of Ro ies for $9.75 Ask for Booklet J FR

Carnie-Goudie Mfg. Co.
Kansas City, Missouri

"INVESTMENTS"

an independent monthly magazine with no axe to g , is an indispensable aid to all wise investors. It is inte ng, authoritative, profitable. $1.00 a year. Sample co ee. BANKERS PUBLISHING CO., 253 Broadway, New ork

The South and Prohibition

By Captain Richmond P. Hobson, M.C.

THE question of prohibition has en- listed the attention of the civilized wld more in the last ten or fifteen yrs than perhaps at any previous piod. This general interest is no dbt the result of educational forces t t have been at work far and wide. Te greatest interest, however, has bn shown in the Southern States, vere the progress made has been unrled. State after State has adopted ll option. Many States have folled with State-wide prohibition unt to-day four-fifths of the population idry and the one-fifth wet is being aisted. While this State-wide prohition is only statutory, the general nvement is to make it constitutional, al before many years the prospects a that all the Southern States will eoy permanent constitutional proHition.

The Causes

There has been much speculation as t the causes of this extraordinary aivity in prohibition in the South.

Captain R. P. Hobson

ost people from other sections have sumed that because the South is the me of the negro population, this esence of the negro has been the ef cause. It is true that the negro der the effects of alcohol degenates rapidly into a brutal savage rd becomes a menace to the commury; but it is also true that the white an is set back proportionately. hile the presence of the negro has me influence, those who live in the uth do not look upon this as the in cause of the general interest.

In my judgment, the main explanatn for Southern progress in prohibitn lies in the fact that the South is re rural, nearly sixty per cent. of te Southern population being still enged in agricultural pursuits, and a ry much smaller percentage of the pulation is foreign-born and has len subjected to the life of cities road; the figure being only a little er two per cent.

Recent discoveries of science throw ht upon this important question. e processes of the life operations in e human blood cause the human be- g to gravitate toward the use of alcoolic drink in proportion as the poison in evidence in the vicinity. For this ison, rural populations have always len the most exempt from the ravages strong drink, and consequently best le to fight its progress.

Recent researches showing the full ects of alcohol upon the human sysm give an insight into the rise and ll of nations.

No new empire has ever been built upon the ashes of an old empire, because the destroyer that overthrew remains in supreme possession, and it is on the sites of the old empires that King Alcohol rules supreme. There women and children as well as men bow down before him daily.

If America falls there will be no more new lands to move to. We have reached the ocean and empire has made the circle of the world. With the fall of America the human race would be undone, going from bad to worse until wiped off in wrath from the face of the earth.

The great reviving interest in the question of prohibition the world over is no doubt due to the general recognition of the poisonous nature of alcohol and the destroying effect of strong drink upon society and the nation. It is perfectly natural that the interest should be greatest in America, where the degenerating effects have been less than in other lands; and it is perfectly natural that the greatest interest of all should be manifested in the South, where these effects have been less than in any other part of America.

The Destroyer to Be Destroyed

My interpretation of the remarkable progress of prohibition in the South is that it manifests the gathering of a great world movement that will end in destroying the arch-destroyer of the ages.

The movement is gathering strength in all parts of the world through the organic treatment that comes as the people themselves are made acquainted with the true effects of alcohol upon the human system and the consequences to society. For twenty-five years the Sunday Schools have been giving quarterly lessons upon the effect of temperance, and for ten or twelve years the public schools of the South have taught the physiological effects of alcohol. These young people thus instructed are now coming into the responsibilities of manhood, and form the basis for the political victories that have been won.

Suggestions As To Procedure

The drink evil, being the deepest, most organic ill known to society, must have organic treatment for any permanent and effective cure. This means that the people themselves must be reached for all effective prohibition work. I venture to suggest that the Anti-Saloon League should have a strongly organized educational committee, national, State, and local, to promote educational work through the public schools, through the Sunday Schools, through the pulpit, and through the press. The struggles should then be determined by the condition of preparation in each case.

It must be borne in mind that the war is being waged against a veteran adversary that has fought a thousand battles. To make permanent progress against him and ultimately overthrow him will require thorough preparation, the best plans, the highest strategy and the wisest tactics.

In my judgment the South is the field for the first struggle to put prohibition into the organic law of the States, their constitutions, where alone it can rest permanently and give an effective cure. The work of preparation should be carried forward steadily in all the other sections. Then, in due time, when prohibition is in the constitutions of the Southern States, it can be put into the constitutions of the other States, completing the conquest of all America. Then the war must be carried to all the world.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings to every day investor. See their advertisement on page 488, and write them for full information.

THE
NEW OCEAN HOUSE
SWAMPSCOTT MASS.

RIGHT by the sea on the famous North Shore, less than thirty minutes by train from Boston. New England's most popular and beautiful summer resort, the center of summer life and recreation for the wearied business man and his family.

¶ The New Ocean House has been completely and extensively improved at unlimited expense. Luxuriously appointed rooms arranged en suite with baths and modern appointments.

¶ Little individual cares and comforts giving a homelike feeling to all are characteristic of this hotel and make the passing of summer days a rare delight. A smooth and sandy beach is but a step from the veranda, and as there is no undertow, surf bathing is enjoyed without fear by young and old.

¶ Tennis, golf, driving, sailing, fishing or idling may be had under the most ideal conditions. The roads in this section are said to be the finest in New England, being broad, smooth and well shaded. These facts make strong appeals to horsemen and motorists. Connected with the hotel is a well managed garage accommodating forty autos, and here dining parties may store their cars free of charge.

¶ No more perfectly appointed hotel is known to summer life --- the cuisine is famous, electric lights, elevators, broad verandas, an attractive ballroom, and a high class orchestra contribute to make the New Ocean House lively enough for the young, yet quiet and restful enough to please the older.

¶ Until June 1st, write for booklet to the

E. R. GRABOW CO.,
673 Boylston Street, Boston, Massachusetts
Also Proprietors of Myrtle Bank Hotel, Kingston, Jamaica, W. I.

Linene COLLARS CUFFS AND BOSOMS

You Can Buy a Linene Collar

for less than the cost of laundering a linen collar, but can't tell them apart when on the neck. The turn down styles of Linene Collars can be worn both sides at a cost of only 1¼ cents for the wearing of each side.

10 Collars for 25 Cents at the stores, or by mail 30 Cents in U. S. stamps. SAMPLE BY MAIL for 6 Cents.

State size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR COMPANY
Dept. T, Boston, Mass.

RAPHAEL TASSO RUBENS ANGELO 13

MENNEN'S
BORATED TALCUM
TOILET POWDER

Superior to all other powders in softness, smoothness and delicacy. Protects the skin from wind and sun. Prevents chafing and skin irritations. The most comforting and healing of all toilet powders.

Mennen's Borated Talcum Toilet Powder is as necessary for Mother's baby as for Baby's mother.

It contains no starch, rice powder or other irritants found in ordinary toilet powders. Dealers make a larger profit by selling substitutes. Insist on Mennen's. Sample Box for 2c Stamp.

Gerhard Mennen Company, Newark, N.J.

AGENTS MAKE BIG MONEY

We have a from-factory-to-consumer proposition for women and men agents that is high-class—interesting—easy to sell and extremely profitable. Many of our agents are making $300.00 per year, and only a little of their time required. We supply you with goods on consignment and full information how to make sales. We co-operate with you from start to finish. This proposition is not sold through dealers. You can undersell the dealer with better goods than the dealer handles, and make good money

Write to-day for full information and territory.

We are allotting territories right now, so kindly write to-day before we give some one else your territory.

Address Box 28, care of CHRISTIAN HERALD

PATENT YOUR IDEAS

$8,500 for one invention. Book "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents advertised for sale at our expense in fourteen Manufacturers' Journals.

Patent Obtained or Fee Returned

CHANDLEE & CHANDLEE, Patent Att'ys
Established 16 Years
928 F Street, Washington, D.C.

YOU CAN WRITE A SHORT STORY

Beginners learn so thoroughly under our perfect method of training that many are able to sell their stories before they complete the course. We also help those who want a market for their stories. Write for particulars

School of Short Story Writing, 44 Page Building, Chicago

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Send to-day for our new 72-page book-folder, the

San Joaquin Valley
California---it's free

It tells you what you want to know about —the fertility of the soil
—the source and cost of water
—the cost of land
—the expense of development
—the crops grown
—the markets
—the schools, churches and social conditions
—the experience of other men who are making fortunes there

The San Joaquin Valley is two hundred and fifty miles long, one hundred miles wide, and contains ten million irrigable acres, of which about twelve per cent. already are developed.

The soil is deep, rich, and easily cultivated. It will produce, abundantly, every crop of the temperate and semi-tropic zone.

Abundant water for the artificial irrigation of every acre comes to the land, from the high Sierras, through rivers, streams, and the great water-sheet that underlies the entire valley.

The climate is unusually healthful and pleasant, and it makes things grow like magic. The crops include everything from wheat and potatoes to oranges and the most delicate table grapes.

A few acres of alfalfa, half a dozen cows, a few hogs and a flock of chickens, will more than pay running expenses while the orchard and vineyard is being developed and brought into bearing.

In all parts of the valley are many farmers, who, starting in this way, have made comfortable homes and a substantial bank account.

C. H. Culver, Merced, bought 21¼ acres in 1908 for $4,500. He now values his place at $6,000. Last year his net returns were $1,500.

Isaac Guy, Modesto, California, bought forty acres in 1905, paying $55 an acre. To-day he values his land at $275 an acre. In 1907 his returns were $1,500; in 1908, $2,000; in 1909, $2,500. In addition to this, he has thirty-three dairy cows that earned for him last year an average of $75 per head.

These are not exceptional cases. What Mr. Culver and Mr. Guy have done you can do. The profits from increased land values depend on quick action. Every year land commands higher prices.

The Santa Fe has no land to sell, but it wants to have the country along its line settled up. The only people we want are those who can make a big success. Every ton of produce grown makes so much more freight for our trains to haul. That's where we come in.

If you enclose a two-cent stamp and make special request, I also will send a copy of our 208-page travel book, "To California Over the Santa Fe Trail."

You can see this country for yourself this summer for $72.50 for the round trip from Chicago. Special dates during the summer, $62.50. Proportionately low from other points. Write to-day.

C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent
A. T. & S. F. Railway System
100 Railway Exchange, Chicago

WE PAY THE POSTAGE

This CORSET COVER ONLY 45¢

HANDSOMELY TRIMMED FRONT AND BACK WITH BEAUTIFUL IMPORTED EMBROIDERY SIZES 32 TO 44 BUST MEASURE

No. 638—Send only 45c

and we will mail you this Handsome Corset Cover, postage prepaid. Made of good quality soft finish Nainsook; has beautiful 3¼-inch Imported Open Work Embroidery Yoke; two rows handsome Val. lace; one-inch lace beading; edged entirely around neck and arm-holes with one-inch Val. lace to match. Yoke finished with one-inch pure silk ribbon draw and large bow, further trimmed with pure silk baby ribbon draw entirely around neck, fly front, pearl buttons; all seams tape bound. Back yoke has one-inch Val. lace with one-inch lace beading. Sizes 32 to 44. Be sure to state size wanted. Price only 45c. If you don't find it worth at least 85c. return it and we will cheerfully refund your money, also postage. This extremely low price is made to introduce our Large Free Catalog of Everything to Wear for Men, Women and Children, also Furniture, Stoves, Carpets, Rugs, Refrigerators and all kinds of Household Goods.

Reference: Commercial National Bank of Chicago
Capital $7,000,000.00

CHICAGO MAIL ORDER CO.
INDIANA AVE. & 26TH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Corns keep on growing when you cut them. A-Corn Salve takes them out by the roots. Easy, quick, sure. No pain or danger. 15c at druggists' or by mail. Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia

Shoe Elegance
So essential to the well gowned woman, is assured by the use of

Whittemore's Shoe Polishes

They meet every requirement for cleaning and polishing shoes of all kinds and colors.

THEY PRESERVE and BEAUTIFY
Do not soil the clothing or grow sticky.
Finest in Quality Largest in Variety

"Dandy" combination for cleansing and polishing russet or tan shoes, 25c. "Star" size, 10c.
For Women's and Children's Shoes use

"Gilt Edge"
The only black dressing that positively contains oil. Softens and preserves, and imparts a beautiful lustre. Its use saves time, labor and brushes, as it

Shines without Brushing
Always ready. Price, 25c.
"French Gloss" size, 10c.

If your dealer does not keep the kind you want send us his address and stamps for a full size package.

WHITTEMORE BROS. & CO.
20-26 Albany St., Cambridge, Mass.

The Oldest and Largest Manufacturers of Shoe Polishes in the World

SPRAY With the WATSON 4-row POTATO SPRAYER
Never damages foliage, but kills bugs, worms and all destructive insects. Adjustable wheel width. Spray and pressure regulator. Sprays 30 to 40 acres a day. Free Book.
FIELD FORCE PUMP CO., 75 Eleventh St., Elmira, N. Y.

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

The Foreigner*

THE feeling in the heart of the natural man seems to be everywhere and always that of hatred and suspicion toward the foreigner. In nearly every language the word "foreigner" may also be translated "enemy."

In one of our beautiful modern tales, an Englishman falls ill in an Oriental village. He is entirely alone, but the good monks of a nearby monastery pick him up where he has fallen unconscious, and convey him to their monastery, watching over him tenderly until he recovers.

But the news is borne throughout the little village that an English stranger is at the monastery, and the simple inhabitants become alarmed.

"What does he want?" they say. "Is he a spy? He is probably going to cheat us or overreach us. How can we get rid of him?"

They visit the monastery and urge the monks to turn the stranger out.

"Send him to one of the treaty ports," they say; "make one of the smoking devil-boats take him to his own people."

But the monks answer: "No. He is our brother though he is not of our blood. He is sick and weak, and we will not turn him out."

Little by little, the man recovers, and his love and gratitude toward those who have so nobly befriended him find expression in his every word and deed. He has realized something of the sweet kindness which lives in the hearts of those whom he had ignorantly deemed mere heathen; while they have discovered that the heart of the Englishman can be true and loving as they had not thought one of an alien race could be.

The public school has been no small factor in the softening of race prejudices. As we all know, one practical illustration is often of more effect than scores of well-chosen arguments. As Myra Kelly has said, a man of, perhaps, Scandinavian or Italian origin will think kindly of the whole Irish race when he remembers warm-hearted little Bridget O'Connor, who sat across the aisle in the old Cherry Street school; or Otto Schmidt will hardly cherish any antagonism toward the Jewish race, when he remembers the patience and loving kindness with which Maxie Fishandler guided his first steps through the wilderness of the English tongue.

It is in ways like this that the world is to be brought together in millennial unity. Though Kipling has written that "the East is East and the West is West, and never the two shall meet," the time must come when they shall understand each other, and shall know "the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

The further one advances in the holy life, the less bitter is the aversion to that which is foreign. Hundreds of our noblest and best are laboring devotedly among the immigrants who come to us. It is quite as truly a missionary work as is that of those who sail away to distant lands to preach the Gospel. It should appeal to us all even more, because the very existence of our republic depends upon it. The conversion, and uplifting of these usually ignorant and undisciplined immigrants is probably more vitally necessary to our national health and progress than is any other branch of philanthropic labor among us.

To learn to love these often uncouth, unwashed and rude-mannered people is a part of the task of our home missionaries and slum-workers; for it is seldom that we can help those whom we cannot love. And it is equally the duty of us all to smother every atom of prejudice in ourselves toward them.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, May 29. TEXTS: Matt. 25: 35; Luke 17: 18.

A Christian Nation*

IT is the proudest boast of the people of our land that it is realm of the Prince of Peace. Presidents declare that they wil all in their power to promote peace

And yet we are told that the su way to preserve peace is to keep war equipment very large and c plete. We must add two Dr noughts to our navy each year. must now and then dispatch a sq ron to foreign ports, just to show t that we are prepared to fight. must drill more and more soldiers sailors, and must emulate to a co erable extent the enormous mili outfit of England and Germany.

Mr. Carnegie's Peace Society, cated at 507 Fifth Avenue, New Y has issued among its booklets a l folder enumerating some of the provements which we could purc with the money now spent on t elaborate battleships, which are to about $12,000,000 a year.

More than 10,000 people die nually in the city of New York tuberculosis, which is largely a eventable disease. With the price few battleships, provided that the and the people would co-operate, computed that this terrible dis might be stamped out as effectuall smallpox has been.

Fifty manual training schools, i tutions so necessary to the prosp and uplifting of our people, coul built and equipped for the cost single battleship. Seventy-five t sand young people could thus taught the rudiments of a good t in a single year.

The cost of a battleship would a fine macadam road between cities of Chicago and New York.

The Congressional Library at W ington, the finest library buildin the world, was built for but little half the cost of a battleship, an maintained for three-fourths the of keeping a battleship afloat.

Many wise political econor think that the tremendous expe assumed by our nation for its and army, together with its per list, form no small element in alarming increase in the cost of li

For whence come these vast s They come out of the pockets o people. They form an average t $60 for every family in the U States. It lays a yearly tax of per cent. on the total wages pai the United States, on the suppos that wages average $600 to the fa and we pay it in the higher pri our goods.

Let us have an army and large enough for reasonable de and protection. As some one has p tinently said: "We would be foo cast away our means of defense, knew that a band of freebooters ready to catch us unprepared and upon us." No municipality would ish its police, lest it be overrun criminals. As long as present c tions exist, we must be prepared self-preservation is a law of na But let us oppose extravagant a priations intended to place us o equal "war-footing" with the highly-equipped foreign nations. ambition and emulation lead to un ranted expense. It is essentially christian and opposed to the spir civilization.

One element is often forgotten we speak of the promotion of univ peace. It is the duty of all to c the fighting spirit in its every p The brutal prize-fight should stopped. No decent paper s print its details, and no decent should read them.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, M 29. TEXT: Ps. 33: 8-22.

The "Stars and Stripes" in Japan

Continued from page 479

ve so far as I could learn, it in no wa seemed to diminish the real friendlin s of the people, and such a thing as wa as a result of the discussion, was no so much as mentioned.

he message from the Japanese sc ol children to their brothers and si rs in America, which was brought to is country by Dr. Masuji Miyakaa, is interesting as showing how th ideas of peace and friendliness ha reached even the children in the pu ic schools. Here is the text of the message:

To the Public School Children of th United States: We have been told by ur fathers, brothers and teachers th Dr. Miyakawa, through his Japar e pictures and lectures before the A erican public school children, intels to bring about a better understding of the more than historical frndship of Japan and the United St es. We have, in the meantime, be told that there is a certain sentim t which looks upon war between th two countries as inevitable, just as ou older brothers who passed before usin our schools thought war with C na and the late war with Russia inritable. In view of our teachings at school and at home, that 'the American people are the foster-mothers of Japan's present progress and prosperity,' we, the public school children in convention assembled, with permission of our fathers, brothers and teachers, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we, the pupils of the Imperial public schools, shall never raise our swords against, but shall emulate the pupils of the public schools of the United States as perfect examples of brotherhood and sisterhood."

During my stay in Japan I was the guest of several missionaries, and also of two or three Japanese friends. One of these latter was a leading merchant in Tokyo, one of the richest men in the empire. During the three days I was his guest, I not only received the most generous hospitality, but was assured over and over again by him, and by others of his class, of the deep and abiding friendship which the merchants of Japan have toward America.

In the audience with the Emperor, I had the pleasure of meeting several who are very near his person in the palace, day after day—among them Mr. Nagasaki and Count Toda, who always attend such audiences, and their expressions were no less cordial than those of the others whom I have cited. Mr. Nagasaki, a constant attendant upon the Emperor, was educated in America at one of our colleges, as were many of the leading Japanese statesmen and business men, and he and the others are never tired of lauding the merits of these universities, or of expressing their appreciation of their American education.

From the missionaries, whom it was my pleasure to meet, I received the same impressions as from the Japanese themselves. Our honored American Ambassador, Hon. T. J. O'Brien, told me that Rev. J. H. DeForest, D.D., was in his opinion the most influential foreigner in Japan. He is a missionary of the American Board at Sendai, and is well known, and his eloquent words have often been heard in this country, speaking for peace and mutual good understanding between the nations, and rebuking the jingoist attitude of some of our politicians. For the service which Dr. DeForest has rendered, he is a great favorite in official circles as well as among the rank and file of the Japanese, and because of his courage and devotion to the Japanese soldiers in the recent Russian war, he has been decorated by the Emperor. His influence, and that of a multitude of his colleagues, is of course altogether on the side of peace and good will, and that it is no small influence I was assured by many. Mr. Bowles, one of the missionaries of the Friends denomination, is a leader of the peace movement in Tokyo, of which Count Okuma is the new president.

There are one hundred and fifty Societies of Christian Endeavor in Japan, and strong unions in the leading cities. It was my privilege to address nearly all of these unions, and without exception I found great audiences of young men and women, and in every instance, the sentiments of peace and good will were applauded to the echo. In many places three-fourths of the audiences were composed of young men. In Tokyo they were largely students from the different universities, and their sentiments in favor of continued amity were no less pronounced than those of the audiences that were recruited largely from the ranks of the business and trades people.

So, from first to last, from one end of Japan to the other, among all classes of people, I can say, without any hesitation, that I found only sentiments of earnest good will, and nothing that would even suggest the necessity of larger armaments on the Pacific, or preparation for war with the armies of Japan.

FREE

Try "3 in One" on pianos, tables, any furniture, all veneered and varnished surfaces.

Doesn't form a crusty overcoat of grease and dirt like varnish, but sinks into the grain of the wood, removing scars and stains, bringing back the original finish. Soils nothing; helps everything; no grease; no acid; no offensive odor; all stores; big bottle; little price. Write for free bottle and new booklet. 3 in One Oil Co., 54 Broadway, New York City

3 in One Oil

CALOX

THE OXYGEN TOOTH POWDER

Clean teeth never decay

e nearest approach to perfect cleanliness of t teeth is obtained by the daily use of Calox.

"THE OXYGEN DOES IT."

ALL DRUGGISTS, 25 CENTS

Sample and booklet free on request.

KESSON & ROBBINS, NEW YORK

5 ROMPERS $1

Direct From Factory. All Charges Prepaid

Best, most serviceable, fast color, unshrinkable Rompers Choice of pink or blue, checked chambray with neck, collar and belt bound in white 5 for $1.00

ROMPERS of madras with yoke, rolling collar, belt and pocket piped in white choice of assorted checks and stripes, 3 for $1.00

ROMPERS of linen suiting, rolling collar, yoke, and cuffs piped in white belt piped and faced Tan, cadet blue, 2 for $1.00

Sizes 2 to 6 yrs. Satisfaction or money returned. Specify size and color. CHARGES PREPAID

CONSUMERS' APRON CO., 61 Clymer Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

HARTSHORN

SHADE ROLLERS

Original and unequalled. Wood or tin rollers. "Improved" requires no tacks. Inventor's signature on genuine:

Stewart Hartshorn

CENTS WANTED Agents earn $25 to $50 weekly selling our new Style Mexican and Swiss Embroidery Waist Patterns, Dress Dresses, Art Linens and various novelties. Catalogue FREE National Importing Co., Desk 48, 699 Broadway, N.Y.

Three Finishes That Make Artistic, Sanitary Walls

Acme quality makes it possible to have the walls and ceilings of your house refinished with artistic, hygienic and appropriate coatings.

Bare and cracked walls, torn, dirty paper stuck on with germ-breeding vegetable paste, may readily be replaced with sanitary, attractive effects in delicate tints, modified shades or rich colorings that harmonize with furnishings and properly emphasize the individuality of an apartment.

ACME QUALITY

Paints, Enamels, Stains and Finishes offer three finishes prepared especially for walls and ceilings.

Acme Quality Interior Enamel for walls of kitchen, bathroom, bedrooms or wherever a gloss finish is desired. Pure white, delicate tints and rich colors.

Acme Quality No-Lustre Finish gives a charming, durable, lustreless effect. White and many exquisite tints and colors. For dining and living rooms, halls and bedrooms. Either of these finishes may be thoroughly washed.

Acme Quality Kalsomine is a more inexpensive finish, but very attractive. It comes in powder form, is easily mixed and applied White tints and colors. Perfectly sanitary.

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, varnished, stained or finished in any way there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.

The Acme Quality Guide Book will be sent to any one Free. It is a complete guide to painting and finishing, containing full directions for preparing surface and applying in every case. Handsomely illustrated in color. Free copy on request to ACME WHITE LEAD and COLOR WORKS, Dept. O, Detroit, Mich.

PAINTS ENAMELS THE ACME QUALITY KIND STAINS VARNISHES

WANTED—RIDER AGENTS IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1910 Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write at once for full particulars and special offer.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offer.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderful low prices we can make you. We sell the highest grade bicycles at lower prices than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT—but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. D 71, CHICAGO, ILL.

A Flying Start

We are organized to promote successful poultry culture. You can get a flying start as a poultryman and make profits sure by using the

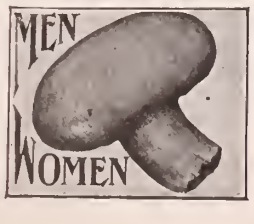
Rancocas Strain White Leghorn HATCHING EGGS We have over 10,000 Layers

RANCOCAS EGGS HIGHEST FERTILITY

The laying propensity of our S. C. White Leghorns is indestructibly fixed. They are not bred for "fancy" purposes. Ours are thoroughly bred utility birds, "the kind that lay the eggs." We have 10,000 layers, and establish every year more paying egg farms for beginners and introduce more vitality into flocks of expert poultry raisers than any other farm in the country. You can avoid all hatching losses by ordering day-old-chix from us. Any size shipment from 25 upward, all sturdy and vigorous. Breeding stock, any quantity. Complete instructions for beginners—care, feeding, etc. No charge. Write for circular giving our plan and prices.

INTERNATIONAL POULTRY SALES CO.

J. M. Foster, President, Box 160, Brown's Mills in the Pines, N. J.



Raise Mushrooms

Big Profits! Quick Profits!

Anybody can make big income all year raising Mushrooms at home in cellars, sheds, barns, boxes, etc. Markets waiting for all you grow.

Free Illustrated Instruction Booklet.

HIRAM BARTON, Desk 9 West 48th St., New York

AGENTS This Sanitary Clothes Sprinkler is a wonderful invention, and is having a tremendous sale. Cannot soil your clothes, nor chap your hands, nor give you a cold; never rusts; very beautiful, light and appreciated for Cleanliness, Health, comfort and modern convenience. Agents make 20 to 50 sales a day and are wild with success.

Write for Special Terms and Particulars.

DR. LYONS, 24 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

CHRISTIAN MARTYRS GIVEN TO THE LIONS

CHRISTIANITY is the greatest fact in history. The early Christians endured martyrdom rather than forsake Principle. The picture shown herewith from Ridpath's History, depicts 87,000 people assembled in the Coliseum at Rome to witness the Christians given to the lions. In such a scene may be read the inevitable doom of the Empire that ruled the world. The blood of the Martyrs is the seed from which Christian civilization sprang. If you would know the history of mankind—every sacrifice for principle, every struggle for liberty, every conflict and every achievement from the dawn of civilization down to the present time—then embrace this splendid opportunity to place in your home the world-famed publication

RIDPATH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD

THE PUBLISHER'S FAILURE placed in our hands the entire unsold edition of this monumental work, which we must sell immediately. The sets are BRAND NEW, brought right down to date, beautifully bound in Half-Morocco. Hundreds have already availed themselves of this remarkable opportunity to secure the greatest History of the World ever written. We have only a few sets remaining. We offer these sets to CHRISTIAN HERALD READERS

At LESS than even damaged sets were ever sold!

We will name our price only in direct letters to those sending the coupon below. Tear off the coupon, write name and address plainly and mail now before you forget it. Dr. Ridpath's family derive their income from his History, and to print our price broadcast for the sake of more quickly selling these few sets would cause great injury to future sales. Send coupon to-day.

FREE

WE will mail free a beautiful 46-page booklet on history to every Christian Herald reader interested in our great offer, and who mails us the coupon below. The booklet contains Dr. Ridpath's Race Chart in colors, tracing all races of mankind back to the parent stock; a rare chronological chart, the best map of the Panama Canal ever printed, a large map of China and Japan, two beautiful duotone reproductions of great paintings showing "Napoleon Before the Sphinx in Egypt" and "Queen Elizabeth Signing the Execution Warrant of Mary Stuart," together with portraits of Socrates, Caesar, Napoleon, Shakespeare and Roosevelt and other great characters in history; also specimen pages from the History, giving some slight idea of the wonderfully beautiful style in which the work is written.

MAIL COUPON NOW

HISTORY OF THE WORLD
RIDPATH VOL. I.
EGYPT. CHALDAEA. ASSYRIA. MEDIA. BABYLONIA. PERSIA.
RIDPATH VOL. II.
PARTHIA GREECE MACEDONIA.
RIDPATH VOL. III.
ROME. THE KINGDOM. THE REPUBLIC. THE EMPIRE.
RIDPATH VOL. IV.
BARBARIAN ASCENDENCY. THE MOHAMMEDAN ASCENDENCY. FEUDAL ASCENDENCY THE CRUSADES.
RIDPATH VOL. V.
THE PEOPLE AND THE KINGS. NEW WORLD AND REFORMATION
RIDPATH VOL. VI.
THE ENGLISH REVOLUTION. AGE OF FRED'K THE GREAT. THE AGE OF REVOLUTION.
RIDPATH VOL. VII.
THE UNITED STATES GREAT BRITAIN
RIDPATH VOL. VIII.
FRANCE. GERMANY. ITALY EASTERN EUROPE MINOR AMERICAN STATES. ORIENTAL NATIONS.
RIDPATH VOL. IX
THE CLOSE OF THE NINETEENTH AND DAWN OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY

NINE MASSIVE VOLUMES
4000 PAGES
2000 ILLUSTRATIONS

5
18-10

FREE COUPON

Western Newspaper Association
Christian Herald Bureau
204 Dearborn St., Chicago

Please mail, without cost to me, sample pages of Ridpath's History of the World, containing photogravures of Napoleon and Queen Elizabeth, engravings of Socrates, Cæsar and Shakespeare, map of China and Japan, diagram of Panama Canal, and write me full particulars of your special offer to The Christian Herald readers.

FOLD HERE, TEAR OUT, SIGN AND MAIL

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

No letter necessary. Just sign Coupon, or copy on Postal and mail.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

CHRISTIAN HERALD READERS have shown wonderful appreciation of our great offer. We have shipped this splendid history to delighted readers living in every State in the Union. Next to the Bible, this is in many respects the greatest work ever written. In the past 20 years over 200,000 sets have been sold at more than double our Special Price, and every purchaser is more than satisfied. More sets of Ridpath's History have been sold than any other set of books in the English language. Can you imagine a greater testimonial for any work? No other history in any way compares with it. The English-speaking world has endorsed Ridpath's as the only History of the World worth having.

RIDPATH in your home means you need never spend a lonely evening. You can associate with the world's heroes; you can cross the Rubicon with Cæsar, after which Rome was free no more. You can sit at the feet of Socrates, the loftiest genius of the ancient world. You can kneel at the shrine of Lincoln, "the greatest character of all time, the gentlest memory of our world." It is ennobling to commune with these children of destiny. To be associated with great men is to be great one's self, and you will add to your store of knowledge which is power, and to the richness of your life.

SEND COUPON TO-DAY

RIDPATH takes you back to the dawn of history, long before the pyramids of Egypt were built; down through the romantic troubled times of Chaldea's grandeur and Assyria's magnificence; of Babylonia's wealth and luxury; of Grecian and Roman splendor; of Mohammedan culture and refinement; of French elegance and British power; of American patriotism and religious freedom, to the dawn of yesterday. He covers every race, every nation, every time, and holds you spellbound by his wonderful eloquence. Nothing more interesting, absorbing and inspiring was ever written by man.

RIDPATH throws the mantel of personality over the old heroes of history. Alexander is there—patriot, warrior, statesman, diplomat, crowning the glory of Grecian history. Xerxes, from his mountain platform, sees Themistocles, with three hundred and fifty Greek ships, smash his Persian fleet of over a thousand sail, and help to mould the language in which this paragraph is written. Rome perches Nero upon the greatest throne on earth, and so sets up a poor madman's name to stand for countless centuries as the synonym of savage cruelty; Napoleon fights Waterloo again under your very eyes, and reels before the iron fact that at last the end of his gilded dream has come. Bismarck is there—gruff, overbearing, a giant pugilist in the diplomatic ring, laughing with grim disdain at France, which says "You shall not." Washington is there, "four-square to all the winds," grave, thoughtful, proof against the wiles of British strategy and the poisoned darts of false friends; clear-seeing over the heads of his fellow-countrymen, and on into another century—the most colossal world-figure of his time!

THE BEAUTIFUL SPECIMEN PAGES ARE FREE!

Endorsed by such men as McKinley, Harrison, Bryan, Vincent, Newman and 200,000 Americans who Own and Love Ridpath's World.

Christian Herald

$1.50 A YEAR — 5c. A COPY
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, May 25, 1910

VOLUME 33 — NUMBER 21
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH, JR.

Drawn by W. C. Rice for The Christian Herald

HONOR THE NATION'S HEROES

OUR MAIL-BAG

Questions and Answers

In forwarding MSS. to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, enclose stamped envelopes for return, if unavailable.

H. H. W., Louisville, Ky. Is the organ of comparatively recent invention?

No; it is one of the oldest instruments. It developed from the "pandian pipes" played by shepherds in early Greece. Its invention is attributed to Archimedes about 220 B.C. The organ was brought into Western Europe from Greece and it was installed in churches as early at 651 A.D. The first organ in France is said to have been built in 815 in the reign of Louis I. by an Italian priest.

S. P., Newport, Vt. Who said that "the groves were God's first temples"?

The lines are in a poem of Bryant's, entitled "Inscription for an Entrance to a Wood."

J. B. S., Germantown, Pa. What are the earliest schools of sacred music in Christian times of which we have any record?

The early Church seems to have paid more attention to other forms of religious instruction than music for the first two or three centuries. This was probably owing to persecution which made the public profession of Christianity precarious. In the fourth and fifth centuries, however, there were schools at which sacred song was regularly taught, and in the sixth century such schools were common in France and Germany, as well as in Southern Europe. The most famous school was that established in Rome by Gregory the Great, which became a model for many others. In this school originated the famous "Gregorian Chant," which the choir and the audience sang in unison.

A. D. O., Omaha, Neb. What does our word surgery come from? My dictionary gives no information.

Surgery comes from the word surgeon, old spelling chirurgeon, which is made up from two Greek words meaning hand and work.

Subscriber, Morgantown, N. C. 1. Where, is it supposed, was Daniel when the three Hebrews were cast into the fiery furnace? 2. What is the history of the premium picture—"Dorcas' Daughters"? 3. What is the origin of the expression, "A Roland for his Oliver"? 4. Can you tell me where I can find a copy of "An Ode to God," by Derzhaven? The first of it is: "O thou eternal One whose presence bright all space doth occupy, all motion guide."

1. It does not appear from the record, why Daniel was not summoned, but the presumption is that he was in some distant part of the empire on state business and the general summons did not reach him before the dedication of the golden image. Besides, the enemies of the Jews evidently found it politic to begin by attacking men of less influence than Daniel. Josephus does not connect Daniel with the incident. 2. It is taken from a famous painting in a Munich Art Gallery and represents a group of good women who, like Dorcas in the Gospels (Acts 9: 36-39) sewed garments for the poor. 3. Roland and Oliver were two of Charlemagne's paladins whose exploits were so famous and so equal in merit that it was difficult to say which was the greater. They fought in single combat for five days without result. Hence arose the phrase in question, which means that one side gave as good as the other. 4. You will find it in the Encyclopedia of Religious Poetry by Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

W. H. T., New York. 1. Has the Bible been eliminated from the public schools? 2. Is it true that the High School compels the pupils, regardless of the protest of parents, to take part in the exercise of dancing?

1. No; it has not been eliminated from the schools. It is left largely to the discretion of the principal. In many schools, a portion is read in the morning without comment, chiefly from the Old Testament. 2. In almost all New York City Schools, both High and Primary, "folk dances" are taught for the double purpose of exercise and graceful movement.

J. A. M., McLeansboro, Ill. What were the riddles the Queen of Sheba put to Solomon to prove his wisdom?

They are not stated in the Scriptures and the only account we have of them is legendary. The Queen appears in these legends under the various names of Balkis, Nicaule, Makeda and Almaeah. Only one of her "hard questions" to Solomon has been rescued from oblivion. A number of boys and girls of equal height were dressed up by her exactly alike, so that no eye could distinguish them. Solomon, says the legend, placed water before them and bade them wash. The boys rubbed their faces vigorously, while the girls stroked them softly, and he at once decided accordingly. Of course, the legend may be taken for what it is worth.

W. C. W., Amarillo, Tex. 1. I would like to get a good, practical knowledge of law. What books would you advise me to get? 2. Is Ridpath's History of the World reliable? 3. What commentary of the Bible would you advise one to get as the best adapted to a young man making a home study of the Bible? 4. I would like to get an inexpensive encyclopedia that is up to date; that can be had on the instalment plan. 5. There is a young man here who is very ambitious to get a practical knowledge of surveying and mapping who is not able to attend school. To whom should he write?

1 and 5. Write to the Scranton Correspondence School, Scranton, Pa. 2. We regard it as thoroughly reliable. It is read by many of our subscribers. 3. Jameson Faussett and Brown's Commentary is excellent. Procure it through any bookseller.

Mrs. J. C. C., Stockbridge, Mass. 1. Who were the Rough Riders? 2. Who gave them that name? What was their dress in the Spanish War? 3. How many in company? What battles were they in?

1. The "Rough Riders" was the popular name given to the First Regiment of Volunteer Cavalry, which was organized in the Southwest at the opening of the war with Spain. Leonard Wood, now a major-general in the United States Army, was colonel and Roosevelt lieutenant-colonel. Later the command came to Colonel Roosevelt. The regiment was composed of good riders from all over the country, cow-boys from the plains, society men from New York and New England who had ridden to hounds, etc. 2. The word "rough rider" is applied to a horseman who can ride any horse with or without a saddle. They wore the regular campaign dress of the cavalry, tan felt hat, blue shirt, khaki trousers and leggings. 3. The regiment numbered several hundred, divided into the regulation number

Continued on last column

WORKING TO REDEEM "LITTLE DORA"

SINCE the article appeared in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD several months ago about the redemption of little Dora, the West African girl who was taken from the Cape Palmas Mission, back to the "bush" to live a life of heathenism, slavery and ignorance, a great many letters have been received from readers who were interested in the case. It will be remembered that in the original letter from Missionary Perkins and his wife of the Interior Mission, Cape Palmas, Liberia, it was stated that if help were extended by American friends, little Dora could be "redeemed" in accordance with a tribal law, which permitted the guardians of a child, other than her natural parents, to yield her up to those who would pledge themselves to give her proper care.

A sum of money was forwarded immediately to the Liberian Mission with instructions to Missionary Perkins to apply the money towards the redemption of little Dora, and to use every legitimate means to accomplish that object.

We have received a letter within the last week from Missionary Perkins, dated March 14, which brings good news about Dora. The letter says:

"MARCH 14, 1910, CAPE PALMAS, LIBERIA.

"Dear Christian Herald: You will no doubt be looking for further news regarding little Dora.

"Little Dora"
Photographed by a missionary for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

Well, I am glad to report that although her 'palaver' is not talked as yet, some progress has been made. Dora is now with us in the Mission. This will give us great vantage ground, when the time comes to talk her 'palaver.'

"On February 23, Dora's mother went to the 'Bush' country, that is further back to the interior, to visit her little daughter, and she succeeded in bringing Dora back with her. The poor child is so happy to get back to the Mission again, and we are all hopeful that we may ultimately succeed in securing her redemption. The heathen man who bought her from her family people, and who was to be her husband, is many times older than she. I understand he has indicated a willingness to give her up, if he receive the money-price he puts on her, which, of course, will be more than he paid in the first place. He bought her some time ago, and he reasons thus: 'The cow I paid for her would have had a calf every year, and therefore I ought to have the price of just that many cows.' If you have patience with us, we believe it will come out all right.

"J. M. AND JESSIE A. PERKINS."

OUR MAIL-BAG

Continued from first column

of cavalry troops. The regiment took part in the skirmishe leading up to the battle of San Juan and in the battle itsel where Roosevelt led the charge. The regiment has an associ tion which meets regularly. The membership descends to t eldest son of a member.

J. D. B., Granville, Tenn. 1. Please explain James 1: 2. Who discovered America—Columbus or Vespucci?

1. The more accurate rendering would be "double thinking"- that is, one thought directed toward God, the other towa something else. Not necessarily a hypocrite, but fickle a wavering, as contrasted with the "single eye" (Matt. 6: 22 2. Columbus discovered America in 1492. Amerigo Vespuc whose name was given to this country, did not cross the Atlant until 1497, when he joined the expedition of Pinzon, which di covered the coast of Central America. In 1499 he skirted t north coast of South America. He wrote a narrative of h voyages and Waldseemuller, who translated it in 1507, suggest that the name America, from Amerigo, be given to the sout ern continent only. Other writers, following the suggestio gave it to both North and South America. For the story of t naming of America see Continent of America by Thatcher, pu lished in 1896.

A. E., Wakefield, Kas. 1. Is dancing wrong? 2. How can denominations be right when they are so different? A which is right? 3. Should a person unite with a church one denomination, not believing its doctrine, because t church of his choice is not near enough to attend? 4. Is wrong for a Christian girl to marry a moral man?

1. The mere act of dancing is not wrong; but the late hou the mixed company and the usual excitement attending it, a likely to be wrong and to lead the soul astray. 2. Each d nomination is founded upon some especial interpretation Scripture. So long as the divinity of Christ is recognized a the virtues inculcated by him are taught, minor points of do trine need not trouble one. "Whosoever believeth on him ha eternal life," said the beloved disciple. 3. By all means a tend the church which is within your reach, so long as Jes Christ and his Gospel are taught in it. 4. It is not wicked f a Christian girl to marry a merely moral man; but the apos said: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers and it is better to marry a Christian. She should try befo marriage to win him over to her religion. If he is not co verted then the chance is small that he will be converted lat

R. McK., Granville, N. Y. What is melinite?

It is an explosive invented by a French dentist named Turpi It is used for military purposes almost exclusively. It w adopted by the French War Department in 1886. The patent the property of the British government.

J. T., Cora, Mo. 1. How old was Samuel at his death? 2. Wh became of Pilate? 3. How many were saved by looking the serpent of brass?

1. The death of Samuel is described as taking place in t year of the close of David's wanderings (date uncertain). H was born, according to the best calculations, about B.C. 11 2. The accounts of Pilate's death are apocryphal. One lege says that he was thrown into prison and committed suicid that his body was cast into the river Tiber and storms a tempests followed until the Romans took it out. It was th sent away and finally sunk in a pool in Losania (Lucern There is no authoritative account. 3. It is nowhere stat how many were cured, but the fair presumption is that alm all of the people who were in sight of it at the time when it w elevated by Moses, looked upon it and were healed—practica the whole camp. (See Num. 21: 9.)

G. R. H., Vancouver, B. C. How do the efforts of our past to make the ladies take off their big hats in church agi with I. Cor. 11: 5?

The passage relates to what was then taking place in Corin Paul's argument was that the headcovering was the emblem womanly modesty which had always been rigidly adhered to the East. He had no "big-hat" problem to contend with, ho ever; if he had, he would doubtless have made them a subj of censure, on the ground of vanity and that they obstruct t view.

S. K. S., Medical Lake, Wash. How do you explain Job 2: Are we to understand that God would join with the devil destroy without cause one of his acknowledged faith servants?

The whole book of Job is the working out of a profound r gious problem in the form of a debate or tragic poem. T theme is: Can there be real goodness without reward, or c goodness which is so rewarded be other than a refined form selfishness? Satan had asked (in Job 1: 9): "Does Job fear for naught?" Would he fear him equally in adversity and prosperity? The trial and test of Job's fidelity were permit in order to demonstrate the fact that riches or poverty, hea or sickness cannot change the soul that is fixed upon God.

Miscellaneous

A. D., Fair Oaks, Calif. Thanks for your very cordial lett

Reader, Pasco, Wash. We regret that we cannot do w you ask.

A. M. P., Colton, Calif. Write to T. Y. Crowell & Co., N York City.

Hannah R. H., Penacook, N. H. You can join the Shortha Classes at any time.

M. E. B., Greenwood, Ind. The two terms are interchang ble, although some people may confuse them. They practica mean the same thing.

Reader, Plainfield, N. J., sends us the interesting inform tion that the jinrikisha, the popular vehicle in Japan, was invention of an American missionary named Goble, who w to that country in 1872 as a representative of the Americ Baptist Missionary Union.

R. L., Mt. Vernon, Wash. We know nothing about the ba ball player you mention, nor have we ever heard whether Roo velt or Taft ever expressed an opinion on Local Option. Bry and Hughes are known as Christians, but we cannot speak p tively of the others mentioned in your letter.

Sarah E. T., Geneva, N. Y. We remember the paragra cencerning Professor Rendal Harris' discovery of early Christ hymns. We wrote him at the time, having in view the pu cation of some of the hymns, and received an answer to effect that they were not yet ready for publication. It is t that up to the present time no fragment of the very earli Christian hymnology has ever been published.

NEW YORK, MAY 25, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Native Woman and Child

Indians of Costa Rica Bringing in Cocoanuts

A Wayside Shrine

COSTA RICA STILL SHAKING

WHEN the first reports reached this country of the great earthquake in the mountains of Costa Ri it was said that five hundred people had lost their lives, that many were injured, and that about six thousand were homeless. Every day, however, added to the death list, which rose rapidly from five hundred to a thousand, then to fifteen hundred, and then to two thousand. As all of Costa Rica has been shaken, it is probable that there were many killed whose names will never be known to the authorities. The quakes at this writing still continue, shaking the hapless country from coast to coast, and destroying lives and property; and two volcanoes are belching fire and lava to add to the terror of the people. Compared with the disaster at Messina in Italy it is ot one of the world's great disasters; but when tl size of the two countries is tn into consideration the li e republic has suffered more inproportion.

nong the Palms

The American traveler who rmembers Cartago as a picturesque city among the peaks wild hardly recognize the ms of wreckage into which it h been turned, with streets elumbered with the roofs and wls of fallen buildings, and tl houses which still stand twsted and canted into odd and fitastic shapes and threatenin at any moment to topple ofthe head of the passerby.

The beautiful building desined to house the Peace Court oCentral America, a building wch for beauty of design and merials had elicited strong exressions of approval from a who have seen it, is a total lo, except that some of the fondations may be utilized for sme future structure. Mr. Cnegie gave one hundred thsand dollars toward the stcture, which had never yet bn occupied by the Peace Crt. In fact, the finishing touches were just being put to the beautiful interior when the quake tore the walls from roof to foundation. The Central American governments had given as much as Mr. Carnegie toward the site and building, and they cannot but feel the loss keenly, for it represents a vast sum to them.

As soon as the first crash came the people left their homes and streamed out into the open country, screaming with terror and gesticulating as only the Central Americans can gesticulate when wild with fear and almost out of their heads with the excitement of the hour. Refugee camps were pitched in the environs and huts constructed from the débris of the ruins—anything that could be improvised into a shelter. The people were herded in these camps and the inevitable happened. Pestilence began to carry off the people, already racked with fright and weak from exposure and lack of proper food. The authorities began at once to establish new camps to stop the spread of fever, but they were only partially successful. Disease seems destined to finish the work of desolation which the earthquake shocks left undone.

A few days after the first great shock other shocks were felt, and the half wrecked structures of Cartago began to disintegrate and became shapeless masses of stone and timber. The people left the rescue work they had been carrying on among the ruins, and fled to the camps, leaving the city practically in the hands of the military and the looters. The latter, for a time, reaped a rich harvest as they pretended to search the ruins for the bodies of friends or relatives. Finally they carried their acts of brigandage to the camps, and martial law was declared. One old couple who had saved $5,000 from the ruins of their home had to give it up to the banditti before they reached the suburbs. Such bold acts spurred the authorities to drastic action, and the looters were shot without mercy wherever caught.

The air from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts is full of choking volcanic dust, which burns the throat and injures the eyes. It has covered every one of the seven States with a thin brown layer, producing an odd effect, which adds to the terror of the natives. San José, the capital, though not badly shaken, is in a state of panic, and all who can get away are leaving. The two volcanoes may easily be seen from San José. Paos, with an odd double peak, rises at the northwest, while to the north towers Irado, 11,500 feet above sea level. Once it burst into flames and overwhelmed Cartago when the city was a much smaller place than it is now; but for years the books on the country have referred to it as a "dead volcano." These have now opened and are belching fire and smoke, and the other peaks are rumbling as if the gases were seeking an outlet to the air above. The shops along the principal business street, Calle de Comercio, are closed, and the market deserted. Both merchants and people have lost for the moment any desire to buy or sell. Black terror broods everywhere, and the prosperity and progress of the country has been put back immeasurably. Trade is at a standstill and though the Americans and others from foreign lands are remaining, knowing that sooner or later the quakes will cease, meanwhile they are spectators of a condition of affairs never before seen in the history of Costa Rica or Central America.

A Street in Cartago Before the Earthquake

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D.D.*

The Value of a Human Being

TEXT: Matt. 12:12—"How much then is a man of more value than a sheep!" (R. V.)

SOMETIMES when I go to a city, the committee on programme or invitation meets me at the railway station and says: "We would like to show you our city." So I get into a carriage or automobile and we start up the street. A short distance from the railway station the chairman of the committee points out a large factory and says: "That is the largest nail factory in the country. It covers two acres and employs three thousand men." We drive on up the street and the chairman says: "This is our new court house. It cost $150,000, and it is the finest court house in the State." We go on past the court house and on the main street of the town the committee points out the recently erected business house of fourteen stories, which cost one million and a half, made of steel and stone.

Two Kinds of Wealth

We pass on into the residence district and stop in front of a great building as large as a hotel and the chairman says impressively: "The richest man in the city lives there. His house is a copy of a German castle on the Rhine and cost three million dollars." We drive on and the chairman points out other buildings. After we have completed our inspection of the city I have seen buildings, brick, stone, steel, piles of material made of all kinds of solid substances which were once in the forest or in the ground, and the committee, I suppose, takes pride in considering that they have shown me the city. Yet what have I seen? Buildings and more buildings. When I ask how these buildings were made possible sometimes I find the money which has gone into their construction came out of the pockets of the people and was amassed in selfish ways which very often broke the laws of God and men, until I would rather look at the meanest hut or log house on the prairie, or a shanty built by the honest labor of an honest man than to look at some of these towering creations in the great cities, which rest upon the blood money of the men who have builded them.

It would be refreshing to me sometimes to be met by the committee and have them say: "We would like to show you the real city in which we live." We start up away from the station, say about nine o'clock in the morning, and stop in front of a public schoolhouse. The children are going into the building. The chairman says: "See those children? They are the most valuable of all that we have here in this city. They are the future statesmen, preachers, authors, teachers, fathers and mothers of the Republic. See that man standing up there by that schoolhouse door? He is the principal of our High School. He is one of the most useful men in this city. A simple, consecrated, intelligent, enthusiastic Christian gentleman."

The Value of a Child

We pass on up the street and the chairman points out a modest looking woman walking along and says: "See that woman? She is our police matron. She is one of the most useful women in this city. She prevents a great deal of crime and suffering by looking after the poor and the sinful. We could not get along without her." Further up the street the chairman says: "See that woman on the other side of the street? Her name has never appeared in any newspaper or book, but she is a representative of the hundreds of plain, happy, useful Christian women, a mother, a member of the church, one who is training her boys and girls to love God and men, to tell the truth and obey the laws and to do right. Her home represents the one thing that makes this city worth while." I say some such showing of the city would be refreshing in future, having been repeatedly shown buildings. I would like to be shown people and be told by the committee that the people of the town make it worth while, not the buildings. In one case I have been shown a lot of sheep; in the other case I have been shown immortal souls. "How much then is a man of more value than a sheep!" What are all the buildings of a city compared with the people? Even the smallest child in the great city is worth more than all the buildings put together, yet we are constantly trained to look at buildings as if they represented the real value of a town; and when our friends come to the city we show them buildings always, as if the buildings were the great things to see.

The value of a human being is inherent. Nothing but a human being was ever made in the image of God. Nothing but a human being has the power of infinite development. When a soul comes into the world no one can tell whether it will become a Nero or a Paul. The peach was once a Persian poison which was used to tip arrows. The poison has been eliminated by cultivation until the fruit is now one of the choicest grown. The inherent value of a soul carries with it always the possibility of the future. When Christ said to the dying robber "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise," he saw that robber as he was going to look after two thousand years had gone by.

The value of a soul is always a constant value. God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should have eternal life. Other things depend for their value on accident or circumstance. Diamonds are valuable because they are scarce and exceedingly beautiful. If science should discover some way to make diamonds in commercial quantity at comparatively small cost they would still be as beautiful as they are now, but would not be as valuable. Real estate owes its value to its location. In some parts of the great cities real estate is worth several hundred dollars a square foot. Out in the country the same kind of dirt is worth only a few cents a square foot. There was once a time when real estate in Babylon was very valuable. It probably is not worth much now. But a man continues to be of value no matter where he is, in the city or in the country, whether there are many or few, whether he lives in this century or twenty centuries ago.

The Saving of a Life

The value of a human being compared with a sheep is determined by the possibility of its being lost. You have a fruit tree in your yard. It has always borne large quantities of beautiful fruit. One who understands the habits of the tree comes to you and says: "Next year there will be no fruit on your tree because of such and such facts connected with the season or the presence of some blight." If you will suppose that prophecy is correct, how much you value the present crop of fruit upon your tree! You would probably take great pains in preserving or canning a quantity of it. Or one of your children is attacked with consumption. You suddenly wake to the possibility of his being lost unless there is a change of climate. How precious that life becomes to you suddenly as you realize the possibility of its destruction! So with the value of man. Sometimes we do not realize how much men are worth until they stand in danger.

On the other hand a human being is worth more than a sheep because there is a possibility of its being saved. In a small town in Canada during the year of the coronation of King Edward, when the town had been decorated for the celebration and all the people were preparing to enter upon a gala week, a poor and unknown laborer, a negro, through an accidental caving-in of a well, was buried at the bottom, but protected by beams which had fallen, so that his voice could be heard. The well was very deep. The caving-in had carried down an immense quantity of débris which must be dug out very carefully in order to save the man's life. The entire town took turns in doing the work. The festivities in honor of the King were abandoned. For several days all interest of the place centred about this unknown human being at the bottom of this well who might be rescued. No one had valued him, apparently, when he was alive and well, but the possibility that he might be saved from death at once placed him in a position of great importance, even above that of the King himself. If we realized in our common, every day circles the possibility of saving men it would enhance our thought of their value.

A human being is worth more than a sheep in the sight of God and should be in ours, because of the price paid for him. We know to some degree how large the agricultural product of the United States is. We can estimate more or less closely the value of the railroads, of the forests, and even of the fisheries. We can put a price upon the cities, buildings and what we call improvements, but no one has been able to put a price upon a human being. The only way in which we can estimate the value of a soul is by the love of God, who was willing to give his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eternal life. So we place a soul up against the very being of God to get its value.

The Real Mark of Soul Value

I am old-fashioned enough in my theology to believe, as Dr. Hopkins did, that if only one soul of man had ever sinned from the beginning of the world and needed redemption, that one soul would have had the gift of God in the person of Christ. That is, God would have been willing to go to all the sacrifice of his Son to save one being. That is the mark of value. God gave the best that he had and the most that he had.

Now it follows, if a man is worth more than a sheep, that:

First. He ought to have a better thought of himself. A great many of us are proud of our defects. We are proud of our pride. We are proud that we are not like other men. We are proud of the very things of which we ought to be ashamed. But every man has a right to be proud of the fact that he is made in the image of God and that there are possibilities in him for eternal development.

Second. If a man is worth more than a sheep we ought to have a better thought of other people. We have no right to despise any man. The habit of looking at other people as redeemed, even in the midst of their degradation and sin, helps to keep love in us and love for them. I do not think Christ could have ever loved the multitude of sinning, suffering, degraded, dirty, uninteresting, stupid, wretched human beings unless he had always seen them as immortal beings and seen the possibilities of the future for them as they went either one way or the other. One reason we do not maintain our enthusiasm for people and do not find people interesting and grow to live in a very narrow and selfish circle of acquaintances, and think so many people stupid and uninteresting, is because we have not learned to value them for their future value. We see nothing but the present and immediate and stamp it as not worth while. By that habit it would have been impossible for Christ to have lived with his disciples one hour, for if ever there were a lot of men who claimed the attributes of stupidity and selfishness and meanness and ambition in the wrong direction it was the group that Christ chose for his disciples.

The Great Spiritual Conflict

Third. If a man is worth more than a sheep we ought to magnify the spiritual life. What does it matter, Christ said, if they kill the body? Do not be afraid of that, but fear anything that can kill both body and spirit. The great thing in life is the spiritual experience or spiritual conflict. For our battle is not against flesh and blood, but against the things of the spirit.

Fourth. If a man is worth more than a sheep we ought not to grudge the cost of saving him. It is poor economy to punish humanity for sinning instead of preventing it from sinning. The United States government does not hesitate to put eight million dollars into a battleship. Two great freight steamers go out of Western ports on the Pacific coast that cost three million dollars each. Immense sums are placed by business men and capitalists of industry into physical plants for physical product. If the United States was willing to spend as much money in saving childhood and saving life as it is to punish after they get men into the penitentiary we would rise up and clean the saloon out of the face of the earth and release the one million seven hundred thousand children who are now in bondage in the cotton factories and coal breakers, the department stores and other places of physical interest.

Abraham Lincoln pleaded more than once with the Southern men and with the Northern men to come to some agreement whereby the United States government could purchase the negroes of the slaveholders, and he said repeatedly it would be a saving

Continued on next page

* Pastor Central Congregational Church, Topeka, Kan.

The Value of a Human Being

Continued from preceding page

conomically over against the tremenous loss of carrying on war. This ountry would not listen to his advice nd we plunged into a great war which ost us untold suffering and immense utlay of money, twice over the amount hat would have purchased every slave n the United States and given his wner a large and sufficient sum for he carrying on of his estate. We are pending in this country to-day for he punishment of men who have beome criminals through drink and selfshness of different kinds, ten times as uch money as would prevent the same umber of men from getting into the ails, because we have not learned the esson of Christian economy, because e grudge the cost of saving life, beause we have not learned or appreiated the value of men as compared ith sheep.

Then lastly, if men are worth more han sheep we must give Christ the re-eminence as the Great Life-Saver. Ie who came to give men life abunantly, who came to seek and to save hat which was lost, was the most valable Life that ever entered the unierse. The Life-Saver of the world s the One who has redeemed the world rom its destruction. The men and omen who are really saving life in his Republic are those who are cutng down the expense bill of the naion, making possible what we call hristian civilization. Sin is a trenendously losing proposition. There s nothing which costs so much money, o much toil, so much trouble, as letng people be lost. If Christendom nly realized the value of a human beng it would save itself countless milons in the way of economic expenditure. This lesson we have not yet earned as a people. When we do earn it, and not until then, can we ruly say the country is prosperous.

How do you think the dying robber ooks now? When he hung on the cross e was a dirty, depraved, bloody, ignoant criminal. There was probably othing attractive or sweet or wholeome about him; yet the Son of God urned his head towards him and said o him: "This day thou shalt be with ne in Paradise." After being in Paradise now these two thousand years, eeping company with men like Paul nd Saint Augustine and Martin uther and Wycliffe and John Knox nd John Huss and the saints and maryrs of the two thousand years between hrist and us, how do you think he ooks? Probably like an angel of light. ndeed, I see nothing improbable in he idea that when we shall meet the lying robber when it has come our urn to pass over, we shall have to sit t his feet to learn some of the great hings into which the angels would like o look. It is because Christ saw him s he looks now that he said to him: 'This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." The value of a human beng will never be determined for us ill we see him in his redeemed condiion, but the attempt to see that condiion every day of our lives is the atempt to view every one through the yes of God. "How much, then, is a nan of more value than a sheep?"

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

A Prayer of Thanks

ly God, I thank thee for the clear white light of day!
That I once more may see the light and choose my way.
The sunshine of fulfilment streams across the path
Till now so dark and pierced with only one bright ray.
The light of God's own promise gave the power to pray.
I thank thee, O my God, that thou didst give me peace,
That in the darkness I was sure of my release.
"The everlasting arms"—"the love the Father hath"
All through the night were there; I knew they would not cease
Until my morning broke—then once again thy peace.

C. M. T.

The Children's Pulpit

MEMORIAL DAY

By Rev. J. M. FARRAR, D.D.*

MARCH! March! March! Fife and drum and bugle call. Graves covered with flowers and flags; tears in memory of past years. We know what all this means, for the thirtieth of May is Memorial Day. At first we named it Decoration Day. But we do more than decorate. We remember their bravery and all they did for our country. The new name, Memorial Day, is better.

What was the origin of this beautiful custom? Why do you boys and girls want to know its history? Oh! I understand. Some day it may be one of your school examination questions. Good, that is one of many things your pastor wants to do for you. If he can help you in your school work he will be very happy. Every Sunday should help you for each day of the week. Here is your answer. There is a tradition that a German soldier in our Civil War started the custom by telling how that once a year the people of his native country scattered flowers on the graves of their soldiers. The history of our Memorial Day began in 1868, when Adjutant-General Chipman talked on this subject with John A. Logan, Commander of the Grand Army. The talk got into Logan's heart, and he ordered that the 30th of May should be the day set apart "for the purpose of strewing with flowers, or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village, or hamlet churchyard in the land."

. . .

THIRTIETH day of May, Memorial Day. Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! for the brave boys in blue and gray!

"Over the cannon's mouth the spider weaves her web." By spinning the web over the cannon's mouth she tells us that it is time to stop war. The spider was the world's first engineer and suspension bridge builder. Would it not be fine to have our boys in blue wheel up one of their old cannon and the boys in gray wheel up one of their old cannon and leave them close enough for the spider to spin her suspension bridge between them? While the mother spider is building the bridge the Junior spiders could spin a beautiful web over the mouth of each cannon. On the morning of the thirtieth of May the Juniors of the North and the Juniors of the South could march around the cannons and sing "The Star-Spangled Banner." Early in the morning they will see something like diamonds on the web of the suspension bridge. Some one might call them dew drops—the Juniors can imagine they are tears. Imagine that nature has been crying about the brave boys in gray and the brave boys in blue, who sleep in soldiers' graves.

Photo by Underwood & Underwood

Old Soldiers Decorating Their Comrades' Graves

. . .

I HAVE read that the humming-bird in Australia protects its home with a lightning rod. Before a thunderstorm bursts, the prudent bird covers the outside of its little nest with a spider's web. Silk is a non-conductor of electricity, and since the spider web is silk the humming-bird's nest is thereby made lightning-proof. The spider web between the cannon of the North and the cannon of the South will, let us hope, protect us from all future thunderstorms of war. Three cheers for the spider and her web!

. . .

MEMORIAL Day will some day, let us pray, be called Peace Day. But spiders cannot do all the work; juniors must do most of the work. Each boy and girl has a responsibility. The word "responsibility," you think, is rather large. Yes, but like a big apple, you

Continued on page 513

* Pastor First Reformed Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. TEXT: "This day shall be unto you for a memorial." Ex. 12:14.

The Master's Smile

THIS question was mooted, one day, among sages,
Who'd studied the works of all men of all ages,
Whether Jesus, the Saviour, so gentle and mild,
Ever laid down his burden of sorrow and smiled.
They had read that he wept at the loss of his friend;
That he spake kindly words Magdalene to defend;
That he raised from the dead the one well-beloved child,
But they never, no never, had read that he smiled.

"Well, I know that he smiled," cried a child, young and fair,
As she shook from her broad brow her warm sunny hair,
And lifting aloft her sweet, heaven-blue eyes,
Gazing longingly, smilingly into the skies;
"Yes, I know that he smiled when he held on his knee
Little children, and said, 'Let them come unto me.'
And then softly and kindly his dear hand he laid
On their heads, or the children had sure been afraid."

But they crowded around, nestled close to his side,
And then he, with a smile, held his arms open wide."
Ah, his smile must be lovely as day when it dawns;
Or the sun when the poor, frozen floweret it warms,
And his love is as pure as the lily in bloom,
And it lightens the pathway for us to the tomb;
May we all have the beautiful faith of that child,
And as fearlessly know that our dear Saviour smiled.

Hopkinton, Mass. HENRIETTA E. PAGE.

A Strange Alpine Wedding

A NOVEL marriage took place lately at St. Moritz, Switzerland. The bride and bridegroom, both Swiss, accompanied by the best man, numerous bridesmaids and wedding guests, all on skis, arrived at the church at St. Moritz. The happy throng, after placing their skis against the walls of the church, entered for the ceremony. The bride, who carried a bunch of orange blossoms, was clothed in white sweater, short skirts and heavily-studded boots. After the ceremony, the young couple, while putting on their skis, were vigorously showered with snowballs as a substitute for rice and then chased several miles out of St. Moritz. However, as they were both expert skiers, they soon outdistanced their friends. They were met by two guides, by whom they were conducted to the nearest Alpine hut on the Bernine range, where the honeymoon began. They planned to pass two weeks in the Alps.

Anvil Sparks

..SIN hates the man who makes it stop and think.

..ITS righteous men are a city's richest inheritance.

..THE wisdom God gives takes with it all other gifts.

..No life can be a failure when God lives in the heart.

..THE hermit robs God and man and steals from himself.

..IN spite of all the moral veneering we are all spiritual corpses.

..THERE are men and women who would find heaven a perfect hell.

..WE are born and we grow up with a mind that is blind to the truth of God.

..THERE is nothing like the love of God for putting true courage in the heart.

..THE touchstone of every man's character is what he does with Jesus Christ.

..HELL is the insane asylum of the universe, where men and women remember.

..CHRISTIANITY says, "Love your neighbor as yourself." Society says, "Find out what he is worth."

..YOU may read the Bible through several times every year, and never know Christ.

THE PERSONAL SIDE OF GEORGE V.

DURING the reign of the late King Edward the Prince of Wales, now George V., did not take a very important part in the affairs of the kingdom and empire, the King only delegating minor duties to his son and attending personally to those of importance. As a result the Prince was not to a great extent in the public eye, especially as Edward was expected to rule over Britain and the dominions beyond the seas for many years to come. The unexpected death of King Edward has now made his son the foremost figure in British affairs and the people of all countries are seeking information in regard to the new monarch and wondering if he will follow in his father's footsteps or will inaugurate a new policy for the throne. Every anecdote in connection with the new King is eagerly read to aid in forming an estimate of his character and in forecasting the trend of events in the coming reign.

King George ascends the throne at a comparatively early age, being forty-five on his last birthday. His father was Prince of Wales until he was sixty, so that there is a fair prospect that the reign just inaugurated will be a long one. The new King is a little below the medium height, but carries himself well, with a dignified and soldierly bearing. He has a fair complexion with a good color; his hair and beard are light. In personal appearance he bears a strong likeness to his kinsman the Emperor of Russia. He has always been a great student and reader. It is the general opinion in England that there are few men in public life that are as well read as he. Not being burdened with the cares of state he has taken advantage of the time at his disposal to inform himself on all topics connected with the empire so that he would be well fitted for the onerous duties of the kingship when they were thrust upon him.

It is a common phrase in the newspapers of this country that the King reigns but does not govern. People during the last few weeks are finding out that this is only true in a degree. The death of King Edward stopped the entire machinery of the British government. It was found that he was the main director of the foreign policy, and that the era of peace which Europe had so long enjoyed was in no small part due to his efforts as "peacemaker." It is conceded that it is within the King's power to make an almost complete overturn of his father's policy by the mere matter of his personal influence at times of international friction. He has stated, however, that he means to follow in the path marked by Edward, which has caused relief to those who felt that he had "jingo" sentiments and was bitterly anti-German. The late King was in constant communication with his ministers regardless of which party was in power, and the new King will find plenty of opportunity to make his influence felt if he so desires.

King George, it is said, glories in the fact that he is a true English King with no foreign mannerisms. He seldom uses any other language than English, though when passing through the severe educational course prescribed for princes he learned most of those of modern Europe. As soon as he was free of his tutors he declared that English was good enough for him and has refused to employ other tongues even when talking with foreign rulers and diplomats. His ambition to be British to the core has pleased his subjects and they seem ready to bestow on him the affection they had for his father if he fulfils their ideal of what a constitutional King should be in the same degree.

Photo taken at Windsor Castle by E. W. Histed

The Latest Portrait of Queen Mary

King George is very reserved in manner and does not believe in a King showing much emotion. His friends have been selected either from the old nobility whose names have been written large in British history, or from the men in the empire "who have done things"—such as Lord Strathcona of Montreal, who started in life as a trapper and whose career is one of the romances of modern achievement.

For people who care only for society and a round of pleasure he has little regard, and he only attends those social functions which his exalted position requires. As Prince he only gave one reception and one garden party a year, and after the guests had been received he would be found in some quiet corner with a distinguished visitor talking over some subject connected with the welfare of national interests at home or abroad. From a social standpoint, therefore, the coming reign will probably not be so brilliant as the one which has just closed. It is said that the late King encouraged social functions not only because he enjoyed them himself, but also because it helped the tradesmen of London. King George has an entirely different set of friends, who will now take the chief place in the social world, and many of those who have been known everywhere will drop from sight.

Standing well back in the shadow of the throne there had arisen an idea that the present King would be but a figurehead, while others really stood at the helm of the ship of state. In connection with this rumor a prominent British statesman said recently that people would find they had made a big mistake. He said that ever since Prince George was a subordinate naval officer he had been developing force of character; that he had strong opinions, which would not be swayed by every passing gust of public opinion, and that he had courage to risk his throne if need be rather than agree to measures he considered wrong or unjustified. During the recent debates on the budget he sat daily in one of the galleries of the Houses of Parliament in order to get his information at first hand, and he talked with men in political life from all parts of the three kingdoms to get in touch with the drift of public opinion. It has been hinted that he is a man of Tory sympathies, but there is nothing in his public acts or speeches to indicate that he will endeavor to keep one party or another in power. His Consort, Queen Mary, is a woman of undoubted strength of character, who will be of great help to the King. She is very religious and has an intimate acquaintance with public affairs. She had accompanied her husband around the world, visiting British colonies, and has made a most favorable impression. She has a full knowledge of royal prerogatives and none of them will be allowed to lapse while she is Queen.

It is fortunate that as Britain's power, her very existence in fact, depends on her navy, her new King is one well versed in naval affairs. So accurate is his knowledge that the tables of ships guns, and equipment of his own and foreign fleets is at his finger's end. He loved the sea and was very happy when in active service and in command of a cruiser. The story is told of a visitor on a British warship being shown about by a young dust-covered officer hastily told off from the command of a coaling party. The visitor was much pleased with the way things were explained and was much astonished when the captain informed him that the officer, now back at his coaling duties, was the "Sailor Prince." His former shipmates speak of him with great respect as an officer and appreciate his knowledge of naval problems.

King George was much pleased and touched by the sympathy shown by Americans when Edward died. In many cities flags hung at half mast until the funeral. The picture of Wall Street with his ensigns in mourning is an illustration of what could be seen in many places. The sub-treasury to the left of the statue was also draped. King Edward was a friend of this country, and King George will continue the policy of good will. R. S. B.

The Children of King George V. (x) Duke of Cornwall

Wall Street, New York, with Flags at Half Mast

QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S LETTER TO HER PEOPLE

SELDOM has one brief letter stirred a nation's heart as did that of the widowed Queen-Mother Alexandra. The manifestations of grief on the part of all classes of her subjects, and the flood of sympathetic messages has deeply affected her and the letter was written to them and published in every paper in the kingdom. It reminds the reader much of the friendly letters sometimes addressed to her people by Victoria. The letter of Alexandra is here given:

"From the depth of my poor broken heart I wish to express to the whole nation and our own kind people we love so well my deep-felt thanks for all their touching sympathy in my overwhelming sorrow and unspeakable anguish.

"Not alone have I lost everything in him, my beloved husband, but the nation, too, have suffered an irreparable loss by their best friend, father and sovereign thus suddenly called away. May God give us all his divine help to bear this heaviest of crosses, which he has seen fit to lay upon us. 'His will be done.'

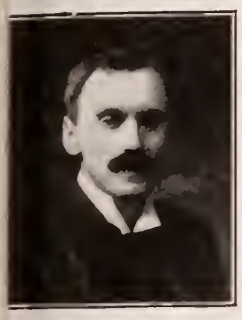
"Give to me a thought in your prayers which will comfort and sustain me in all that I have to go through. Let me take this opportunity of expressing my heartfelt thanks for all the touching letters and tokens of sympathy I have received from all classes, high and low, rich and poor, which are so numerous that I fear it would be impossible for me ever to thank everybody individually.

"I confide my dear son into your care, who, I know, will follow in his dear father's footsteps, begging you to show him the same loyalty and devotion you showed his dear father. I know that both my dear son and daughter-in-law will do their utmost to merit and keep it."

A TRUMPET-BLAST TO CHRISTENDOM

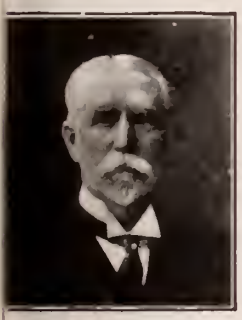
THE LAYMEN'S NATIONAL CONGRESS SOUNDS THE CALL TO WORLD CONQUEST

DR. J. H. MARSHALL, Canada

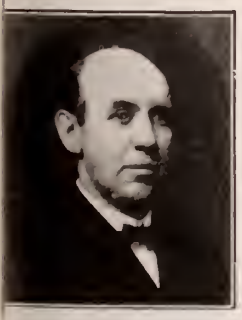


W. W. ROWELL, Canada

DR. S. M. ZWEMER, Arabia



J. L. BARBER, A. B. C. F. M.



PROF. C. M. KEELER, Musical Director

PRINCE YUN, Korea

IN seventy-five of the most important American cities there have been unusual doings this past winter among the laymen of the churches. "Laymen's Conventions" and "Laymen's Movement" have become familiar to readers of the daily press. The Laymen's National Missionary Congress, held in Chicago's greatest auditorium, May 3 to 6, was the result or climax, where 4,146 registered delegates of the nation's leading business and professional men of all denominations sat together for three days and discussed the evangelization of the world in this generation. They also discussed the possibility of securing from Christians in America a recognition of the nation's religious responsibility for the world.

The movement shows the will of Christ in taking a practical step in the direction of unity; toward, at least, co-operation. It unifies the convictions of all who believe in "Christ for the world, and the world for Christ," and by such unity it is producing greater sacrifices and greater efficiency. Men are coming to the point where they are willing to spend their lives and their millions in unifying the church and universalizing the Gospel of Christ.

Evangelizing the Orient

The world is growing to be a very small place. It is shrinking; we now measure distance by time. The peoples of the Far East are realizing that the customs of the West are to predominate. More and more the life of America, its business, its industrial organizations, its commercial agencies, its home politics, its foreign diplomacy, its literature, its thousand lines of life going out to the ends of the earth, must be utilized by the spirit of Christ. This Western civilization has been wrought in love; this same dominant principle is to be carried into Eastern civilization. Then will all be brought in subjection to the great Head of the church, Christ Jesus.

The church is challenged to undertake the work. Christ commanded that it be done. The men of the church can and will do the work. There is no undertaking too large in the business world to be financed and carried to completion. Giving the Gospel to the world in this generation, can be done, the laymen can and will finance the undertaking, and the volunteers will carry the message. Strong business men are putting business methods into missions and the attention of the business world is being commanded; consequently missions have passed the curio stage.

The Missionary Congress was a great success. The sectional meetings for professional men, and different classes of church workers were the means of laying many plans for future work. The denominational meetings resulted in the adoption of a policy for the denomination holding the meeting, which will become the slogan of that particular branch of the church.

The Platform of the Congress

The work of the Congress and many months of united work of the mission boards resulted in the crystalization of a keen, clear-cut, wide-reaching, and fundamental national policy, which, after a number of addresses by leading representative men, was adopted unanimously at the closing session. It sets forth substantially that this first National Missionary Congress in the United States, representing twenty millions of church members, recognizes the immediate world-wide presentation of the Gospel messages to be "the central and commanding obligation resting upon all Christian churches, and declares its conviction that the church of our generation can and should obey literally the great commission of our Lord, to preach the Gospel to every creature." It declares that there should be provided from the churches of Christian lands an average of at least one missionary to every twenty-five thousand of the unevangelized. This would require the quadrupling of the present force of workers, and an increase in contributions from $11,000,000 to about $45,000,000 annually. The laymen are equally responsible with the ministers to pray and to plan, to give and to work. This is the work of the organized church, and the natural leaders are the ministers and the missionary agencies of the various churches; all that is done in the name of the Laymen's Movement should help to strengthen these leaders. It urges the adoption by every church of regular and thorough methods of missionary education and finance, culminating once each year in an organized personal canvass of each congregation, and it recommends for universal adoption the Scriptural plan of a missionary offering every week. The National Policy further recommends that there be formed in each individual church a strong Missionary Committee, and that in each city or county a co-operating committee of laymen for pushing the work as opportunity offers. It reminds all Christians of the duty of habitual prayer for missions, which assures the divine blessing; and it calls upon the whole membership of the churches to "unite with us in discharging our personal and national missionary obligations." Union is urged with the churches of Canada and throughout Christendom for the spiritual conquest of the world.

Missions as an Investment

Missions are the greatest investment that can be made to bring returns in material as well as spiritual things. The United States hold over one-third of the total banking power of the world; $25,000,000,000 is in the hands of Christians, and $50,000,000 would not be too much to give yearly to spreading the Gospel in the Far East. Every missionary sent to the foreign field pays back a thousand fold. There is no trade-opener equal to the Gospel. If boards of trade and chambers of commerce would finance the presentation of the Gospel to heathen lands, it would pay enormously.

Some years ago, in the Philippines it appeared that "the cup of iniquity" must be about full; but with a new government it has become a fertile field. With the English language spoken, a republican form of government, and under the influence of Christian teaching, the kingdom of God is rapidly growing.

The idol of the pagan in the East is slowly giving way to education. Anti-Christian Asia, educated in Western things without Christianity, would evidently bring social peril upon America and Europe, and threaten with disaster our Christian civilization.

The Golden Opportunity

There never has been a time within a century when missionary higher educational institutions in non-Christian lands held positions of more commanding influence than at present. They have been established after a generation and more of effort and sacrifice, and to-day their great worth to the country is recognized. They are crowded with the best young men and young women of those countries, who are eager to learn, not only modern science, philosophy and literature, but Western religion as well.

Properly supported and directed, it is in the power of the Christian world to determine now in this decade, what shall be the future character of the general education of the East. As the non-Christian world is educated to-day, so will be its civilization of to-morrow.

The educational conquest of the East calls for men of the widest culture and statesmanship, and of the highest Christian character and purpose, together with a financial support that will enable this work to render the service the countries themselves are now demanding.

An adequate system of Christian education in non-Christian lands to-day spells international peace, religious toleration, Christian civilization and the recognized supremacy in the next generation of Christian ideals among all races.

Although the missionary agency is one of the greatest forces at work on the non-Christian world, the total annual expenditure for foreign missions is less than the cost of three battleships and not as much as the annual maintenance of the Italian navy. Yet small as it is, it has not only advanced civilization, but has been and is required to support it. Civilization rests upon great moral ideas. It is not a mere commercial affair. It could not be at all the great commercial affair it is, if it were not for the moral ideas which underlie it.

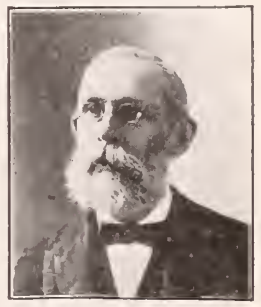
Lewistown, Ill. LOYAL W. MADDEN.

Current Events of Interest

—PRINCE TSAI TAO, of China, uncle to the present Chinese Emperor, has been the honored guest of the metropolis for some time past. Accompanied by Lord Li and suite, and escorted by several distinguished Americans, the Prince has been seeing the sights. He marveled at the discipline and order of the Metropolitan police; he visited the mayor's office in the City Hall, the port defenses, Grant's Tomb, the museums, etc., and was greatly entertained. Prince Tsai states that one of the chief objects of his mission is to promote a better understanding between China and this country. China is passing through a great crisis, he says, and what it needs most now is men able to do the work that lies before it. It depended largely upon the men now being trained in the United States to carry out this task. Prince Tsai is a keen observer and a good speaker.

—MAY 18 is recognized as "Hague Day" by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing a membership of 17,000,000, this being the day when the first Great Peace Conference opened its sessions at The Hague. On "Hague Day" all the various societies of young people represented in the Council met wherever possible to discuss the world's peace.

J. B. SLEMAN, Washington, D. C.

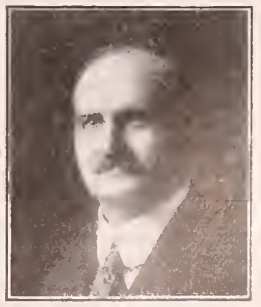


DR. SAMUEL B. CAPEN, Chr. Exec. Com.

GEORGE SHERWOOD EDDY, India

REV. W. HOTCHKISS, Africa

DR. J. L. DEARING, Japan



J. CAMPBELL WHITE, Secretary

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Edward the Peacemaker

AFTER a reign of nine years, during which comparatively short period he won the cordial love of all classes in his own land and the esteem of Europe, America, and the civilized world, Edward VII. has been gathered to his fathers. That he was a good ruler is the unanimous verdict in all lands. Tactful and gracious in public affairs, wise and conservative in the influence he exerted on British policies, he found his highest field of usefulness and performed his most valuable service in the role of peacemaker. Little wonder that Premier Asquith, with bowed head and trembling lips, should have eulogized him in Parliament as "an arbiter of ripe experience; a reverent worshiper of the traditions of his country and a watchful guardian of the constitution." He was more than the mere friend of international peace; he was the ardent personal advocate of arbitration and conciliation. Taking the ground that there was no misunderstanding between peoples or governments that was incapable of adjustment by reasonable methods, and the application of the principles of international law and equity, he patched up more quarrels and amicably and skilfully adjusted more difficult diplomatic tangles than any other monarch of his day. He had the greatest of navies, and armies on three continents, yet war to him was abhorrent. It has been said of him by one who knew him well that "he negotiated treaties of the sort that can only be reached by a grasp of the hand."

While not a great king in the sense of dazzling achievement, he was great in those qualities that go to make an admirable and satisfactory ruler and a happy and prosperous people. Edward was more of a citizen of the world than any of his royal contemporaries. He had traveled far and observed much, and he had learned wisdom and had become broad-minded in the school of experience. In every Continental capital he was always assured of a cordial welcome. He was the good "uncle" to many young potentates and the confidential adviser of all. France, Italy, Russia, Austria have each had the benefit of his sagacious counsel and even the German Emperor has more than once come under the spell of "Uncle Edward's" sound and persuasive advice. Of the United States, which he visited when a youth, he entertained the kindest recollections, and whatever perturbations might disturb British politics, he was always a loyal believer in the maintenance of good relations with our people.

It has been regarded by some as especially unfortunate that he should have passed away at a time when Great Britain is facing a serious constitutional crisis; but it is not unlikely that an affliction which fills all classes with equal sorrow, may serve to lessen the bitterness of the political struggle and may ultimately help in reaching a satisfactory solution. A universal grief dwarfs all other considerations, in politics as well as in private life, and often transforms the bitterest enemies into friends. Thus his influence may still be that of a peacemaker, and may aid in bringing order out of the present chaos of British politics.

One Result of Proper Athletics

VARIOUS papers have been recently commenting on a statement made by a prominent educator that the boys in our high schools and academies, who are caught cheating in class or in examination, are seldom those who are interested in athletics, and that the spirit of manliness and "fair play" demanded on the field is carried into the schoolroom. While this is spoken of in the press as a new idea, it is well known to students of athletic questions. Proper exercise under competent instructors develops the body and clears the brain. Physical culture demands a high and pure standard of living, and almost inevitably higher standards of thinking are a result. This is not an inevitable course, for exceptions are found, but the general results of increased manliness, a desire to be fair and square and win or lose on one's merits, is a result expected from long experience by physical directors in our Y. M. C. A., schools and colleges.

Professionalism in athletics is now frowned upon, as is the spirit formerly manifested to win at all costs. No more inspiring spectacle of American young manhood can be seen than at some inter-school meet where the victor is cheered by all regardless of the colors he wears. Of course there is the constant danger of overdoing athletics and making them an evil in themselves instead of the means to make a healthy body as the temple for a healthy mind, but it was a wise step when physical training took its place in our schools along with mental training. The result has been a finer type of young man, whose ideals are high, "who plays fair," to use the schoolboy expression, and who keeps it up in after life where the problems are harder and more difficult. In the hard battle for existence that greets every schoolboy when he starts out to earn his place in the world the lessons of self-control, of honor, the courage he had to develop in his school, are all needed as well as the mental training he has received. With these a young man who has stood well in his classes will in ten years stand far ahead of the youth who has neglected his body and whose face has borne the hectic flush instead of the rosy color of right living.

The Laymen's Congress

IT was a memorable day for Christian America when the great Missionary Congress, representing twenty millions of earnest laymen, sent out its official declaration that world-evangelization could be accomplished in this generation. That this is practicable we firmly believe. So much progress has already been made with limited means and without a complete organization that it is simply a question of united organized effort and ample appropriations to complete the work. The convention did not look off into the distant future and indulge in yearnings, as other conventions have done. It looked from a commanding Pisgah-height from which could be clearly seen the land to be occupied. China, Africa, Tibet, South America have been only partially evangelized, and while much remains to be done, it can be done in our own day, under divine blessing and direction, if the great forces of Christendom unite for an aggressive campaign. We commend the call of the Laymen's Congress to all who are praying and working and looking forward in hope to the complete fulfilment of the Great Commission.

Modern Sorcerers

SIMON "the Sorcerer" was the idol of the Samaritan people. His magical art seemed to fascinate them and they were ready to believe anything of such a wonder-worker. Too clever to permit them to penetrate his tricks, he led them to believe they were wrought by supernatural power. This talented impostor was almost worshiped by the Samaritans at the time the apostles visited that country. Then, as the record in Acts tells us, when the Sorcerer saw the apostles imparting spiritual power and healing, as Jesus had commanded, jealous of these new rivals, he instantly offered to pay them to teach him what he conceived to be the secret formula by which they touched the souls and hearts of men. Peter's reply must have astounded him. He spurned the offer. "Thy money perish with thee," he said, "because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased! . . . Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter, for thy heart is not right in the sight of God."

To-day, the Sorcerer has his antitypes in many American communities. We are living in a time that surpasses all others in the number and boldness of its spiritual impositions. On every side, we see or hear vulgar offers to impart "the gift of God" for money. A writer in the World's Work has a very timely article on this topic, in which he unsparingly exposes these mercenaries. He finds that all over the country the Holy Spirit is made a subject of trade and barter like worldly merchandise, and that the divine power of healing body and soul is trafficked in as one would sell meat and drink.

Moreover, these spiritual traders have a tariff of their own, by means of which they undertake to sell salvation at fixed rates. There is sharp competition among them and they do not scruple to cry down each other's wares, after the manner of peddling tradesmen. Those who conduct these business in advertisements that bear all the earmarks the auctioneer, describe their power in the cu of blindness, deafness, deformities, etc. "ju as the Master did." This reference to the worl Redeemer in a catchpenny advertisement is the la limit of impious mendacity. It is difficult to und stand how any sane and well balanced person cou be deceived by such transparent quackery; yet t business is apparently profitable. Like Simon Samaria, they prey upon the ignorant and the sup stitious; but they fairly outclass "the Sorcerer" his own game in their wildly extravagant clai and their spiritual pretentions. They are probab within the law; for ours is a land where such ou rageous absurdities may flourish. But only for while, for these are among the short-lived epheme of the present stage of intellectual and religious d velopment, and will soon pass, leaving not even trace. The worst feature of it is that good, simp but over-credulous people are frequently fou among the victims, and these have to pass throu a bitter experience before their eyes are open a they come back to their right bearings.

General Notes

—THE RAILROAD BILL, the first of the important Administ tion measures in President Taft's legislative programme, pas the house of Representatives by a fair majority. An ame ment permitting railroad mergers under certain conditions v defeated.

—ALL ENGLAND is discussing the question whether or not royal oath or declaration to be made by King George shall modified to exclude those passages in which the monarch jures the Roman Church. The passages are those that de transubstantiation, declare the invocation to the Virgin a the celebration of mass to be superstitious and idolatrous a which particularly disown the authority of the Papal Chur It is said that the young king has expressed a wish to omit passages for the reason that they are regarded as offensive his Catholic subjects. However this may be, there is anotl consideration which troubles the British statesmen in this c nection, and that is the possibility of such a modification of oath paving the way for a Catholic succession to the Brit throne.

—INDEPENDENCE DAY this year will be celebrated in C fornia with a prize-fight. All the rowdyism of the State an good—or bad—lot of it from other States will meet there, witness a brutal encounter between two men who have trai for the occasion pretty much as animals are trained for Spanish bull-fight or as gladiators were trained for their co bats in the old Roman arena. Millions of dollars in wag will change on the result of this ruffianly affair and in all li lihood it will be a leading feature of thousands of "movi picture" shows all over the country. How does such a desec tion of the nation's birthday speak for the quality of our triotism and of our boasted civilization?

A READER of this paper, in Lake City, Neb., writes stron favoring the agitation of the project for an international na police force for preserving peace on the high seas. This is no means a new proposition. It was advocated and discus by this journal long before the first Hague Conference met. has since been considered in all its phases by numerous pu cations. In the present condition of affairs, however, we compelled to admit that the plan, while an ideal one, is see ingly very remote from prospective realization. Our Nebra reader suggests a practical duplication of every warship he after to be built, one duplicate in each case to be placed at disposal of an international peace tribunal for policing seas. This suggestion is certainly novel, but we think it lit likely to be taken seriously.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, May 25, 1910

	PAGE
Honor the Nation's Heroes	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	498
Working to Redeem "Little Dora" (Portrait)	498
Costa Rica Still Shaking (Illustrated)	499
The Value of a Human Being. Sermon By Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D.D.	500, 501
The Children's Pulpit (Illustrated) By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	501, 513
The Personal Side of George V. (Illustrated)	502
A Trumpet-Blast to Christendom (Portraits)	503
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	504
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	505
Young Wives and Family Jars (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	506
The Strawberry Handkerchief Serial by Amelia E. Barr	507, 508
My Soldier Friend. Poem	509
Mont-Lawn's Welcoming Gates (Illustrated)	509
Blessing Follows Faith Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	510, 511
Our Financial Department	512
Friendship With God. Epworth League Topic	514
Christ Our Judge. Christian Endeavor Topic	515

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

The Peace Tree

THE culminating incident of the dedication of the Peace Palace, the new home of the International Bureau of American Republics at ashington, on April 26, was the planting of a ace Tree in the palace grounds by President Taft. ong those present at the exercises were President ft, Secretary Knox, Senator Root, Andrew Cargie, the Mexican Ambassador, Bishop Harding, rdinal Gibbons, and John Barrett, director of the reau. A million dollars had been put into the ne palace with its beautiful architecture and stly furnishings to represent the idea of peace and od will in the Western Hemisphere. What an propriate thing it was to plant a tree—something t lives, and grows, and responds to God's sunht and free air, and produces loveliness and grateful shade—to express the same idea of friendliness d universal brotherhood among the nations of our estern world! The custom of planting trees in ividual grounds, public parks, seats of learning d elsewhere, has always contained the highest senthents and been accompanied with the greatest eer and joy. Through the history of the world es have been memorials of events most important d tragical. On October 31, 1687, Sir Edmund dros, the royal governor, came to Hartford and manded the charter in the name of King James II. ter a lengthy discussion in e assembly, the lights were inguished, and the charter s taken by Captain William adsworth of Hartford and ncealed in a hollow oak tree, d toward this Charter Oak erty-loving people have ever lked. The apple tree at Appmattox will ever speak of the rsonal friendship of two eat leaders and universal otherhood. When the late ng Edward, as the Prince of ales, visited our country in 30 and was received in a befting manner, he went accompnied by the President and er distinguished representates to Mount Vernon, to the mb of Washington, and it s then that Prince Albert ward planted a tree upon a ely mound near the tomb d took back home with him a mpanion seed to plant in indsor Forest, and thus the ir expectant to the English one paid reverence to one om his ancestors called a el, but who is considered by s countrymen of the present neration as a patriot and atesman. When at the death Victoria he took the rulerp of the British empire, he s level-headed, tactful and ldly in his administration, d pre-eminently a man of ace. There have been few rulers in Europe in dern times who have contributed more to the ace of nations than Edward VII. Mr. Alfred stin, the poet laureate, in his verses on the death King Edward, entitled "The Truce of God," expresses this idea in poetry scarcely up to the standd of the thought.

> For peace he wrought,
> His constant thought
> Being how to shield his realm against > Strife's baleful star.

ward planted peace trees everywhere. Leaders d peoples in both hemispheres are doing their part ushering in the era of peace which Christ represited and for which he prayed.

> nd I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none ll make you afraid: and I will rid evil beasts out of the land, ther shall the sword go through your land. (Lev. 26:6.)

hard Watson Gilder Memorial

A committee has undertaken the task to raise 00,000 of endowment for Gilder fellowships in olumbia University for the promotion of good izenship. About $50,000 of the amount has eady been secured and the friends of the dead thor and patriot will no doubt soon secure the maining $50,000 needed. In a letter from Cairo the chairman of this Richard Watson Gilder morial Fund, Colonel Roosevelt writes: "Like so ny others, I have mourned the loss of Richard atson Gilder as one of the truest, stanchest and most delightful of friends and one of the best of citizens. He combined to a singular degree sweetness and courage, idealism and wholesome common sense. It may be truthfully said that he was an ideal citizen for such democracy as ours. He was a man of letters; he was a lover of his kind who worked in a practical fashion for the betterment of social and economic conditions; and he took keen and effective interest in our public life. No worthier American citizen has lived during our time." The estimate of Mr. Gilder by the ex-President is discriminating and just, and the memorial proposed of such a good and really great man will be more endurable than any of marble or brass which could be erected, and expresses the thought of the Good Book:

> The memory of the just is blessed. (Prov. 10:7.)

A Blue Rose

A genuine blue rose, which florists have been trying many years in vain to produce, is said to be the achievement of Professor Elwyn Waller, of Morristown, N. J. The petals of the flower on opening have a purplish pink shade, which later turns into a brilliant steel blue. The plant is from the seed of the ordinary crimson rambler. There is scarcely any department of science which is more mysterious and interesting than the culture of plant life, than the painting and blending and moulding of plants by the human hand. The room God has left for the mastery of nature by the human intellect in laying hold of the sunshine and shower and soil and seed and making them do his bidding, suggests the likelihood that God has left room in the arrangement of his natural world for a divine intelligence and affection to lay hold upon the elements of nature and make them minister to the happiness and welfare of his children. This special providence is amply described in the New Testament and the Old.

> The Lord thy God hath blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness; these forty years the Lord thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing. (Deut. 2:7.)

President Taft Planting the "Peace Tree" in the Peace Palace Grounds, Washington, D.C.

Six Centuries Old

Six persons attended a birthday party in New York City recently in honor of the 109th birthday of Mendel Diamond, and their ages aggregated 641 years. Mr. Diamond escorted to the table Mrs. Esther Davis, who blushed at the mention of her 117 summers. Beside Mrs. Davis were Malke Bernstein, 106 years old; Mrs. Rachel Marcus, 102; Mrs. Rose Arnwald, 107; Mischla Schalchetsky, 100. The youth at the feast was Isaac Goldsmith, 80 years old. The entertainment was given at the Home of the Daughters of Jacob, a retreat for aged Hebrews. Mr. Diamond said that he could not remember anything in the last fifty years of his life that had given him so much pleasure as the banquet in his honor. He tells with great clearness and intensity of interest the story of how he, a lad of thirteen, saw Napoleon Bonaparte lead the remnant of his defeated army from the battlefield of Waterloo. Although a hundred and nine years of age, he says his name was never printed in the newspaper until a few months ago. These aged Hebrews in earthly longevity are approaching the limit of the life of the great law-giver of their nation:

> And Moses was a hundred and twenty years old when he died; his eye was not dim, nor his natural forces abated. (Deut. 34:7.)

Golden Rule Pays

Mr. F. W. Ramsey, of the Cleveland Foundry firm, Cleveland, O., made an address before the National Civic Federation in which he indicated that the Golden Rule is practically workable in the business enterprises of life. He made a special reference to this practical working in his own foundry. It seemed that their stamping machines injured the hands of a large number of the workmen. An expert was set to the task of reducing the injuries, and the number injured was reduced fifty per cent. at once. The introduction of compressed air in discharging the dies from under the stamps practically took away the rest of the hazard and the men in the department, unannoyed by peril and unfettered by injury, by the increased value of their service paid for the improvement many times over. It was found that in the soldering department poisonous gases were released that literally slew those who tried to work there. A forced-draft ventilating system was installed to protect the lives of the men, and the increased efficiency of the men paid for the improvement and more too. Labor troubles sprang up in the foundry and after a prolonged contest it was resolved to take all the men back on their own terms, but one, the leader of the strike, who had been peculiarly ungrateful and disloyal. The men refused to return to work unless this leader was also employed. The man was allowed to return. Soon after it was discovered that the man had tuberculosis and the proprietors of the foundry sent him away to a health resort in the mountains, paid all his expenses and supported his family while he was away, and he returned to his task to be the intense friend of the company, and the men, when they saw the love and magnanimity that had been manifested by the firm, did the best work and more of it than they had ever done, and the financial report of the year justified dealings of justice, tenderness and mercy. There are other institutions like this foundry at Cleveland which remind us that Christ, who best understands the human heart and the best methods to be used in human enterprises, is wise in laying down his Golden Rule for human conduct:

> Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets. (Matt. 7:12.)

Lost Life Rescuing Purse

Mr. Edward Heide of the firm of Heide & Co., dyers of New York City, was coloring some netting when a bottle of benzine exploded, enveloping the man and room in a sheet of blue flame. His partner, who was near, caught him and dragged him into the hall to a place of safety. He thought of his vest and his money in the pocket, and ran into the room where it hung to get it, and was cut off by the flames and burned to a crisp. Hundreds of thousands of people kill themselves in their quest of money, a large majority of whom never succeed in getting what they go after, and many others who do succeed in the accumulation of fortunes do it at the expense of health and life, and the marble palaces and beautiful grounds occupied by widows in almost every community in the nation, tell what a sacrifice there often is, and what a martyrdom in the achievement of earthly success in these strenuous times. There are multitudes who kill themselves spiritually in the pursuit of money, some succeeding, most not succeeding in their effort. This folly is solemnly denounced in the question of the Master:

> What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? (Matt. 16:26.)

Young Wives and Family Jars

Women in Council

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THIS department will be greatly strengthened if each one who reads it will say to herself, "I wish to do my share in contributing a new idea, giving an experience or stating a theory which may be of practical value to my sister women." This week the first place is accorded to describing an incident which will probably interest most women.

* * *

Folk-in-Law The almost constant complaints which are made by relations-in-law concerning misunderstandings, jars and discords would cease to exist if folk-in-law would only consent to be folk-in-love. Why, when this life is so brief at the longest and so uncertain at the best of times, should there so often be injustice and consequent heartache between those who should be mutually considerate? Sometimes a man chooses his wife, takes her to his home, and then permits his mother to criticise the wife's conduct and sneer at her inexperience. A husband who does this is unmanly. He may be a good son, but he is not a loyal comrade to the woman who has left her father's house to be his partner in life. The meddlesome mother-in-law is herself unworthy and has much for which to answer.

A brother and sister living under the same roof, but in separate establishments, have a great deal of friction because the unmarried sister and the brother's wife cannot see life from the same viewpoint. Here, too, common sense should be called upon, and each woman should learn that she cannot altogether have her own way and must make concessions. When people come together in marriage each approaches the new life from a different background. Sometimes a young wife is supersensitive; again, an old-fashioned father and mother-in-law do not understand, and have little patience with what to them is the ultra refinement of their son's town-bred wife. Until relations-in-law learn to be relations-in-love there will be lack of harmony where the melody should be without a flaw.

* * *

A Guest Book A guest book is easily made and is a pleasant possession in a hospitable household. It may be a simple blank book, or, if homemade, may have covers painted in pretty designs by an artistic home daughter. Each friend who is entertained beneath the roof is asked on taking leave to write his or her name and the date of departure. Often the friend writes a sentiment or adds a wish, and sometimes takes the opportunity of expressing appreciation of pleasant times. A house at Far Rockaway had some years ago the distinction of entertaining from time to time artists, poets, scholars and distinguished authors. In the guest book of the hostess these people left pictures, pen and ink sketches, jests and witty speeches which made the book interesting to all permitted to turn its pages. A friend keeps her guest book in her spare chamber. Needless to say, she does not reside in a city flat. On its first page she has inscribed the familiar poem by Ellen C. Gates, beginning "Sleep well within this quiet room." She suspends her book from a peg on the dressing bureau, and it is furnished with a pencil attached to a cord. She loves to look over the names of dear guests who have tarried with her from time to time.

* * *

A Plant Exchange and Flower Market "We have recently had a flower market in our little village. It was also a plant exchange. Word was sent around from one neighbor to another, messages were spoken over the telephone and posters—the work of a school-girl—advertising time and place, were conspicuously shown in the railway station and the windows of the club house. No expense was involved, as a friend lent her grounds for the place of meeting, barrels on which boards were laid served for the accommodation of the plants and flowers, and the ladies to whom belonged the credit of the happy thought served as saleswomen. Every one was asked to contribute a growing plant, not necessarily a potted plant, but one that was taken up by the roots, with plenty of surrounding earth. These were sold at prices ranging from two cents to fifteen. Flowers in bloom and potted were sold at a slightly higher price. In some cases friends exchanged plants, paying five or ten cents for the privilege. Cut flowers donated from gardens were sold at a lower rate than it is possible to purchase them in the florists' shops. The market was open for three hours and the amount realized for a mission in which we women are interested was twenty-five dollars and fifty cents."—L. C. D.

* * *

Not only is the suggestion of our correspondent feasible, but it is especially timely, and may easily be put into practice at this season. Women's ways of raising money naturally fall into accustomed lines. Here is another pertinent example of w may be done, without much fuss or long prepa tion:

* * *

An Impromptu Afternoon Tea "Dear Mrs. Sangster: Will let a group of girls slip into y page and tell their mothers w they lately did for the help o very poor family? The oldest of us is nineteen the youngest fourteen and we are a Bible C organized into a club. We made our plans for tea on a Sunday afternoon as we were walk toward our homes. We stopped at the home of oldest girl and discussed ways and means. time was to be wasted, for a certain family kn to us was in very great trouble. We decided t we would have our tea on the next Saturday af noon in the chapel of our church. We had not given out in the school and sent po cards to a number of our frie We offered tea and sandwiches four o'clock and we had a table home-made candy and cake. dressed in kimonos and made selves look as much like Japa girls as we could. We had c paper to cover our tables; we paper napkins, and the ladies of church lent us the dishes. It great fun getting ready for the s and we did everything on Satur morning. By six o'clock on Satur afternoon our treasurer had mo enough to make the family of friend, Mrs. M., quite comforta and to provide milk for the baby a whole month.

"JESSIE & ELEANOR.

The daughters are welcome w the mothers meet in council. T girls are enterprising and started well in the field of Chris endeavor.

* * *

A Dissenting Voice "I did not app of a recent ar of yours on Family Page, although I usu think that your views are sens and womanly. How can you tole the dog? You speak of dogs friendly. They may be frie to their owners, but they g and bark at strangers, or, if t have amiable dispositions, jump them with muddy feet and their costumes. I do not agree you that dogs make good pets children. In the Bible dogs spoken of in terms of contempt I should be glad if both dogs and loons were banished from this l Personally I like you, dear Mrs. Sangster, but I am shocked to as tain that you are a lover of the d"

* * *

When the Bride Leaves Home A bride leaving home town w she knew every and every one k her, found herself at sea when be ning her life in a large city, w her husband occupied a conspic position. He was a man of aff and introduced his wife to a so society in contrast to that with w she was familiar. She sent an ploring letter to a friend across the continent l ging to have a half dozen books on etiquette sent by express. The friend wrote in reply that if young wife retained the simple manner of her domestic circle, and the good manners which practised in the village where she had received training, she need not waste her money on man of behavior. This was the truth. Good manners the same all around the globe. Little points a visiting cards, the form of invitation, acceptan and regrets, the way of entertaining guests at ner or a wedding, the right sort of notes to send way of thanks for gifts and favors, and everyth else in deportment are soon learned.

Miss Mary Worthington as the "May Queen" at Bryn Mawr

AT Bryn Mawr University, the young lady students held a very merry May-Day celebration. The Lady of the May, Miss Mary Worthington, a niece of President Thomas, took her place beneath the central May-pole. Four oxen dragged it forth in state; Robin Hood laid a wreath of flowers on her hair; and the dances and plays began. Each play was given three times and each dance repeated four times, so that the spectators could see them all. Pyramus and Thisbe carried on a flirtation in one corner. The "Masque of Flowers" proceeded in another. St. George fought the dragon under a big oak tree; and the Reversby Sword Play absorbed the attention of a particular group not far away. "The Hue and Cry After Cupid" was presented in the cloister. Little Mary Skinner, the eight-year-old daughter of Otis Skinner, took part in the elfin dance of the cupids. Miss Helen, the daughter of President Taft, personated Duke Theseus in "The Midsummer Night's Dream." She was arrayed in royal purple and presented a noble appearance. A striking feature of this unique programme was the presentation of "a pleasant conceited comedy," the rare "Old Wives' Tale" of George Peele, and the number most interesting of all, perhaps, to the students of early English literature.

The Strawberry Handkerchief

A Tale of Colonial Days in Old New York

By AMELIA E. BARR

CHAPTER TEN—Continued

MY fader! My moeder!" cried Virginia.

"Why do you trouble ent?" cried Rose. "Are you going th him? If so, go! If not, why ake sorrow for others?"

"Do not marry a man you hate, Virnia," said Arent. "Come with me. ere are four other women on board. me! Do not fear. I will care for u."

"Oh, what shall I do, Rose?"

"What your heart tells you to do."

"I am so miserable!"

"Then say a cheerful good-by to ent. Why cross his way with tears?"

So Arent kissed the weeping girl, d then taking Rose's hand they went gether to the front door. There, in iles and sunshine, they parted, full a hope that Love made sure. Three ousand miles of trackless wastes of ater, and unplumbed depths of death, uld not separate them; they knew at all-conquering Love would steer eir barks to the haven where they uld meet again.

A little wearied and distrait, Rose turned to her friend. She wished to use some enthusiasm in her, but uld touch no subject to which Virnia was responsive. Even the good ws about Joris had not been satisfacry. Among the beauties of London, hy should he remember a homespun lonial girl like her? Also, he beved himself to have just cause for rgetting—yes, everything appeared be against Virginia at this time, d the long suspense and uncertainty out her marriage had completely oken her usually bright, hopeful irits.

The girl had a conscience sensitive a nerve, and the kidnaping of Bavius for the King's service had alost from the first hour of its inception used Virginia fear and suffering, and me remorse. Then Captain Harley's ew of the matter had convinced her at she must carry a life-long secret. seemed an unbearable burden. And hat if Batavius should accuse her? e was a strangely suspicious, fareing man where Batavius De Vries as concerned.

So Rose's enjoyment of the situation most angered her, and she was glad ough when Rose reminded her that e "might keep all her fingers out of e abduction pie. If Joris should go India!"

"Joris go to India! Oh, Rose, you ave promised me to see him as soon s you reach London."

"Of course I shall."

"What will you say to him?"

"I will confess everything to him. will leave you as white as a lily leaf. will take all the blame."

"It will be weeks yet before he sees ou. He will forget me. How can he elp it? Rose, what will you say to im?"

"I will tell him you are the loveliest onder in America, that you are as rue as life and death to him, that you ave shut yourself away from all vers for his sake, that you live only remember him, that you will marry o one but him."

"You promise all this?"

"On my honor, I promise it! My rst business in London will be to see oris Artaveldt."

"But, Rose, Joris believes I have een false to him."

"And you are such a little fool as to magine that any one is cured of love y the falseness of love? Now, Bavius——"

"I hate Batavius!"

"My opinion exactly. But let me tell you soberly, it is dangerous to say such words now. When the gentleman disappears, they might be remembered. I shall wear my pink frock, and let down my hair, languish a little for his benefit. La, my dear! we shall have a delightful evening between the Captains three. My father is a quiet man, Lawson comes to observe, Batavius will fill the whole canvas."

"Perhaps he may astonish you."

"I have no doubt of it. I have seen the abominable likeness of Hyder Ali, the brutal King of the Mysore. It is very like Batavius. I suppose that he will be here early."

Rose's supposition was correct. Batavius was present at the tea table, looking as nearly like a Barbary pirate as a moral and respectable merchant captain could look. One expected adventures from a creature so romantically attired. And this note of romance was emphasized by a short sword, or yataghan, whose broad sheath was studded with jewels.

"A trifle which I picked up after the storming of Gwalior," he explained to Lord Harley and Captain Lawson. And this remark led naturally to the great point of interest—the rich kingdoms of Hindustan which England was then subjugating. Quickly Batavius unrolled the maps and charts he had brought with him, and as he talked, and explained, the two English captains listened with almost breathless wonder to his tale. For on this subject Batavius was an inspired man. He led them through the dangerous straits and waterways, and it was as if he was standing at his mainmast teaching the navies of the world the mystic roads into these old treasure lands. "Temples!" he snapped his fingers at the word. "They were mere hiding places for the incredible wealth of the rajahs. It was right to loot them. It was even a duty."

And for once the egotism of Batavius was becoming, was even magnificent. Virginia looked at him with half-shut eyes, and wondered, liking him none the better for his deeds of prowess. Rose cried out with enthusiasm, "You ought to be ruling an Indian principality!"

"We shall see him Lord of Mysore yet!" said Captain Lawson, and Lord Harley added, "You are a very wizard, De Vries. You must have been born in India, sir."

"I was born in Amsterdam, gentlemen, and christened in the Oude Kirke there. But my Captain there"—and he bowed to Captain Van Vroom—"taught me all these things. When I was a little lad, twelve years old, he began to teach me the ways, and the winds, and the seas, and the river mouths of these burning lands." And again he rose and bowed to Captain Jansen Van Vroom, who sat smiling and nodding.

And for this confession, and this courtesy, Katrina gave Batavius her hand, and forgave him much she had laid up in her heart against him.

When the little party broke up, Rose stood by Captain Lawson's side for a few minutes, and asked, "Is he not the very man you want?"

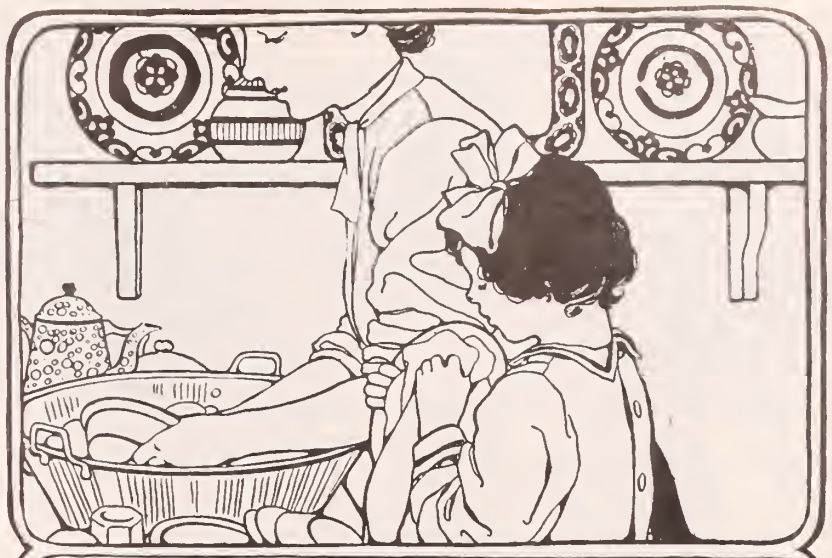
"He is the man for our need. Look at his eyes—and his big hands. They could carry a ship anywhere he wanted her to go. And he has been learning these seas twenty years in order to be ready for us."

"You are satisfied with him?"

"On my word, the greatest possible find—not a bad fellow either——"

"As you take him—nasty to ladies—makes them sick—makes them shiver and creep, and grow cold and

Continued on next page



The woman who does her own work ought to have the very best of everything to do it with.

Take this matter of dish washing, for example—the best soap for that purpose is Ivory.

It costs more than ordinary laundry soaps do. It is worth more.

Ordinary laundry soaps make the hands red and coarse and hard—a source of never-ending humiliation.

Ivory Soap adds to their beauty; keeps them sweet and soft and dainty.

For that reason, it is true economy to use it—even if it does cost two or three cents a week more.

There is no "free" (uncombined) alkali in Ivory Soap. That is why it will not injure the finest fabric or the most delicate skin.

Ivory Soap . . . 99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure.

HOUSEWORK HALVED

By Syracuse "EASY" Utilities

SOLD ON TRIAL

We are specialists in labor-saving utilities for the home. Our Syracuse "EASY" Vacuum Washer and "EASY" Ball-bearing Wringer have lightened the burdens of thousands of women, and are known by them to be the best made for their purpose.

The latest addition to our line is the "EASY" Vacuum Cleaner, hand or electric, which is positively the easiest operated and most efficient cleaner made. Gets ALL the dirt, without raising dust. Cleans carpets, rugs, furniture, draperies, floors and walls right in the room. Once tried, you will not be without it. Write for Trial Offer, Easy Terms, and testimonials from our customers.

DODGE & ZUILL

535-L Dillaye Building. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Toronto Branch: 92 Olive Avenue, L. G. Beebe, Manager

A Flying Start

We are organized to promote successful poultry culture. You can get a flying start as a poultryman and make profits sure by using the

Rancocas Strain White Leghorn HATCHING EGGS We have over 10,000 Layers

The laying propensity of our S. C. White Leghorns is indestructibly fixed. They are not bred for "fancy" purposes. Ours are thoroughly bred utility birds, "the kind that lay the eggs." We have 10,000 layers, and establish every year more paying egg farms for beginners and introduce more vitality into flocks of expert poultry raisers than any other farm in the country. You can avoid all hatching losses by ordering day-old-chix from us. Any size shipment from 25 upward, all sturdy and vigorous. Breeding stock, any quantity. Complete instructions for beginners—care, feeding, etc. No charge. Write for circular giving our plan and prices.

INTERNATIONAL POULTRY SALES CO.

J. M. Foster, President, Box 160, Brown's Mills in the Pines, N. J.

LADIES SOCIETIES

And others, make money demonstrating the F. D. C. Vegetable Cooker. A utensil that saves labor, time, fuel and food. (Not a fireless cooker.) Practical for many uses. No housewife will be without it. State managers and local agents wanted. The F. D. CALKINS CO., 231 W. Superior Street, Dept. C, Chicago, Ill.

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

Does your church use INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS? If not, send us $4.75 for a tray like cut) and 36 plain glasses. Or $5.25 with 44 plain glasses. Money refunded if not entirely satisfactory. Over 6,500 churches use.

THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE CO., Box 125, Lima Ohio

IT is easy to make your unsightly, scuffed and scarred soft-wood floors look like floors of highly polished hard-wood. A can of Jap-a-lac and a brush will produce a beautiful finish that "wears like iron." Jap-a-lac is a varnish and stain combined and is made in seventeen beautiful colors, and also in Natural or clear.

RENEW WITH JAP-A-LAC
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

It can be used on everything of wood or metal from cellar to garret.

"THE JAP CHAP"

The Jap-a-lac Model Floor Graining Process solves the problem of "What shall I do with my old carpeted floor to make it sanitary and refined?" Your painter can do it at little expense or you can do it yourself. Insist on Jap-a-lac. For sale by Paint, Hardware and Drug Dealers.

Write for illustrated booklet containing interesting information and beautiful color card. Free on request. If your dealer does not keep Jap-a-lac, send us 10 cents to cover cost of mailing, and we will send a free sample, quarter-pint can of any color (except Gold, which is 25 cents) to any point in the United States.

Our Green Label Line of clear varnishes is the highest quality manufactured. Its use insures perfect results. Ask your paint dealer.

The Glidden Varnish Company
5506 Glidden Bldg., Cleveland, O.

Jap-a-lac gives newness wherever applied and "wears like iron." Quality does it.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL We will ship you a "RANGER" BICYCLE on approval, freight prepaid to any place in the United States without a cent deposit in advance, and allow ten days free trial from the day you receive it. If it does not suit you in every way and is not all or more than we claim for it and a better bicycle than you can get anywhere else regardless of price, or if for any reason whatever you do not wish to keep it, ship it back to us at our expense for freight and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We sell the highest grade bicycles direct from factory to rider at lower prices than any other house. We save you $10 to $25 middlemen's profit on every bicycle. Highest grade models with Puncture-Proof tires, Imported Roller chains, pedals, etc., at prices no higher than cheap mail order bicycles; also reliable medium grade models at unheard of low prices.

RIDER AGENTS WANTED in each town and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1910 "Ranger" Bicycle furnished by us. You will be astonished at the wonderfully low prices and the liberal propositions and special offer we will give on the first 1910 sample going to your town. Write at once for our special offer.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogue and learn our low prices and liberal terms. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. D-71 CHICAGO, ILL.

Split Hickory—Let Me Pay The Postage To You

H. C. PHELPS
Manufacturer of Split Hickory Vehicles

No year in history has seen such splendid Split-Hickory-Vehicle Styles as this—or such low prices. I promise you also just as great savings on high-grade Harness. Just send me your name this season—right away, sure, for my new, Big Free Book of over 125 styles to select from. Select just the made-to-order, direct-from-factory Split Hickory you want. I'll send it promptly on

ON MY BIG BOOK

30 DAYS' FREE ROAD TEST
2 Years' Guarantee
You Save $26.50 or More

Make your own selection from my book—trimmings and finish to suit you best—all materials and workmanship and values just as represented or money back without question, from the largest exclusive carriage and harness factory in the world. Write for my Book, Free, today—personally to

H. C. Phelps, Pres. OHIO CARRIAGE MFG. CO.
Station 236, Columbus, Ohio

"I save you $30 to $35 on this Split-Hickory Auto-Seat Buggy."

Over 125 other styles at even Bigger Savings—See Free Book.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL." for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

THE STRAWBERRY HANDKERCHIEF

Continued from preceding page

damp. But men can stand such feeling if they sort with their duty."

The management of Batavius was now an easy problem, and Rose said with a sigh of relief, "I can leave him to Lawson. The creature follows a cocked hat naturally. He went out of his senses with delight when Lawson asked him to breakfast." And this overture of friendship was quickly followed by an intimacy which occupied the days of both men, to their apparent satisfaction. About eight o'clock in the morning Batavius would go to the King's Arms Tavern in Maiden Lane, and a few minutes afterwards Captain Lawson would follow him. Then Batavius turned instructor on the subject of American delicacies suitable for breakfast.

After this meat the two men would smoke and visit the fort, parade themselves on the fashionable streets, bow to the royalist matrons, and flirt with the royalist beauties. And every hour Batavius grew more elated by his social success. His vanity was also continually fed by Captain Lawson's complaints that "no man had a chance if De Vries was present."

Without a doubt Batavius accepted these compliments, and when he called at the Van Vrooms' house in the evenings he related all the favors and attentions he had received during the day to Virginia and Rose. Rose endorsed them to the very edge of mockery. Virginia had begun to look at him with a silent, negative scorn that always reduced his utmost self-complacency to distressing embarrassment.

How did she do it? Very suddenly this new feature of her hatred for him had appeared. At first he denied its power, and went oftener to assure himself that it was only an accident. But no, if he but met her steady, unwinking gaze, though his blood boiled with anger, he became the creature of her will.

Another feature of this condition was that he became painfully conscious of his hands. They seemed immense to him. He was sure those piercing orbs saw on them all the blood which they had shed; and in them, all the treasure which had glutted their fierce clasp. Yet as long as Virginia looked at him he could not move them. He wished to put them in his pockets—behind his back—anywhere—but until she chose to turn away her eyes they petrified him. This strange influence tortured him. He could not even determine whether Virginia was personally aware of her malignant puissance, and yet he recognized fully that she wielded some force he was unable to resist.

He stayed away one night, and Madame worried over his absence. "I told him not to come," said Rose; "he is only in the road of every one. And he is drawing a particular chart for Captain Lawson's ship, and of course the dear King must be attended to first of all."

"My opinion is not that," answered Katrina crossly. "For a bride all men step aside. And there are many things Batavius could do, if he were here. This very morning, Virginia, your father has gone about business Batavius ought to attend to."

"Oh, Madame! This morning! A lover that comes in the morning is detestable," answered Rose. "In the morning we want to keep our curl papers up. I have given Batavius hint after hint about his indelicacies in this respect. What a little beast he is!"

"Such words should not be spoken, Rose," replied Madame. "When he was talking the other night, he looked like a very great, clever man."

"Like a very great, clever fiend, you mean, Madame. They are generally clever in their own wicked parts, and the eyes of Batavius were like furnaces—and his hands were two demons."

To be continued

John the Unafraid

Is the title of a wonderful little book, published anonymously, that has caused discussion and speculation among thinking people all over the country.

Chief Justice Fuller, Secretary MacVeagh, Judge Landis, Governor Deneen, Joseph M. Patterson, Clarence Darrow, William J. Calhoun and Jenkin Lloyd Jones are some of those who have been named as the author. But whoever the author is, his book shows him to be a man who knows life deeply and sympathetically, for

JOHN THE UNAFRAID

is beyond question

The most remarkable and unusual work of recent years

Because it is such a book you should get a copy of it now. Read it and study it, for sooner or later someone is going to ask:

"Who do you think wrote John the Unafraid, and what do you think of the book?"

Wilbur D. Nesbit says that "it preaches what we all need: the philosophy of simple faith; the creed of honest work, and the blessedness of human brother-love."

JOHN THE UNAFRAID

is written in a style which imitates the simplicity and directness of the New Testament. It is the story of the carpenter John—called the "Unafraid"—and is divided into short chapters, each dealing with some of the great problems that to-day are exercising the thoughts of mankind. The little book is beautifully printed, decorated in color, and put up in an attractive box. $1.00 net.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

A. C. McClurg & Co., Publishers, Chicago

The Easiest Shoe for TenderFeet

DAVID CUMMINGS, Pres.

Do you know the comfort of the WORTH Cushion Sole? It bears the same relation to your foot through the day that an easy mattress bears to your body through the night, providing an easy resting place for every bone and muscle. This wonderful sole is to be found ONLY in the famous

Worth Cushion Sole Shoe

If you have never worn a pair, a new and delightful experience awaits you.

Mens, $4 to $6. Womens, $2 to $5

Send for Catalogue and diagram order blank. On receipt of catalogue price, we deliver FREE anywhere in the United States.

Wholesale and Mail Orders.

The CUMMINGS COMPANY FACTORY
Dept. C, Worcester, Mass.

Agents Wanted everywhere. Write for prospectus.

THE CUMMINGS CO. RETAIL STORES:
1225 Broadway . . . . . New York, N. Y.
Hudson Terminal Building, 196 Fulton St., New York.
570 Fulton Street . . . . . Brooklyn, New York
15 South 13th Street . . . . . Philadelphia, Pa.
406 Washington Street . . . . . Boston, Mass.

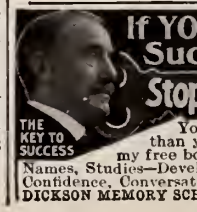
NEW STENCIL OUTFIT 75c

Make home beautiful with art stenciling. Easy, pleasant work (profitable too, if desired). Surprisingly attractive effects from these artistic designs. We show you how. Our outfit contains complete material for successful results. Each article of the highest grade obtainable. It includes 5 CUT stencils as illustrated, each 6x9 on best oil stencil board; 5 tubes of assorted oil colors; 2 stencil brushes; 4 thumb tacks; full instructions and catalog showing hundreds of new designs at reduced prices. All sent in neat box, prepaid on receipt of price, 75 cents.
Perforated Pattern Co., Stencil Dept. 59, New Haven, Conn.

Buy the Original

ZIMMERMANN "AUTOHARP"

"The Nation's Favorite" None genuine without on trade mark "Autoharp." A musical instrument adapted to all classes. At all music stores or direct from us. "Easy to play, Easy to Buy." Send for Free catalog THE PHONO HARP CO., East Boston, Mass.



If YOU Would Be Successful Stop Forgetting

MEMORY the BASIS of All Knowledge

You are no greater intellectually than your memory. Send today for my free book "How to Remember"—Faces, Names, Studies—Develops Will, Concentration, Self-Confidence, Conversation, Public Speaking. Address DICKSON MEMORY SCHOOL, 701 Aud't'm Bldg., Chicago

My Soldier Friend

By ROSE C. WEBB

O frail and old; his hair snow-white;
But in his eyes there gleams a light ne years have never dimmed; a fire nned by excitement—the desire o march once more the oft-marched way, nd to the dead his tribute pay.

o restlessly he sits and sees ne line pass by; the soft May breeze o his dull ears faint snatches brings f martial airs. But present things re all forgotten, for he hears ne far-off music of the years.

He sees again his brave young wife
And feels the glow of strong young life;
He lives his soldier-days once more,
And oh, the joy! when, warfare o'er,
The victory won, he is home at last,
With loved ones waiting his hand to clasp!

The dear eyes close as though to rest;
The weary head droops on his breast;
A smile o'erspreads the peaceful face
And touches it with heavenly grace:
He has heard Heaven's roll-call, loud and clear—
Has heard and answered: "Yes, Lord; here!"

Mont-Lawn's Welcoming Gates

EPARATIONS are now well advanced for the summer's work at ou Children's Home at Mont-Lawn. A reat array of little white cots is al ady on view in the dormitories. U er the direction of the housekeeper, cl ners have been at work in all the bu dings and our Children's Paradise w be as immaculate as ever was "Sotless Town," when it opens next m th. The great lawn has been tr med. Every flowering bush is bursting with Maytime blossoms. Bds are singing as they play among tl branches of the elms. Everywhere, tl e is a feeling of expectancy in the a Mont-Lawn is waiting for the cl dren—for the merry rush of little fe across the grass; for the cheery b ble of young voices, the laughter, tl song, and the frolic, the evening h n and the simple, trustful prayer.

A Little Candidate

Jesus, Saviour, wash away
All the wrong I've done to-day;
Help me every day to be
Good and gentle, just like thee.

t is expected that 3,000 little tenement guests will find shelter and happ ess at Mont-Lawn this summer. ny friends who have aided this b utiful charity in the past are now s ding in their offerings for the comi season's work. Miss A. A. M., N an, Ind., sends a gift "toward the s port of a child at Mont-Lawn in memory of our good friend Dr. Klopsch; also a little handkerchief to be pinned on a little bed." Mr. Israel Matson, Executor, Schodack Landing, N. Y., sends $500 to permanently endow a cot in our Children's Home in the names of Clarine V. B. and Lucy Matson, and $21 to maintain a bed for one year in the name of Peter T. E. Matson. Mr. Israel Matson will hear occasionaly from the little beneficiaries.

Mrs. E. H., York, Pa., send $2 as "an Easter gift" to the Children's Home. W. C. Gutelius, B. C., writes: "Two years ago, I dedicated an apple tree to the Children's Home. Last summer was the first time it bore fruit. I sold the apples a few weeks ago and am now sending you the proceeds" ($2). Mrs. H. B., Norfolk, Conn., sends $1 for the work "in the name of Christ." Very touching is a note from "A Friend," who sends $20, half of which goes to Mont-Lawn for the children's sake, the writer adding: "This money was found among my mother's things after her 'home call.'" The Bloomingdale Reformed Church, New York, sends $39.08, the result of a recent collection. T. W., Marengo, O., sends $30, being his tenth generous annual gift of similar amount. The Golden Rule Club, of Norwich, Conn., sends $15, and Miss Crary, the president, writes: "I hope it will be the means of giving much pleasure to the dear children." Miss W. P., Saginaw, Tex., along with her gift of $5 sends this kindly wish: "We trust it may make some child's life a little brighter." Mrs. J. E. S., Knoxville, Ia., sends $8 "in memory of an old subscriber who has passed to the great beyond." Mrs. W. S. P., Brewster, N. Y., sends a gift of $21. The M. E. Junior League of Robinson, Kan., sends $6, Miss Walters, superintendent, adding in her letter: "Some of the chidren washed dishes, blacked boots, picked up cans, gathered greens, stayed home from a show, ironed," etc., to make up this beautiful gift to the children of the tenements. Mrs. H. E. S., Woodbourne, N. Y., sends $21 "to endow a cot in memory of mother." These are only a few of the gifts now being received. Every gift sent to this journal will be duly acknowledged and passed over to the treasurer of the Children's Home.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 513, and write them for full information.

STANDARD WEEKLY SPECIALS

Real Hand Embroidered Lingerie Waist, 98c

127. Waist of fine Imported Silk-Finished Lingerie Batiste. Yoke Hand Embroidered in beautiful raised pattern and outlined with wide Cluny insertion. Low neck in square effect trimmed with wide "Baby" Irish. Three-quarter sleeves. Cuffs tucked and trimmed with Cluny. Closes in back. Order this Real Hand Embroidered Waist To-day. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Special Price 98c

Made-to-Measure Skirt

881. Smart Tailored skirt either of good Mohair in Black, Blue, Gray or Cream White — or Chiffon Panama in Black, Blue or Brown. A fold of material is introduced at the lower edge of the short foundation gores—turned over and caught together with buttons and finished with simulated button-holes. Give all measures and state cloth and color wanted. Special Price $3.98

Linon Wash Dress

344. Stylish One-Piece Dress of good quality Linon in Light Blue or Tan (Linen Color). Easy to launder and will give good service. Low neck finished with pretty Venice lace edged with Val. Three-quarter sleeves edged with Venice Band. Piping of contrasting color used on belt and front panel of skirt. Gibson plaits run over the shoulders to Belt line in back. Made with well proportioned lines and correctly sized. Sizes 32 to 44 Bust. Special Price $1.29

FREE Have you written for your FREE yearly subscription to the "Standard Style Bulletin"? If not, do so NOW. See all the latest New York Summer Styles. Write to-day before you forget.

STANDARD MAIL ORDER CO.
161 WOOSTER STREET, NEW YORK CITY

French Finished Linene Made-to-Measure Wash Suit

682. Smart Mannish Tub Suit, very attractive and stylish. Made of French Finished Linene, a soft, washable material. Colors: white, gray, brown, light blue, pink, old rose, reseda green, Copenhagen or lavender. Full mannish notch collar and turn back cuffs are overlaid with detachable white linen collar and cuffs elegantly embroidered. Jacket is semi-fitting and made in any length up to 36 inches. Skirt is made full and prettily plaited. Give complete measures and state color wanted and length of jacket. Special Price $3.98

REMEMBER

If any purchase is not ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY---YOUR MONEY IS PROMPTLY REFUNDED.

FRESH AT NIGHT

If One Uses the Right Kind of Food.

If by proper selection of food one can feel strong and fresh at the end of a day's work, it is worth while to know the kind of food that will produce this result.

A school teacher out in Kans. says in this connection:

"I commenced the use of Grape-Nuts food five months ago. At that time my health was so poor that I thought I would have to give up my work altogether. I was rapidly losing in weight, had little appetite, was nervous and sleepless, and experienced, almost constantly, a feeling of exhaustion.

"I tried various remedies without good results; then I determined to give particular attention to my food, and have learned something of the properties of Grape-Nuts for rebuilding the brain and nerves.

"I commenced using Grape-Nuts and have since made a constant and rapid improvement in health, in spite of the fact that all this time I have been engaged in the most strenuous and exacting work.

"I have gained twelve pounds in weight and have a good appetite, my nerves are steady and I sleep sound. I have such strength and reserve force that I feel almost as strong and fresh at the close of a day's work as at the beginning.

"Before using Grape-Nuts I was troubled much with weak eyes but as my vitality increased the eyes became stronger.

"I never heard of food as nutritious and economical as Grape-Nuts."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest

MEMORIALS & MONUMENTS
FOR CEMETERIES SCHOOLS & PARKS
LARGE VARIETY OF DESIGNS FOR EVERY PURPOSE
DELIVERED ANYWHERE · SEND FOR CATALOGS
STATE REQUIREMENTS · AGENTS WANTED
MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.
355-B HOWARD AVE., BRIDGEPORT CONN.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Enough lamp-chimneys break from "accident" to satisfy me, without having them crack and smash every time the light is turned up.

Macbeth lamp-chimneys never break from heat. It takes an "accident" to end their usefulness.

They add to the beauty, comfort and usefulness of the lamp—and they fit.

There is a Macbeth lamp-chimney made for every known burner, and my name is on it.

My book will tell which one to get for your lamp. It is free. Address

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

A Postage Stamp Puts the "RICHMOND" Suction Cleaner In Your Home

THE "RICHMOND" Electric Suction Cleaner enables you now, for the first time, to clean by electricity, without lugging a sixty or eighty pound machine from room to room—up and down stairs. It represents as great an advance over heavy weight vacuum cleaners as these cleaners represented over brooms. For it is the only really portable Suction Cleaner.

Manufactured Exclusively for
THE "RICHMOND" SALES CO., by THE McCRUM-HOWELL CO.
Park Ave. and 41st St., New York City
Five Factories:—Two at Uniontown, Pa.—One at Norwich, Conn.—One at Racine, Wis.—One at Milwaukee, Wis.

Manufacturers of "RICHMOND" Boilers and Radiators, "RICHMOND" Enameled Ware, Bath Tubs, Lavatories; "RICHMOND" Suds-Makers, and "RICHMOND" Stationary Vacuum Cleaning Plants

Anyone who can afford brooms can now afford the best Suction Cleaner made.

All that any Vacuum Cleaner or Suction Cleaner can do, the "RICHMOND" does. And it does, besides, some things which no other machine can do.

You can, for example, use the "RICHMOND" Suction Cleaner with or without the hose. The hose attachment slides off and on with the same ease that your foot slides into an easy slipper

Six Special Cleaning Tools

Slip on the hose, and the ten-pound "RICHMOND" with its six special cleaning tools all furnished without extra cost) cleans hangings, walls, books, bedding, upholstery, clothing, hats, underneath radiators, furniture, etc. It is also supplied with a special attachment for hair drying and pillow renovating etc.

Slip off the hose and you have a floor machine which weighs no more than a common carpet sweeper. The everyday work of rug and carpet cleaning—of cleaning hardwood floors, tile floors, bathrooms, hearths, porches, etc., can be done either with or without hose required to put this ten-pound cleaner in your home. Just send us your name and address and we will have delivered to your door without one penny of expense to you—without obligation of any kind—a guaranteed "RICHMOND" Suction Cleaner. You can prove for yourself in your own home, just what this will do for you. But write to-day and we will include with our reply a handsome illustrated booklet.

A Postage Stamp the Only Cost

The "RICHMOND" Sales Co.
Sole Selling Agents. 160 S Broadway, New York City

Blessing Follows Faith

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

IT is "the fourth watch of the night"—between three and six o'clock in the morning. A boat is storm-tossed in the Sea of Galilee. The twelve men in the boat are rowing desperately, sometimes their boat is lifted so high their oars do not touch the waters, and at other times they are dipped in almost their whole length. The winds roar, the sea hisses. Does no one see them? Is there no one to help them? Far back in the distance, on the lonely mountainside there is one who sees them. But he has no boat by which to reach them. He does not need one, for he has power to tread the waves! He comes down from the mountain top, where he has been praying; he reaches the shore of the sea; the beating waves cause him no fear; he steps out upon them as if they were solid ground. The distance between him and the storm-tossed ship is three miles or more, but rapidly advancing he is soon within speaking distance of those on the ship. He sees that the men are frightened at his appearance, and he hears them say: "It is a ghost!" They are so frightened they do not know their best and dearest friend! But they can not mistake his voice when he calls out to them: "Be of good cheer; it is I, be not afraid." One man on the boat would put him to the test, and he calls out: "If it really be thou, tell me to come to thee, and I can come." "Come!" was the answer. Now we see that man step out of the ship upon the surging sea, and he treads the waves but only a few steps, and he begins to sink in the water; a hand grasps him and raises him to his feet, and both the man and his deliverer get into the boat. The storm becomes a calm, and there is a chorus of voices exclaiming: "Of a truth, thou art the Son of God." Yes, Jesus had come across the waves to help them and save them.

The Plain of Gennesaret

Peter felt the most gratitude because he had been nearer death than any of them as he sank in the water, and he had been nearer the Lord Jesus than any of them, even walking upon the sea with him.

Jesus finished his journey across the sea in the boat with his disciples, and they were soon on the plain of Gennesaret. Their coming had not been announced, but they had been seen on their journey thither. Crowds of people gathered, not so much to give them welcome as to claim the wonderful help of Jesus for their sick and lame and blind. Their number was so great, Jesus could not come into personal contact with each and every one, so he permitted that whosoever should touch his garments might be made whole. Then it was that the plain of Gennesaret became vocal with the songs of praise of those who had been healed. The Pharisees were there to find fault with Jesus for healing on the Sabbath day, but Jesus knew far better than they how to keep the Sabbath day holy.

Two practical suggestions come to us from this incident by which to take consolation and guidance for our own lives:

1. The Lord Christ knows our burdens.

2. He will help us though our faith be small.

Some one has said that affliction is God's angel, who goes ever back and forth,

Sweeping from heaven the cobwebs spun on earth.

Then plainly, we are not to look upon calamity that may come upon us as an indication of God's displeasure with us. Oftener than otherwise the troubles we experience are the result

* International Sunday School Lesson for June 5, 1910. Jesus Walks on the Sea. Matt. 14: 22-36. GOLDEN TEXT: "Then they that were in the boat came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God." Matt. 14: 33.

Continued on next page

The Always-on-Duty Telephone

Your Bell Telephone is on duty 1440 minutes every day. So is the telephone exchange; so are the toll lines which radiate through the neighboring communities; so are the long distance lines which connect you with far-away cities and other radiating systems.

The whole Bell System is on duty 1440 minutes a day—and if any of these minutes are not used, their earning power is irrevocably lost.

Like the Police Force or the Fire Department, the telephone is not always working—but it is always on duty and always costing money. But you would not be satisfied with the fire department if your burning house had to take its turn; nor with the police force if you had to wait in line to receive protection

You want service at once. That is exactly what the Bell System endeavors to give you—immediate attention, instantaneous service. It strives to be always ready to receive your call at any point, and connect you with any other point—without postponement or delay.

It would be much cheaper if telephone customers would be content to stand in line, or if their communications could be piled up to be sent during slack hours; or if the demand was so distributed as to keep the whole system comfortably busy 1440 consecutive minutes a day.

But the public needs immediate and universal service and the Bell System meets the public's requirements.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY
AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

Pozzoni's Complexion POWDER

The Greatest of all Beautifiers

A Luxurious toilette necessity—cooling, refreshing and assuring a clear, refined, delicate, summer complexion. It is prepared from purest materials—beautifying without injuring the skin. It is the only complexion powder that clings—the only one put up in a Wooden Box—retaining all its delicate perfume and medication until entirely used up. Five colors, Flesh, White, Brunette, Cream and Special Pink.

50c—Everywhere—50c

Hunyadi János

Natural Laxative Water

Quickly Relieves:
Biliousness,
Sick Headache,
Stomach Disorders,
and CONSTIPATIO
AT ALL DRUGGISTS

Tricycles for Cripples and Chairs for Invalids

Complete catalog sent on request. Write for it today.
WORTHINGTON CO., 301 Cedar St., Elyria, Ohio.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

Instantly relieve Sore Throat, Hoarseness and Coughs. Unexcelled for clearing the voice. Absolutely free from opiates or anything harmful. Price, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per box. Sample sent on request.

JOHN I. BROWN & SON, Boston, Mass.

ORIENTAL POLISH
FOR SILVER STILBOMA

A Prepared Chamois Skin without grit or acid to make silver look like new. It's a wonder—wears for ye Price 50c. Half Size, 25c. Sample 4c. Agents Wan THE STILBOMA MFG. CO., Cleveland,

Sent on Approval. Send No Money. WE WILL TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. Ha Send a lock of your hair, and we wi 22 inch short stem fine human hair s match. If you find it a big bargain, pay in ten days, or sell 3 and GET YOUR FREE. Extra shades a little more. postage. Free beauty book showing latest hair dressing—also high grade switches, dours, wigs, puffs, etc. ANNA A Dept. 84 19 Quincy St. Chicago of ur own misdeeds, or the wrong doin of others. God has nothing to do wi it, only to help us. At other times, G permits afflictions to lay hold on us as he did in the case of Job, that a nc er life may be developed in us. Je s might have held back the storm wi h so discomfited his apostles, but he t it rage that they might thereby le n a lesson of trust.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

The Lesson of Trust

nd God teaches lessons of trust to ot r people in other ways. Charles N ton was an old man who kept a ch l's golden curl among his chief tr sures. And strange to say, it was hi own curl. When he was a little bo four years old he had gone with hi father to the woods to see him cut lo , for his father was a forester. "Tud, thud, thud," went the big ax, wle Charlie stood by watching. A fe splinters fell at the child's feet. H stooped to pick them up, and bendin forward just as the ax was coming do in all its force, the little curly he lay close to the middle of the log! To top the ax was impossible. Charlie sc amed; the father stood aghast, for he really believed that he had killed his chl. Charlie lay on the ground unhu , but just beside him was one of hi golden curls severed, and there we a few tiny hairs on the edge of th ax. The old man who showed the cu and told the story was seventy-fo years old, and he said: "Until she di , my beloved mother treasured this cu , and ever since I have treasured it myself, because it constantly remils me how I was so marvelously pr erved by my heavenly Father, wise goodness and mercy have follo d me and will continue to follow me all the days of my life."

ut some of us have kinks in our ch acters that make it hard for us to lea lessons of trust.

hen an Indian is making arrows, if here happens to be a kink in the m erial, he fastens one end to a tree, an attaching a very heavy weight to th other end, he leaves his arrow ha ing. After a while he finds that th weight has served to take the kinks ou of the arrow and so to straighten it. Affliction will take the kinks out of ur characters.

et us not forget that the apostles we so blinded by their fears that th did not know Jesus when he came to em; even more, they were afraid of m. They thought he was a ghost. If here is anything a man fears it is a ost! And yet the fear is unwarra able, because ghosts have never ye been known to materialize. How ghtlike are our fears! An old Sc ch shepherd lay dying, and he was ve much afraid of death. The minist repeated the strongest of God's pr ises. "I ken a', but somehow th dinna gie me comfort." Then the mi ster took up the well-worn Bible, wh h lay on the bed of the shepherd, an said: "You remember the twenty-th l psalm?" "Remember it?" he said ve mently, "I kenned it long before ye were born. Ye need na read it; I've co ed it a thousand times on the hillsi e."

But there is one verse which you ha not taken in," replied the minist . Then slowly the minister re-pe ed the verse: "Though I walk th ugh the valley of the shadow of de h, I will fear no evil, for thou art wi me." And then he said: "You ha been a shepherd all your life, and yo have watched the heavy shadows pa over the valleys and over the hills, hi g for a little while all the light of th sun. Did those shadows ever fr ten you?"

"righten me!" he said quickly; "Na, na Davie Donaldson has Covenanters' blo in his veins; neither shadow nor su tance could weel frighten him."

But did those shadows ever make you believe that you would not see the sun again, and that it was gone forever?"

"Na, na, I would not be sic a simpleton as that."

"Nevertheless that is just what you are doing now." The old shepherd looked at the minister with questioning eyes. "Yes," said the minister, "the shadow of death is over you, and it hides for a little the Sun of Righteousness, which shines all the same behind it; but it's only a shadow. Remember that is what the psalmist calls it—a shadow that will pass; and, when it has passed, you will see the everlasting hills in their unclouded glory." The old shepherd covered his face with his trembling hands, and then letting them fall on the coverlet, he said, as if musing to himself: "Ansel, Ansel; I ha' conned that verse a thousand times among the heather, and I never understood it so afore; afraid of a shadow, afraid of a shadow!" And then he looked brightly up into the face of the minister and said: "Ay, ay, I see it a' now; death is only a shadow, with Christ behind it, a shadow that will pass. Na, na, I'm afraid nae mair."

How to Meet Trouble

But there will be many things to fear before death comes. The apostles in the storm were not to die, but they were surrounded by perils. Here is a homely illustration that will show us how to meet daily or frequent troubles. John Wesley was once walking with a man who related his troubles to him, saying he did not know what he should do. They were at that moment passing a stone wall to a meadow over which a cow was looking. "Do you know," asked Mr. Wesley, "why the cow looks over that wall?" "No," replied the man. "I will tell you; because she can not look through it; and that is what you must do with your troubles—look over them and above them."

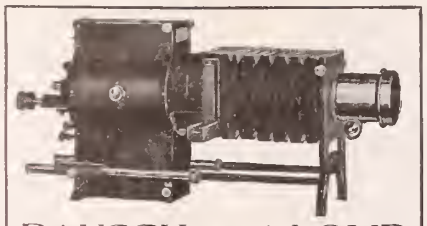
But if the fence should seem too high, what then? Why, let us look through the chinks!

> Grief is a tattered tent
> Wherethrough God's light doth shine;
> Who glances up at every rent
> Shall catch a ray divine.

Peter was the first one of the apostles to let his fears go and be willing to trust Jesus. Peter was certainly very brave to step out upon the rolling sea, and take even a few steps toward Jesus. But how much braver he would have been if he had taken a few more steps and met Jesus. Jesus did not let him sink because he had not enough faith to walk beside him, but he lovingly held him up until they were both together in the boat. If Jesus had not been all-loving, he would have let Peter drown as a result of his lack of faith. "O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?" There was no sting in these words of Jesus, but only a loving rebuke, in which there was an assurance of ever present helpfulness on his part.

How happily Peter might have walked all the way beside Jesus, treading the storm-tossed waves, if his faith had only been greater! We never read anywhere in the Bible that Jesus ever refused to do anything for anybody because he did not have just enough faith, but we do read that many times he commended the faith of them who came to him as being "great." And once he spoke wonderful things about faith so small that it might be compared with the smallest of all seeds. "If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, nothing shall be impossible to you." Nothing pays so large a dividend as "a little faith." But when faith is great how rich is the blessing!

Any Church wishing to use the individual Communion Service, the sanitary method of observing the Lord's Supper, can secure a trial service from the Thomas Communion Service Co., Lima, Ohio. See their advertisement on page 507.



BAUSCH and LOMB

Balopticon

MODEL C

LIGHT, COMPACT, PORTABLE

Complete for Lantern slide projection . . . $35.00

Opaque Projector showing objects in natural form and color can be added at any time.

FOR SALE BY DEALERS

Descriptive Catalog D-g on request.

Our name on a Photographic Lens, Microscope, Field Glass, Laboratory Apparatus, Engineering or any other Scientific Instrument is our Guarantee.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

NEW YORK REAL ESTATE

IS THE ONE INVESTMENT CERTAIN TO INCREASE IN VALUE

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Our STOCK represents its actual ownership, yields a regular income, and enables the holder to obtain a share of that increase.

Our BONDS (for any amount) are absolutely secured by it; yield 6% a year (payable semi-annually), and are redeemable in gold.

Honest, Safe, Profitable Investments

Write to-day for free booklet 14, showing past results and present condition.

New York Realty Owners

489 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

Nerve Health is Life

The Rt. Rev. The Bishop of Bath and Wells:

The Palace, Wells, Somerset

"You may like to hear that I am informed by my private secretary that a member of his family has derived very remarkable benefit from using Sanatogen."

The Rt. Rev. The Bishop of Norwich:

The Palace, Norwich.

"Mrs. Sheepshanks is taking Sanatogen regularly and deriving great benefit from it."

Very Rev. William Theodotus Capers:

Dean — Christ Church Cathedral, Lexington, Ky., says:

"I feel constrained to write you and say that Sanatogen has done everything for my wife. I have found this preparation restores a normal appetite and gives vitality to the nervous system."

Under normal conditions, Nature keeps body and mind in a state of perpetual health. But we of to-day—living in crowded cities, working in ill-ventilated offices, walking in dusty streets amid ear-splitting noises—can we truly say we live under normal conditions?

No wonder our organs rebel at performing usual tasks under these unusual conditions. Nature cannot build fast enough to re-supply the torn-down tissues and worn-out nerves. Her danger signals are sleeplessness, weariness, indigestion, extreme fatigue—all calls for help. That's the time you need

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

A scientific combination of Albumen and Sodium Glycero Phosphate—two of the best known brain and body builders. It comes to you in the form of a fine white powder, easily dissolved in your daily beverage—coffee, milk, chocolate, etc. Sanatogen is endorsed and prescribed by thousands of physicians in every civilized country as well as by noted authors, clergymen, actors, statesmen, etc.

Send the Coupon for Dr. Saleeby's Book

The writings of this famous physician-author are always interesting, and in this book he has put forth some new ideas about your every-day life that will surprise you.

Write for it to-day.

Two level teaspoonfuls three times a day means increased vigor and renewed vitality for either man or woman.

THE BAUER CHEMICAL COMPANY

Everett Building, 4th Ave., New York

Name.....

Address.....

Druggist.....

Address.....

A 5% Investment

IN THE BUSINESS CENTER OF CHICAGO

Consisting of $500 and $1,000 bonds secured by First Mortgage upon a new seventeen-story steel fire-proof office building now being constructed in the center of the city of Chicago. The property is conservatively valued by us at almost twice the issue.

The bonds are issued under our plan of serial payments, maturing in from two to eleven years so that the margin of security will rapidly increase.

The net income from the property will be over three and a half times the maximum annual interest charge on these bonds.

The Mortgage provides that all leases be assigned to the Trustee and the net income paid to Peabody, Houghteling & Co. for the additional protection of the bondholders.

The bonds are the personal obligation of a well-known, responsible Chicago business man owning considerable income-producing real estate in the center of the city.

Full information on request for our Circular No. 695 P.

Peabody, Houghteling & Co.

(Established 1865) 181 La Salle Street, CHICAGO

Theodore Roosevelt's

Own Account of His African Trip Now appearing in

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

is the most popular magazine contribution for years and of great interest to a LARGE NUMBER OF NEW READERS. 100,000 subscription orders already placed —Here is a Great Opportunity for Subscription Agents. Liberal cash commissions and many extra prizes are offered those who can devote even a little time to soliciting subscriptions. REPRESENTATIVES WANTED IN EVERY TOWN OF AMERICA.

For particulars, address at once Desk 3,
Scribner's Magazine, 155 Fifth Ave., N.Y.City.

ELECTRO-SILICON

the famous Silver Polish is used by innumerable housekeepers everywhere for Cleaning and Polishing SILVERWARE, other fine metals and cut glass. It preserves as well as beautifies—with least labor and expense.

Send address for FREE SAMPLE

Full Sized Box, post-paid, 15 cts. in stamps.
The Electro Silicon Co., 30 Cliff St., New York.
Sold by Grocers and Druggists Everywhere.

The Franklin Society

¶ If you are looking for safe, convenient, profitable investment, large or small, acquaint yourself with the methods of the Franklin Society. ¶ Subject to the strict supervision of the State Banking Department: ¶ Lends only on first mortgages in New York City and immediate vicinity: ¶ Has handled millions without ever losing a cent of anybody's money: ¶ Has maintained consistently a dividend rate of one per cent more than ordinary savings banks offer.

¶ Begin now. Send $1 or more and get a mailing size Pass Book, or write for Booklet U.

THE FRANKLIN SOCIETY

FOR HOME BUILDING AND SAVINGS. FOUNDED 1888
S. E. Cor. Beekman St., at Park Row, New York

For Savings

Learn How to Ride Horseback

I guarantee to teach any man, woman or child to become an expert rider by my direct, simple correspondence instruction. Learn to ride correctly as well as train horses for the saddle; teach your horse fancy gaits and tricks. Many secrets never before disclosed. Twenty years' experience. Hundreds of successful students.

Write today for handsome prospectus, "Riding and Training the Saddle Horse." Free on request.

Prof. Jesse Beery, 421 Academy St., Pleasant Hill, Ohio

5%

Do You Want Your Savings to earn the highest possible rate of interest—

To be absolutely safe—
To be withdrawable on demand at any time?
These are some of the advantages this Company offers you.
This Company has been in business for over 14 years.
It is officered and managed by some of the most prominent business men in Baltimore.
It is absolutely sound and conservative.
Money invested with this Company earns 5% interest, and may be withdrawn at any time without loss of interest earned.

Write Today for the Booklet

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

A BOOK ABOUT Mortgages and Trust Bonds

Yielding 5 to 5½% Net

SENT FREE

Write to-day for our book describing these Guaranteed First Mortgage Trust Bonds and our plan whereby payments of $10 to $100 and upwards at your convenience secures at once ownership and income

BONDS Secured by First Mortgages on New York and Suburban Real Estate

UNDER SUPERVISION OF NEW YORK BANKING DEPT.

NEW YORK MORTGAGE CO.

DEPT. D 1475 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

WITH an experienced organization covering the bond markets of the country and the best of financial, legal, accounting and engineering connections, N. W. Halsey & Company are enabled to offer the investing public a service the keynote of which is efficiency.

Write for latest bond circular—No. B-48.

N. W. Halsey & Co.

Bankers: Dealers in Government, Municipal, Railroad and Public Utility Bonds

New York: 49 Wall St. | Philadelphia: 1429 Chestnut St. | Chicago: 152 Monroe St. | San Francisco: 424 California St.

6% NET

For 35 years we have been paying our customers the highest returns consistent with conservative methods. First mortgage loans of $200 and up which we can recommend after the most thorough personal investigation. Please ask for Loan List No. 707 $25 Certificates of Deposit also for saving investors.

PERKINS & CO. Lawrence, Kans

MORTGAGES

WE have received a communication from one of our subscribers who asks our opinion concerning a certain mortgage. In the course of her letter she stated that she would be glad to send us the papers, but that they were in the hands of her lawyer and she did not like to ask him for them.

In such matters it is better to deal directly with some long established banking house of undeniable integrity, which will supply the investor with a desirable mortgage, the principal and interest of which are guaranteed. There are many such concerns located in large cities, which make it a practice of carrying what might be called a line of mortgages on all sort of property and of various denominations.

Such concerns have been called Financial Department Stores. The investor may buy a bond or a mortgage of them exactly as he would some other article of merchandise in a large store, selecting the kind of investment which is best suited to his pocketbook, whether it be a mortgage upon a sky-scraper or a mortgage on a small house in a residential district, resting easy with the assurance that his purchase will be all that is claimed for it by the banker and at all events being reassured that should the property prove less profitable than it is stated to be by the banker, the latter will make good the loss.

This is an assurance which cannot be given by the private agent unless he is personally a man of unlimited means and cares to put his guarantee in black and white, because the large concern has means and resources for investigating properties which are not at the command of the individual agent. Such concerns as those above mentioned become the first resource of the man who is desirous of borrowing money on property. All sorts and conditions of property owners seek temporary financial relief in their offices and they are enabled consequently to offer many kinds of securities to the prospective investor.

In order to guarantee these investments it is necessary to employ a large force of assistants whose special business it is to look into the value of property, examine titles, make appraisals, estimate future possibilities, and conduct the thousand and one little investigations which are meant to safeguard the interest of the investor. It is very seldom that an investment offered by one of these companies turns out badly. The examination is too rigid and so many chances are offered them that they can afford to consider only those risks which seem to them to be giltedged.

For guaranteeing to pay the investor any loss which he may sustain, such concerns exact a special commission. This is usually part of the interest that is paid during the life of the mortgage. For instance, a mortgage that would ordinarily yield the investor 5 per cent. will, if obtained from one of these companies, pay him but 4½ per cent., the difference being exacted for the company's services in guaranteeing the investment.

This charge is made only for guaranteed mortgages. For unguaranteed mortgages, the one-half per cent. would not be exacted, the company taking its pay from the person whose property had been mortgaged. Where the standing of the company is unquestioned, an investor might well take the risk of buying an unguaranteed mortgage because the investigation of the company, whether for a guaranteed or an unguaranteed mortgage, would be the same in either case, the advantage of the guarantee being merely in the event of some unforeseen disaster which would deteriorate the value of the property.

A tremendous business is carried on by some of these companies, mortgages to the extent of one-half million dollars having been disposed of in the course of a single week. Many of these are of very small denominations.

HOW TO LOWER THE MEAT BILL

Uncle Sam Comes to Our Relief W Suggestions For Meeting the Food Problem—Issues a Book of Recipes For Cheap Dishes.

Uncle Sam has come to the relief of th who are trying to cut down the cost of livi Many thousands of persons who claim tha certain amount of meat is a wholesome a normal part of the diet, are unable to down their meat bills because of a lack knowledge as to how cheaper cuts of me can be made appetizing and palatable.

With a view to providing the housekeep of the country with practical suggestio along this line, the Department of Agricult at Washington has prepared a manual economy in meat cooking that contains mu valuable information which will be issu free.

As a matter of fact, however, Uncle Sa recipe book, in order to be of greatest pr tical value, should also contain a manual healthful and wholesome substitute for me If such a manual were issued, Shredd Wheat Biscuit would no doubt occupy fi attention in it, not only because it suppl more real tissue-building material than be steak or roast beef, but because of the gr variety of wholesome and appetizing dish that may be made with it. Shredded Wh is the one whole wheat food which conta all the body-building nutriment of the wh wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. is the whole wheat thoroughly cleaned, th steam-cooked, then drawn out into lig porous shreds, then formed in biscuits a baked in hot ovens. In this way all tissue-building material of the whole wh is retained while the crispness of the shre induces thorough mastication, which is t first process in digestion.

Being made in biscuit form, Shredd Wheat makes many delicious combinatio with berries or other fresh or preserved fru which may be quickly prepared for any me Two of these biscuits, eaten for breakf with hot milk and a little cream, will supp all the strength needed for a half day's wo or play. They cost much less than meat eggs and are much more wholesome a nutritious.

"SAVE-THE-HORSE" SPAVIN CURE.

REG. TRADE MARK

The most perfect and superior remedy or method known, greater power to penetrate, absorb, heal and cure than anyt ever discovered in veterinary medical science or practice. Bes being the most humane. "Save-The-Horse" is the most unfa of all known methods. It is effective without fevering up the making a blister, or leaving a particle of after effect. We g signed guarantee, which is a contract to protect purchaser.

Portersville, Cal., Feb. 15, 191

Troy Chemical Co., Binghamton, N.Y.

From the number of testimonials I have read of your g medicine, "Save-The-Horse," I didn't think it worth while me to give you one, but I have been using it and am so pleased with the results that I couldn't help from writing myself. I have cured one bone spavin, one fistula, blind spli one bunch on cow's udder, and think I have cured the swee on a young draught horse, but have got another bottle to m sure. Now this is four different animals. I have had tw years' experience with stock in various ways, but have n found the equal of "Save-The-Horse" liniment. I can recomm it with great pleasure. Very truly, FRANK HAYE

$5.00 a bottle, with legal written guarantee or cont Send for copy, booklet and letters from busi men and trainers on every kind of case. Permane cures Spavin, Thoroughpin, Ringbone (except Curb, Splint, Capped Hock, Windpuff, Shoe Boil, Inj Tendons and all lameness. No scar or loss of hair. Horse w as usual. Dealers or Express Paid.

Troy Chemical Co., 39 Commercial Ave., Binghamton, N

$15.95 AND UPWARD AMERICAN SEPARATOR

THIS OFFER IS NO CATCH.

It is a solid proposition to send, on trial, fully guaranteed, a new, well made, easy running separator for $15.95. Skims hot or cold milk; making heavy or light cream. Designed, especially for small dairies, hotels and private families, different from this picture which illustrates our large capacity machines. The bowl is a sanitary marvel, easily cleaned. Gears thoroughly protected. Western Orders filled from Western points. Whether your dairy is large or small write us and obtain our handsome free catalog. Address:

AMERICAN SEPARATOR CO. Box 1184 BAINBRIDGE, N

IF YOU STAMMER

I will send you my 84-page book "Advice to Stammerers" Free. It explains how I quickly and permanently cured myself. Profit by my experience and write for free book and advice.

BENJ. N. BOGUE

1506 NORTH ILLINOIS STREET, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

LIFEBUOY SOAP

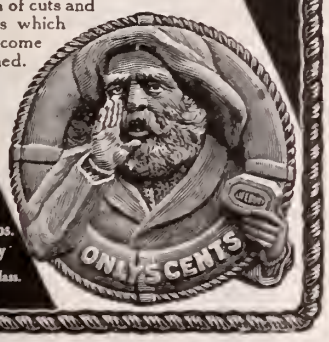
Has "That Clean Smell" which distinguishes it from ordinary soaps. The odor of LIFEBUOY associates itself with utter clean-ness and wholesomeness.

5c At Your Grocers

For Toilet Bath and Shampoo

Lifebuoy is the most satisfactory of all soaps. Cleans and disinfects at the same time. Prevents the infection of cuts and scratches which may become poisoned.



Made by Lever Bros. Company Cambridge, Mass.

Be Well

Without Drugs

I have helped over 46,000 women. I can help you to make every vital organ do efficient work, thus building a strong vitality which throws off naturally all forms of chronic ailments such as constipation, weak nerves, rheumatism, sleeplessness, torpid liver, indigestion. This is done by following a few common-sense directions, according to your need, each day, in your own home. In delicate cases, I co-operate with the physician. One pupil writes: "Just think of it! To be relieved from constipation. Entirely free, after having it for 30 years; I feel so much lighter and stronger."

Write me, telling me your faults of health and figure, and I will gladly tell you if I can help you. For 10 cents, I will send you my instructive booklet telling how to stand and walk correctly.

SUSANNA COCROFT, Dept. 18-F, 246 Michigan Blvd. Chicago

Miss Cocroft's methods and work have been thoroughly endorsed by representatives of this magazine.

5% 17 YEARS

If your savings have been earning less than 5% let us show you how we are able to pay this rate on deposits entrusted to our care. Established 17 years during which time we have never paid less than 5% while growing stronger each year. Your funds are safeguarded by the best of securities — selected mortgages on New York and Suburban Real Estate.

UNDER SUPERVISION OF NEW YORK BANKING DEPT.
ASSETS OVER $2,000,000

Your funds may be deposited or withdrawn on any date. Earnings credited for full time.

Write for booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings and Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d St. and B'way, New York

KOSMEO CREAM

creates a sun-and wind-proof complexion. Price 50c at all dealers or by mail. Sample of Kosmeo Cream, Kosmeo Face Powder and 64-page book on the complexion and hair sent free. Address

Mrs. Gervaise Graham,
1499 Michigan Ave., Chicago.

HYMNS ALLOWED NEW and OLD

BY I. ALLAN SANKEY, son of IRA D. SANKEY

OVER 1000 CHURCHES USING IT

368 Pages, 100 New Songs, Responsive Readings

$35. per 100, not prepaid. 35c. per copy by mail

Returnable samples mailed to "earnest inquirers"

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago

$1.50 FOR YOU And a Camera FREE

Sell 30 pkgs. perfume, keep $1.50, send us $1.50. We trust you. Camera given for promptness. Send at once for perfume, we send it free. A. B. WADE, Department 31, Jennings, La.

PATENTS that PROTECT

Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps.
E. G. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D.C., Dept. 36, Est. 1869

The Children's Pulpit

Continued from page 501

can break it in two. The "re" is a Latin word meaning "again," and the second part is another Latin word that means "to answer." Responsibility is therefore something for which you must some day answer. God will ask you what you have done for your country. Will you be able to say: "I have done my best?" This responsibility you cannot put off. It is a part of you that cannot be taken from all other parts of you. A story will help you to remember this fact. A lawyer was defending a man who was accused of house breaking. He said: "Your honor, I submit that my client did not break into the house at all. He found the parlor window open, and merely inserted his right arm and removed a few trifling articles. Now, my client's arm is not himself, and I fail to see how you can punish the whole individual for an offense for which his right arm alone is responsible."

"That argument," said the Judge, "is very well put. Following it logically, I sentence the defendant's arm to one year's imprisonment. He can accompany it or not, as he chooses."

The defendant smiled, and with his lawyer's assistance, unscrewed his cork arm, and leaving it in the dock, walked out.

You must put your entire life, body, mind and soul into your responsibility. No one part of you can be held responsible. Your fathers fought the battles; their children must heal the wounds and love out the scars. As every school has its colors so the Juniors should have their colors for Memorial Day. The "CHILDREN'S PULPIT" suggests that they adopt blue and gray for their colors. Blue will stand for true, and gray for to-day; true to the responsibilities of each and every Memorial Day.

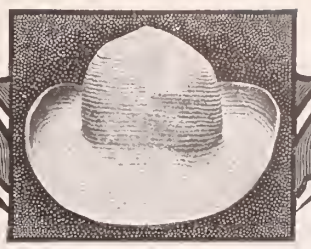
Our Guarantee

DURING the past three weeks several subscribers have made demands upon us to make good losses which they claim they had sustained through writing to some of our advertisers. In all of these cases the dissatisfaction was caused by the delay of the advertiser in shipping goods which had been ordered. We wrote to the subscribers and assured them that our advertisers were reliable, but that they were behind with orders; that doubtless the goods would be delivered or the money would be returned to them. Nevertheless, several of our subscribers insisted that we make good the amount. We did so, sending our check to the subscriber in each case and then informing the advertiser of the action which we had taken. The first check which we sent to a subscriber in Ohio was returned in two days, with the statement that the delayed goods had arrived the same day that the check was received. The second check came back with the statement from the subscriber that he did not feel after all that THE CHRISTIAN HERALD should be held responsible and he desired to return the money. His goods were also received by him. The third and fourth checks likewise were returned and for the same reason as that given by the Ohio subscriber; namely, that the goods had arrived in the meantime.

We take some pride in mentioning this fact, not only because it proves that our advertisers are reliable, but shows that our subscribers have faith in our efforts to make our advertising columns dependable.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement.

$1.00 $1.00



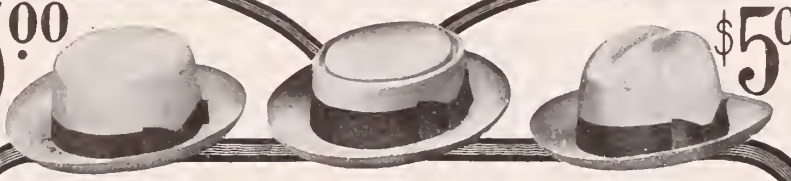
Genuine Hand-Woven Panama Hats

Rare Bargain in Genuine Panamas

Panama Hats more popular than ever—all the rage this Summer. By importing large quantities we can sell direct to user for this surprisingly low price. These hats are warranted genuine all hand-woven; unblocked, and can be worn in that condition by men, women and children. Easily blocked in any shape or style. Just as serviceable as the $10.00 kind; the difference only in fineness of weave. Assorted sizes. Weight only 2 oz. Sent prepaid on receipt of $1.00. Order today.

Satisfaction guaranteed.
Mailed promptly.

$5.00 $5.00



Square Crown Telescope Alpine

Blocked and Trimmed
Finely Woven
Genuine Panama Hats

By importing them by the thousands direct from the native Indian weavers in South America and selling direct to the user, eliminating all the middlemen's profits, we are able to make this Rare Offer of $5.00. They would sell for $10.00 in most hat stores. Three styles as shown above.

These hats are hand-blocked and trimmed with black silk outside band and leather sweat band. All sizes. Sent by express, charges prepaid, on receipt of $5.00. State size and style desired. Prompt shipments. Money refunded if dissatisfied.

Remember, we are importers and not retailers.
Send your order today and be prepared for Summer.

Panama Hat Co., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York City

Crash!!—another wax record gone to smash!

If you own a Phonograph or Graphophone (Edison or Columbia) never buy another wax record for it. Get one Indestructible Record from your dealer.

Or let us mail one to you; — 35 cents (for the 2-minute) or 50 cents (for the 4-minute), postage free, and a catalog with it. Give it the hardest possible test. Lend it to the youngsters. Toss it on the table. Drop it on the floor. Kick it across the room. Leave it in the sun. Then play it and hear a finer, clearer, purer, stronger reproduction—better music in every way—than your machine ever gave out before. Play it every day for ten years and you will still have it, good as new. Almost too good to be true? Try it! Prove it! Send for one!

By Mail

Postage free if your dealer cannot supply you.

SEND FOR FREE CATALOG

New Sacred Selections
JUST RECORDED

The list of Indestructible records comprises every class of good music, including a splendid series of sacred selections.

These three are just out:

1340.—Over the Mountain of Sorrow. (Baritone Solo by Frederick Wheeler) — 2 Minute, 35 cents

1324.—It Is Well With My Soul. (Mixed Quartette) — 2 Minute, 35 cents

1329.—Let the Lower Lights Be Burning. (Tenor and Baritone Duet by Anthony and Harrison) — 4 Minute, 50 cents

Send for big 40-page catalog listing all Columbia Indestructible Records—Free

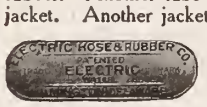
Columbia Phonograph Co.
Dept. U. TRIBUNE BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY

ELECTRIC GARDEN HOSE

Will not kink, crack, split or burst.

Before it leaves the factory, every foot of Electric Hose is tested by hydraulic pressure twelve to fifteen times greater than hydrant pressure.

To make Electric Hose, a jacket of seine twine is braided over a tube of pure rubber. Another tube is "pulled" over the jacket. Another jacket is braided over the second tube, and so on. The final outer tube of rubber is heavily corrugated. All the alternating tubes and jackets are vulcanized by tremendous pressure into a unified fabric of extraordinary strength.



"Electric" costs but little more than ordinary hose. It lasts three times as long.

Cyclopedia FREE!

Send for our "Garden and Lawn Cyclopedia"—a booklet of great value to every home owner. Full of information in handy form. Address Department N.

ELECTRIC HOSE & RUBBER CO.
Wilmington, Del.

Stork Pants

TRADE WATER PROOF MARK
FOR BABY

Button over regular diaper. No pins required. Keep baby's dresses dry and sweet. Adjustable, cannot slip down. Easily washed, will not harden or crack. Aseptic and hygienic, will not irritate the most delicate skin. Made from Stork Sheeting. Contain no rubber. Price 50 cents.

CAUTION: Our registered trade-mark appears on inside of the waistband of every pair of Stork Pants. Look for it! If your dealer does not carry Stork Goods, we will send them postpaid on receipt of price

FREE: For dealer's name, a Baby Sponge Bag made of Stork Sheeting. Also booklet.

THE STORK CO., Dept. 53 H, BOSTON, MASS.
Also Makers of Stork Absorbent Diapers, etc.

Sweetest Music in the World

The sweetest toned self-playing instrument in the world. Not a phonograph. Sent anywhere on 10 days Free Trial MIRA MUSIC BOX Affords an endless variety of music, popular hits, the old-time melodies and hymns. Write for free trial offer and catalog.

JACOT MUSIC BOX CO.
24 W. 35th St., New York.

AGENTS MAKE BIG MONEY

We have a from-factory-to-consumer proposition for women and men agents that is high-class—interesting—easy to sell and extremely profitable. Many of our agents are making $300.00 per year, and only a little of their time required. We supply you with goods on consignment and full information how to make sales. We co-operate with you from start to finish. This proposition is not sold through dealers. You can undersell the dealer with better goods than the dealer handles, and make good money.

Write to-day for full information and territory.

We are allotting territories right now, so kindly write to-day before we give some one else your territory.
Address Box 28, care of CHRISTIAN HERALD

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.
Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

OLIVET CAMP MEETING, June 2–12 inclusive, at College Grounds. Illinois Holiness University, Georgetown, Illinois

Friendship with God*

TO have noble and loving friends, to be able to serve them, and to receive loving service from them; this is perhaps the crown of human life.

And when to the joy of earthly friendship is added that of intimate fellowship with the highest ideals of wisdom, love and beauty that the mind can conceive, life is full to the brim of pure delight.

Trials and sorrows will come, but nothing matters so long as earthly friends are true, and so long as one can go with his burden to the greatest Friend of all.

"The problem of friendship," says President King, "is the problem of life itself." It is not a side-issue. It is the main affair. "To be a true friend in every relation seems to be the sum of all."

"The conviction of the love of God," he continues, "of at least possible friendship with him, is absolutely fundamental to life. It is literally our primal hope."

The basis of such a friendship, we are told, must be fourfold: "Integrity, breadth and depth of personality; some deep community of interest; mutual self-revelation and answering trust; and mutual self-giving."

Emerson says that the office of a friend is "to make us do what we can." We have all observed the difference in our moods when with different people.

Some personalities, instead of exhilarating and elevating us, seem to depress and chill us.

In the presence of a true friend, who wishes us well and rejoices in our every prosperity, we expand and expand and quicken. Truly he helps us to "do what we can."

It seems sometimes to be forgotten that our best and most loving friends should be those of our own households. There is a bitter irony in the well-worn joke about the woman who mourned inordinately for the death of her husband, explaining that "he was more like a friend than a husband."

To see sisters and brothers, fathers and children, husbands and wives, finding constant fault with each other—perhaps not speaking to each other for days or weeks—even traducing each other's characters to outsiders—this is a most painful sight. With the proverb "Charity should begin at home," should be yoked its twin sister, which is really but the same thing in different language, "Friendship should begin at home."

One of the most beautiful descriptions of the effect of friendship upon the human heart is given by Matthew Arnold:

Only—but this is rare—
When a beloved hand is laid in ours,
When, jaded with the rush and glare
Of the interminable hours,
Our eyes can in another's eyes read clear;
When our world-deafened ear
Is by the tones of a loved voice caressed—
A bolt is shot back somewhere in our breast,
And a lost pulse of feeling stirs again.
The eye sinks inward and the heart lies plain;
And what we mean, we say, and what we would, we know;
A man becomes aware of his life's flow
And hears its winding murmur, and he sees
The meadows where it glides, the sun, the breeze.

Truly, friendship reveals as nothing else, the brooks and meadows and blossoms of life. And the richest and most fruitful and beautiful of all friendships is that with our Saviour.

There is no more comforting passage in the New Testament than that in which Christ says that his disciples are not merely followers and servants, but friends. And Abraham's faithful and unselfish service was well summed up in the saying that he was the friend of God.

---

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 5. TEXTS: John 15: 12-16; James 2: 23.

STARTLES THE COUNTRY!

Marvelous Invention! Revolutionizes Wash Day! New Ideas! New Principles! Amazing Results!

STARTLING, BUT TRUE! THERE'S NO MORE WASH DA!

NOT A WASHING MACHINE

New Method of Cleaning Clothes. Cleans Family Wash in 30 to 50 Minut. No Labor. No Rubbing. No Motors. No Chemicals.

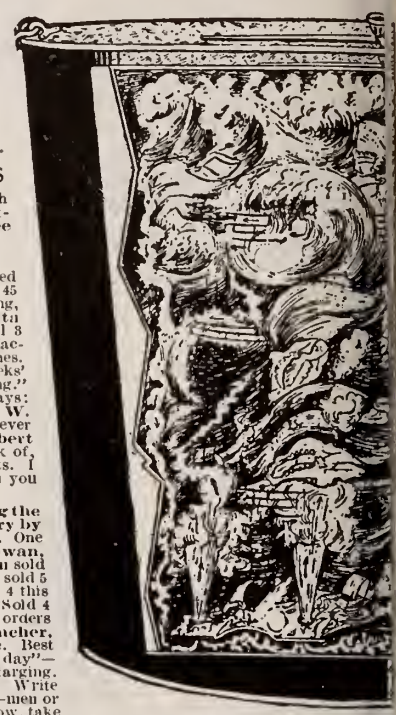
WOMAN'S HARDEST WORK MADE EASY

MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFACTOR You Decide After Usin

Beautifully cleans woolens, flannels, blankets, colored clothes and white clothes, finest laces, curtains and bed clothes. Saves trouble, money, time and labor. Easy Way in 30 to 50 minutes cleans washing which before took entire day. Largest family washing seems like play. All metal. Strong, durable, sanitary, light in weight. Easily used, cleaned, handled. Always ready. Child or frail woman can use it easy.

Wash day robbed of its awful misery.

No more rubbing, sweating, stewing. Backaches banished.



EASY WAY SMASHES ALL RECORDS

Washing machines in the infant class—can't compare with it. Users delighted, enthusiastic, filled with joy. Honest-hearted, hard-working women write of their own free will. They can't help it.

Simply bubble over with praise.

Listen: J. McGee, Tenn.: "One young lady cleaned day's washing in one hour with Easy Way; another in 45 minutes." Mrs. T. Bullen, Canada: "I washed bedding, heavy quilts, curtains, etc., without rubbing." Loretta Mitchell, O.: "Did a big washing in 45 minutes. Sold 3 already." A. D. Poppleton, N.Y.: "Gives perfect satisfaction. Washed bed quilts, greasy overalls and fine clothes. Greatest thing on earth." F. E. Post, Pa.: "Did two weeks' washing in 45 minutes. Clothes cleaned without rubbing." J. H. Barrett, Ark., after ordering 38 Easy Ways, says: "You have the grandest invention I ever heard of." J. W. Meyers, Ga.: "Greatest inven ion to womanhood, forever abolishing miserable wash day. Sells itself." Mrs. Albert Lamb, Ill.: "Have washed everything in it I could think of, from lace curtains down to dirty overalls and rag carpets. I wouldn't part with Easy Way now for any money. Wish you success."

AGENT'S FREE SAMPLE.

Taking the country by storm. One thousand Easy Ways shipped to Russian agent. R. O. Cowan, N.Y., placed 13 in six hours—profit $39.00. Mrs. J. Brown sold 10 in 3 days—profit $30.00. K. J. Blevin, O., made 7 calls, sold 5 one day—profit $15.00. R. H. Latimore, Pa.: "Sold 4 this morning; never yet turned down." A. G. Witt, Pa.: "Sold 4 to-day. Not out for orders." Mrs. Gerrish, Mont., orders sample, then one dozen, then 100—profit over $300. N. Boucher, Mass., orders 75 more and says: "Everybody wants one. Best business I ever had." A. S. Verrett, La.: "Sold 8 one day"—profit $24.00. Our facilities now greatly enlarged—still enlarging. Easy Way is agent's landslide. Millions will be sold. Write quick for appointment. We want managers, agents—men or women—at home or traveling—all or spare time, to show, take orders, and appoint agents. Easy Way new article—not worked to death. Best seller out. Every family wa one. People glad to see it demonstrated—buy without being asked and throw away costly washing machines to it. Only 2 sales a day means $36.00 a week profit. Price only $6.00, ready for use. Sent anywhere. N sold in stores. Order one for your own use. Money back if not satisfactory. Send for free sample of special agent's proposition, etc. Costs nothing to investigate. Send name and address anyway. Many ha done so and afterward thanked us for giving them the opportunity to get rich the easy way. Write to-day. Do let this big money-making opportunity pass you.

HARRISON MANUFACTURING CO., 317 HARRISON BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OH

POST CARDS

10 Birthday, 10c. | 10 Best Wishes & Greetings, 10c.
10 Rose, 10c. | 10 Fourth of July, 10c.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

BEEKEEPING its pleasures and profits, is theme of that excellent a handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on tr for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page bo on bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name t paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, O

Dustless Housecleaning

Terrific Air Suction.

Rushing, whirling, sucking air cleans carpets, rugs, mattings on floor, without sweeping or dusting. No motors, no electricity. Constant suction. New Home Vacuum Cleaner. New principle. One person operates. Weighs nine pounds. Simple—powerful—effective. It's the constant suction that does it—terrific, irresistible, sure. Sucking, drawing—gathering up into itself dirt—dust—grit—germs and grime from the very warp and fibre of carpets, rugs, mattings. Does same kind of work as higher priced machines. Price so low all may enjoy its benefits. Unlike anything you've seen or heard of. Makes carpets look like new. Better than if taken up and beaten. Raises no dust, so no dusting required. Does what days of sweeping and pounding could never do. Mrs. Jane Shully, Neb., writes. "You don't claim half enough. I wouldn't part with my cleaner for any price, if I couldn't get another. My ten year old girl operates mine easily and enjoys it." SAVES MONEY, STRENGTH, HEALTH and TIME. YOU NEED IT.

MAKES DUSTLESS HOMES

You Can Abandon Brooms, Brushes and Dust Cloths.

They don't clean your rugs and carpets. Brooms and sweepers fill the air with clouds of unhealthy disease-laden dust and germs and remove only surface dirt. New Home Vacuum Cleaner sucks up not only surface dirt, but all dirt, dust, grit and germs from in and beneath. Disturbance and upheaval of house-cleaning unnecessary. Stop short! Put drudgery behind you—leisure and health before. In New Home Vacuum Cleaner lies your salvation from household slavery. Adopt the new—easy—modern—sanitary—scientific way of cleaning.

Price $8.50. Sent Anywhere.

Not Sold in Stores.

Think of it! Not $100, $50, nor even $25—only $8.50. Think! what a small price for such a wonderful invention. What's $8.50 compared to a neat, clean home; when you can banish forever the drudgery of sweeping—cleaning—dusting—when there will be no more carpets and rugs to take up and beat. We guarantee New Home Vacuum Cleaner to be just as represented or your money back. Comes set up ready for use. You will be delighted—enraptured with it. Mrs. Henry Deller, R. I. "I must thank you for telling me of your wonderful cleaner. What a blessing it is to women. I have not felt so rested in years. Work now easy. Plenty of spare time. Don't see how you can sell it so cheap." Don't wait; don't hesitate. Order now. You risk nothing. To try a New Home Cleaner means to want it—then to keep it. Every cleaner tested before shipping—guaranteed as represented or money refunded. Send for a cleaner now.

$8.50
Sent Anywhere

Agents are Making Big Profits.

Women excited—eager to buy as soon as they see how beautifully it works. No trouble to make sales—no experience required. Just demonstrate—that's all. Shown in three minutes—sold in five. C. E. Goff, Mo., says: "Sold five cleaners last Saturday; my first attempt. W. H. Morgan, Pa., "Sold 45 cleaners in 25 hours." It's immense. So simple—so cheap. Yet so good, all buy. YOU make money. YOU get these big profits. Write a card now Get our liberal proposition.
Address R. ARMSTRONG MFG. CO. 1049 Alms Bldg. Cincinnati, Ohio

TUPENDOUS DISCOVERY!

FREE FUEL

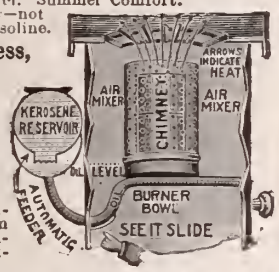
larvelous Stove. Burns Air.

COOL KITCHENS.

iel Drawn Principally from Atmosphere.

Scientific Test proves that this Stove consumes 5 barrels air to one gallon common coal . Cheapest Fuel. Summer Comfort.

Absolute safety—not ngerous like gasoline.



This Valveless, Wickless, Automatic, Oil-Gas and Air Burner Stove

onomically gen- ates gas from rosene or com- on coal oil, mix- g it with air.

ntensest Heat concentrated under cooking vessels. Not thrown out to overheat kitchen.

OUSEWIVES HAPPY. Amazing Results.

Perfect Service—Economy—Comfort.

To operate: Turn knob, touch match. Gas nerated passes through air mixer. Consumes 5 barrels of air to every gallon of oil. s fire-iuteuse heat. Perfect combustion. Abso- te safety. For more or less heat simply turn nob—then it's self-regulating. Requires no more tention. No wick—not even a valve. Nothing to k, clog or close up.

ENTHUSIASTIC PRAISE. D. CARN, D., writes: "Costs only 4½ cts. a duy for fuel." NORRIS, VT.: "Saves at least 50 to 75 per t. over wood and coul." E. ARNOLD, NEB.: "Range cost me $5.50 per month for fuel; Harrison 81.25 a month; saves $4.25 per month." L. I. RICH, N. C.: "Grand- est stove for summer I ever saw." E. L. COOPER, TENN.: "Gives satisfaction in every respect. Certainly housewife's friend during hot weather." J. C. CAMPBELL, NEBR.: "Far su- perior to any other l or gasoline stove. Perfectly safe, economical, eanly. Fine taker and great comfort to us." HOS. VINCENT, WIS.: "Wife never had any- ing she enjoyed so much. It is very quick—no eated room or dirt. Surpasses anything we ever w." MRS. F. E. FITE, O.: "Best, cleanest, nd most perfect stove we ever used. A. HOECK, LA.: "Can't speak too highly in praise of them." . TUBBS, N. Y.: "Bought one of your stoves irce years ago. It is a perfect wonder. Would not art with it for ten times its cost." J. LUFT, ANS.: "The longer I use it, the better I like it."

Not like those sold in stores.

Ideal for roasting, buking, cooking, ironing, can- ing fruit, picnics, cottages, camping. No hot, lery kitchens. Absolutely safe—can't explode. ot dangerous like gasoline. Simple, dur- ble—lasts for years. Housekeeper's friend. Saves ime, labor, money. All sizes. Prices low— 3.25 and up. Prepare for the heated term. Write today. Send no money—just your name nd address. We will send you full description— undreds of testimonials. Best summer stove n earth.

WHIRLWIND SUCCESS FOR AGENTS.

HEAD & FRAZER, TEX., write: "Enclose $1.00; rush. Sell like hot cukes. Sold 50 in our own." B. L. HUESTED, MICH.: "Out one day, sold 11." L. RUDDIMAN, MICH.: "Con- ratulate you on your success; sold 4 one day." IY, SEARLE, ARK.: "Sold 8 in 1½ hours." IRS. NETTIE JENSEN: "Sold 7 after five o'clock." So they go. Livest agent's proposition out. This patent new—nothing else like it. Not sold n stores. Demand enormous. Agent's reaping harvest of dollars. Every family needs and wants one. Show 12—sell 10. Write today for 1910 agent's special plan. Get in early.

WORLD MFG. CO., 291 World Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS—$33.30 A WEEK

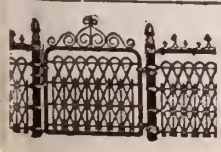
Why not make it? Jack Wood did it! He writes—"Hurry up 100 more—sold first lot in 2 days—best seller I ever saw." Hundreds of agents coining money—$5.60 worth of tools for tho price of one. Wonderful invention—drop forged from finest steel. Nickel Plated all over. Astonishing low price to agents—1,200 ordered by one man. Get our grand confidential proposition quick. Sample free—don't delay—experience not needed—write at once. THOMAS MFG. CO., 2124 Wayne St., DAYTON, OHIO

AGENTS—My Sanitary Coffee and Tea Makers produce a pure, sweet cup. Needs no settler nor strainer and never wears out. Saves tea and coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight. New inventions. Send 15c for 50c size of either, postpaid, or will send sample of both for 25c. Without question the two best selling articles ever invented. Order both.

COFFEE MAKER

TEA MAKER

Dr. Lyons, 1480 Day St., Pekin, Ill.



LAWN FENCE

Many designs Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries. Coiled Spring Fence Co. Box D Winchester, Ind.

Christ Our Judge*

OUR modern preachers seldom touch deeply upon the judgment of the wicked. It is a topic repugnant to the human mind; and it is believed by present-day thinkers that more good is done by dwelling on the beauties and rewards of virtue, than upon the stern punishments sure to follow sin.

Doubtless this is true; and yet the whole Scripture abounds in assurances that our God is ever just. The man that forsakes his sin and turns to God, though it be at the eleventh hour, is forgiven; receiving, as the parable says, "every man his penny." But he who dies unrepentant must suffer—how or where we are not told, except in highly figurative language.

The one thing that we should keep in mind is that we must make ourselves fit to meet the judgment of the Most High. This is enough, and every one who will study his Bible can find the way.

The Rev. Lyman P. Powell says of the preaching of John Wesley, that it had "the accuracy of a scholar, the authority of an ambassador, the unction of a saint, the power of God. It was always searching; but not often terrible or severe, except when addressed to congregations respectable, rich, and well contented with themselves."

To such a congregation, a friend was shocked to hear him preach a scathing sermon from the text: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape damnation?"

"Sir," said the friend, "such a sermon would have been suitable in Billingsgate; but it is highly improper here."

"If I had been in Billingsgate," Wesley replied quietly, "my text would have been, 'Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.'"

It is when we become wise in our own conceit that we need most to remember the sternness of our Almighty Judge.

We are told that the mother of the great Spurgeon said to him when he was twelve years old: "I have trained you in righteousness. Your father and I have set you right examples. We have taught you the Gospel. We have shown you the way of peace. My son, if you do not live a godly life, I will stand before God in the day of judgment and bear witness against you."

A noted preacher has remarked of this solemn charge: "It takes that kind of a mother to make a son like Charles Spurgeon, and no such mother ever lost her son."

She holds up before him not only the peace and joy of the Gospel, but the thought of the judgment day.

Said one of our most eloquent pastors, Dr. Asa S. Fiske: "I should never have come to Christ if it had not been for his love pulling me from before and his fear pushing me from behind. Neither one alone would have been enough to move my heart."

"The love of a good father," says George Matheson, "is as much seen in his punishments as his rewards. Never tell a child that you expect nothing from him; that is the way to get nothing. It is in the hour of penalty that we need the promise. There is always a light in thy valley, O Lord! Thou will never send the stroke without the star, the smiting without the smile."

God is good. He loves us. He has put us where we have every means of becoming Christians, and escaping condemnation.

If we persist in defying him—if we backslide from service into sin—if we love the world and the things that are in the world more than we love him—we shall be judged with a just judgment. That is right, and let us see to it that we are ready.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 5. TEXT: Matt. 25:31-46.

Floor Polish OF QUALITY

If you have never used

Butcher's Boston Polish

on your floors, you do not know what it is to have a Perfectly Finished Floor. There are imitations, but none of equal excellence.

It is the STANDARD in the different trades, throughout the UNITED STATES and CANADA

When finishing your floors use BUTCHER'S BOSTON POLISH and be convinced of its merits.

Send for our free booklet

The Butcher Polish Company

356 ATLANTIC AVENUE, BOSTON, MASS.

DAISY FLY KILLER

placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20 cents.

HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, N. Y.

The New Flavor

MAPLEINE

Better than Maple

Mapleine is a pure, wholesome and delicious flavoring extract, guaranteed under the Pure Food Laws of every State.

A few drops added to sugar dissolved in water makes a delicious table syrup, and used like lemon or vanilla it flavors pudding sauces, cake fillings, ice cream, ices, custards, candy, puddings, etc.

Your grocer sells it. If not, send us 35c. in stamps for a 2-oz. bottle and our cook book, "Mapleine Dainties."

CRESCENT MFG. CO.
Seattle, Wash.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

Gives 500 candle power. Casts no shadow. Costs 2 cents per week. Makes and burns its own gas. Over 200 styles. Every lamp warranted. No dirt. No odor. No grease. Agents wanted. Write for catalog, now.

THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, O.

To Keep Your Floors Beautiful

Every woman knows how annoying it is to have unsightly spots, water stains, dirt stains and foot-tracks spoil the beauty of her floors, stairs and woodwork. They ruin the beauty of her entire home. Will you test, at our expense,

Johnson's Kleen Floor

the only preparation for immediately removing all these discolorations? With Johnson's Kleen Floor any woman can keep her floors bright and clean—like new.

Simply dampen a cloth with Kleen Floor and rub it over the floor. Instantly, all spots, stains and discolorations disappear—without the slightest injury to the finish.

Johnson's Kleen Floor rejuvenates the finish—brings back its original beauty—greatly improves the appearance of all floors, whether finished with Shellac, Varnish or other preparations.

Johnson's Kleen Floor is quickly applied—two hours is ample time in which to thoroughly clean the floor, wax it and replace the rugs.

We want to send you, free, sample bottle of Johnson's Kleen Floor and a package of Johnson's Wax to be used after Kleen Floor is applied.

Johnson's Prepared Wax gives the floors that soft, lustrous, artistic polish which does not show heel-marks or scratches and to which dust and dirt do not adhere.

It is ideal for polishing woodwork, furniture, pianos, etc. All that is necessary is to occasionally apply it with a cloth and then bring to a polish with a dry cloth.

Your floors receive harder wear than any other part of your woodwork, hence require special treatment. Kleen Floor will keep them always in perfect condition.

We want to send you, free, prepaid, samples of our Kleen Floor and Prepared Wax, together with the latest edition C. H. 5 of our handsomely illustrated book on the "Proper Treatment of Floors, Woodwork and Furniture." We attach a coupon for your convenience.

PLEASE USE COUPON—CUT ON DOTTED LINE

S. C. Johnson & Son, Racine, Wisconsin

I accept your FREE offer of samples of Johnson's Kleen Floor and Prepared Wax also booklet on Home Beautifying, Edition C. H. 5. I agree to test the samples; and, if I find them satisfactory, will ask my dealer to supply me.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

S. C. JOHNSON & SON
RACINE, WIS.
"The Wood Finishing Authorities"

Hot Sun -- Stifling Streets

That time is approaching. When it arrives stop at the next soda fountain and treat your hot, tired and thirsty self to a glass of delicious, refreshing Coca-Cola. It will cool you---relieve your fatigue and quench your thirst as nothing else can.

5c Everywhere

Send for our Free Booklet–"The Truth About Coca-Cola." It tells all about it—what it is and why it is so delicious and wholesome.

THE COCA-COLA COMPANY - - Atlanta, Ga.

$1.50 a Year—5c. a Copy
Published 52 Times a Year

New York, June 1, 1910
COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH, JR.
VOL. 33—NO. 22
Offices: Bible House, New York

CHRISTIAN HERALD

Painted for The Christian Herald, by E. B. Mead

See page 524

The Peril of the Pass

Questions and Answers

In forwarding MSS. to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, enclose stamped envelopes for return, if unavailable.

E. H. C., Waynesboro, Pa. Is there any information as to whether John the Baptist received the answer to the question: "Art thou the Christ or look we for another?" What effect did it have on him?

John had lain long in prison and his message was one of impatience, almost of despair, that he should not now be called to share in the work of Jesus whom he had announced to the people and his work. Jesus answered by a series of miracles (see Luke 7: 21, 22), after which he gave John's messengers the answer recorded in v. 22, 23. They had seen the wondrous works and heard the words of divine power and the message of grace that accompanied them. They had seen the very miracles which were to be the distinguishing credentials of the Messiah (see Isa. 35: 5 and 61: 1). Jesus' summary was complete and comprehensive. His preaching of the Gospel included the Messianic prediction. He desired that these things should convince John.. There is nothing in the Scripture narrative to show how John received the message, but it was doubtless sufficient. (We have no trace in our collections of the poem you mention.)

Reader, Bellefonte, Pa. What do you consider the meaning of Heb. 6: 4, 5, 6 and 10: 26, 27?

The first passage is a special warning to backsliders, and declares that those who have so retrograded, while they may repent and return, can never again know the pure joy they once experienced in believing and serving. The remembrance of their defection will always be with them. They may renew their vows, for God's grace is not limited, and such apostasy is not beyond reclamation, but much of the sweetness of the Christian life will have been lost forever. The second passage is a characterization of persistent apostasy which rejects the only acceptable sacrifice for sin, after fully knowing it, and which resolutely steels its heart against the truth. Besides it is certain that the soul that is troubled with doubts and fears is not beyond redemption, as these are indisputable signs that the Spirit is still striving with that soul and calling it back to its true allegiance.

A. M. F., Elk Creek, Neb. 1. Were the Ten Commandments included in the Old Covenant. 2. Were any of the Commandments included in the New Covenant?

1. The Old Covenant (sometimes called "Jehovah's Covenant") included not only the Mosaic writings, but also the whole body of Jewish canonical Scriptures (see II. Cor. 3: 13, 14). It included the Sinaitic laws. The New Covenant is the Gospel Covenant and the two are successive steps in the spiritual development of the race, the first typifying bondage under the old law, the second freedom under the Gospel. See Mal. 3: 1, Luke 1: 68-80; Gal. 3: 17; Heb. 9: 15, and 12: 24; Acts 3: 25; Rom. 9: 4; Heb. 8: 6 and other passages.

M. A., Lebanon, O. 1. When and by whom were steps first taken towards securing universal peace among the nations? 2. What was accomplished by the Peace Congress?

1. The modern peace movement originated with Jean de Bloch, a poor Polish Jew of Warsaw, who became a great banker, railway constructor, author and administrator. His books on the cost of war and the wisdom of bringing about international peace influenced the Czar to call the first Peace Congress at The Hague in 1899. 2. A permanent Court of Arbitration has now been established to which any of the nations may take their grievances, if they wish to settle them peacefully. The court, however, lacks the power to compel governments to appear before it, and it has not the power to enforce its decrees.

D. S. W., Englewood, N. J. Please tell me the meaning of placing a postage-stamp on an envelope upside down.

The placing of the postage stamp in various positions on the outside of the envelope has been arbitrarily asserted to mean many things. A regular system has been created in certain quarters, whereby the different positions of the stamp form a code, generally based upon affairs of the heart. The use of a code of this sort is silly and vulgar. A wrong interpretation may be put upon the misplacing of a stamp, whose sender knows nothing of such a code, and thereby great injustice may be done. In England, the placing of a stamp upside down is, since it carries the head of the king, an insult to the sovereign. Socialists try to do this sometimes as an act of petty defiance. No respectable person should intentionally put a stamp on an envelope in any but the regular ways.

W. M. B., Learned, Miss. Please explain how wireless messages are sent out and received.

It is rather difficult to explain in a short space and in non-technical language. The messages are sent on a series of electric waves set in motion by a transmitter. Marconi's transmitter consists of a Hertz oscillator energized by an induction coil, a vertical wire attached to one side of the spark-gap and an earthed plate attached to the opposite side. A simple spring interrupter and key break the energizing current into the usual telegraphic dots and dashes. The message sent as electric waves is received by an instrument called a receptor. The incoming waves impinge upon an aerial wire and are converted into electric oscillations, the magnetic intensity of the band is disturbed and currents set in motion, which operate a telephone receiver that indicates the dots and dashes which are read as any ordinary telegraphic message.

W. H., Albany, N. Y. What should be the attitude of the ministers and Christian people of America on the subject of Sunday baseball? We call ours a "Christian nation." Why is our Sabbath to be turned over to desecrators, when God has told us to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy?

Sabbath desecration is a painful subject for God's people at the present time. It is undeniable that in many communities it is no longer reverenced as it should be and is devoted to pastime and pleasure, for all of which there must come a time of reckoning. The Sabbath Observance League is doing good work and many pastors are helping the league, but what is needed is a general pulpit agitation and a strong united spiritual effort through the religious press of all denominations.

J. McK., Elphenstone, Man., Can. In the parable of the prodigal which was the greater sinner—the younger or the older brother?

The elder brother represents a form of legal righteousness, not wholly false but spiritually low. He has been kept by the law from gross offenses. He is both jealous of his brother's welcome and covetous of his gifts. The joy over the returning prodigal cannot be shared by so narrow a nature. The lifelong service of the elder son had already been recognized and rewarded, and he should not have grudged the parental welcome to the returned and repentant wanderer, but rather joined in it cordially.

M. R. M., Monmouth, Ill. Is horse-racing sinful and wicked? I mean racing for purse money at State or county fairs?

Gambling on horse races is a vice and under the law in this State and several others it is a crime. The racing of horses to decide which is the fastest is usually accompanied with cruelty. It has been proved that there cannot be any horse racing without betting accompaniment.

O. F. F., Chagrin Falls, O. For what reason did Lieutenant Peary refuse Mene, the Eskimo boy, a return passage home?

We do not know. The Eskimo boy made a strong appeal to be returned to his own people. Later he ran away and got as far as Canada. Finally, it is said, some kindly disposed persons made arrangements for his safe return to the North.

W. M. B., Charlotte, N. C. What did Jesus mean when he asked: "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"

You must read this passage in connection with what immediately precedes it. Christ was speaking of the wrongs inflicted upon his people (v. 7) and he meant to convey that, before his coming again, hope would sink low and people would begin to lose faith in the promise that he would ever return.

I. A. W., Sunbury, Pa. 1. Does the President of the United States (as commander-in-chief of the army and navy) ever appear in uniform? 2. What was the cost and how long in the course of construction was the Suez Canal? 3. Did George Washington have any children?

1. No; he could do so, however, if he wanted to as there is no regulation against it. 2. It took thirteen years to build the Suez Canal, and it cost about $80,000,000. Later it was enlarged at a cost of $20,000,000. 3. No.

C. T. M., Claremont, N. Y. In a recent number of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD some one raised the question of dancing and card playing. I once heard a Methodist clergyman make this statement from the pulpit: "In the mere act of dancing or card playing, I don't suppose there is any harm, but when I see professing Christians frittering away their time in such foolish amusements when there are so many other ways of amusement that are more elevating, I doubt the sincerity of their profession."

The clergyman was right. He took the sensible and Christian view of the matter. The attitude of this paper on the subject has been stated so often that it need not be repeated here.

J. A. H., Beecher City, Ill. 1. In Matt. 11: 2, 3 did John Baptist doubt Christ being the Messiah? 2. In Matt. 11: 11 Christ speaks of the "kingdom of heaven." Was that his kingdom on earth or the heavenly kingdom? 3. Explain Matt. 3: 11.

1. See answer to E. H. C., Waynesboro, Pa., in this issue. 2. This practically means that the prophet who doubted the Messiahship of Jesus though he might be the greatest prophet on earth, was less than the least of the prophets, who, believing in his Messiahship and his kingdom is therefore a member of his kingdom. He was speaking of his kingdom in the hearts of men. 3. John in the passage quoted was comparing his own baptismal work with that of Jesus and showing that while he dealt with human and material elements, Jesus gave the true spiritual baptism. He (John) obligated his converts by baptism to the duties of the new life which the act symbolically represented; Jesus showered upon them the redemption gifts of his Messiahship.

King and Queen at the Opening Day at Brussels Exhibition

THE opening of the International Exposition at Brussels, which took place on April 23, was marked by impressive ceremonies. King Albert of Belgium, accompanied by Queen Elizabeth, presided at the opening ceremonies which took place in the Salle des Fetes, before a distinguished assemblage which included many foreigners of distinction and a large number of notabilities. There are many magnificent buildings on the Exposition grounds, almost every civilized country being represented by a characteristic structure. Among the quaintest is the Dutch pavilion, which has almost the proportions of a cathedral, and the buildings in the Brussels Kermesse, which are types of several centuries ago. The whole exposition is a fine display of middle-age architecture and handicraft, and in the machinery halls and show rooms there is an imposing illustration of the modern rivalry in the industrial and mechanical arts. There are beautiful fountains, grand halls, gardens filled with fine statuary and collections of art objects sufficient to set up the world's largest museum.

Miscellaneous

A. R., Janesville, Wis. Yes; occasionally.

A. O. F., Donovan, Ill. We have been unable to find the poem.

J. J. S., Ohio. God will not hold any one responsible for that which they could not help.

Reader, Upton, Mass. We cannot answer anonymous questions. Repeat question and send full name and address. The names are never published.

A. M. P., Cameron, W. Va., writes: "I have been a subscriber to the Home Herald for the past five or six years and felt that I could not do without it, but I am so pleased with the change that I feel that THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will be even more indispensable in my home.

C. A. B., St. John, Wash. At His farewell over Jerusalem (see Matt. 23: 37, 39; Luke 13: 35), it is clearly implied that the Jews will welcome Him. See also Matt. 26: 64; Mark 14: 62. Some commentators take the ground that the 144,000 who will stand with Christ on Mt. Zion will be a gathering of saved Israelites.

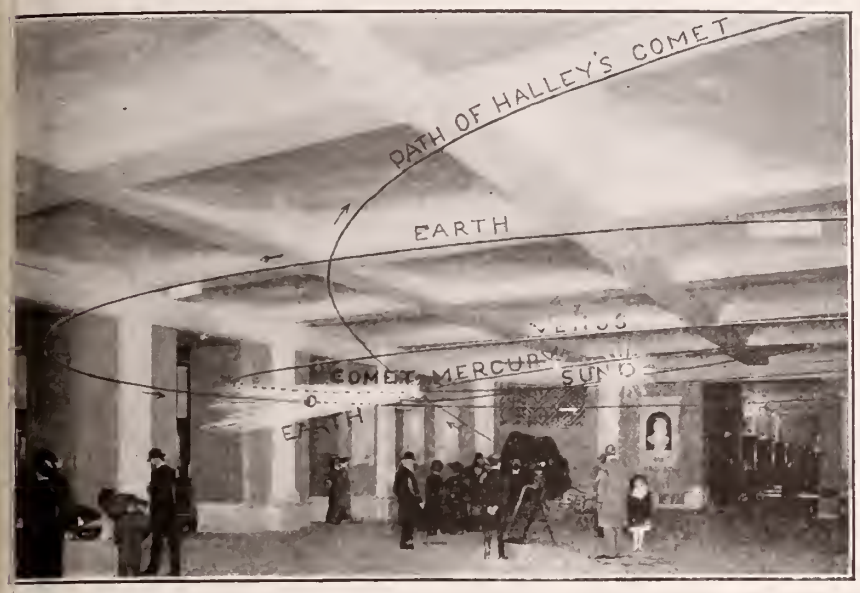
A. A. D., Morristown, Ind. 1. In the beginning of the year of Rome 750, or four years before the epoch of our era. Such is the reckoning of distinguished Bible scholars. 2. All we know of the fate of Judas is what is told in Matt. 27: 3; 28: 5; Acts 1: 25. 3. Don't know. 4. Sanctification, which we receive by faith, is the work of God within us. It comprehends the whole Christian life, and is a condition of state of holiness induced by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, the believer giving himself to God, and in return receiving the divine gift which follows such unreserved dedication and surrender. Farrar defines the successive steps thus: Conviction of sin, penitence and faith, acceptance and conversion, justification, complete surrender and sanctification. Wesley declared that a man must be converted before he can attain to any degree of spiritual perfection and pointed out that Paul's epistle to the Ephesian converts showed them to have been far from ideal sanctified Christians.

NEW YORK, JUNE 1, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Explaining the Comet's Course in New York Museum of Natural History



A "Comet Party" on the Roof of a Metropolitan Hotel

THE PASSING OF HALLEY'S COMET

FIRST in the eastern sky as an early morning spectacle, and after May 20 in the western sky as an evening attraction, Halley's comet as been the central object of general interest for the reater part of the human race during the last two veeks. It cannot be denied that during the early tages of its approach, the comet was an object of error and vague apprehension in many places. n Southern Europe, and especially in Italy, whole ommunities were in a state of panic. So great was he alarm in Turin that the Gazeta, desiring to llay it, published an article "pledging the honor" f its editors that no harm would come from the elestial visitor to our planet or its population. In ome parts of the continent of Europe, the people, earing the presence of cyanogen gas in the comet's ail, bought oxygen in bottles and tanks and, laying n a stock of food supplies, prepared to live in tightly losed chambers and cellars, while the tail was in ontact with our atmosphere. In Hayti, thousands f the credulous and superstitious natives were im-osed upon by quacks, who sold them "comet pills" t a dollar a box, warranted to ward off any evil ffects from the visit of the "vagrant of the skies." n our own Southern States there was a good deal f excitement among the colored population, and eligious fervor ran high for a time.

Nor was the trepidation here confined to colored eople, for it found expression in various forms of xcitement among others as well. Every article elating to the comet was eagerly read and discussed. Wherever one went, the comet was the absorbing opic. The astronomers themselves had few points f common agreement, and their contributions to he literature of the subject were not enlightening r reassuring. Some held that at least 5,000,-00 or 6,000,000 miles' length of the comet's mys-erious tail would sweep the earth for two whole lays; others declared the tail too short to reach our tmosphere at all. Several declared the presence of yanogen proved, while others asserted that the as had now disappeared. Some were of the opinion hat we might witness meteor showers or possibly n auroral display while the comet was nearest the arth; a few believed there would be no appreciable ffect at all except possibly a slight influence upon lectrical conditions.

At last the day came upon which the astronomers vere agreed that the comet would be nearest to our lanet—when the earth, the head of the comet and he sun would be in "syzygy," or in direct line with ach other. But alas! for the general expectation f interesting events. Nothing of the slightest con-equence happened. The skies showed no wonder-ul flight of meteors; there were no terrifying atural phenomena; the atmosphere, save where it was cloudy, was absolutely tranquil; the hoped-for opportunities for the use of the spectroscope never came; there was no auroral display worth mentioning and the expected electrical disturbance, if it existed at all, affected only the wireless at a few remote points and was unimportant. All this was due, so the astronomers declared, to the fact that the comet had behaved in a most singular manner, quite disregarding their "time and track" schedule and conducting itself in a way that no well-disposed comet, with a proper respect for scientific persons, should do. As it approached the earth, and while the head of the comet was still some 12,000,000 or 13,000,000 miles distant from us, its tremendously elongated tail had quite unexpectedly curved itself —just as though it were gracefully saluting our globe in passing by under full headway—and that we had missed contact with the tail in consequence. Moreover, the curve in the tail had lessened its speed if indeed it had not split the tail in two.

Photo by permission Scientific American

Halley's Comet, Photographed May 5, 1910

This shows the great tail, estimated at 25,000,000 miles in length

While the uneventful transit was thus both a surprise and a disappointment to many, to timorous folks, who had feared lest the earth's contact with the tail might produce direful effects, it was a decided relief. In New York, and especially in the Italian quarter, there had been signs of apprehension that something of terrible import was about to happen. Many Italians spent the greater part of that Wednesday night in churches in earnest prayer. In the streets, groups of star-gazers could be seen at every corner. In many of the hotels, the roofs were devoted to "comet parties," who spent practically the whole night there gazing skyward through glasses, and eating luncheon served on small tables. Riverside Drive was crowded all night long and telescopes and opera glasses were everywhere. New York, however, failed to detect the slightest trace of the comet or its tail, although according to the calculations of the scientists it was traveling towards us at the rate of forty-three miles a second.

In some other parts of the globe the comet-gazers were more fortunate. In Johannesburg, South Africa, the searchers at the Transvaal Observatory discerned the tail north of the ecliptic, in a position which would indicate that the earth would pass considerably to the south of it without actual contact. At Aden, in Arabia, the tail was seen flaming like a searchlight, but the head of it was invisible. Portugal was drenched with torrential rains during the passage. English, French and Spanish astronomers failed to see anything, the weather being cloudy. At Williams, Wis., a portion of the tail was seen under the eastern sky on the morning of the 19th. Harvard and Amherst observers saw nothing. American astronomers at Honolulu detected big sun spots, but saw no trace of the comet. These sun spots were also observed by California and Missouri astronomers. Princeton observers descried the tail, but it was very faint, and they believed the passage had been predicted a day too soon. St. Thomas, D. W. I., saw the comet in its eastern sky, visible on the 19th, its immense tail stretching across two-thirds of the firmament. Constantinople saw nothing of the comet, but there was general terror among the Mussulmans and many spent the night on the roofs praying. In many Mexican towns and villages there were night street processions with candles, and the people prayed to avert the destruction of the world. In Minnesota many farmers in the lowlands near Lake Superior left their homes temporarily, fearing a tidal wave. In Porto Rico the negroes paraded the streets at night with candles and prayerbooks. And so it was in many other places, where the ignorant and superstitious quaked with fear as they looked momentarily for the calamity that never came.

OUR ASSURANCE OF SALVATION

An Unpublished Discourse by DWIGHT L. MOODY, America's Greatest Evangelist*

This is the fourth of twenty remarkable sermons by Moody, never before published, and the existence of which was disclosed only a few months ago. The absolute authenticity of the sermons is vouched for by the evangelist's son, Wm. R. Moody, who cordially approves their publication in this paper. The sermons are the exclusive property of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. One will appear each month.

I WAS preaching once in the north of Scotland, in one of those towns that have a church large enough to take the whole town in. They have some Presbyterian churches in the north of Scotland large enough to accommodate the whole churchgoing community. This town had a church large enough to hold 2,500. I don't think I ever heard in my life the Twenty-third Psalm sung as it was sung in that church—"The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." And I sat and heard it; and it seemed as if the whole town was there—men, women and children—all singing very heartily that beautiful old psalm.

Dwight L. Moody

After I got through preaching, I thought I would put a test and see how many could sing it from the heart. I said: "I never heard the Twenty-third Psalm sung as at the opening of this meeting; and I was wondering how many sang it from the heart and could say the Lord was their Shepherd. Now, I will put a test: All who can sing it from the heart and who can claim Christ as your Shepherd, won't you rise and sing it?" About fifty to sixty got up—some not half-way up—and I felt as if I had never heard it sung so poorly in my life.

Now, I was thinking of that incident this morning while you were singing: "My Jesus, I love thee; I know thou art mine." I wondered how many in this audience really can sing it from the heart; and how many, if it should be put to the test, could rise and say: "I know that my Redeemer liveth. . . . I know in whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." In other words, how many are ready and willing to get up and declare themselves on the Lord's side—that you belong to him?

Impediments to Assurance

That is the subject we have this morning—Assurance! I once read of a couple of men who had their property burned out. They were away from the town while the fire attacked both of their houses. One man, when he heard of it, went almost wild, while the other was as calm as the summer evening. What was the difference? One had his property insured for its full value, and the other had no insurance. One lost everything; the other was fully insured. And, do you know, I believe that assurance is going to give us peace and rest in the hour of trial and in the testing time; therefore I believe it is a very vital subject.

Now, before I speak further, I want to say that there are three classes of people in all our churches who have not got assurance, and I don't think it's the mind of God that they should have assurance. The first class is the people who have united with the church, but have never been "born of God," "of the Spirit," and never "became partakers of the divine nature." They have united with the church, perhaps persuaded by some minister or by some friend and thinking it might lead to their conversion. They have not been "born of the Spirit," and they will never have the assurance, until they have been "born from above."

Second. Those not willing to "confess Christ." "Ashamed of Christ and his Word." Rom. 10: 9-11 says: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart, man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For the Scripture saith: Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed." Now, if I believe with my heart, and yet am ashamed to confess Christ and to "take my stand," I surely will not have assurance. We have got to confess Christ. "If any man be my disciple, let him take up his cross and come and follow me."

When I was in London, I heard of a certain minister. Many people were joining the churches, and he was not in the movement but stood outside, and many of his own people were going and joining other churches and he did not like it. He gave out a notice stating that if there was any one in his congregation who wanted to be taken into the church privately, he would take them in; but no one came in. I wouldn't give the snap of my finger for ten thousand church members who would "join privately" and who were ashamed to confess Jesus Christ. Such a man isn't worthy of being a disciple of Jesus Christ. He may believe with the heart, but he must "confess Christ" with the mouth.

Third. There is the class who aren't willing to "go to work." A man may believe and may confess, but if he isn't willing to go out into the harvest field and go to work, he will not have assurance. I believe that's the reason many people go on all through life without assurance—because they are not willing to do some work for the Master.

How to Get Rid of Doubts

Some one said to me: "Don't you ever have any doubts?" I said: "I don't have any time to doubt." Some people are full of doubts because they have nothing else to do—doubts in the morning and at the dinner table, and doubts at the tea table; they get up on doubts, and live on them, and sleep on them, and think "doubts," "doubts," "doubts" all the time. If you get engaged in the Lord's work, and see the Lord answering your prayers, away go your doubts! I think I'd as soon doubt my existence as doubt that God answered my prayers. How is one going to doubt when he sees a man getting out of the pit and a man standing for five, ten, twenty years? In some places you find leading citizens standing very high in the Church and in the places of business. And people say they can't help but doubt. My friend, you can get rid of doubts if you'll take God's way. First, believe with your heart. Next, confess it. Next, don't be ashamed of it, but go to work. Away go your doubts! It is the privilege of every child of God to know, if he will take pains to hunt up the evidence. It is his privilege. I don't believe it is the will of God in this world that I should not know whether I am saved or not. I don't believe it's the will of God that I should go on with a terrible uncertainty whether I am a child of God or of the devil. I believe God gives certain landmarks. It is a privilege; but no one, no man or woman, is qualified for God's work who has not assurance of God's salvation. If I were in the river and didn't have a firm grip on something, I couldn't help anybody; but when I put my feet on the shore, I am the man to help somebody else. I've got to get a good hold for myself before I can help some one else. There's no liberty, peace, rest, joy, power, until we have assurance!

Now, you want to keep that in mind—when you are sure of your own salvation, you are the one to go to the help of some one else. If I were blind, I'd be the last man to help a blind man. We want to make sure that we've got salvation and are His, and then we are ready for his service.

The Gospel Guarantee

There are three lines on which Satan works: First—he keeps a man from believing. Then, after a man does believe, he does all he can to fill that man with doubts and fears; and if he doesn't succeed in that, and the man still has a "ringing testimony," he casts some "lie" on that man and blackens his testimony and cripples his character, if he can. He works on these lines. And if a man is going to be a disciple of Christ, he has got to come out even if there be an "evil report" about him. Never mind. If a man takes his character—his reputation—to God, God will take care of it. There's no trouble with the reputation if the character be all right.

Let me read John 20: 31: "These things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, and that, believing, ye might have life through his name." That Gospel was written with just one thought in mind—to prove that Jesus Christ was divine. If I wanted to convince a man that Jesus Christ was divine, I'd go to the Gospel of John. Every chapter but two speaks of "believing." The word "believe" occurs ninety-eight times in that Gospel. That's the key to that Gospel. Turn over to John's epistles, and you'll find what he wrote that epistle for: the thirteenth verse of the fifth chapter of the First Epistle of John: "These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God." The Gospel was written that we might believe in Jesus Christ, and this epistle was written that we might know that we are in his family and belong to the household of faith.

A man said to me: "Can you recommend to me a good book on assurance?" "Yes." "Where will I get it?" "There was a very fine book written by a man named John, the son of Zebedee." "An Englishman the author?" "No; the son of Zebedee." "Where can I get it?" "Most any bookstore." "What shall I call for?" "It is bound up with some other books, called the Bible. It's better than all the infidel books that come out, and you better read it and study it; and if a person will take a few weeks on that epistle, you'll find out whether you're in the kingdom of God or not."

I. John 3: 4: "Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law; for sin is the transgression of the law." Fifth verse: "And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins: and in him is no sin. Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither knoweth him."

Now notice that fifth verse: "He was manifested to take away our sins." That's the first thing—the starting point. There's no assurance until we see that's true; that Jesus Christ was manifested to take away the sins of the world by the sacrifice of himself. He forever settles the question of sin by his own death, and we start from there. "We know he was manifested to take away our sins." The rest will follow. You can't atone for your sins. Your tears can't atone for them. But "Jesus Christ was manifested to take away our sins." Five things worth knowing: "Jesus Christ was manifested to take away our sins." There's no abiding peace until you see the finished work of Jesus Christ. And it is a thing settled: Jesus Christ has put away sin. Then, the next thing worth naming is: "Hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him. For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart." "Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God."

The Truth that Makes Us Free

Now, notice. "Hereby know we the truth." People say: "It makes no difference what we believe, if we are sincere and honest." That's one of the greatest delusions of the enemy of souls that it makes no difference what the man believes or has as a creed if he is sincere. I don't know how many times a man has said to me: "Mr. Moody, you don't have a idea that what a man believes makes any difference, does it? A man may be a Mohammedan, or a Mormon, or a Confucian; let him only hold on to it and stick to it, and he will be all right."

Suppose you go down to the First National Bank and put in a check for $10,000, and the cashier says, "Have you any money in this bank?" You answer, "Why, no." "Well, what are you drawing your check for, then?" "Earnestness," you say. Now no man is more earnest than I. But they would have me in the lunatic asylum before the sun was down if I did that. Believe a lie as well as the truth, and stick to it? Hold on to it? John says: "We know that we have the truth." It is the truth that "makes us free." Lies bring us into bondage, but the truth brings liberty. A man who believes truth can stand on his feet; he knows what he believes. I pity those men who live on "negatives," on what they "don't believe." I met a man some time ago, and he said he didn't believe this and he didn't believe that, and he told me forty things he "didn't believe." I said, "Will you tell me what you do believe?" And the poor fellow didn't know what he did believe! I'm tired and sick of that kind of thing. If it's the truth, my friends, stick to it; hold on to it; but if it's not true, give it up.

I heard of two men arranging to go up in a balloon, and they thought the car was fastened to the balloon in two places. One of the men seized hold of the car, which wasn't well fastened to the balloon, and the other seized hold of the rope of the balloon. One went up toward heaven and the other was dashed to pieces when he came falling down. Man, keep hold of the truth, and it will make you free. If you don't want to take this man's or that man's creed; go to the Book and see what the Lord himself says.

Third. We know that we are passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. "He that hateth his brother, abideth in life." What's the matter? "Something gone wrong there, Brother;

Continued on next page

* This sermon, never before published, was preached by Mr. Moody in Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., January 19, 1897.

Assurance of Salvation

By DWIGHT L. MOODY

Continued from preceding page

Moody, you say." What's that? Now I'll tell you the trouble. I thought I would read the passage the way we live it, and see how it sounds. A lot of people do that. Some one has said to them that something has gone wrong, and they go to nursing themselves, and wondering why it is they haven't got assurance. Now, we'll read it the way John wrote it. "We know, because we love the brethren." "Because we love the brethren." "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." I wouldn't give a penny for the most magnificent creed I know of on earth, if there's no life in it. What do I care for a man's creed that has no life in it? "We know that we have passed from death unto life." How? "Because we love the brethren."

Take an unrenewed man—a man never quickened by the Spirit of God, and in whose heart the Holy Ghost has never shed abroad the love of God—tell me, how can he pray for an enemy? He can't do it. But, not only that, but you can love the brethren. Love must be spontaneous, and it will be so when I've been born from above and become a partaker of the divine nature. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

I have never seen a man full of love in Europe or in this country who has doubts. It makes no difference where we find them. I believe a man's religion, if it hasn't love in it, isn't worth having. If I had my way, I'd sweep away every church out of existence that didn't manifest love. That's what makes infidels. That's what draws men away from Christ and Christianity; that form of church has alienated the workingmen. "By love shall all men know that ye are my disciples." Nihilism, atheism and every form of evil would flee away, if we were baptized with love.

And then we wouldn't have to be urged to work. That's the kind of Christianity. One city needs it as much as every other city. We find men sitting down and discussing theology, and very often they don't know what theology is nor what they are talking about. Some say they believe what the church believes. I ask what does the church believe? "What I believe," they say. They don't know any difference!

Now, let us read that again. "We know"—we don't guess; we don't hope, but we know—"because we love the brethren." Now mark: It is not only those who "love me"; but those who love men who may not love me, and we are to do them a kindness. To heap coals of fire upon the head of a sinner—that takes the love of God. Have you got it? If you haven't, you should throw your hope to the four winds and come and get a better one. Your hope is no good if you haven't got love in your heart. "Because we love the brethren."

The next thing worth knowing is this: "He that hateth his brother, abideth in darkness." If a man cultivates hate, he is in trouble. That man hasn't got assurance. There has been a family feud down in the Kentucky mountains for many years, and how many do you suppose have been murdered? Forty people or more—families on both sides. Cultivated hate—don't you see? People say they can't tell between a child of God and one who isn't. You can tell very quickly; you don't go to a minister to find that out; you get into their house and live with them, and you can soon tell. If you want to find out whether a man is a Christian, you needn't go to the minister, but go to his wife and his children, and see how he treats them. If he's a merchant, I would see his employees. That's the way to find out. Talk is very cheap now. Some one

Continued on last column

The Children's Pulpit

CLINGING CLIMBERS

By Rev. J. M. FARRAR, D.D.*

THERE are many varieties of roses. In our first rose lesson we will put them all under two varieties—climbers and non-climbers. On Rose Sunday, 1910, we will talk about the clinging climbers. This rose climbs and clings and then clings and climbs and buds and blooms. Each cling is a resting-place and each resting-place is a new start for another climb; each climb sending out more buds and blossoms. Some of these climbers are called perpetuals because they are constantly blooming; climbing and blooming and filling the air with fragrance. As Christ is called the Rose of Sharon I am sure my Juniors will rejoice in being compared to roses. Juniors should be like clinging climbers. Six days for climbing and one for clinging. Sunday is clinging day. On this rest day they have a chance to cling. To what do they cling? To God's love, to his great truth, to great beliefs.

* * *

FOR my Juniors there is a great lesson upon the three splendid arches spanning the doorways of the Milan Cathedral. Over one is carved a beautiful wreath of roses, and underneath is the legend: "All that pleases is but for a moment." Over another is sculptured a cross, and there are the words: "All that troubles is but for a moment." But over the great central arch are the words: "That only is important which is eternal." These three lessons I hope my Juniors will learn and teach.

Many churches have a Junior congregation and the pastor preaches to them every Sunday. The Junior congregation is the Children's Garden. Here is a beautiful story written by James H. Hill of Salt Lake City, the city where roses grow and vine and twine and bloom:

* * *

"EARLY in the springtime many years ago we planted some roses in our garden. No two were alike when we planted them; no two grew the same afterward, although we tried to give each of them the same care and attention. One especially was unlike any of the others; it seemed more frail and its branches more slender and tender. After a while, discouraged with its growth, we decided to remove it and place it with one that would do better; but a friend said: 'The fault is not the rose's, but yours—it's a climber and needs support.' We placed a trellis over the little rose and twined its slender, clinging branches around the lower bar. Returning some days after, we found its branches swinging loosely out from the trellis, and gathering these in, we secured them to another higher bar.

* * *

"AGAIN we returned and again found the branches hanging out and falling down. As we gathered them up, preparing to secure them to a still higher bar, we said, almost impatiently: 'Why can't you stay on the trellis where we put you?' But the little rose seemed to say: 'Did you want me to stay where you put me? I thought you wanted me to grow. I tried hard to reach up to the next bar, but the wind blew so strong that I could not stand alone. I kept on growing and had to go somewhere.'" The gardener learned to help the rose vine to cling and swing on the trellis. Then a little higher he put another trellis bar to which it could climb.

Mr. Hill says: "Years afterwards we returned to our old home, and sitting under a beautiful vine-covered arbor we looked for the roses we had taken care of years before. Some were there strong and thrifty, others had not grown so well, a few were missing. We looked for our little rose, but could not find it. When we inquired for it our friend said: 'Your little rose has grown so that you do not recognize it, for its branches cover this entire arbor. It's the pride of the garden.'"

* * *

JUNIORS are clinging climbers and like our little rose need to be helped over the difficult places, otherwise they will keep on growing, and with no one to help them will soon follow their own inclinations, which are usually down and out. But if the Juniors are trained on the trellis of home and church they will cling and climb and blossom as the rose.

Some day your pulpit pastor expects to be very proud of you, for he is expecting you to climb and cling, to cling and climb, until you become great men and women. Never forget, as you cling and climb, that all love the rose because it gives so much pleasure and is always pleasing.

Here is a little story in which to carry home your Rose Sunday:

"I will not give away my perfume," said the rosebud, holding its pink petals tightly wrapped in their tiny green case. The other roses bloomed in splendor and those who enjoyed their fragrance exclaimed at their beauty and sweetness; but the selfish bud shriveled and withered away, unnoticed.

* * *

"NO, no," said a little bird, "I do not want to sing." But when his brothers soared aloft on joyous wings, pouring a flood of melody, making weary hearers forget sorrow and bless the singers, the little bird was lonesome and ashamed.

"If I give away all my wavelets, I shall not have enough myself," said the brook. And it hoarded all its waters in a hollow place, where it formed a stagnant, slimy pool.

A boy who loved a fresh, wide-awake rose, a buoyant, singing bird, and a leaping, refreshing brooklet thought on these things, and said: "If I would have and would be I must share all my goods with others; for 'to give is to live: to deny is to die.'"

* Pastor 1st Ref'd Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. TEXT: "Blossom as the rose." Isa. 35:1.

Assurance of Salvation

Continued from first column

says—and it is a simple expression—"a good many talk cream, and live skim-milk." They talk all right, but they don't live right. What we want is to keep enmity and jealousy out of our hearts. Perfect love casts out all fear. There being no "fear," we shall be able to look up to the Lord and read our title to the heavenly mansions.

Once when I was preaching in the South, I was trying to show that we can't be Christians without love. A man said: "There are some things true, and one is that you can't be a true gentleman without resenting. I'm a Christian and a gentleman." He stuck to it. Where does that argument lead to? I was in a town where there was a banker and a merchant who had a quarrel; the banker stood in the office one morning and he put his hand into his hip-pocket and he fired at the merchant, and the merchant fired back, but he missed him; but the son was coming down the street, and he saw his father shot at, and he pulled his revolver, and the son and the merchant and the banker were all dead inside of a minute. First families in town! That's where this thing leads to. Got to be "resented"! Jesus taught nothing of the sort. If they smite you on the one cheek, give them the other. You say you don't believe in that. That's what Christ taught and it's what we need now. We can love and no one can hinder us either. I would love a man whether he wants to be loved or not. He can't hinder me.

Now, if you keep at love, summer, winter, all the year round, love will tell. Love begets love. Hatred begets hatred. You can't drive them. That's the mistake people make now. We want to go to them kindly and tell them of the "better life." He that winneth souls is wise. Save by winning.

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

Anvil Sparks

..EVERY deed is the child of a creed.

..THE Bible offers no premium on laziness or improvidence.

..MANY a man who has no fear of a lion backs down before a gnat.

..LOVE for God and man both come into the heart at the same instant.

..JESUS CHRIST never sought his own popularity. Some preachers do.

..IT is hard for others to please the man who is perfectly pleased with himself.

..THE fool and the drum never speak without declaring their emptiness.

..THE people who disappoint God most are those who try to fight their battles alone.

..DECIDE to give up sin and see how soon skepticism will take leave of the heart.

DERELICT

WITH battered hull, and tattered sail,
The sea's unloved, unburied dead,
She powerless drifts before the gale,
The thrall of ocean's fitful will,
But flies her flag at full-mast still.

By fate's misfit I, broken too,
Pride's ports unreached, life's fires burned low,
A blameless, helpless wreck like you,
Outborne as wind or tide may will—
I fly my flag at full-mast still.

Forgot by thankless souls in port,
Who safely trod my solid deck,
Sailed stormy seas by my support,
By my good-faith worked out their will—
I fly my flag at full-mast still.

My coward crew misprize my freight,
Nor guess my Captain's unmapped shores.
Yet spite the weakling winds of fate,
I hold my course to larger port,
And fly my flag at full-mast still.

And from my broken bows I watch
The baffled billows stagger back;
For warm beneath my settling keel
God's deeper homing tide I feel,
And fly my flag at full-mast still.

REV. THOS. E. WINECOFF, D.D.
Strongsville, O.

Edward VII. Borne to Westminster Hall

OF Great Britain it has often been said that her drum beats are heard around the world, but on Tuesday, May 17, there was no sound of joy or triumph in their notes. They were muffled drums which gave out a solemn roll to the accompaniment of minute guns and the mournful clang of the bells as the body of Edward the Seventh was borne from Buckingham Palace to lie in state beneath the sombre arches of Westminster Hall, near the Houses of Parliament. London, with its flags at half-mast, its sombre emblems of mourning and its still more mournful people, was a city of gloom, and when the morning of the seventeenth broke with a gray mist it seemed in harmony with the sad spirit of the day.

A large crowd had gathered before Buckingham Palace and the entire route to Westminster Hall was banked deep with the waiting throng. Through the streets marched thousands of troops to take their post like a hedge of steel along the line of the procession.

Within the palace there was a brief service of prayer over the body of the late king as it lay in the throne room, attended only by relatives and those nearest the king. The queen mother gave way to her grief for a moment and then mastered herself for the painful journey through the streets. Then "Big Ben," the great bell on the Houses of Parliament, boomed solemnly, and again; and the waiting throng saw the red-coated artillerymen bring out the coffin and place it on the purple draped gun carriage, drawn by six black steeds. On the royal pall lay the crown, the orb and sceptre. The Life Guards dismounted led the procession in their brilliant uniforms and wearing their steel breastplates and helmets. Then came Earl Roberts, Lord Kitchener, and other famous military and naval commanders. The gun carriage with its royal burden came next, the sight of which deeply affected the people, who watched and bared their heads as it was drawn slowly past. Behind the gun carriage King George, dressed in the uniform of a British admiral, walked on foot, flanked by his two sons, the Duke of Cornwall, the heir-apparent, and little Prince Albert of Wales, both dressed in the natty uniform of midshipmen. Behind the king walked his uncle, the Duke of Connaught; the King of Denmark, and the King of Norway, and then rank on rank of princes from other countries, and members of the late king's household, lords-in-waiting, equerries, and physicians, most of them in brilliant uniforms, their breasts ablaze with the badges of knightly orders, but on their left sleeve the purple bands of mourning.

Then came nine carriages bearing the ladies of the royal family. In the first rode the widowed queen mother. She had lifted her veil and a great sob of sympathy went up from the crowd when they saw the beautiful face of the beloved Alexandra drawn with grief. Bravely she bowed in response to the uplifted hats of her people.

The British are usually self-contained, but they showed how deeply their hearts had been touched. All classes were represented, from the humblest to the greatest in the land; but a large majority of those who lined the route were workingmen and women. All those who could wore black, while others had at least black or purple on the sleeve. They had stood, many of them, since the evening before to see the procession pass, and when the strains of Chopin's Funeral March, played by a band of four hundred, reached their ears it was hard to find a dry eye in the great throng. The women sobbed aloud and clerks, longshoremen, costers, laborers stood with bared heads and streaming eyes as the body of the late king passed, the king who had brought things to pass for the people when Parliament only talked.

Wreath from Mt. Vernon for King Edward's Bier

It is made from leaves from the tree planted by Edward when Prince of Wales on his visit to Mount Vernon, and with it are leaves from a tree at Washington's tomb.

In the other carriages were Queen Mary, Princess Victoria, the Queen of Norway, and the Duchess of Fife, the late king's daughters, and other relatives. The troops at the sides presented arms and then stood at rest with heads bowed along the line. Now and then the Funeral March of the bands and the drums gave way to the wail of the Scotch bagpipes of the Scotch Guards, playing "The Flowers of the Forest," one of the saddest and most beautiful pieces of the Heatherland.

At last the cortege reached its journey's end, old Westminster Hall, which from the days of William Rufus, has been the scene of great events in England's history, where kings have feasted kings, great trials have been held and parliaments assembled. No attempt had been made to decorate its Gothic interior. Its great carved roof and stone walls were a sufficient and appropriate setting for the last sleep of the king. Gently stout guardsmen removed the crown and sceptre, while the body was borne within and placed upon a magnificent catafalque of purple set in the middle of the hall and flanked with great candles, while at the head and foot Yeomen leaned upon their halberds and Grenadiers stood as if carved in stone. In front were innumerable floral tributes, one of lilies and orchids from Alexandra. Here again another brief religious service was held, the Archbishop of Canterbury reading the prayers. Both the House of Lords and the House of Commons attended. At its close the massed bands began to play the hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," and as the notes floated out over the multitude without innumerable voices took up the words and sang them with feeling. The people felt it was their part in the service.

Alexandra knelt in prayer for a moment before the coffin, and then leaning on her son's arm returned to her carriage and was driven home.

The line of people who now began to stream into the hall and file past the catafalque was several miles long. All day until far into the dusk they went by, and when at last the doors were closed there was still a line of many thousands waiting to be admitted. Fifty thousand had passed through the hall. On Wednesday and Thursday the long procession continued and then the body was borne to royal Windsor to rest in St. George's Chapel in the castle until a tomb can be prepared for it beside Victoria and Albert at Frogmore. At the final service most of the European monarchs were present, including the kings of Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Bulgaria, and Emperor William of Germany. Colonel Roosevelt acted as special representative of the United States with two aids.

Heralds Proclaiming King George V. Before the Lord Mayor at Temple Bar

GENERAL COMMENT ON CURRENT TOPICS OF THE DAY

—AN ILLUMINATIVE FACT in connection with the discussion on second class postal rates is that the German Postal Service now carries parcels anywhere in German, Austrian, and Hungarian territory at one-third of a cent per pound.

—NEW YORK has passed through the throes of a bakers' strike, which extended far beyond the boundaries of the city. Six thousand workers went out, demanding a shorter day and higher wages. Bakers were imported from Philadelphia and elsewhere. For the first time in many years, thousands of housekeepers baked their own bread.

—A HARVARD COLLEGE senior who deserves to win a prize for economy, has apparently solved the problem of the cost of living. He has managed to exist on one dollar a week, has done excellent work in his classes, keeps well and strong on his diet of nuts, fruits and cereals, plays football, is pitcher on the college nine and, moreover, is one of the "strong men" of the university.

—IT WAS Brudder Jasper who, many years ago, became known through his teaching that the earth was flat. Most people probably have imagined that the day of such ignorance was past. This does not seem to be the case, however, for we hear of a school director in Michigan who denounced the school principal because the latter proposed to buy a globe, showing the earth to be circular. He threatened the principal for imbuing his pupils with "such nonsense." Now the principal, in order to retain his post, has decided to "sit tight" and teach that the earth is a pancake.

—THERE WAS A wild panic for an hour in Newark, N. J., the other day. A circus parade was passing; a horse reared and plunged; a nervous woman spectator shrilly called out, "A lion is loose!" and then came pandemonium. Twenty thousand persons went mad with terror. Many fainted and others were trampled under foot. When the uproar ceased, it having been discovered that the alarm was a false one, there were eleven persons in the hospital and over a score more were injured less severely.

—PERHAPS THE strangest wedding ever recorded was one that took place in desolated Cartago, a few hours after the earthquake. It was a triple wedding. Conscience-stricken by the sudden disaster, three couples who had been living out of wedlock, stopped a priest on the street and compelled him to go through the marriage ceremony for their benefit. Stopping beside a little heap of earthquake victims and resting his prayer-book on a dead man's breast, the priest united them formally, the volcano Poas muttering ominously in the background and belching forth volumes of smoke that darkened the sky.

—SOME STARTLING disclosures have been recorded lately in the course of the investigation of the "White Slave" traffic in New York City. Detectives have found four cases in which girls were literally sold by men and women engaged in the traffic. A white man named Levinson and a negro man and woman have been indicted for the offense and held under heavy bail for trial. There are indications of the existence of a regular organization engaged in this nefarious business, and the Rockefeller Grand Jury and criminal authorities are using every means to get at the facts and to bring the offenders to justice.

—IN THE PRESENT issue, a part of the letters from readers are published in continuation of the popular discussion on the Higher Cost of Living. It is hardly necessary to say that the ladies make out a very good case for their sex, in replying to Professor Patten. It is seen, too, that not one but many reasons contribute to present conditions. While domestic extravagance is no doubt a cause, it is only one of many. First of all we are disposed to place the trouble at the door of decreased production, and the ceaseless exodus of the young and strong and vigorous from the country to the city. At the present time, the only people who do not seem to complain of hard times are the farmers themselves.

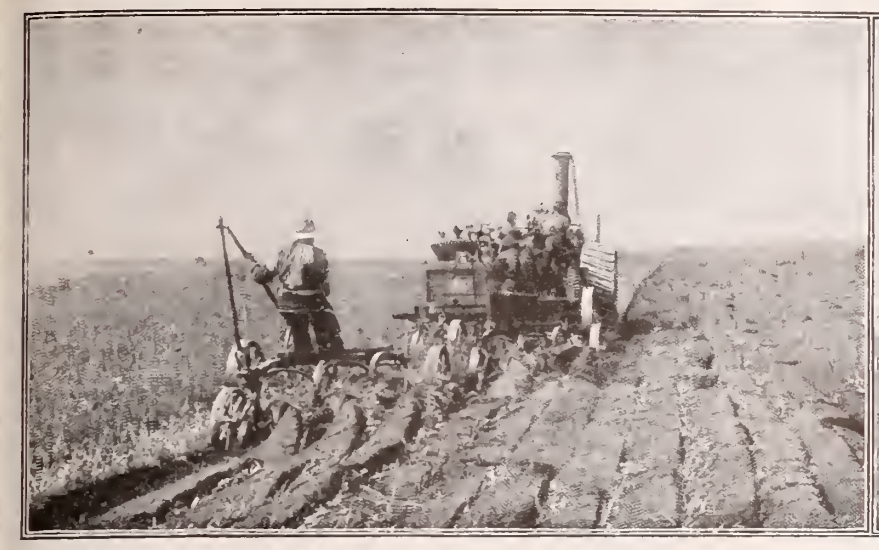
—IN THE CURRENT issue of The World's Work, Mr. J. J. Hill, the well-known railway magnate, discusses the question of high prices, and lays the blame for existing conditions at the door of our national government, whose ever-increasing extravagance he regards with apprehension. He gives these figures to show how the national expenditures have jumped enormously in the last two decades:

1870	$293,657,005
1880	264,847,637
1890	297,736,487
1900	487,713,792
1908	659,196,320

This, which by no means represents the whole cost of Federal maintenance, means a rise per capita in eighteen years from $4.75 to $7.56.

—WITH A VIEW of putting a stop to medical practice by untrained and irresponsible persons not regularly licensed, a bill was lately introduced in the New York Legislature which has been the subject of considerable discussion. It brought out a storm of protests from certain sects throughout the State, who regarded it as a direct blow at their peculiar teachings and who therefore opposed it on the ground of religious persecution. It was explained by the introducer of the bill that it was designed to affect only those who practised medicine, and was in no sense intended to be an attack on any religious belief. The bill was sent back to Committee where it was amended. It excepts from the prohibition in the public health law the practice of any church, provided that in such practice no diagnosis, no drugs, or other medicines and no surgical operations are used or attempted.

PEOPLING OF THE FARTHEST WEST



Breaking Ground in Virgin Canadian Soil

Landseekers Choosing a Location

THE inflow of settlers into the provinces and territories of Western Canada, though it did not begin in earnest until the Western States had nearly filled, has now gone past the nearer plains and has reached into the still newer, and perhaps still richer, north. Along the southern bounds of the region, where wheat is king, there is now a continuous stretch of farms and farming towns from Winnipeg to the Rockies; a second trunk railroad, two hundred miles north, and numerous branch lines across the country lying between, have opened up another immense area that is now practically all occupied; and of necessity the homeseekers of today are looking to the country that lies still farther north, beyond the railroad, beyond the towns, reaching into the very outskirts of the continent, but rich in resources and natural beauty. When this, too, has filled, the last of America's promise-land will have been taken.

From England and Scotland, from France, from northern and central Europe, and even from the Orient, the people have come, and are coming, in thousands. During the last ten years the aggregate arrivals have been more than a million, and the annual average is now about 200,000. This large influx is the outcome, partly, of a systematic immigration campaign by the Canadian government, but is due first of all to the land-hunger and home-hunger of people everywhere. The fertile fields of the Canadian West have been given out to these newcomers in homestead lots, upon condition of settlement and bona fide occupation. The older portions of the country were opened for homestead entry in parcels and at intervals, nearly all the reserves having now been disposed of in this way. In the early weeks of this year there was in southern Alberta one of the largest land rushes on record, when a thousand men sought entry on a block of land lying along the international boundary. Henceforth, intending settlers must look farther north, to the new districts where free homesteads are still to be had, or deal in the ordinary way of purchase with the men who are already in possession of the coveted land. Farms given free a few years ago have to-day a market value of from $10 to $30 per acre, needing only to be turned over with the plow before sowing. The last harvest in the four Western Canadian provinces amounted to 100,000,000 bushels of wheat alone.

A noteworthy feature of the last year's immigration has been the increased proportion of American settlers. Drawn by the enticing offer of cheap land and good crops, in a country where law and order prevail, and where the school is held in high regard, many farmers have sold their holdings and have moved across the border. In 1909, a family total of nearly 100,000 persons thus migrated, which in business terms means fully $90,000,000 of new wealth for the Canadian West. From Canada's standpoint these are most desirable settlers, for they are already familiar with the principles of prairie farming and are prepared to enter at once into the spirit and responsibilities of citizenship. It is also a very practical means of drawing the interests of the two nations closer, for, in the new home, the old one is still remembered.

The immigrant from Europe brings with him a problem. The English or Scottish settler has merely to adapt himself to new surroundings; but the foreign-born—the Russian, the Galician, the Scandinavian—has an entirely new life to learn, and a new civilization confronts him. How he shall be made to understand it and to enter into its spirit, so that he may become a citizen, constitutes the problem of the West. There are even now great blocks of the prairie country peopled almost entirely by the foreign element, duplicating very largely the life and manners that prevail among the older nations of Europe.

The task of spreading the Gospel has been manfully undertaken by the churches and schools, and over the whole West and North preacher and teacher are being sent on timely missions.

AUBREY FULLERTON.

A Homestead in the Prince Albert District

* * *

Another correspondent, Mr. Charles C. Johnson, writes as follows of the agricultural influx into Canada:

Across the Canadian boundary from North Dakota and Montana are three Canadian provinces—Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Included in these is the territory still given a place on some maps as Assiniboia. United States interest in these provinces lies in the fact that hundreds of American farmers have, within the last five years, crossed the border and made homes there. The same conditions exist as were to be found in the United States a quarter of a century ago. New railroads and extensions of old ones, notably the Canadian Northern system, have brought about the opening to settlement of a vast territory. The area of the provinces named is: Alberta, whose capital is Edmonton, 253,540 square miles; Saskatchewan, with Regina as its capital, 250,650 square miles, and Manitoba, Winnipeg being the capital, 73,732 square miles.

While Manitoba is less in area than many of the United States, only Texas and Alaska rank with Alberta and Saskatchewan. The work of opening this new territory is being vigorously prosecuted. The most modern methods of railroad building are employed. The homesteader keeps pace with the railroads. The railroads and the Canadian government have united in an effort to attract settlers, with result, so far as Americans are concerned, for it is claimed that more than 3,000 American families emigrated to Canada during 1909.

The Goose Creek section of the Saskatchewan Valley is a notable instance of the speed with which settlement is proceeding. Five years ago there was scarcely a settler in it. Now there are miles on miles of continuous wheat fields. Even beyond the sections reached by the railways there are plenty of homesteaders. The land office headquarters are in tents, and the homesteader is taken there to select his allotment.

Wheat growing is the staple industry of the three provinces. There were last year sown to wheat alone 6,700,000 acres, producing a total yield of 188,000,000 bushels. Eighty per cent. of this was graded No. 2 Northern, and better. The amount of wheat sent forward to terminal elevators January 1, 1910, exceeded $50,000,000 in value. The provinces also produced last year 163,000,000 bushels of oats and 31,000,000 bushels of barley, besides a large amount of flax.

In Alberta, much attention has been given to the sales of farm lands in the southern half of the province. The extension of the irrigation district has made available an immense tract of land hitherto only useful as a cattle range. It is estimated that there are 3,000,000 acres already reached by irrigation ditches. There, as in the United States, irrigation is looked upon as the real developer of the unsettled districts.

So far as climate is concerned the conditions are said to be more equable than in a number of the Northern United States. The air is dry, and, while the mercury drops to a lower figure, at the same time the severity of the cold seems much less than in a more humid atmosphere.

"The Sweetest Thing I've Seen"

Dear Mr. Editor: The "Dreamland" calendar, the "Dorcas" picture and Hero Tales from American Life all safely received. The calendar is the sweetest thing I've seen. The "Dorcas" picture is fine, and the book, as to type and general attractiveness, most satisfactory. There is surely no disappointment anywhere, only surprise and pleasure.

Newark, N. J. MARY J. CONKLIN.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor — GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

The Growth of Christianity

IT is an encouraging sign of the times when we see the leading magazines taking a genuine interest in the things that relate to spiritual life and progress. One after the other of our foremost periodicals is falling into line in treating ably and reverently, and with a basis of sound information, those questions that make for religion in the home, the community and the nation.

The Century Magazine, in its April issue, discusses very interestingly the indications of a revival of religion, not in the churches but among the people. This, it believes, is not the result of ordinary evangelistic effort, but is in the nature of a moral renaissance — the backward sweep of the pendulum from the immoral conditions of recent years. Open infidelity, the abuse of public trust, ingenious methods of frauds, lax and vicious laws and other flagrant evils have driven sensible people to see the necessity of a surer and better anchorage for the renovation of moral character and the cultivation of the "power that makes for righteousness."

While we appreciate fully the need of an energizing and enlightening influence in public affairs, we cannot take the despondent view of the situation that is held by many writers. Evils that affect society and commercial, professional and private life, are magnified by increased publicity. This applies with particular force to all exposures of wrongdoing, graft, corruption and other forms of immorality. We believe that there is now and has been for many years a growing improvement in morals generally, and in true, deep religious feeling. There are probably twice the number of real, right-living Christian men and women to-day that there were twenty years ago. Take by way of illustration, the recent Laymen's National Congress in Chicago. Originating wholly outside of the churches, yet co-operating with them; holding the highest spiritual ideals and the most practical plans for their accomplishment, that convention represented 20,000,000 laymen, all business and professional men, and all imbued with an earnest desire for a mighty religious revival, which should sweep the globe and carry the Gospel to the remotest ends of the earth in as short a time as possible. It is no longer considered a strange thing for a man in public life and business to be known as a Christian. Our people, as the Century writer observes, are "thinking seriously and feeling deeply on the great things of the inner life."

Sharon Turner, famous both as historian and statistician, is authority for these statistics in regard to the march of Christianity through the centuries:

First century, five hundred thousand Christians; second century, two million Christians; third century, five million Christians; fourth century, ten million Christians; fifth century, fifteen million Christians; sixth century, twenty million Christians; seventh century, twenty-four million Christians; eighth century, thirty million Christians; ninth century, forty million Christians; tenth century, fifty million Christians; eleventh century, seventy million Christians; twelfth century, eighty million Christians; thirteenth century, seventy-five million Christians; fourteenth century, eighty million Christians; fifteenth century, one hundred million Christians; sixteenth century, one hundred and twenty-five million Christians; seventeenth century, one hundred and fifty-five million Christians; eighteenth century, two hundred million Christians, nineteenth century, at least four hundred and fifty million Christians. At the present time, according to Fournier de Flaix, the French statistician, there are between 480,000,000 and 500,000,000 Christians or one-third the total population of the world.

The pyramid grows steadily and will continue to grow. Time will yet come when the hopes of our continent will be realized in the establishment of improved social and physical conditions, cleaner, wholesomer surroundings, saner business methods, better public service, wiser legislation and a clearer and a surer grasp of the great truths of the Gospel, which must form the basis of the enduring well-being of any people. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

The Man at the Throttle

ON the cover page of this issue appears the reproduction of a striking picture by the well-known painter Mead, illustrating an incident on one of our great transcontinental railways, where a heavy rain in the Rockies has loosened great masses of earth which have fallen right in the track of an onrushing express. The quick eye of the engineer has caught a glimpse of rocks ahead and has stopped his engine with its nose against the obstruction. A fine body of men are the engineers of America, the men at the throttle, physically fit, clear-eyed, with muscles of steel and nerves cool as ice; they have in their charge millions of lives and the accidents due to them are exceedingly few. The drinkers among them are very scarce. The rules are against it, as the tipplers' nerves would be unequal to the task. The American trainmen, as a whole, are distinctly a fine class physically and mentally, for only such could hope to make their way in the arduous calling, and some of them win their way to the highest positions. One of the chief officials of the New York Central started as a man working on the track, and Sir William Van Horn, of Canada, started as a telegraph operator.

In other walks of life there are cool heads at the throttle of affairs. They are needed to check waste and extravagance in business and in our national life where we are going "the pace that kills," and the successful leaders are found to be those who have the railroad man's knack of keeping up the highest speed consistent with safety and efficiency and who are quick to shut off steam when they find that there are obstructions ahead. It is a lesson for this rushing generation: "Don't run by the danger signals" that are posted along the railway of every man's career. The world is full of wrecks, who "tried to make one more station," and who did not use the throttle while there was time.

The Peace Congress

IN his letter to the New England Peace Congress at Hartford, Conn., President Taft uses some very plain words in describing the attitude of our government. While expressing himself as favoring international peace, and arbitration as a means of securing it, he explains that this does not mean that I am in favor of a country giving up that which we now use for the purpose of securing peace, to wit, our army and our navy; because I believe that the expense of armament is working toward peace.

Secretary Knox, who also may be regarded as representing our official attitude, went a step further than the President and favored a permanent tribunal of arbitration, in continued session at The Hague, in order that "the Court should be ready for the litigants and not the litigants for the Court." One may perceive in these declarations the influence of Mr. Roosevelt's recent speech at Christiania. It is clearly the purpose of the Federal government to support no policy that will involve any considerable reductions in our naval and military forces. Our budget of defense, however, is rapidly becoming an appalling one, especially when it is remembered that at the present time we are on peaceful terms with the whole world. Such is the spirit of the nation as a whole that it is doubtful whether any plan for material reduction could be carried through, unless the hope of a permanent peace tribunal, with power and means to execute its findings, should be speedily realized.

The Comet's Message

THE comet's visit is an event of the past. It swept by us in the night, its port of departure no less than its destination being unknown to us. Was the wanderer of the skies a messenger to us, or only a chance wayfarer? How small and insignificant all our human affairs appeared while the comet blazed in the morning heavens and his fiery breath seemed to brush our very gates! What a tiny affair our little earthball, with its antlike inhabitants, contrasted with the vast proportions of the celestial stranger! Along the immeasurable path by which he came and went, the farthest reach of science is but a span.

Enoch, so the ancients tell us, was the discoverer of the science of astronomy, and the first to study the splendors of the firmament. He "walked with God." Already, in the days of Seth, it is recorded that man had begun to pray and "call upon the name of the Lord," and Enoch's holy life and high vocation doubtless had its influence in directing the thoughts of that early race toward the marvels of the skies, and through these, to the contemplation of their omnipotent Maker. So this celestial wonder, which has just been visiting us, should make us humble and prayerful.

As we look up to the heavens, brilliant with its constellations (are they those "many mansions" which our Saviour had in mind?) our hearts should be filled with gratitude towards our heavenly Father, who, in his government of the universe, "doeth all things well." Halley's comet has done more than merely challenge the attention of the world and excite its wonder or its terror, if it has brought us in reverent thought and feeling nearer to Him who has given us the assurance that before this old earth passes away, the great scheme of man's redemption will have been fulfilled and the Gospel will have become known to all peoples.

China's Emancipation Decree

CHINA has taken another step forward. An imperial rescript has been issued, abolishing slavery in the empire. Those who have till now been held as slaves in Manchu homes will be treated as hired servants, but as their term of service will be fixed for several years they will be little the better for their nominal freedom. In the famine years, thousands of children were sold; hereafter, they will be "bound" as servants for a fixed term—very little difference. There will be no bargaining and selling of wives as heretofore; but under the new law a Chinese may regularly marry as many wives as he pleases or can support. To a great extent, the emancipation is such in name only, and it will probably require several more generations before the true idea of human liberty be realized, if indeed it is ever quite realized, in the slow-moving, antiquated Celestial empire.

General Notes

—THE SULTAN OF TURKEY, who is sixty-six, is reported seriously ill. In addition to Bright's disease, he recently had an attack of measles.

—THERE ARE ominous signs of trouble ahead in China, but whether it will take the shape of an anti-dynastic movement or be simply anti-foreign is uncertain. It may be both. The Chinese government, however, is much better prepared to cope with a rising than it was when the Boxer troubles occurred in 1898. The new well-drilled army is pronounced "quite equal to any emergency."

—THE BALLINGER-PINCHOT controversy is still holding the public interest on account of the various charges made by one side or the other. Recently a sensation was sprung by a stenographer named Kirby, who was in the government employ. He came out with the statement that the letter exonerating Mr. Ballinger was not written by Mr. Taft but by Mr. Lawler, one of the officials in Mr. Kirby's department. He was urged, it is said, by some of Mr. Ballinger's opponents to make the statement as a public duty. It seems that Mr. Kirby, from his subordinate position, did not know all the facts, for Mr. Taft said at once that he gave the facts to Mr. Lawler to put into the form of a letter, and then appended his signature as chief executive, a thing done in the great rush of presidential business. In regard to the Cunningham claims on Alaska coal lands, Mr. Ballinger said frankly that he looked them over and that Mr. Schwartz, chief of the special agents, said they were all right. Mr. Schwartz at once took the stand and assumed the responsibility. Mr. Branders, who had heen asking Mr. Ballinger for hours about things he said he could have no personal knowledge, was much taken ahack and did not attempt to cross-examine Mr. Schwartz.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 1, 1910

	PAGE
The Peril of the Pass	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	518
Opening Day at Brussels Exhibition (Illustrated)	518
The Passing of Halley's Comet (Illustrated)	519
Our Assurance of Salvation. Sermon By Dwight L. Moody	520, 521
The Children's Pulpit. By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	521
Edward VII. borne to Westminster Hall (Illustrated)	522
Peopling of the Farthest West (Illustrated)	523
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	524
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	525
Is Woman to Blame for High Prices? (Illustrated)	526
Problems for Women Folk (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	527
The Strawberry Handkerchief Serial Story by Amelia E. Barr	528, 529
Jesus the Friend of Mothers Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	530, 531
Young People's Societies	532
The Criminal Liquor Traffic (Portrait)	533
He Tried "The Golden Rule" (Portrait)	534
Founder of Mothers' Day (Portrait)	535

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

New York Police Parade

THE annual parade of the Poliee Department of New York City occurred on Saturday, May 14. Six thousand men, with splendid physique and eatures, handsomely uniformed, afoot, on horse- ick and wheels, marehed from Astor Plaee and afayette Street, up Broadway and Madison Ave- ue to Fortieth Street, and baek down Fifth Avenue. ogether with Mayor Gaynor and Commissioner aker at the reviewing stand were Major-General Valter Howe, Commander of the Department of the ast of the United States Army, and Deputy Com- issioners Charles W. Kirby, John J. Walsh, and ewis H. Reynolds. Chief Inspector Maximillian chmittberger rode a big bay horse at the head of the rocession. It is said there was never a more sue- ssful annual parade than this one. The Mayor mplimented the men in unstinted terms, telling iem that he believed ninety-five per eent. of them ere true, honest men, who wanted and tried to do eir duty. The little honor squad, who in the last velve years had been rewarded for eeds of bravery in which they had sked life and limb, were an important art of the proeession, and the award- g of medals to the new heroes was an ent of singular interest in the day's lebration. James A. Mulroy, who had en shot by an Italian in the jaw and the hip, pursued and captured his ssailant. Commissioner Baker notic- g the deep wound in the man's cheek, sked if that was where the bullet had ssed, as he pinned upon Mulroy the edal of the Poliee Department and the rooklyn Citizen's medal. The Mayor, ter he had been told of the daring of ieutenant John F. Dwyer, who had scued a drowning man in the darkness the night against a fierce tide, said the lieutenant: "How did you ever ve through it?" The Rhinelander edal was then pinned upon Dwyer. omments were also made by the Mayor he bestowed the Isaac Bell medal for avery upon Polieeman John Patafoe, ho at the risk of his own life saved a e-armed man from drowning at ergen Beach, and when he gave the utomobile Club of Ameriea's medal to oliceman Patriek McMahon, who bore way a dynamite bomb in burning pa- ers to save others, and by the explo- on sustained injuries himself which ept him seven months in the hospital. o one could see the imposing parade ithout being impressed with the fact the splendid army of defense which e metropolis has. The personnel of e poliee foree of New York is very gh. Its weakness and danger have ly been in its misdireetion by unwis- m and unrighteousness higher up. It fortunate for the city that there seems be a determination to inspire in the epartment from the highest to the low- t man a reverenee for law and its forcement and a hatred of anything hich looks like collusion with any form vice or the sale of law for money. hrough the centuries it has been nee- ssary to have men set apart, uniformed d disciplined, to proteet the life and property of e people. The personnel of the poliee foree of ew York reminds us of the manliness, effieieney d discipline of the Roman soldier as mentioned by s captain in the conversation with our Lord:

For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I y to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he meth; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it. (Matt. 8:9.)

dison's Cement House

Thomas A. Edison, who has made such enormous ntributions to the material and mental welfare of is generation, has just appeared upon the stage ith the model of his new eement house eompleted n whieh he has been working for a number of years. is object has been to construct a substantial house the minimum cost where the wage-earner of a oderate ineome can have as eomfortable a home s his millionaire employer, and he claims to have en suceessful in his undertaking. The house is of ement, of comely architecture, and can be built rge enough to house an ordinary artisan's family r $1,200 to the man desiring to buy, and for $10 month to the one who wishes to rent. In these ays of murderously high priees for bread, clothing, uel, rent and the other necessaries of life, it is a fortunate thing that some relief is likely to be given to the tens of thousands of working people who are barely holding their own in the battle for sheer subsistenee. He is truly a benefactor who makes it easier to found a home where love may be enshrined, where ehildhood may be trained, where Christ's true ehurch may be preserved. This home instinet as a motive for bravery in the battle for life and for the right by the head of the family in the strength of Almighty God is beautifully deseribed in the appeal of the prophet:

Be not ye afraid of them: remember the Lord, which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses. (Neh. 4:14.)

A New Anæsthetic

The search for an anæsthetic with no ill effect on the heart or other vital organs seems to have been rewarded at last, by experiments whieh show that electricity is far superior to any of the drugs now used to produce sleep and dull pain. It is claimed by the surgeons making the experiment that electrieity as an anæsthetic has no bad effect on the heart. By aeting on the nerve eentres of the brain it produees a form of insensibility called eleetric sleep. When the eircuit is open the influenee of the anæsthetie is immediately lost and the patient becomes eonscious, without feeling any of the after effeets common to ether and ehloroform. Sin is in the human heart, causing pain and threatening death. There is a necessity for spiritual surgery and medication. The prophet refers to this condition in the wiekedness of a great eity.

Take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed. (Jer. 51:8.)

The Parade of 6,000 New York Police on May 14

A Japanese Bible

Mrs. E. D. Latta, of Charlotte, N. C., while in New York recently bought from the Bible Soeiety a Bible written in the Japanese language. Mrs. Latta is supporting a little Japanese girl, who is being cared for in an orphanage at Sendai, Japan; and this handsome leather-bound volume, with the child's name, Ina Uyeaa, inscribed on the cover, is being sent by Miss Curier, who has eharge of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Orphan Fund, to the ehild as a gift from her benefactress. This good woman, who assumed the responsibility of elothing and feeding the body of the little orphan girl, felt also the neeessity of feeding her soul on God's holy word and on Jesus the bread of life. The giver might have fittingly marked this verse in the Book:

And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus. (II. Tim. 3:15.)

Kaiser's Present to Roosevelt

Theodore Roosevelt, though a private eitizen, has been reeeived like the ruler of an empire by the erowned heads and eourts of Europe. Mr. Roosevelt's visit to the Emperor of Germany was looked forward to with great interest by the eivilized world. He and Emperor William are mueh alike in intellect, genius, will, tireless industry, incorruptible integrity, and broad statesmanship. At their meeting they were like two old tried friends, almost like two boys in the vigor and enthusiasm of their communieation and friendship. Just before leaving Germany Emperor William sent Mr. Roosevelt as a gift a magnifieent vase, espeeially manufactured for the visitor at the royal porcelain works, and embellished with a portrait of the Kaiser and pietures of the royal palace and grounds. Aceompanying the vase was a note expressing the great pleasure the emperor felt in making the gift, and asking that it be returned to the factory, where it will be packed and sent to the German ambassador at Washington, by whom later it is to be despatched to Mr. Roosevelt's residenee in Oyster Bay. From the earliest times it has been the eustom for visiting monarehs to exehange presents and for monarchs to bestow presents upon distinguished persons visiting their palaees. The Queen of Sheba just before returning to her home eountry was the reeipient of most costly gifts at the hand of King Solomon.

And King Solomon gave unto the Queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside that which Solomon gave her of his royal bounty. So she turned and went to her own country, she and her servants. (I. Kings 10:13.)

Dr. Hyde Guilty

Dr. Bennett Clark Hyde, eharged with the murder of millionaire Thomas H. Swope, his father-in-law, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by the jury at Kansas City, Mo., the other day, and his punishment fixed at imprisonment for life. Colonel Swope died Oetober 3, after a severe eonvulsion, following the administration of a capsule preseribed by Dr. Hyde, his family physieian. Two days previously James Moss Hunton, a eousin of the millionaire, died at the Swope home, after six pints of blood had been drawn from him by order of Dr. Hyde to relieve an attaek of apoplexy. Early in Deeember ten members of the Swope family were strieken with typhoid fever, eontraeted, witnesses swore, by the inoeulation of their system with the disease by Dr. Hyde. Chrisman Swope, a brother of Dr. Hyde's wife, died immediately after having taken the eapsule given to him by Dr. Hyde, whieh produced convulsions and death similar to that which earried away Colonel Swope. Early in January the viseera of Chrisman and of Colonel Swope were seeretly sent to Chicago for analysis. The chemists found almost an entire grain of stryehnine in Colonel Swope's liver. A coroner's investigation resulted in the verdict that Colonel Swope had been poisoned. Suspieion had already turned toward Dr. Hyde, and damaging evidence multiplied whieh indicted and convicted him. All the testimony went to prove that Dr. Hyde was murdering one by one those that stood between his wife and himself and the millions of the Swope money. The annals of crime record few such cold-blooded and atrocious murders as this. All sin has a tendency to move legitimately in the direetion of death. What eountless murders there are whieh are caused by envy, jealousy, malice and avarice! Dr. Hyde had the avariee of the burglar and highwayman without their courage. Dr. Hyde's avarice, whieh brought death to his relatives as the natural fruit, brought also the assassination of his own charaeter and reputation, and came within a hair's breadth of eausing death to his own body.

And sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death. (James 1:15.)

Is Woman to Blame for High Prices?

Many of the Sex, and Men Also, Join in the Discussion of Professor Patten's Extraordinary Charge

More on the Cost of Living

SO many letters continue to pour into our office upon this vital subject that we give space to a few of the most emphatic sentiments in them. The country is evidently fully roused upon the matter and will not be content until something radical is done. The Congressional Committee must thoroughly understand this, and must probe the question to the roots. If tariff or trusts are to blame, they must be regulated. The faces of the people must not be ground by the greed of the powerful few. If it is the increasing supply of gold which is to blame, as many wise ones claim, the case will doubtless sooner or later adjust itself; but, as several of our correspondents imply, there is ground for fear that the prices of the necessaries of life have been put up arbitrarily by the big corporations simply to fill their own pockets.

"Between the upper and nether millstones"

Social Ambition a Danger

The majority of American homes are presided over by unselfish, loving women, who work and sacrifice for their loved ones in the old-fashioned way. There are some unhappy exceptions, it is true, and these are largely caused by the present ambitious style of living. Young married men, holding small-salaried positions, are often living beyond their incomes, because they are ambitious to support their families in as good a style as those better off.

"To measure our desires by our resources is the secret of contentment."

Things would be improved if in every household this motto were heeded:

"The beauty of the house is order.
The blessing of the house is contentment.
The glory of the house is hospitality.
The crown of the house is godliness."

Ionia, Mich. IONE K. BATES.

. . .

Scarcity of Farm Help

In this neighborhood there are at least ten well-to-do farmers who used to hire a man the year around and perhaps two during the summer. These farmers are now doing their own work, and working harder than they ever did before, simply because they cannot get helpers. Instead of making hundreds of pounds of butter yearly, as they used to, they now make only enough for their own families.

Glasford, Ill. R. L. STEWART.

. . .

It Is the Farmer's Children

The women are not to blame for the high prices, and neither are the farmers. The farmers' boys and girls find that they can make a living much more easily in the city than on the farm, and so they leave their parents to manage without them the best way they can. Hired help is scarce and poor, and so the farmer often rents out his farm to tenants who do not begin to get the produce out of it that they ought. The farmers are raising much less stock than formerly, and if the people boycott their products, matters will be worse than ever. We feel as if we should have to quit the farms altogether, for we are growing too old to work, and the young folks won't work. MRS. WM. GRIER.

Cairo, Kan.

. . .

Let the Government Probe It

Perhaps we had better keep quiet about this matter until the government has made a thorough investigation. We have laws enough to punish the guilty, if they can only be enforced.

Corn sold in Chicago a year ago for 59¾ cents per bushel. We here in Clearwater, Neb., received 50 cents per bushel. In February, 1910, corn sold in Chicago for 64½ cents per bushel, and we received at Clearwater 47 cents per bushel. The profit to the Chicago buyer (not including freight) was 9¾ cents per bushel in 1909, while in 1910 it was 17½ cents per bushel. Thus it is plain that the large dealers, not the farmers, are to blame. When they have to come down in their prices, then they come down on the farmers, so that it is the farmers who lose in the end every time.

Six years ago the farmers paid $15 per month for a hired man here. His board cost about $8 per month. Board, room, washing and wages amounted to about $25 per month.

Now we are paying from $30 to $35 for the same man; his board costs about $15, and the whole cost of his labor to us is about $50 per month.

Machinery is about 25 per cent. higher than six years ago.

What Governor Stubbs of Kansas says in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of February 9, 1910, is strictly true. FRED COOLEY.

Clearwater, Neb.

. . .

Women Not at Fault

How can the improvidence of our women be the trouble with our prices, when everybody admits that there is an abundance of food in cold storage and packed away in warehouses? Then what quantities are exported to foreign countries! The women in our rural districts are as industrious and economical as ever. The national meat packers, now under indictment, are probably the principal cause of all our woes. Let us hope that they will be brought to justice. MISS S. H. DAYTON.

Port Jefferson, L. I.

. . .

Between Two Millstones

The large meat and egg dealers have combined, and raised prices, but they do not pay the farmers in proportion. In our State, eggs are thirty cents per dozen, but we are not raising enough for home consumption. One of our cartoons lately pictured the farmer riding to town in his automobile, with crates of eggs piled high behind.

While the grand juries are planning to cast the drag-net for the price-juggler, the farmer who formerly took two loads of hogs to market is now glad to market two or three hogs, and the tax-collector is watching him on the street corner.

Two years ago, hogs were selling at four cents per pound, and wheat was below $1 per bushel. Nothing was heard then of meat-strikes or of grand juries hunting for price-jugglers.

All through history, the agriculturists have been ground between the upper and nether millstones — the non-producer who lives from their labor, and the great combinations of capital that control the food-stuff markets of the world. E. C. WILBERT.

Annapolis, Ill.

"The farmer rides in his automobile"

. . .

Don't Boycott the Farmer

Two years ago I had sixty hogs. I used up my own feed and bought more and paid sixty cents per bushel. I worked all winter and sold the hogs in the spring for 4¼ cents per pound. If I had sold my feed and idled all winter I should have been some $200 better off. The packers lowered prices on the hoof until they bought our stuff. Then they raised it and made millions. This discouraged us so that we are raising less each year. I have about thirty hogs now. I was in hopes that I should make a little on them, but now that the newspapers have joined the packers in boycotting meat, o hope is gone; for the packers will make this the excuse to cut down prices on the hoof. The farm has nothing but discouragement.

Mineota, Minn. JOHN YEO.

. . .

Is He a "Cranky Old Bachelor"?

Professor Patten must be either a cranky c bachelor or a hen-pecked husband. It may be that few women are taking life easily and burdeni their husbands; but the vast majority are plannir working and contriving as hard as ever women d to make their homes happy. They are giving of their very heart's blood, as it were, for their homes and their loved ones. I know this is true of our country women. Speak up, city wives and mothers, and let us hear how you stand on this subject.

"Our boys and girls leave the farm"

It is true that the country is becoming deserted in the great rush cityward. Help here is scarce and high. When the consumers so greatly outnumber the producers, prices are bound to go high. The middlemen's profit helps to swell them. At the present price of pork, not more than one farmer in fifty has any hogs to sell. He cannot raise the corn on which to feed them. Thousands of bushels of grain were shipped into th county last year.

Many in the cities long to live in the countr Ere long they will surely be coming this way, f the country is the best, after all.

Greene County, Pa. MRS. DELLA GRIMES.

. . .

Women Need More Leisure

Professor Patten must remember that wom need more time than of yore to study the gre questions of the day, if they are to wield the infl ence that Christian sisters, wives, and mothe should in the home. The husband comes to his wi for counsel; her children come to her for help their studies. How can she help them unless s keeps herself bright and intelligent? And this c be done only by reading and study.

We Oregon women make little on our fruits a vegetables, but we like to do our own canning. W have the sole care of the poultry, and help in the ca of our gardens. Many of us help in the milkin The great majority of our women spend their liv in caring for their noble husbands and childre Many of our best and bravest mothers have sa rificed their lives to their homes, dying from ove work. But when our husbands come in at nig tired from their labor, they want to have us able discuss with them the interesting questions of t day. We must have time to read up on the Our work will not suffer in consequence.

Marshfield, Ore. MRS. M. D. CULLEP.

. . .

Women Help, Not Hinder

Naturally as civilization advances expenses i crease. Before men were civilized, they did n use soap. Now they are very particular what kin they use. We are having many essays written our State University upon the subject, "How t Women Can Pay Off the Mortgage on Every Far in the State." But I can say that if the men ha taken the advice of the women, there would not so many mortgages to lift. I assure Profess Patten that the women of North Dakota are n troubled with the hookworm. We work in mar lines, and that, too, without neglecting our duti as wives and mothers.

If our husbands will not plant strawberries a small fruits, how can we pick and preserve then If they will not raise cattle and sheep, how can w make butter and spin yarn? You can hardly e pect women to be their own milliners and dres makers, until men make their own plows a binders. We women are more than ready to he our men if they will only give us a chance.

North Dakota. MRS. W. C. C.

Professor Patten's Arraignment

THE extravagance of women, declares Professor Patten of the University of Pennsylvania, is a leading factor in the present high cost of living; they are often more of a burden than a help in the home, and do not practise the domestic virtues of their grandmothers. More of our correspondents answer him in the letters printed on this page.

Problems for Women Folk

Women in Council

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THE cost of living is certainly a topic which directly interests the family. When women meet to consult over their affairs they need not always object to the presence of a man in the house. This week the first contribution is:

* * *

A Husband's Statement "I was married four years ago. To-day I have the dearest wife and the sweetest babe, two years old, in the world, and with Christ in our home, life is sublime. 'Tis needless to say my leisure hours—none too long—are spent in the home. To-day we are enjoying prosperity; but life has not always run smoothly since the day we were wed. At that time we began under most favorable financial circumstances, but owing to my personal frivolous, weak nature, adversity came upon us six months after our marriage. At this time I was editor of the local home paper. Forced to sell, for two years I jumped from pillar to post, making about four hundred dollars a year. Our sincere love only kept my wife's and my own character unblemished, but we have come out "on top," profiting by the adversity, and are to-day enjoying prosperity. Honest, industrious, enthusiastic, concentrated effort accomplished the result. To-day I am assistant postmaster at six hundred a year, besides working insurance on the side. I have a nicely furnished home. 'Live within our means' is our motto. We have our work and expenses systematized and know just what we are doing."

* * *

A Woman's Word for the Old Soldiers The next letter should touch a spring that will vibrate in many a heart. If you feel your heart touched send your response in letters or literature to our correspondent, Mrs. Helen Morgan, Bath, New York: "My copy of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD does a lot of good. I take it up to read to the poor dear, brave old veterans in the two hospitals. There are four hundred men in the two. Some are able to walk about; some sit in wheel chairs all day; some lie flat in their beds. All seem so brave in their lonely suffering. They have enough to eat and clean beds, but they have a heart hunger for a kind word or some cheery reading. Some of them have had the best of homes in New York City, but money flew away and friends are all dead, and they are here the guests of Uncle Sam, who pays one hundred dollars per capita for them, and New York State pays the rest. There are about three thousand men in all, some in barracks, forty in a room. You should see it."

* * *

A Puzzle Here is a puzzling situation. What would you do in the circumstances? "I am torn between my duty to my husband and my duty to my children. We live in a neighborhood remote from a town, but there is a district school within a half mile, which the children attend, and there is a little church within walking distance where Sunday School is held every week and where we have preaching in the afternoon of Sunday once a month. The minister has to drive a long distance to keep this appointment, but his sermons are so good and helpful that the little congregation lives on the thought of them until the month rolls round again. The town where my husband's business is unfortunately situated is a wicked place. Saloons abound. I cannot bear to think of letting my children, who are all under ten years of age, live where they must hear and see what goes on there. My husband drives to and from his place of business, and there is no reason why he should not continue to do so. The distance for him is three miles each way. Now he insists on our selling our home and garden and removing with the little ones into the very middle of one of the roughest towns in the whole Southwest. I have resisted his arguments for the sake of the children. For the first time in our married life we have reached a point of division, and sometimes John hardly speaks to me from one week's end to another. If I call him up on the telephone he hangs up the receiver as soon as he hears my voice. We have four children between two years and ten; three of them go to school. They are all thriving in the pure country air. What course should I take?"

* * *

Mental Worry A physician was asked the other day if he could name the cause underlying three-fourths of physical diseases from which grown-up persons suffer. Without a moment's hesitation he replied in two words: "Mental worry." The answer is significant and worth repeating and considering. Childhood is not over before worry enters in, eating into the fabric of life and poisoning the springs of vitality. School examinations are a prolific source of nervous trouble among our high-strung boys and girls. At least three times within as many years the newspapers have reported cases of suicide where college students have failed in reaching the grade at which they had aimed. It is easy to say that there was some inherent weakness in the individual, or possibly too heavy a pressure brought to bear upon the young people by ambitious parents. Still, the fact remains that they lost poise through mental worry. Overworked women break down and drift into sanitariums; more than half the time it is worry, not work, that is the spectre behind the scenes and the indirect cause of the catastrophe. No one who watches the progress of events to-day can be blind to the fact that men pass away in middle life unable to resist the insidious inroads of a fatal malady.

Where is the remedy? Is it not to be found in an old book that we are by the way of too often neglecting? "Casting all your care upon Him, for he careth for you," is recommended to those who are worried about to-morrow. Note that we seldom are as anxious about to-day as about to-morrow. Our Lord told us that "Sufficient to the day is the evil thereof." "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him." Should not we who are Christians put in practice the presence of God as Brother Lawrence did, trying every hour of our lives to realize that God is near and that he is able to keep us?

* * *

A Golden Wedding A letter recently received was called forth by a remark printed in this department. The editor of this page is always happy to hear about golden weddings, and although this one took place last autumn, it is not too late to publish congratulations in the spring. David A. James was born in New York in 1836 and Ellen Kellogg in Vermont in 1839. They were married in Milwaukee, Wis., November 26, 1859, and celebrated their golden anniversary in Oregon City in 1909. There is something typically American in this little history. As a people we do not stand still, and the men of the East as well as the women have turned again and again to the West, moving ever onward as destiny leads them. Around Mr. and Mrs. James gathered children and grandchildren on their golden wedding day. Their Oregon home is the centre of home happiness and hospitality.

Window Gardens on the West Side, New York

DWELLERS in town have not the broad spaces for plants which are the delight of those who reside in the country. The manner in which some flower-loving women overcome their difficulties is beautifully shown in the picture. Blooming at the top of a brick wall, with vines trained to reach the windows, the flowers and the green things growing bring Summer's beauty into the very heart of town.

IN GALILEE

THE Master walked in Galilee,
Across the hills and by the sea,
And in whatever place he trod,
He felt the passion of a God.

The twelve, who deemed him King of men,
Longed for the conquering hour, when
The peasant's robe without a seam
Should be the purple of their dream.

Yet daily from his lips of love
Fell words their thoughts as far above
As wisdom's utmost treasure, piled
Upon the stammering of a child.

Like frost on flower, like blight on bloom,
His speech to them of cross and tomb;
Nor could their grieving spirits see
One gleam of hope in Galilee.

What booted it that he should rise,
Were death to hide him from their eyes?
What meant the promised throne divine,
Were earth to be an empty shrine?

Low drooped the skies above the band
Too dull the Lord to understand.
Alas! as dull of heart are we,
Abiding oft in Galilee.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Aunt Prudence Payson's Catch-All

—B. C. In dividing the family income, if the wife has not a personal allowance, it should be understood that she need not ask for every penny she spends. Usually the man of the house pays the rent and the coal hills, and attends to outdoor expenses, while the wife does the marketing and buys her own and the children's clothing. If there are taxes, interest, etc., the man attends to them. You are very wise to investigate these matters before your marriage.

It is Best And Best for Them

Its too bad that the things which children like best are rarely the best things for them.

But the foods which they like best—Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice—are the most wholesome cereal foods in existence.

They are Prof. Anderson's foods—the digestible foods—the ideal of every food expert.

In no other process are the granules of grain so broken up as in this. Nor was there ever a way to make cereals so enticing.

Whole Grains Multiplied in Size

Imagine wheat or rice berries puffed to eight times their size—made four times as porous as bread.

Honey-combed grains — but still smooth and unbroken — crisped by terrific heat.

You can judge how such grains fairly melt in the mouth, and how nut-like they taste mixed with cream or milk.

But they are better than you can imagine. They are so good that we have at times been a million packages behind on our orders.

Puffed Wheat, 10c
Puffed Rice, 15c
Except in Extreme West

These are the foods shot from guns. The whole wheat or rice kernels are put into sealed guns. Then the guns are revolved for 60 minutes in a heat of 550 degrees.

That heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes tremendous. Then the guns are unsealed, and the steam explodes. Instantly every starch granule is blasted into a myriad particles.

The grains are puffed to eight times former size, yet the coats are unbroken, the shapes are unaltered. We have simply the whole grains made porous and crisp and digestible.

Mix With Berries

For a morning dish, mix Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice with berries. The blend is very inviting.

For a between-meal dish, for supper or bedtime, serve these puffed grains in a bowl of milk. They are as crisp as crackers, and four times as porous as bread.

At no time will these foods form a tax on the stomach. Never were cereal foods made even half so digestible.

Think what such foods mean in summer—always ready, always wanted, always easy to digest. Order them now and see how much you are missing. Make a note, so you don't forget. (43)

Made only by The Quaker Oats Company

The Strawberry Handkerchief

A Tale of Colonial Days in Old New York

By AMELIA E. BARR

CHAPTER TEN—Continued

"SUCH nonsense you talk, my dear!" said Madame Van Vroom. "How can fingers have memories?"

"La, Madame! If you would only consider a moment: every part of our wonderful bodies has memories—our lips remember the kisses of the beloved one; our ears are full of old, old songs; our eyes remember the faces they love. Upon my honor, Madame, we are alive with memories from head to feet. And I vow the fingers of Batavius were aching that night for the scaling ladders and the throats of his enemies and the loot of pagan temples."

"Batavius is a brave man, no doubt of that, and also——"

"Moral and respectable. He says so himself, so it must be so."

"Lady Rose, you should not speak against sailors."

"If sailors were all like Arent I would stand all life long to praise them. When did your boy rob temples? When did he bring home the jewels from altars and sacred vestments, and the gold from some murdered rajah's treasure house? The sailors of your house, Madame, are good men. I say Batavius De Vries is a very bad man—if man he be."

Then Madame went angrily away, and Rose said: "I am sorry I spoke so freely, Virginia. But, frankly, I can not see how your mother can endure the thought of your marriage to Batavius."

"I shall never marry Batavius."

"But as yet she does not know that."

"Rose, I have the man completely in my power. I triumph over him! I am a new woman. For four days I have been a free woman. And now that I am sure of my freedom, I want to tell you what I can tell you. Did you not notice that yesterday, twice over, I gave him an order, and he obeyed it?"

"You told him to stop lying, and he said not another word. Why he did not let loose his tongue is a miracle."

"I did not permit him."

"But what are you saying?"

"I told him to go, and he went."

"That was another miracle."

As Rose was speaking, Virginia took her friend's hands in her own. "Listen," she said, as soon as Rose was silent. "Listen, and I will tell you all I can. It was last Monday night, you had gone to the Semples', and I was left alone in the living-room. Father was in the city; mother was giving out wool to the slaves in the out-kitchen. Suddenly Batavius entered, and a terror beyond movement or speech came over me. But in the heart of the terror there was a great struggle, and a voice within me said, 'Command the man to stop at the foot of the table!' And then I was strong and calm, for I felt a power wonderful, irresistible, flowing through me like a flood—and at the moment, I thought it was death, so fierce, so sharp, so sweet, so mighty was the feeling that brought me help. And I said to Batavius—whether audibly or not, I cannot tell—'Stop where you are! Do not come one inch nearer me!' And he stood still, and his arms fell to his sides, and he looked at me like a chained dog. Again the power came surging through me, and I said: 'Go, and come not back this night! I forbid it.' And on him my eyes were fixed, and as I looked he went silently away."

"Virginia! What think you?"

"I think then my angel helped me. When I was at school I learned a piece by Mr. William Shakespeare, which said plainly that angels lackey the chaste and pure in heart and will nc suffer evil to come near them. And i that moment's agony of fear and hoi ror, when just three words of praye leaped from my fainting soul, my ange came and unlocked some chamber c life never before known to me, an from it rushed forth a power might to help."

"Well, then?" .

"As soon as Batavius was gone, t my room I ran, and fell upon my fac in silent adoration and thanksgivin For I was dumb, and had no words fo an experience so strange and wonde ful—but God understood. And whe I rose I knew that I was free and fo given, and should never marry Bata vius."

"You say you were forgiven. Wha for?"

"I was all wrong about Batavius be ing carried off. The plot was wicked one."

"I think that also now, Virginia, bu at the time it appeared a capital ide in many ways. And if it was a wron for Batavius, for you it seemed a right, and sure. I have often hear that it is not unlawful to do evil i good come of it."

"I was as bad as you. But now see that to do wrong that right ma come is a very great sin—it is trustin to the devil instead of trusting Goc Never will I do that wickedness again.

"Nor will I," and Rose, with tear and sweet endearments, crept closer t her friend and whispered, "Let me kis your hands, Virginia; the angel ma have touched them; let me kneel a your feet and ask you to forgive me for I led you wrong, and I would no have your angel angry at me. Alas I fear I have no angel to care for me or to trouble herself as to whether want help or not!"

"If you were in such a strait tha your soul called out as mine callec your angel would hear you—even if sh were at the edge of the universe."

"And come to me?"

"Yes, come to you."

At this moment Madame entered th room. "I wonder me at you two girls, she said. "Do you not hear the drum and fifes and the firing of cannon Bogart, who has just come with a loac of wool, tells me the new Governor i about to land, and the city is turnin out to meet him. The Liberty Boy are filling the park, and the Englisl cavalry dashing about the streets, an there are flags on every building, an ladies in full dress at every window And why then do you not go to 14 Wal Street and see the procession? You father, Virginia, is in the delegation t welcome Sir Henry Moore."

"Indeed, Madame," answered Rose "I am not going to welcome Sir Henry Moore until I see how he behaves him self. I am not a worshiper of Gov ernor Colden, but the old man did his duty at the peril of his life."

"He gave up the stamps!" saic Madame scornfully. "Captain Van Vroom in his place would have diec first."

"There was nothing else to be done but give them up."

"Oh, you think that? Not so do I think. Any soldier in the army, any sailor on a man-of-war, would have shown him how to die, where death was duty. If my Jansen had been in charge of government property, and gave it up to save his life, he could never have looked in my face again. Never! For all his life years he would have di vorced himself from Katrina. Vir ginia, will you not go?"

"To see the old Governor give place to Sir Henry Moore? No, moeder, I

Continued on next page

The Strawberry Handkerchief

Continued from preceding page

wo'd rather not. Governor Colden wa kind to me, always kind to me. I kn/ nothing about Sir Henry Moore."

Iy dear," said Rose, with a contertuous sniff, "the poor fellow is not ev an Englishman. He is a colonial, bo in Jamaica, and of course he will sidwith the colonials. Poor England! Sh has a lot o' bad bairns, as Elder Se ple says."

rent, my son Arent, is a colonial," sa Madame, and she looked at Rose wi eyes full of pride and reproof.

h, Madame," answered Rose, "it is small matter where your son Arent wa born." And she dropped an enchanting little curtsey, and lifted Maame's hand and kissed it.

o resist such an appeal was impoible to the sweet-hearted Katrina. "M dear one," she answered proudly, an she drew the girl within her embrce, and touching her cheek, said, "I kis thee for Arent. Very proud will he e when I tell thy words to him." An so, smiling and hurrying—because dier was ready—she went away, leing an atmosphere of kindness that lingered like a perfume.

aptain Jansen did not return to dier, but the talk was altogether of th Stamps, and of what Sir Henry Mre would do with the situation left hi by Governor Colden. "The battle wi be to fight over again," said Mada. "That is what the Captain thks."

ndeed, then," answered Rose, "the figt has never stopped a moment. Th Liberty Boys are guarding the Stps in the City Hall as if they were so new kind of death. The fort brles with cannon. The English soers patrol the streets, and look the insults General Gage will not allow tha to speak; and the citizens throw thr looks back in words whose temper cannot be mistaken. If this is not a cil up to the chin in a standing quarrel don't know what it is. And likely me Stamps have come with Sir Hry Moore. A nice prospect indeed! I ish that Virginia would get marri, and let me off to sea. The Atlaic Ocean will be halcyon peace copared to New York City."

o they ate their potpie of guineafol breasts and their dessert of tolted apples and custard to an obligo of war talk.

ut the war talk ended when the last aple on the dish had been eaten, and th the girls went to Virginia's room fo a few hours' privacy. They took th long, low stairs with sauntering sts, so silently, so thoughtfully, that a r of song which Rose began seemed qe out of place, and died away at th fifth note. They were already tuning with fresh interest to Virgia's strange revelation. About the Stmp Act, and the new Governor, th e was nothing miraculous; but alut Virginia's mysterious visitor, everything was wonderful, beyond hum knowledge or earthly explanation —llying itself rather with the angical and the heavenly.

Was it any wonder that two girls, spritually without a doubt, should sit hr after hour—even till the shadows ofvening fell—talking over Virginia's wderful experience, wishing, hoping, fr of adoration and gratitude, all thr small frets and differences buried in enewed love and confidence? Never h they been so beautiful as at that hr. With heavenly love in their hrts, they leaned against each other, a spoke softly of love being eternal, a so hallowed it even on earth.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The Runaway Bridegroom

Captain Jansen came home in a vy good humor, bringing with him a Lndon letter for Lady Rose. "Now I sll know what the world is up to," she said, "and will you all excuse me if I go upstairs to find out?"

"Go quickly, little lady," answered the Captain. "Remember your tea is nearly ready."

"Little I care about my tea; but, dear Captain, let no one take my chair. See, I have placed it close to your own."

"With my life I will defend it!" he cried, and then turning to Katrina, said, "There is some good news, I think, Katrina."

"Did it come with the new Governor?"

"It is the new Governor. A very pleasant, easy, well-bred gentleman. That is my thought of the man. He called the Councillors together on his arrival, and asked them if it was possible to issue the Stamps. One straight No they gave him. Will you believe it? He had brought with him a second shipment of Stamps. The Ministry as well as the King are going crazy."

"Well, then, what will be done with them?"

"To the City Hall they will go, no doubt. Young Peter De Lancey came with them, as the new Collector."

"Is Governor Colden still shut up in the fort?"

"Now, then, I come to my good news —the fort is to be dismantled. Already the gates are open and the cannon are being removed. There was an angry dispute between Colden and Sir Henry Moore about the dismantling of the fort, and Colden declared it was a mad thing to do, but Sir Henry answered him bravely, 'We are in our own country; we are not among enemies. Surely we can trust our fellow citizens.' For Colden I am not sorry. Much trouble he made. The government has no rewards for him, no thanks even, Katrina, and the people hate him."

"That is right for the government. He gave up the Stamps! The English government does not forgive a Governor who gives up anything belonging to England. No, indeed. If Batavius gave up one of thy ships to the pirates, what would thou say to him?"

"Batavius would not do such a cowardly thing. He would scuttle the ship, or blow her up, and go to the bottom with her. Very different is that case — Colden was bewildered. So many opinions, so many ways, he knew not what to take."

"Just one right way for him was there. Thou would have taken it, and followed it, even though it led to death. If for the Stamps Colden had died, or even fought, the government would have had honors and rewards for him, or his family—a failure no government acknowledges. That is right—for the government."

"But all wrong for the people governed, perhaps."

"He had nothing to do with that."

"Women see things a little aslant, Katrina."

At this point Batavius entered. Cross and glum he looked, but when Virginia lifted her head with a smile, he became radiant and began to chatter—he had been with the naval officers—the new Governor had been introduced to him—he had condescended to remark on the fine weather, and Batavius had answered, "New York looked for fine weather now, both political and natural."

"Well, it was not a bad compliment," replied the Captain.

"But I think Batavius might have made it much better," and Virginia looked with rosy smiles into her father's face.

"Well, then, how?"

"He might have said: 'If your Excellency had only come three months ago we should doubtless have had a much earlier and better harvest.'"

To be continued

ZU ZU
GINGER SNAPS
Rain! Rain!! Rain!!! All in vain!
If you lack snap and want ginger, use the old established countersign
Zu Zu
to the grocerman
No one ever heard of a Zu Zu that wasn't good
No! Never !!
5¢
NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

CORNISH

Established Over Half A Century
A Quarter Of A Million In Use

We place a piano or organ in your home, freight paid if you wish on

A Year's Free Trial

giving you easy terms of your own choice, and two years' credit if needed. We positively save you one-half or more on a high grade, sweet toned, durable Cornish piano or organ because we sell to you

Direct From The Factory As Low As Any Dealer Can Buy

Every instrument is bonded for 25 years against defect. The new Cornish book, the most beautiful piano and organ catalog issued, shows the choicest of our 50 latest styles and explains things you ought to know whether you buy from us or elsewhere. The book is yours for the asking. Write for it now and mention the instrument you are interested in—piano or organ.

CORNISH CO. WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY
Established Over Fifty Years.

BUY THE "SANITARY" CRYSTAL GLASS ICE CREAM FREEZER

Then you will realize how much more delicious is ice cream made in and served from glass than from metal. Ptomaine poisoning impossible. Neither crank, gear nor dasher required. Ice cream that is firm, smooth and velvety. Why not relieve yourself of the inconvenience of the old style metal freezer

AND MAKE YOUR ICE CREAM IN GLASS
WITHOUT GRINDING OR CRANKING
PURE, SAFE, DELICIOUS

One size only --- producing dessert for family of eight. Any portion not served can be repacked and kept in perfect condition for days. Commended by thousands of domestic science experts and housewives.

Don't take chances in use of old-fashioned metal freezers. Get the "Sanitary" of your dealer. If he cannot supply you, send us his name and $1.25 and we will ship by express promptly. Circulars and special offer for two cent stamp.

THE CONSOLIDATED MFG. CO., - - 414 Asylum Street, Hartford, Conn.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

BEEKEEPING Its pleasures and profits, is the theme of that excellent and handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on trial for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page book on bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name this paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, Ohio are unequalled opportunities to make money in intensive farming, fruit-growing, vegetable-raising, dairying, poultry and stock-raising. Washington, for instance, is a great state of snow-capped peaks, noble forests, tumbling rivers, fertile valleys, wave-lapped seashore. Incomparable climate. Immense water power; vast areas of valuable timber; a fishing industry that rivals the world. Intensive irrigated farming and fruit-growing in a high degree of development. The Yakima, Kittitas, Walla Walla, Spokane and Lewiston-Clarkston Valleys, the Columbia River Basin, the Puget Sound Country, Gray's Harbor, Willapa Harbor, the Inland Empire Region, the Big Bend and Palouse Country present ideal conditions. The Washington fruit lands grow prize-winning fruits and berries. The Washington grainfields yield bountifully of the best grades of product. You ought to learn more about the Northwest and its possibilities. You ought to see it. Write tonight for information. Say what state interests you most.

In the Vineyards and Orchards of the Northwest

¶ The Northern Pacific extends into or through Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon. New, rich territory being opened up by extensions now building. The Homeseeker's Chance!

The Scenic Highway Through the Land of Fortune

Northern Pacific Railway

L. J. Bricker, General Immigration Agt., Dept. 319, St. Paul, Minn.
A. M. CLELAND, General Passenger Agent, ST. PAUL
E3

Buy Direct—Save Money—We Pay Freight

Our monthly installment plan of selling direct saves you all the dealer's profit and his excessive charges for installation and repairs. We can save at least one-third the cost of your furnace. We have been building Jahant Furnaces for over thirty years and guarantee satisfaction.

JAHANT DOWN DRAFT FURNACE

The Best Heating System Made for residences, schools, hotels, churches, etc. It is the most economical furnace too, and saves one-third to one-half the cost of fuel, because the patented "Down-Draft System" burns wood, hard or soft coal, and burns it all without cinders, clinkers or any waste. Needs less attention, yet heats much better than any other furnace, hot air, steam or hot water heating system. Our plan of monthly payments

ONLY $10 DOWN and $10 A MONTH

makes it easy for any one to have the best heating system made. Every Jahant Furnace is sold with a strong "Guaranty Bond" that allows you 365 DAYS TRIAL. You don't run any risk buying from us.

We send complete outfit, furnace, pipes, registers, etc. together with special plans, full directions and all tools for installing. If you can drive a nail you can install a Jahant Furnace without the aid of a tinner.

Write To-day for Catalog which explains the Jahant Down-Draft System and tells why it gives more heat at less cost.

THE JAHANT HEATING CO., 205 Howard Street, Akron, O.

A Flying Start

In the Poultry Raising Business

Eggs right—birds right; birds right—profits right. There is the real secret of successful poultry raising.

Our one business is the raising of fine poultry—the celebrated RANCOCAS White Leghorns—hens that lay and birds that pay. Ours is the largest poultry farm in the world—125 acres—22,000 birds. We sell you the eggs of these profit-bringing birds and guarantee 90 per cent. fertility. By ordering these eggs you cut out all risk and loss at the start. We have spent a fortune perfecting the RANCOCAS strain, which is famous everywhere. Or, you can order our day-old chix. Shipments from 25 upwards. No pullet eggs sold for hatching. Rancocas breeders will make money for you. We help our customers. Write for prices, etc.

RANCOCAS EGGS HIGHEST FERTILITY

INTERNATIONAL POULTRY SALES CO.
J. M. FOSTER, President, Box 160, Brown's Mills, In-the-Pines, N. J.

THIS NEW HAIR BRUSH COMBS AND BRUSHES THE HAIR AND MASSAGES THE SCALP.

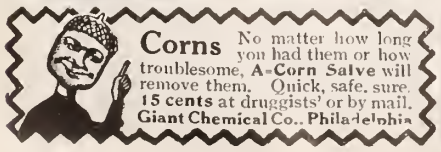
The greatest modern invention for keeping the hair beautiful and fluffy and the scalp clean, healthful and free from dandruff or dirt. Keep the scalp clean and properly massaged and nature will grow the hair. Write for free circular.

AGENTS WANTED.
DR. GEORGE LYMAN,
217 Hill St., Peoria, Ill.

Cincinnati Iron Fence Co.

FREE CATALOGUE. AGENTS WANTED.

Largest Iron Fence Factory in Ohio.
Address Dep't S for prices. CINCINNATI, OHIO.



Corns No matter how long you had them or how troublesome, A-Corn Salve will remove them. Quick, safe, sure. 15 cents at druggists' or by mail.
Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia

SPRAY With the WATSON 4-row POTATO SPRAYER

Never damages foliage, but kills bugs, worms and all destructive insects. Adjustable wheel width. Spray and pressure regulator. Sprays 30 to 40 acres a day. Free book.
FIELD FORCE PUMP CO., 75 Eleventh St., Elmira, N. Y.

Jesus the Friend of Mothers*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

"JESUS withdrew into the parts of Tyre and Sidon." Not within the territory of Tyre and Sidon, but on its borders, and within the limits of the land of Israel. It is important to note this, because Jesus had not gone on a missionary tour among the heathen, but he had gone to the limit of Galilee that he might get a much needed rest after his several days of healing people in multitudes.

"A Canaanitish woman came out from those borders." She was a native of Phœnicia, and a Greek. She had heard about the wonderful works of Jesus, and also she had heard that he had come near to the town where she lived. She came across the borders and was directed to the very home where Jesus was seeking rest.

"Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David." She entered the house, and this was her cry, when she saw Jesus, and then she begged him to cure her daughter who was "grievously vexed with a demon." She was unfortunate in the way she addressed Jesus, for she spoke to him as only a Jewish woman might, "Son of David." Living in the neighborhood of the Jews, she was probably accustomed to hearing Jesus spoken of in that way, and did not realize that she had no right to do so.

He answered her not a word. Edersheim says: "To have granted her the help she so entreated would have been, as it were, to reverse the whole of his teaching, and to make his works of healing merely works of power, only miracles, not signs of the Messiah of Israel."

"I was not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." These words Jesus spoke to his disciples who begged of him to send the woman away, simply by way of explaining to them why he did not grant the request of the woman. Jesus was not an "intense Jew," but it was his plan to give the Gospel to the Jews for the world. This had been God's plan when he named Israel his "chosen people."

"But she came and worshiped him." She would be known as his follower. "Lord help me," not as a Jewish woman, but as an outsider; help me. "It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it unto dogs." She was quite accustomed to hearing people like herself called "dogs." Jesus did not mean to call her a "dog," but only to let her know how others would view the matter. "Even the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table," so he replied to the woman. It was as if she had said: "There is then a share to which the dogs are welcome, and I am willing to take a dog's share."

"O woman, great is thy faith; be it done unto thee even as thou wilt." Phillips Brooks says: "By her belief in him, she had crossed the line and become spiritually one of his people. Then the impossibility was removed, and we may say, I think, that he could not help helping her."

"And her daughter was healed from that hour," not by the touch of Jesus, but by the word of his power, for he did not leave the house in Galilee. And when the woman returned to her home she found that the devil had gone out, and her daughter lay quietly upon the bed. (Mark 7: 30.)

How Women are Hindered by False Ideas of Religion

Those who wanted to send the Canaanitish mother away have many successors in these days. In India, they say a woman has no soul! That the only way a woman can gain a soul is to become an uncomplaining v[illegible], and when she dies and is reincarn[illegible] she may be rewarded by being ma[illegible] man with a soul! Until Christia[illegible] made its way into Korea girls [illegible] women had no names. A fine Ko[illegible] girl who had become a Christian [illegible] brought to an English lady, who [illegible] traveling in Korea. And it was [illegible] her: "Just think, she has no nan[illegible]" "Call her by my name, Lucy Bro[illegible]," said the English lady with deep f[illegible]-ing.

In China girls are often though[illegible] of as of so little importance that na[illegible]s are not given to them—only numb[illegible]s.

The Recognition of Woman in the B[illegible]

The Christ religion is the only [illegible]-gion that gives to womankind its ri[illegible]t-ful position. If all the women in [illegible]e world only knew this, how they w[illegible]d love Jesus, and pour out their he[illegible]ts in prayer to him. And the Bibl[illegible]is the only sacred book, so called, [illegible]t gives us the biographies of women. [illegible]n the Bible story Eve is as prominen[illegible]s Adam. God gave her to Adam t[illegible]e his companion and helpmeet. W[illegible]t would the story of Abraham be [illegible]h Sarah left out? How incomplete [illegible]e account of Isaac without Rebekah [illegible]r of Jacob without Rachel, or M[illegible]s without mention of all what his mo[illegible]r did for him and the daughter [illegible]f Pharaoh, and his own sister Mir[illegible]n, who was with him, aiding him whe[illegible]e was made by God the deliverer [illegible]f Israel from Egypt! There would [illegible]e no story of Samuel if Hannah had [illegible]t prayed. If there had been no Debo[illegible]h to pray for the Lord's hosts, Ba[illegible]k would hardly have led them ou[illegible]o fight against Sisera as the Lord [illegible]n-manded. If there had not been a [illegible]f-denying, temperate mother, t[illegible]e would not have been a strong Sam[illegible]n. If there had been no lovely Ruth, [illegible]t could be written of the genealog[illegible]f Christ? And how could Naaman [illegible]e been cured of the leprosy if the [illegible]le maid had not spoken to the wif[illegible]f Naaman about the power of Elish[illegible]o heal him? And what would the [illegible]le be with the story of Mary the mo[illegible]r of Jesus left out? And of Elizab[illegible]h, the mother of John? And the stor[illegible]f the sweet sister of Bethany, who [illegible]-tributed so much of joy and comfo[illegible]o the Lord Jesus in his earthly [illegible]e; what if that had been omitted? [illegible]d we could not spare the account of [illegible]e holy women who followed Jesus [illegible]o Calvary, and who were the first at [illegible]is tomb, and the first to be sent by J[illegible]s himself with the news of his resu[illegible]e-tion to his apostles. How precio[illegible]s is the mention of the grandmother L[illegible]s, and the mother Eunice, who so w[illegible]y instructed the little boy Timothy in [illegible]e Holy Scriptures that he was able t[illegible]e a helper to the great apostle Pa[illegible]n preaching the Gospel! How muc[illegible]f interest is added to the accoun[illegible]f Paul's missionary labors by the s[illegible]y about Lydia, the first Christian [illegible]r-vert in Europe. And yet we have [illegible]t mentioned all of the notable wo[illegible]n whose works are referred to in G[illegible]'s Book, but we have sufficiently rec[illegible]d them to prove that it was never a [illegible]t of God's plan to send a woman a[illegible]!

Jesus Commending Faith of Wom[illegible]

Jesus not only did not send [illegible]e woman away, but he commended [illegible]r faith, "O woman, great is thy fai[illegible]." Beyond and above that, nothing c[illegible]d be said. Jesus commended the fa[illegible]n-filled acts of women on other o[illegible]-sions—the widow who cast two m[illegible]s, all her living, into the treasury (M[illegible]k 12: 42); the woman who washed [illegible]is feet with her tears, and wiped t[illegible]m with the hair of her head (L[illegible]se 7: 37-48); Mary who anointed his [illegible]et

Continued on next page

*The International Sunday School Lesson for June 12, 1910. The Canaanitish Woman. Matt. 15:21-28. GOLDEN TEXT: "Great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt." Matt. 15:28.

HARD ON CHILDREN
When Teacher Has Coffee Habit

est is best, and best will ever live." Wn a person feels this way about Postum th are glad to give testimony for the bene-fit others.

school teacher down in Miss. say: "I ha been a coffee drinker since my childhood, an the last few years it had injured me seriously.

ne cup of coffee taken at breakfast wod cause me to become so nervous that I cld scarcely go through with the day's du s, and this nervousness was often ac-co anied by deep depression of spirits and he palpitation.

am a teacher by profession and when unr the influence of coffee had to struggle ag st crossness when in the school room.

hen talking this over with my physician, he iggested that I try Postum, so I pur-chd a package and made it carefully acding to directions; found it excellent of flav, and nourishing.

a short time I noticed very gratifying effs. My nervousness disappeared. I was notritated by my pupils, life seemed full of sur ine, and my heart troubled me no lonr.

attribute my change in health and spi s to Postum alone."

Id the little book, "The Road to Well-vill" in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Er read the above letter? A new oneappears from time to time. They are gerine, true, and full of human interest.

I Was in the Refrigerator Business When Lincoln Was President

Ar here is the perfect result of my forty years' plan-thingid experimenting—

THE LEONARD CLANABLE REFRIGERATORS

Sor as I know- and I have known refrigerators all y li-a better one could not be made. I'll tell you why:

Fi , it is absolutely sanitary. Lined with gen-ine recelain enamel—pure white; indestructible—as ash ept fresh and clean as your china dishes.

Sond, for its economy. Because of a special ola elt insulation, it saves half on your ice bills. Her constant circulation f d cool air makes your pod p longer.

Th , it has the only erit water cooler.

Ov ide, the Leonard Cleanable is as beautifully fnish as your piano.

No. 4 Leonard Cleanable Refrigerator. Size 33 x 21—46 inches high; lined with real porcelain enamel. Price $33.00, freight paid as far as Mississippi and Ohio Rivers. With Leonard Porcelain Water Cooler, $5 extra. Fifty other styles and prices.

Free ook for Housekeepers

All bt refrigerators, the care f d, and other household duction. It means many a dllsved on expenses. Write f g og and free sample of ress lining.

If r dealer does not sell sor Cleanables, write to me ll s you one direct from the fct ry. Your money refunded if n t just as I say.

No tter what kind of refrig-ato n use, you need my book.

C. LEONARD, Pres.
Grand apids Refrigerator Co.
2 Clyde Park Ave.,
Grand apids, - - - Mich.

Let Me Help You With Your Growing Daughter

Are you sure she is perfectly well? Are her eyes bright? Is her step light—her walk graceful, free? Does she carry her head and shoulders well? Does her voice ring clear? Watch her carefully, critically—her whole future may be in the balance. See if her steps lag—her shoulders droop—her hips sag—her eyes are dull or her voice is lifeless.

Write Me Before Too Late

Tell me what you fear for her—what you hope for her. I can help you so much. More than 45,000 women are stronger, healthier, happier to-day, because of what my method has done for them. My experience has covered many years and all sorts of cases. Let me help your daughter to become a strong woman—splendidly well.

Send Coupon for My Book on "Health, Grace and Beauty"

It is full of information that you can use every day. Tells you how I can help you—how I have helped thousands of others. Write to me fully about yourself or your daughter or both. If I cannot help you, I will advise you to the help you need. Enclose coupon with 10c stamps for book. Don't put it off until to-morrow.

SUSANNA COCROFT
Dept. 18-M, 246 Michigan Ave., Chicago

Please send me your book on "Health, Grace and Beauty" 10c stamps enclosed.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

with ointment, worth three hundred pence (John 12: 5). "O woman, great is thy faith." That is a greatness to which we may all attain. And it is the greatest of all kinds of greatness, because it links us to the great God. When a woman went to visit another woman of lowly life, but famous for the strength of her simple faith, the visitor asked: "Are you the woman with the great faith?" "No," she replied, "I am the woman with a little faith in the great God." But if her faith had not been great, she could not have recognized God as great. The Canaanitish mother had her sick daughter as a burden to bring to Jesus. Every mother has a burden to bring to him; often it is a sick child; sometimes it is a wayward child; sometimes it is a feeble-minded child; sometimes it is a child whose exceeding beauty and great gifts surround it with peculiar temptations and dangers.

"Lord help me," is the prayer that any mother may offer to Jesus for anything she sees that her child needs.

A partnership with God is motherhood.
What strength, what purity, what self control,
What love, what wisdom should belong to her
Who helps God fashion an immortal soul!

Let every son and daughter remember this "partnership" and they will not fall into the grievous error of discrediting their mother when their opinions differ from hers. She is also in partnership with the great in this world. One night long ago at a club meeting the question discussed was "What rules the world?" Various opinions were expressed. Wm. Ross Wallace, who was present, retired before long, and some time later called Thomas J. Leigh from the room, and handed him a poem which he had just written. It was entitled "What Rules the World." The first stanza ran:

They say that man is mighty,
He governs land and sea,
He wields a mighty sceptre
O'er lesser powers that be;
But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurled,
And the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.

A true mother realizes her place of power. There was a noble Roman matron who was called "the daughter of Scipio," the mightiest man of his time! After she was married to another distinguished Roman, she was still called "the daughter of Scipio." Then there came a time when she looked down into the cradle, and there were two little sons oftentimes called "Cornelia's Jewels," then she said: "Call me no more 'the daughter of Scipio'; call me the mother of the Gracchi." She would rather be known to posterity as the mother of her children than as the daughter of a noble father.

Queen Helene of Italy is a lovely queen-mother, and she has recently been writing some lovely things about the training of children. She says: "To mothers who can not get along with their little ones, I say you can make them obedient, kind and good natured if you are but fully resolved to bring about those pleasant traits. Are my children ever naughty? Surely they are, abundantly so. But I have made it a point to suppress such outbursts at the start. The other day I observed that my Umberto had an ugly fit coming on, when I said: 'I am going to rearrange my book shelves, who will help?' 'I', cried the little fellow, instantly forgetting his grievance. He worked like a Trojan, carrying books and reaching for those that had fallen. He was evidently very happy to be of service to his mother. So after a while I said: 'What a good little boy we have here. Without his aid, mamma couldn't get the library in order in a week. It is a pleasure to see a boy work like that, yet I remember only a little while ago he was inclined—' 'Oh, mamma,' cried Umberto, 'that wasn't I; that was quite another child.'"

Possibly if the Canaanitish mother had worked thus wisely with her child she might never have been "grievously vexed with a demon." But she was a wise mother in that she knew that Jesus could cast the demon out of her little daughter.

It would hardly be possible for us to imagine her joy when she returned to her home and found that the devil had gone out of her child. Very weak was the child, for the mother found her laid on the bed, but she had been cured from the very hour that Jesus had spoken the word. It was not only the mother's faith, but it was the persistent quality of her love for her child that would not take "No" for an answer to her prayer, even from Jesus, that secured the casting out of the demon. Who can measure the strain which mother love will endure?

The Bishop and the Tramp

A PASTOR in an uptown New York church recently told this anecdote during his sermon: A certain bishop, who had a most persuasive address coupled with what would usually be called personal magnetism, was on the lawn with a party of other gentlemen when a tramp came up. He was a decent-looking fellow, persistent and well spoken. He approached one of the party and unfolded a tale of woe. "Hold on, my friend," said the gentleman addressed; "you see that man over there? That is Bishop S——. You go and speak to him; he is the very man you want." The tramp obeyed, and was soon in earnest conversation with the bishop, at a little distance from the main group. Their talk seemed to be very animated. Presently the wayfarer drifted back, and was about to pass somewhat dejectedly, when the gentleman he had first greeted asked, "Well, my friend, how did you get along with the bishop? Did he give you anything?"

The tramp grinned. "He? Well, stranger, you mayn't believe it," he said, "but he actually talked me into giving him a dollar as a contribution for some new college he is building somewheres."

His hearers laughed, and one of them handed him some loose change, whereupon he left. The bishop proved the man's story true by showing them the dollar. It was generally considered that any one who could talk money out of a tramp had sufficient power of persuasion to finance any project, no matter how difficult.

Called Higher

Mrs. J. O. Denniss, of Platteville, Col.

Joshua Winget (72), of Wapakoneta, O.

Mrs. S. R. Bloodgood died October 20, 1909, at Vinton, Iowa.

Wesley H. Kellogg, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Kellogg, of Burlington, Pa.

Robert Shaw, of Hartford, Conn., died January 16, in his eighty-fourth year.

Henry C. Stover, at New Brunswick, N. J., an elder of the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. E. Virginia Spence, College Park, Md., died January 28, 1910, in the seventy-sixth year of her age.

Justice Theodore Kennedy (87), of Hudson, O. Mr. Kennedy had been a subscriber for nearly thirty years.

Mrs. Henrietta Chryst, of Dayton, O., died March 19. Her husband, Christian Chryst, followed her less than two days later.

Miss M. M. Estes, of Hiram, Ga., has been called higher. She died the 8th of January. She had been a helpless invalid for six years and was a devoted Christian.

Mrs. Elvira Murphy Hubbard, of Elk Creek, N. Y., died April 3, 1909, aged eighty-three years. She had been a constant reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for many years and a faithful follower of its teachings.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 533, and write them for full information.

The "Standard's" Weekly Specials

Two Big Dress Bargains
Send Your Order To-day!

One-Piece Percole Dress

$1.39

342. One-Piece Dress of Good Black and White or Blue and White Percale. Fast colors and a material that will give good service. Front panel extends entire length of dress. Gibson plaits over the shoulder and down to the waist line in both front and back. The square neck is daintily trimmed with Swiss embroidery beading, run with black velvet ribbon. Simulated cuffs piped with black percale. Skirt portion cut generously wide. Closes invisibly in back. Well made throughout and a value which you are bound to appreciate. Order this dress, and if you are not entirely pleased and do not think it the best value you ever saw, return it and your money will be promptly refunded. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Misses' sizes, 14, 16 and 18 years. Special:

$1.39

Add 30c for Postage

One-Piece Linon Dress for

$1.48

338. Stylish 1-Piece Dress of Good Quality Linon. This is one of the smartest styles shown in a wash dress, and it is a value that could not be duplicated for double the price. The front shows two Gibson plaits, and a piping of contrasting color is used on the collar, cuffs, belt and yoke of skirt. The skirt portion is made with yoke, which fits closely over the hips and a plaited flounce falling in graceful flare. Made with well-proportioned lines and correctly sized. Easy to launder and will give good service. This dress shows you the Saving and Satisfaction you get by dealing at the "STANDARD."

Colors, Light Blue or Tan (Linen). Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Special Price:

$1.48

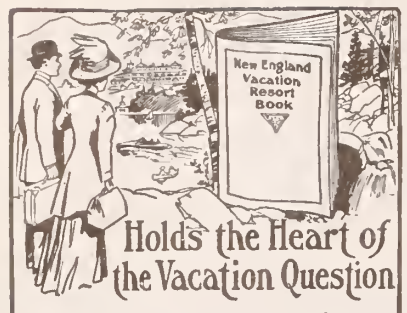
Add 30c for Postage

Our "Money-Back" Guarantee:

If onything you buy from the "STANDARD" is not entirely satisfactory, we wont you to return it ond we will send your money back promptly.

FREE A Year's Subscription to the "STANDARD STYLE BULLETIN"—Free. The latest issue shows all the New Summer Styles now popular in New York. Also many Special Bargains. Write to-day for your Free Subscription.

STANDARD MAIL ORDER CO.
161 Wooster St., NEW YORK CITY



Holds the Heart of the Vacation Question

Giving all details necessary to make your vacation a success.

SEND TO-DAY

for a copy of our 1910 edition

"NEW ENGLAND VACATION RESORTS"

a practical guide book with clear directions, that will help you to quickly decide Where to Go, Where to Stay, What it Will Cost, and What to See and Enjoy in VACATION LAND.

Take advantage of this opportunity.
It's Free for the asking.

Other Publications descriptive of and illustrating each section will be included for the cost of mailing.

LET US KNOW YOUR WANTS TO-DAY.

Address C. M. B. 304.

NORTH STATION, BOSTON.

C. M. BURT, G.P.A.

BOSTON AND MAINE RAILROAD

LABLACHE
FACE POWDER

SUMMER DELIGHTS

are enjoyed by thousands of women who are immune from complexion worries. They are the users of Lablache. They are recognized by faces free from wrinkles—that are never shiny or disfigured by exposure to the elements, and a skin always smooth and velvety.

Refuse Substitutes. They may be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink, or Cream, 50c. a box, of druggists or by mail.

Send 10c. for sample box.

BEN. LEVY CO.
French Perfumers
Dept. 22 125 Kingston St.
Boston, Mass.

You are buying for your church

DO Right

About that Organ.

If you have the money; if you're raising it, or only planning—write for helpful suggestions.

ESTEY, Brattleboro, Vt.

Yale Fruit Press

Best, most practical and durable press made. Unequaled for making Jellies, Jams, Cider, Grape Juice, Fruit Ices and hundreds of other things. Saves time, labor and trouble. Clamps to table or handy place. Put material in colander, fix beam in position, attach crank to wheel and every pound pulled on wheel, exerts 48 lbs. pressure on contents. Made of steel and iron, nickel plated, 4 qt. size, price only.... $3.95

If your dealer will not supply you order of us. Sold on 10 days' trial. Money back if not satisfied. Write for FREE booklet, "Aunt Sally's Best Recipes." Also describes Yale Fruit Presses.

VICTOR M. GRAB & CO.,
Patentees & Sole Manufacturers,
1177 Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

Pimples and Rough Skin

MURRAY'S

CHARCOAL TABLETS

Absolutely unmedicated. Pimples and rough skin are caused by indigestion. Murray's Charcoal Tablets prevent fermentation, absorb all gases and give a clear, soft, smooth and rosy complexion.

For 10c. in stamps, a full size 25c. box mailed for trial. Once only.

A. J. DITMAN, 2 Astor House, N.Y.

20 Beautiful Post Cards 10c

No Two Alike—Latest Designs

Lovely assortment of 20 Artistic Birthday, Friendship, Good Luck, Roses and Flowers in exquisite colors, all for only 10 cents, if you answer this ad. immediately.

J. H. Seymour, 255 W. Eighth St., Topeka, Kan.

5 Fine POST CARDS FREE

Send only 2c stamp and receive 5 colored Gold and Embossed Cards FREE to introduce post card offer.

CAPITAL CARD CO., Dept. 132, Topeka, Kan.

Young People's Societies

Truth that Purifies*

IT has been said in differing words by several great men that he who is fully informed regarding the significance and the tendencies of any act, will never commit sin. It is chiefly because the understanding is darkened that deceit, anger and lust gain their hold upon men.

You may say that sometimes highly educated people are very wicked. This is true, but such cases are rare. When they exist, it will generally be found that the criminals' education has been partial or one-sided; or that some strong inherited bias has made them more or less irresponsible—what we sometimes call "degenerate."

The proper aim of education is to develop the reason. Let a man become genuinely reasonable, and he will usually regard strictly the laws of morality.

Bright wits and instincts sure,
And goodness warm, and truth without alloy,
And temper sweet, and love of all things pure,
And joy in light, and power to spread the joy, very often, in the good providence of God, go together. The school is meant not only to inform the mind, but, through broadened knowledge, to elevate character and to drive out from the heart the foul and bat-like passions, which are all too apt to nest in the untaught and unenlightened.

In the old days, the streets of London were full of thugs and pickpockets. As soon as lamps were established there, the number of robbers decreased enormously.

Let in the light. It will drive out the darkness in the spiritual realm as surely as in the intellectual.

Our highly learned and accomplished classes have not entirely realized their obligations in this particular. The mission of art is not merely to please; it is not merely an avenue through which a man overflowing with dreams and feeling can pass them on to the world. It is a great enlightener and purifier, and should be so used. All artists should share in the noble perplexity of Tolstoy, when he said: "I asked myself, in what manner could I, so very fine a writer, who had so many talents and so much learning, make use of them for the benefit of the people?"

Not every gifted one is so ready or perhaps should be, to acknowledge his qualifications; but from the great Russian, the words come with a naive unconsciousness of conceit, which deprives them of offensiveness.

We may not be so highly fitted to do good, but at least each one of us has some power which he can devote to the enlightening and purifying of society.

Universal education, by the schools on the one hand and by the churches on the other, the enlightening of mind and heart going on with equal pace, is to reveal the truth to us as a people.

Then shall the path be made plain for the coming of the Redeemer. By the great illumination of the Sun of Truth, we may see the way, and with clean hands, clear minds and pure hearts, pursue it. As the noted statesman, Burke, said of another great movement: "The minds of men will be fitted to it. The general opinions and feelings will draw that way. Every fear, every hope, will forward it; and they who oppose this mighty current will appear to resist the decrees of Providence."

Let us all unite to hasten the day. The processes of God are slow. We cannot hope that the hearts of men will be purified by miracles. He works through you and me, imperfect instruments as we are. But let us every day of our lives search for the truth ourselves, and scatter broadcast such as we discover.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 12. TEXTS: Eph. 4: 17-24; Prov. 2: 10-22.

God Knows*

THERE is infinite comfort in the thought that we can cast all our cares upon one who understands them.

He knows that we meant to do our best. He knows why we miserably failed. He knows how hard we tried to keep back the angry word—how we battled with ourselves before we committed the mean action. Though we are misunderstood and misjudged elsewhere, we know that in God's court due credit will be given us for all our struggles, whether we failed or not.

One of our poets has voiced the consoling thought in a striking verse:

Who knows the heart, 'tis He alone
Decidedly can try us;
He knows each chord, its various tone,
Each spring, its various bias.
Then, at the balance, let's be mute,
We never can adjust it;
What's done, we partly may compute,
But know not what's resisted.

God knows it all. He judgeth not as man judgeth.

There is probably no one among us who has not had occasion to reproach himself for passing a hasty judgment upon some fancied fault in a fellowman—a judgment which fuller knowledge showed to be undeserved.

Dr. D. J. Burrell relates a little instance of this sort of quick condemnation. He says: "Not long ago I saw a singular sight in a surface car. A young man was holding by a strap, and just behind him a young woman whose face I could not see, clung to him with one arm about his waist, while with her other hand she patted him affectionately on the shoulder.

"'A most unbecoming thing,' I said to myself. Then she turned and I saw that she was blind. It was her sense of dependence that made her cling in that way. So thoughtlessly do we pass judgment behind the backs of people."

Perhaps it is in sorrow that we most prize the consciousness that God knows. Our friends become impatient if we pour out our misery before them. We are reproved—silenced. We dare not then appeal further to our fellowbeings for sympathy, but God stands with outstretched arms to receive us. Into his ear we may confide over and over again, the story of our grief until the sore heart is relieved.

"In the few brief discourses of Jesus," continues Dr. Burrell, "he covered all the great problems of truth and ethics. He knew all things. His mind was a cyclopedia of the universe. In other words, his knowledge was Omniscience.

And there is peace and joy in the thought that though no human soul may know of some triumph which we have achieved — some secret honor which has come to us—it rejoices the heart of God, who compasseth the righteous with favor as with a shield.

Thus, says the historian, an "imperial triumph" came to the young missionary, Coleridge Patteson.

He was an Eton boy who had fervently dedicated his young life to the service of his Maker, and had gone to the South Sea Islands to carry the Gospel message. For a while he labored faithfully, but he could not win the brutish natives. At last they beat him to death with clubs.

Then they laid his body in an open boat, crossed his hands, placed a palm branch on his breast, and watched as the winds bore him out to the open sea. He had doubtless felt as though he had died in ignominy; but to-day his name is regarded in that distant clime with veneration, and one can well understand the rank he holds in heaven—for God knew it all—the striving, the anguish, the heroism; and he seals his beloved with his own seal upon their foreheads.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 12. TEXTS: Ps. 103: 1-4; Matt. 6: 7, 8.

All Sweeping

from "brushing up" in the dining-room to cleaning entire house, is made better, quicker and easier by

National Roller-Bearing Carpet Sweeper

Grand Prize at St. Louis Over All Others

You clean thoroughly when you use the National, because by slight handle-pressure you can make brush get deep into any rug or carpet. This brush has the "snap" and strength to really pick up the most deep-born speck or scrap, because made of genuine China bristles, the kind that keep their life and resiliency and never "mat." Nor does the brush slip, because the rollers that operate it are rubber-tired. Others are wood, which splits, wears smooth and won't turn.

The National is the only sweeper that is actually spill-proof. And we can prove by actual test that it is the easiest-running sweeper in the world, and advantage of our improved, dust-proof, squeakless roller bearings. Have the National demonstrated by your dealer. It costs no more than others.

Free booklet, "How to Double the Life of Carpets and Rugs," is worth writing for NATIONAL SWEEPER CO.

92 Warren St., Newark, N. J.

The HOTEL WILLARD

256 West Seventy-Sixth Street near Broadway and Riverside Drive

An ideal home for visitors to New York desiring the quiet of a refined neighborhood. ¶ It overlooks the beautiful Hudson, and is in the finest residential district. The dining room is conducted on both the American and European plan and there is no bar. ¶ The rooms are large, cool, airy and delightful.

Attractive special rates are made from June 1st to September 1st. Room with bath, $1.50 and up. Room and bedroom and bath, $2.00 and up. Literature upon request.

ARTHUR T. HARDY, Manager

USE
BORDEN'S
PEERLESS BRAND
EVAPORATED MILK
(UNSWEETENED)
In All Recipes Calling for MILK OR CREAM

LYON & HEALY'S
GOOD CHURCH ORGANS
At Reasonable Prices

We make a specialty of large reed organs, voiced to closely resemble pipe organs. These church organs will be found much richer in effects than any cheap pipe organ. Let us tell you what our $450 Cathedral Organ will furnish in the way of musical effects.

Illustrated catalog free. Styles from $100 to $500. Payments spread over 2 years when desired.

Fine Folding Organs $37.50; Fine Parlor Organs $45.00; Good Second-Hand Organs at half price.

LYON & HEALY. DEPT. F5575. CHICAGO

The Criminal Liquor Traffic

By P. A. Baker, Superintendent Anti-Saloon League

THE present paramount need of the temperance reform in the United States is an amendment to the Interstate Commerce Law, that will permit prohibition and local option States to exercise their police power to the extent of carrying into effect the prohibitory laws placed upon their statute books, either by their legislatures or the popular vote of the people. This cannot now be done. Under the present construction of the Interstate Commerce Law there can be no interference with interstate shipments of liquor into "dry" territory until it has been delivered into the hands of the consignee. As I write, there lies before me a letter sent out by a whisky firm in Covington, Ky., soliciting orders, in which they expressly state: "We ship to every town in America, whether 'wet' or 'dry,' except Indian Reservations, under the rights of the Interstate Commerce Law."

P. A. Baker, Supt. Anti-Saloon League

There are now nine prohibition States in the Union. There are 200 cities of 10,000 and more population, and 539 of 5,000 and more population that have abolished saloons. One thousand seven hundred and twenty-nine counties out of a total of 2,885, have outlawed the traffic. Above 7,500,000 of our people are now living in prohibition territory, yet in all this vast area, not one foot of it is free from the possible invasion of liquor drinking and drunkenness, because federal law will not permit the exercise of State authority upon the interstate shipment of an article which the State itself has prohibited, until it is in the hands of the individual, who in most instances seeks to violate State law.

When Georgia, for example, adopted nullification in the 60's, the federal government, with an armed force, marched against Georgia and promptly brought her into subjection to its superior will. That same federal government is now nullifying the prohibitory laws, not only of Georgia, but of every State in the Union where such laws exist, by permitting and protecting the shipment of liquor to their debauched population in spite of State enactment and local majority protest.

Our attention has recently been directed to instances where federal officers have confiscated the product of illicit stills, and in order to collect the government's share of revenue, have openly sold the liquor on the streets of prohibition towns and cities, in defiance of State law. It is not an uncommon thing in a prohibition State like Kansas, for example, after a bootlegger has been caught and jailed by State authorities, for the federal officers to go to the jails and collect from these criminals the $25 internal revenue tax.

It is a monstrous travesty upon civil government that federal authority persists in refusing to permit the States to exercise their police power against a traffic, admittedly criminal; and unless Congress can be aroused to the point of amending the Interstate Commerce Law, touching the shipment of liquors, it will not be strange if a reaction comes in many communities that have already abolished the traffic.

The time has come when Congress should not only amend the Interstate Commerce Law, but when the federal government should cease to issue internal revenue tax receipts to persons who cannot show State authority for the sale of liquors. By issuing such receipts to applicants in prohibition territory, the federal government simply encourages law violators. It is the duty of every citizen in every State, where there is any prohibition territory, to know what the attitude of his Senators and Congressmen is on this increasingly important question. For more than a dozen years the temperance people have been appealing for relief. About twenty States have already, through their legislatures, memorialized Congress for the enactment of legislation that will give relief. The time has fully come when every law-abiding citizen should carry his appeal to the ballot box.

P. A. BAKER,
General Superintendent Anti-Saloon League of America.

A FRIENDLY WORD ON ADVERTISING

WE have received the following letter which speaks for itself:

"Dear Christian Herald: MAY 12, 1910.

"I see some readers criticise you for the advertising in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. I, for one, like to see it as it not only gives to us a cheaper paper than would otherwise be given to us, but it also protects us against fraudulent advertisers, as firms of that class, as a general rule, do not seek the columns of a first-class paper such as yours is.

J. C. W.,
"Phillipsburg, N. J."

This is typical of a number of letters which we have lately received in answer to our Advertising Talks. We are glad to have our subscribers write us upon this topic of advertising because their opinion on the subject is vital to the prosperity of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. As long as we carry advertisements in our columns, we want to be sure to have only advertisers of the highest class. If we were to let down the bars, we could double or treble the amount of advertising in every issue.

The fact that we guarantee our ads. has added greatly to the value of our advertising columns. Advertisers have learned that our readers really believe every statement that is printed in the advertising columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD because our readers know that we are very much in earnest in our effort to exclude all but the most reliable advertisers.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement.

"Let Me See One of Those Ingersoll-Trenton Watches!"

JEWELERS throughout the United States are having this said to them across their show-cases by thousands of discriminating watch-buyers, who demand the best watch for the least money. "INGERSOLL-TRENTON!" is the watch-word of the hour.

The feel of a fine watch in your pocket is like the feel of a good coat on your back — it gives you a sort of manful confidence in yourself, and when you take your watch out "to see what time it is" it gives others confidence in you, for a good watch is a badge of thrift. It also indicates the personal trait of punctuality, which goes far to compel business success.

The Ingersoll-Trenton watch is a dignified, dependable and durable timepiece. It is finely jeweled and beautifully cased. It is a credit to the person who carries it, being a watch of quality and worth.

And yet you do not have to "give up" a lot of money to own an Ingersoll-Trenton. $5, $7 and $9, in nickel, 10-year gold-filled or 20-year gold-filled cases—these are the prices at which we are able to offer these strictly high-grade watches, timed to the minute and fit for the most critical user. No other watchmaker can sell a watch of similar quality at these prices.

Therefore, go to your jeweler and say to him the words at the top of this page.

We also make Ingersoll models at $1, $1.50 and $2. 12,000 of them are sold daily "as time goes on."

Our illustrated fact-book about watchmaking will open your eyes and save you money. Send for a copy. Read it yourself and loan it to your neighbors. It is a good book to have and read and lend.

ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 61 Frankel Building New York

A WATCH THAT IS BETTER THAN ITS ADVERTISING

"I have carried my Ingersoll-Trenton one year. It keeps better time than your advertisement said it would. It is absolutely the best watch I have ever seen."

R. T. Chappell, Kaufman, Texas.

You can get an Ingersoll-Trenton in any one of 7,000 leading jewelry shops throughout the United States.

RESOLVED:

That it isn't necessary for me to pay a big price for an accurate watch when I can get an accurate Ingersoll-Trenton for five, seven or nine dollars.

5% EVERY DAY

UNDER NEW YORK BANKING DEP'T SUPERVISION

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

You may deposit funds on any date or withdraw on any date. We have no fixed "interest days"—earnings commence when money is received and paid for full time to date of withdrawal. Remitted by check quarterly semi-annually, or compounded if desired.

Established 17 years. During this time we have never paid less than 5 per cent. a year, while increasing our assets to over $2,000,000, and accumulating surplus and profits of $150,000.

Our record is open to public inspection. We invite fullest investigation of our methods.

Write for booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d St. and B'way, New York

KEEP BRIGHT

Any ballroom can be kept clean, bright and shiny with little work and no trouble by using 3-in-One oil. It cleans and polishes nickel, prevents tarnish and rust on brass and metal, removes stains, spots and scars from wood.

3-in-One keeps everything about every home spick and span. Try on piano cases, furniture, brass railings, door plates, cutlery.

FREE If you will give us name of your dealer we will send sample bottle and valuable booklet—both free.

3 IN ONE OIL CO. 54 Broadway, New York

$650 A. B. C. Automobile $650

The biggest Automobile bargain in America. 2 or 4 Cylinders Surreys, Runabouts and Delivery Wagons, 18 or 30 H. P., Solid or Pneumatic Tires. Write for FREE Catalog.

A. B. C. Motor Vehicle Mfg. Co., 3941 Morgan, St. Louis

HONOLULU $110

and back (1st class 5½ days from San Francisco. The splendid twin-screw steamer SIERRA (10,000 tons displacement) sails from San Francisco April 16, May 7, May 28, and every 21 days. Round trip tickets good for 4 months. HONOLULU, the most attractive spot on entire world tour. BOOK NOW and secure the best berths. LINE TO TAHITI AND NEW ZEALAND. S. S. Mariposa connecting with Union Line, sailings April 15, May 21, June 29, etc. Tahiti and back (24 days), $125. New Zealand (Wellington), $246.25 first-class. R. T. 6 months.

OCEANIC S. S. CO., 673 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

AGENTS MAKE BIG MONEY

We have a from-factory-to-consumer proposition for women and men agents that is high-class—interesting—easy to sell and extremely profitable. Many of our agents are making $300.00 per year, and only a little of their time required. We supply you with goods on consignment and full information how to make sales. We co-operate with you from start to finish. This proposition is not sold through dealers. You can undersell the dealer with better goods than the dealer handles, and make good money.

Write to-day for full information and territory.

We are allotting territories right now, so kindly write to-day before we give some one else your territory.

Address Box 28, care of CHRISTIAN HERALD

The
ACME QUALITY
Painting Guide Book
Tells You

What finish to use—how to prepare the surface—how to apply—and any other painting information you may desire.

¶ This book is not only intended for Painters. Decorators. Architects and Contractors. but for House-owners and Householders. It is the most complete work of its kind ever issued.

¶ Suppose you want to varnish a book-case. enamel a bedroom set. paint a carriage—or finish any other surface that requires paint. enamel. stain or varnish; all you need to do is to look in the index and then turn to the right page. There before you in concise form you will find complete instructions. You can't go wrong.

¶ This Guide Book to right painting will give you a better idea than you could gain in any other way of the variety. quality and scope of usefulness of the various Acme Quality specialties. Our slogan means just what it says—

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.

¶ Your dealer probably sells Acme Quality and will give you color cards. See him about your next paint purchase.

¶ The Acme Quality Painting Guide Book is sent free to those requesting a copy. Address

Acme White Lead and Color Works,
Dept. 0, Detroit, Mich.

Look for this Trade Mark

PAINTS ENAMELS THE ACME QUALITY KIND STAINS VARNISHES

Every Acme Quality Store Shows It.

He Tried "The Golden Rule"

FREDERICK KOHLER, a big-framed, big-hearted man who believes in the literal application of the "Golden Rule," is chief of the Police Department of Cleveland, O. For the past two years and a half, Chief Kohler has been working out an idea. He believes that only a small proportion of the persons arrested by the police are in reality serious offenders. The rest, he believes, are injured by the ignominy that attaches to arrest and the association with criminals that it necessitates. Hence, there has been evolved in Cleveland, under Chief Kohler's direction, the so-called Common Sense or Golden Rule policy of not making arrests save in such instances as the evidence is sufficient to hold and convict the offender. Patrolmen are instructed to make no arrest at all, except for serious offenses. Arrests are discouraged where it is evident they would do more harm than good.

FRED KOHLER
Chief of Police, Cleveland

The common practice everywhere with "drunks and disorderlies," petty thieves, bad boys, and small offenders generally, is to "run them in," irrespective of whether or not the subsequent evidence is likely to convict. After trial the majority of such offenders are usually discharged. Positive harm often comes to the person thus held.

Chief Kohler believes it is the duty of the police to eliminate as many of these unnecessary arrests as possible. He thinks it is the duty of the guardian of the law not only to apprehend the real offender, but to help save, so far as he can, those of that larger class of unfortunates who unwittingly or unconsciously become transgressors.

The chief has no sympathy with the altogether too common idea that a policeman is necessarily a brute armed with a night stick. The "Golden Rule policeman" is the people's friend. And under instructions emanating from the chief's office it is decreed that the best "Golden Rule policeman" is the one who manages the offender with the least display of authority, and who gives him a helping hand or a word of friendly counsel, if such is in his power.

"Something besides blue cloth and brass buttons is needed to make a good policeman," says Chief Kohler. And this "something" is the ability to use kindly efforts in easing the friction and ill-temper that so often arise between man and man; to give the unfortunate a "lift" when possible, and to exercise the power of distinguishing the habitual criminal from the man who is not a criminal at heart, but whose fall from legal rectitude is due to some unfortunate circumstance.

The "Golden Rule policy" has resulted in a large decrease in the number of persons held by the Cleveland Police Department. In 1907 the total number of arrests was 30,418 and this was somewhat below the average of previous years. The new policy was inaugurated January 1, 1908. The first year of "Golden Rule" administration resulted in only 10,085 arrests, a decrease of 66 per cent. In 1909 the number of arrests was only 6,018, a decrease of 81 per cent. over 1907.

Under the "Golden Rule policy" about 1,800 persons a month for the past two years and a half have been saved from police court records. To understand just what this means, we must remember that in crime, as in everything else, it is always easier for one to take the second step after he has taken the first. Eighteen hundred less police court records a month means a large decrease in the subsequent number of so-called "second offenders."

So far as the casual observer can see, the city is just as orderly and law-abiding as any other city of half million people. It is probably eve more so, for there are day in which no crimes ar reported to the polic department and days i which no arrests are mad Statistics show that sinc the "Golden Rule policy has been in operatio there has been less actu crime committed and les property stolen than fo many years previous. Ap parently the Golden Ru produces good effects, eve when applied to the lav less element with whic a big city police department has t deal.

ORIN EDSON CROOKER.

YOU CAN MAKE
FROM $3 TO $12 A DAY

You need no experience because we teach you everything and help you to get started. If now employed, you can work for us in your spare time and make more money than your regular wages amount to. Write and let us show you our line. We have over 2000 patented articles, all fast sellers. Cannot be bought in stores.

WE WANT AGENTS In Every County In the State

We will point the way to you how to make from $150 to $200 per month. Our goods are fully guaranteed, and we refund all money to any purchaser not perfectly satisfied. We start honest men and women in business on our capital. Samples of best sellers FREE. Write to-day for agency.

THOMAS MFG CO. 2524 Wayne Street DAYTON, OHIO

SEND FOR FREE BOOK
COLORADO HOMESTEADS
ON MOFFAT ROAD

Tells how to homestead 160 acres of rich, fertile land with pure water, good towns, fine climate on Moffat Road, (Denver, Northwestern and Pacific Ry) in Routt County, Colo. We have no land to sell—its absolutely free from the Government and now open for settlement. Law allows you to return home for 6 months after filing. Oats, 90 bushels to acre; wheat, 45; barley, 70. Get a good farm free. Fine chance for investors and business openings. Write for free book, maps, and information about how to get these farms FREE. W. F. Jones, Gen'l Traffic Manager, 745 Majestic Building, Denver, Colo.

Would You Like to DISCARD YOUR GLASSES?
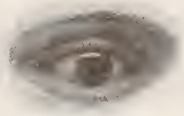
Just Try
The Ideal Sight Restorer
for 10 Days at Our Expense



THE NORMAL EYE

Minor eye weaknesses are caused by poor circulation of blood. Near-sight, far-sight and astigmatism are caused by their becoming distorted (out of shape). By a gentle massage The Ideal Sight Restorer produces a normal circulation of blood and moulds the eye painlessly but surely to its normal shape. Thousands have used it with perfect success and without danger, as it does not come in direct contact with the eyes. Five minutes manipulation twice a day is all that is necessary. If you wish to relieve eye strain and headaches, and in a short time be entirely independent of your glasses, write for instructive booklet, No. 127 F, records and 10 days' test to
THE IDEAL CO., 134 W. 65th St., N.Y.

I'll Save You
$26.50
on my 1910 Split Hickory Auto-Seat Buggy. Or, 25% saving guaranteed on retail price of any vehicle. Made to order. 30 days' road test—2-year guarantee.

Let Me Pay the Postage on Big Free Book to You
Shows 125 styles. Also harness. Beautiful color-views. Prices astonishingly low. Write me now.

H. C. Phelps, Pres.
The Ohio Carriage Mfg. Co.
Sta. 236, Columbus, O.

MEN WOMEN

Raise Mushrooms
Big Profits! Quick Profits!
Anybody can make big income all year raising Mushrooms at home in cellars, sheds, barns, boxes, etc. Markets waiting for all you grow.
Free Illustrated Instruction Booklet.
HIRAM BARTON, Desk 9 West 48th St., New York

STAMPS 100 all different. Album and Hinges only 12c. 30 Sweden 10c—1000 all different stamps $2—20 different foreign coins 25c. We buy stamps and coins—Buying Lists 10 cents. Toledo Stamp Co., Toledo, Ohio.

A Number of HIGH-CLASS WOMEN AGENTS WANTED to sell our Waist, Suit, Dress and Coat Materials. Early applications receive first consideration. Profitable and dignified work. Write immediately for particulars.
NEW YORK FABRIC COMPANY
30 E. 20th St., Dept. 41, New York City

POST CARDS
10 Birthday. 10c. | 10 Best Wishes & Greetings, 10c.
10 Rose. 10c. | 10 Fourth of July. 10c.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

VASSAR PINS

Dainty Pins for Dainty Peopl
Combine style and comfort. Need pointed, unbreakable. Don't come op in use. You don't lose them.
Price—Nickel, Jet or Dull Black, 4 card, 10c., 14-K Rolled Gold or Rom Plate, beaded edge or plain—2 on card, 25
If your dealer doesn't keep them yet, send his name address and we'll send you the kind and size wanted for price stated above. Money back if you are not satisfied.
Consolidated Safety Pin Co.
202 Farrand Street, - Bloomfield, N.

CHRISTIAN HERALD
BOND BOOK
WE have received so many requests for copies of the financial articles which have been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, that we have thought it wise to preserve them in pamphlet form, for the convenience of readers who may wish to secure a complete set.
Any reader may secure a copy of this useful booklet without charge, by forwarding 4c. in stamps to cover postage.
Address CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Dept. 96. Bible House, New York

MAKE YOUR FIGURE PERFE
Let me send you AUTO MASSE on a 40 Day Free Trial (both s So confident am I that simply wea it will permanently remove all s fluous flesh that I mail it free, wit deposit. When you see your sl liness speedily returning I know will buy it. Try it at my expe Write to-day.
PROF. BURNS Dept. 203 No. Broadway, New

Retnrnable examination copies of the great hymn
HALLOWED HYMN
mailed on request to churches needing new bo
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chic

PATENTS That Protect and P
Advice and Books FR
Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Servi
WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON,

WANTED LOCAL REPRESENTATIV sell men's clothing on credit largest credit clothing house in the world; no ca required; write for plan. Good openings for right Menter & Rosenbloom Co., 600 Cox Bldg., Rochester,

PATENTS that PROTECT
Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. sta
R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D. C., Dept. 36, Est.

BABIES REVEL IN IT! Mennen's Borated Talcum Toilet Powder. Soothing, Comforting. Allays Irritation. Prevents chafing. For Mother's use also. Substitutes rob you. Insist on Mennen's. Sample box for 2c stamp. Sold for 25c Everywhere or by Mail Gerhard Mennen Co., Newark, N. J.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' Oh, something new—The MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right."

The MORLEY PHONE for the DEAF

makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Invisible, comfortable weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it. Over One Hundred Thousand Sold. Write for booklet and testimonials. THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 702, Perry Building, Philadelphia

5 ROMPERS $1

Direct From Factory. All Charges Prepaid

Best, most serviceable, fast color, unshrinkable Rompers Choice of pink or blue, checked chambray with neck, collar and belt bound in white . 5 for $1.00

ROMPERS of madras with yoke, rolling collar, belt and pocket piped in white; choice of assorted checks and stripes, 3 for $1.00

ROMPERS of linen suiting, rolling collar, yoke, and cuffs piped in white; belt piped and faced. Tan, cadet blue, 2 for $1.00

Sizes 2 to 6 yrs. Satisfaction or money returned. Specify size and color. CHARGES PREPAID

CONSUMERS' APRON CO., 61 Clymer Street, Brooklyn, N.Y

Varicose Veins. We make not only the stocking, but we go back of that and make the elastic of which our seamless heel are made, so that in ordering from us you are sure of getting fresh, new, live rubber elastic, on which the life of the stocking depends. Careful record kept of every case treated. Send for Varicose Veins Booklet, self-measuring directions and prices.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS

Curtis & Spindell Co., Elastic Weavers, 202 Market St., Lynn, Mass.

FILMS DEVELOPED

10 CENTS PER ROLL

ALL SIZES.

VELOX PRINTS, BROWNIES, 3c;

3½ x 3½, 3¼ x 4¼ 4c; 4 x 5, 3a 5c.

Send us two negatives and we will print them without charge as a sample of our work; we are film specialists and give you better results than you have ever had.

COLE & CO., Asbury Park, N. J.

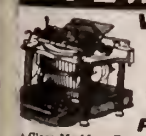
WHEEL CHAIRS

A Wheel Chair is often an Invalids's greatest comfort. We offer over 75 styles of these easy, self-propelling and Invalid's Rolling Chairs, with latest improvements. Ship direct from factory to you, freight prepaid, and sell on 30 Days' Trial.

Liberal Discounts to all sending for free catalogue NOW.

GORDON MFG. CO. 454 Madison Ave., Toledo, O

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES



VISIBLE WRITERS or otherwise

L. C. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.

¼ to ½ MAKERS PRICES

Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY

PRICES $16.00 UP

A Class Machines Fresh from the Mfrs—Write for Illustrated Catalog 71

Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

AGENTS WANTED—Agents earn $25 to $50 weekly selling our new Style Mexican and Swiss Embroidery Waist Patterns, Princess Dresses, Art Linens, and various novelties. Catalogue FREE. National Importing Co., Desk 48, 699 Broadway, N.Y.

Founder of Mothers' Day

SUNDAY, May 8, "Mothers' Day," was set apart all over the country for the demonstration of love and affection for mothers. Sermons were preached on the subject and carnations worn in honor of the mothers of the race. It was Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, who originated the idea of thus setting apart one day in the year to show reverence for "mother."

"Mother Jarvis"

Among the Workers

—REV. F. B. MEYER, of London, is to give a course of lectures at the Northfield School this spring on "Exodus and the New Testament Analogues." Dr. Meyer is now making an extended tour of the Southern and Western cities in the interest of the World's Sunday School Assoeiation.

—A CLERGYMAN, ordained in 1887, and with experience as an evangelist, desires an engagement as supply (permanent or charge of Mission work). Prefers unsectarian work. Active, earnest, whole-hearted. London and Edinburgh degrees. Hebrew and Greek scholar. May be addressed, "Pastor," care of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

—A FEW DAYS AGO the rooms at 2 West Twenty-ninth Street, New York City, occupied by Miss de Vere (who is now visiting this country as a delegate from the Peace Society of Paris), were entered by burglars and her wardrobe, money and valuables were taken, leaving her practieally penniless, and with only a single dress. Miss de Vere has been lecturing for various churehes and societies on the subjeet of Peace. Any letters will reach her at the above address.

—MISSIONARY WALTER B. WILLIAMS, of Grand Cess Mission, Liberia, writes giving a sad pieture of the moral and physieal degradation of the Kroos who have not yet been evangelized. Tribal wars, "devil doctors," murders and gross superstition and idolatry are everywhere. Mr. Williams has already acted as arbitrator in seven tribal wars, all caused by "devil doetors." In the last nine months encouraging progress has been made by the missionaries and the field is a promising one.

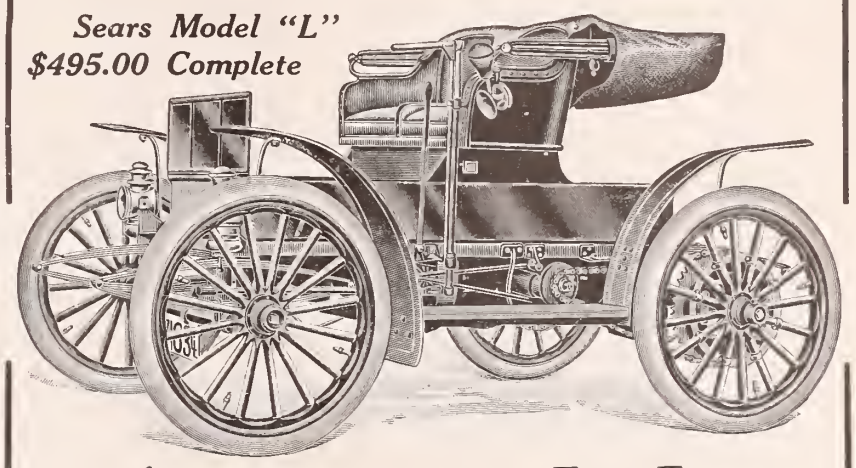
—MISSIONARY J. C. LAWSON of the Industrial Evangelistic Mission, Mt. Hermon, Landour Mussoorie, India, makes appeal for native "substitutes" as missionary helpers in his work. He writes that there is a field of serviee for four native preachers at $60 each yearly; two Bible women at $40 each, and a number of student preachers at $40 each. Any reader who desires to support a missionary substitute at the front and who wishes to take up one of Mr. Lawson's workers as such personal representative ean do so by addressing this journal.

—MISSIONARY H. M. KINNEAR, of Foochow, China, writes: "Last spring an epidemie of beri-beri in all the schools brought a good many of the students to us for eare. Among them was a young man from the extreme western part of the province. When he arrived at the hospital he had given up all hopes of getting well, and, with tears streaming down his face, wrote to his friends, telling them that he did not expect to see them again. He was given a Testament, and as soon as he became a little better, he was found reading it almost constantly. Before he left us he was a bright convert to Christianity. He is, perhaps, the only Christian in the Provincial Law School."

The Drakesboro Relief Fund

Mr. James T. Pieree, of Drakesboro, Ky., has reeeived the following contributions to the Relief Fund, which have been applied in aid of the sufferers: W. H. Morris, Payson, Ill., $3; Mrs. H. Dove, Arkfort, N. Y., $1; Mrs. V. P. Clark, Hillsdale, Mich., $2.

Sears Model "L"
$495.00 Complete



Automobiles

We build them We guarantee them

We sell them to you direct from our factory

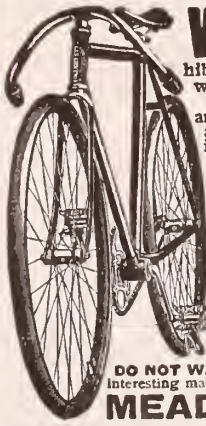
Real Inside Prices

OUR new Automobile Catalog quotes THE ONLY REAL INSIDE PRICES ON AUTOMOBILES. In this catalog we show automobiles for $370.00 and up, six different models, all built by us in our own automobile factory. When you buy a SEARS you get it direct from our big Chicago factory at the factory price.

With our new Automobile Catalog we will send you our Booklet of Testimonials showing pictures of customers using Sears cars in every part of the United States, with letters from them telling their experiences.

If you are interested in an automobile of any kind, write today for our Sears Automobile Catalog No. 65C41

Sears, Roebuck & Co. Chicago



WANTED—RIDER AGENTS IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1910 Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write at once for full particulars and special offer.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offer.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderful low prices we can make you. We sell the bigbest grade bicycles at lower prices than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT—but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. F 71, CHICAGO, ILL.

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium

For the Scientific and Effective Treatment of

CANCER

Without Resorting to Surgical Procedure

The only private institution of magnitude in the United States for the exclusive treatment of Cancer and other malignant and benign new growths. Conducted by a physician of standing. Established thirty-two years.

For complete information address

Berkshire Hills Sanatorium, North Adams, Massachusetts

For CUTS Use

POND'S EXTRACT

As a dressing for cuts, wounds and bruises, Pond's Extract has proved its value in thousands of cases

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Good Morning! I've had my Toasted Corn Flakes. Have You?

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE

W. K. Kellogg

Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co., Battle Creek, Mich.
Canadian Trade Supplied by the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co., Ltd., London, Ont.

Copyright 1909, Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co.

THE KIND WITH THE FLAVOR—MADE FROM SELECTED WHITE CORN

CHRISTIAN HERALD

BSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
BLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, June 8, 1910

VOL. 33—NO. 23. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

Copyright by Notman — Underwood & Underwood

Scenes at the Great Funeral Pageant of the Late King Edward VII.

1. The nine kings entering Hyde Park. 2. The body lying in state at Buckingham Palace. 3. The body on the caisson, royal charger, favorite dog Caesar, and royal carriages on Piccadilly.

Questions and Answers

In forwarding MSS. to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, enclose stamped envelopes for return, if unavailable.

L. P. C., Greenwich, N. Y. How large do oak trees grow and how long do they last?

There is an oak at Cowthorpe, Yorkshire, England, which is fifty-five feet six inches in girth at the ground. One at Newland, Gloucester, England, is forty-six feet in girth. The last named was a large tree and so recorded nine hundred years ago. The largest oak in New England probably is at Lancaster, Mass. There are some at Waverley Oaks, Mass., of great girth, which were probably good-sized trees before Columbus discovered America.

J. G. O., Joslin, Ill. How is the distance of the earth from the sun determined?

The distance to the sun is obtained by a parallax. This is a measurement of angles, and is purely mathematical. The distance to any near objects in the sky is usually measured by this means. It is one of the simplest of methods and most reliable. S. P. LELAND.

Mr. W. L., Bridgeport, Conn. What does the motto virtutis amore on a coat-of-arms mean?

It is the Latin for "through the love of virtue." It is the motto of the Viscounts Valentia of Ireland.

R. H., Canton, O. What is London stone?

It is a stone in the wall of St. Swithin's church, London. It is said to have been placed by the Romans in Cannon Street, the centre of the city, in 15 B.C. It was known historically before 1066. In 1450 occurred the famous incident when Jack Cade struck it with his sword and cried: "Now is Mortimer lord of this city!" It was moved in 1742 and again in 1798 to its present position.

W. B. E., Pittsburg, Pa. 1. When was the eldest son of the King of England first called Prince of Wales? 2. When was Christianity first brought into Wales? 3. Why are there so few Welsh Roman Catholics?

1. The title of Prince of Wales was first bestowed on an English prince by Edward I., who bestowed it on his son, who was born at Coernarvon Castle in 1284. Edward I. had spent many years trying to subdue the Welsh, and by this he hoped to make his rule less objectionable to them and also to signify that they were attached to the English crown. 2. The religion practised by the Druids disappeared between A.D. 300 and 400, under the influence of Christian missionaries. 3. The Reformation in Wales was quite sweeping and a large proportion of the people have been Protestants ever since. The non-conformist element is quite strong.

T. J. W., Selma, Ala. My father often spoke of the year that a killing frost occurred in May, whereby corn that was knee high, and wheat that was well advanced, were all killed. Some one recently stated that the date was May 8, 1835. Does any reliable data exist to show what effect was produced on vegetation at the dates when Halley's comet was visible?

You fail to state where the frost was so severe in 1835. Climatic conditions are purely local and dependent upon local causes. While the low temperature affected some localities, it was, by no means, world-wide. If the presence of a comet in the sky produces any effect on the weather, it has never been detected. It would require 100,000 comets the size of Halley's to make one world like ours. This comet never has come within fifteen million miles of our planet. Its influence would be mathematical only. It would be so slight that it could not be detected by our most delicate instruments. S. P. LELAND.

F. D. McB., Abingdon, Va. 1. Who were the Gentiles, and when did they become a separate sect from the Jews? 2. Who and what were the Sadducees and the Pharisees? 3. Did Luke write the Acts of the Apostles?

1. Gentiles, which means simply "peoples," was a term applied indiscriminately by the Jews to all other nations than themselves. After a time it acquired a hostile meaning, as the Jews gradually drew themselves apart as a "holy nation." The term is used of "Galilee of the Gentiles," where some five nations other than the Jews were represented; the "Court of the Gentiles" outside the Temple area; the "isles of the Gentiles," etc. 2. The Pharisees were a Jewish sect deriving their name from a word which means "separate" or "distinct." They were disciples of the Jewish sages, who held themselves aloof and claimed to keep rigidly the Mosaic laws of purity. They had many religious observances; believed in a future life of rewards and punishments. The Sadducees were another sect, but were free-thinkers, differing greatly from the Pharisees on many points. They rejected the oral law and the prophets and only accepted the Pentateuch, and Josephus says they denied the resurrection of the dead. 3. The general belief among Biblical scholars is that Luke was the author of the "Acts."

Mrs. J. C. T., Hopkins, S. C. 1. Will you please inform me what was the origin of the Maltese cross? 2. Whose is the head on our silver dollar and how came it there?

1. The Maltese cross is an eight-pointed cross made by joining four arrow heads at the points and used as the emblem of the Knights of Malta, who were in reality the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. All of the great religious orders of knighthood carried some form of cross as a badge, and the Maltese cross was a variation chosen by the Knights of St. John who were often called the Knights of Malta from having ruled over that island from early in the sixteenth century to the nineteenth. The cross of arrows was doubtless selected as appropriate to a military order. 2. The head on the silver dollar is the head of Liberty, a classic female figure, with the band about the head, having long been used early in America and in France figuratively to represent Liberty. It is said the designer copied the profile of an American teacher, but gave it a Greek cast.

E. P. A., Hampton, Ia., sends an enlightening note, apropos of a recent paragraph in THE MAIL-BAG stating the origin and significance of Mr. Clemens' pen name—"Mark Twain." E. P. A. gives this version of the matter: "When Mr. Clemens was a 'cub' pilot on the Mississippi, there was one of the oldest pilots on the river by the name of Isaac Sellers, who was in the habit of jotting down brief paragraphs of plain, practical information about the river and signing them 'Mark Twain,' which he published in the New Orleans Picayune. Mr. Clemens made one of these articles, written by Sellers, a text for a newspaper sketch in which he burlesqued the article. He published the sketch in the New Orleans True Delta. It offended Sellers so much that he never afterwards signed 'Mark Twain' to anything. When Sellers died, Mr. Clemens was on the Pacific coast, and, as he says, 'needed a nom de guerre' so he confiscated the ancient mariner's discarded one. The foregoing is Mr. Clemens' own account of his appropriating the name and can be found in chapter L, p. 493, of his book entitled Life on the Mississippi."

H. W. D., Ridgely, Md. Can an account be had of the number of persons killed by horses by runaways or any other way?

There are no classified statistics showing just what you ask; 40,539 die annually from accidents and injuries and the causes quoted may be included among them.

Jessie A., Providence, R. I. 1. What is the cost of providing an outing for a child at Mont Lawn? 2. How long do they stay there? 3. Are visitors welcome?

1. Three dollars covers the entire cost of a outing for a tenement child at our Children's Home. This includes transportation both ways, doctor's examination, any necessary clothing, shoes, etc. 2. Each child stays ten days. 3. Yes, we are always glad to have any of our friends come and see "The Children's Paradise." The matron will make you welcome.

This eulogistic verse is from a reader, Miss Sarah E. Wood:

The good CHRISTIAN HERALD wherever 'tis sent
On spiritual uplift and comfort is bent.
It quickens the mind, and enlarges the heart
In the lone country, village, and wide city mart.

The writer has accurately described in these compact and well-expressed lines the mission of this journal.

Another reader, Geo. R. Frisbee, Jr., writes us:

"Since THE CHRISTIAN HERALD first had its being, I have read its pages. I have some of the originals still on file, and would feel that the most cherished journal of my list were wanting should I miss it from my stand."

He concludes with a verse in which he likens THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to a constellation spreading its light abroad:

"From sea to sea, from land to land,
As if borne by angel band,
Bringing to the weary peace and rest.
So may it be forever blest."

But we modestly refrain from further quotations. We must thank our poetical friends, however, for their kind sentiments.

The Body of the Late King Edward Being Taken to Windsor

ONE of the most imposing pageants in the history of the world was the state funeral of Edward VII. After the services held in the throne-room of Buckingham Palace, and attended by the members of the royal family and high visiting dignitaries, the body was borne on a gun carriage in an imposing procession to old Westminster Hall. It was followed by King George and his two sons, the late king's brother, the Duke of Connaught, and the kings of Denmark and Norway. These marched on foot. Then came carriages containing the queen mother, Alexandra, Queen Mary and other royal ladies. The body rested three days in Westminster Hall. It was placed on a magnificent catafalque of purple velvet. Over it was thrown the royal standard, its brilliant hues shining in the light from the ancient Gothic windows. On the standard were placed the crown, the orb and the sceptre, all emblems of the royal office. Around the coffin stood gentlemen-at-arms wearing plumed helmets and leaning on their reversed halberds. Further out stood the "Beefeaters" from the Tower of London, dressed in the costume they have worn for over three centuries. They had their partisans turned down and their heads were bowed. Every guard was as immovable as if carved in stone. So tense was the strain of this guard duty that the sentries were changed every half hour at the suggestion of King George.

Rulers from various countries came hastily to London until nine kings were assembled to escort the body from Westminster Hall to Royal Windsor, where the body was to be buried in St. George's Chapel. The procession to the station was witnessed by over a million people, all wearing black or some emblem of mourning. The roadway was lined by 28,000 troops, cavalry, infantry and artillery, and a large body of white-capped sailors. First came the field marshals, admirals and officers of the household, and then a line of black horses drawing the gun carriage with the coffin. Just behind came the king's charger, led riderless, and then the humblest mourner of the day, the late king's pet fox terrier. King George led the eight kings who came to honor his father. The German Emperor came next and then the kings of Spain, Portugal, Norway, Denmark, Greece, Belgium and Bulgaria, and Archduke Francis of Austria. A large train of princes followed, about fifty in number. President Roosevelt, special ambassador of the United States, rode in a carriage with the French representative. The final service at Windsor was one of impressive solemnity, and at its close the coffin slowly disappeared beneath the chapel floor, leaving the empty catafalque to mark its place.

Miscellaneous

A. G. B., Oakhurst, N. Y. Write to the librarian of Congress.

Mr. L. H., Deer Lodge, Mont. Kindly send correct address for letter.

S. E. H. C., Clark Co., Wash. Any letter with their name and addressed to New York will reach them.

J. E. M., Herkimer, N. Y. If you write to the librarian of the Brown University Library, he can give you the information.

M. E. D., Baltimore, Md. We have no information in regard to the memorial mentioned. Write to the secretary of the Y. W. C. A., Denver, Col.

Geo. B. H., Nicholasville, Ky. We believe Mr. Roosevelt was the author of the phrase "predatory rich," or its equivalent, and he would be its best interpreter.

Subscriber, Mason City, Ia. The statement that the eye of the dead photographically retains the impression of the object last seen in life is rejected by scientists and medical observers.

Miss Alice Condiet, the well-known medical missionary from India, now on sick leave in this country, writes:

"My grandmother, Charlotte Ford Condict, lived near Morristown, N. J., and in 1809 she started what was, we believe, the first Sunday School ever started in this country. The Sunday School has always gone on, and now they wish to celebrate the one hundred and first anniversary of its existence. I would like to ask the question whether it can be shown that there was any earlier Sunday School in any part of our country in 1809."

Perhaps some reader may be able to supply the desired information through THE MAIL-BAG.

NEW YORK, JUNE 8, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Miss Mary Dreier | Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont | Miss Anna Morgan | Miss Inez Milholland

RICH WOMEN WITH AN AIM

FEELING that she has a duty to perform, the woman of wealth has entered the field of social and industrial activities. She is no longer atisfied to have money do the work for her. She ealizes that duty is not discharged with the mere igning of a check, and that charity demands more ıan a monetary gift. She knows that social ills re the offspring of underlying social defects and ıat to eradicate misery these must be abol-shed; that to help the unfortunate it is necessary ɔ strike at the conditions from which misfortune prings.

Twelve thousand infants die in New York an-ually because of improper feeding. It is not nough that these be attended in he last stage of their illness, but teps must be taken to keep them n health. Hence the Pure Milk Commission. Thirty-three per ent. of all that die are victims of uberculosis. It is not sufficient hat these be taken care of when ick, but they must be saved ere he disease takes root, and to do his the National Tuberculosis ssociation gives lectures on the mportance of pure air and food, nd warns against the dangers f dark rooms and overcrowded vorkshops. Thousands go wrong. Men laden with troubles, strug-ling in a sea of sordid environ-nents, sink into crime. It is not nough that prisons be built to onfine them. Religion and ethics ıust be brought into their lives o influence their better selves. Hence the settlement worker, vho visits the slums for the pur-ose of teaching the value of a igher life by personal example.

When Mrs. Russell Sage placed er fortune at the disposition of he Foundation she instructed he trustees that "the larger and ıore difficult problems" should e taken up. In her letter of pril 19, 1907, which may be alled a deed of gift, she defines ıe scope of the Foundation, and the limitations vithin which she wishes it to act. She says: "The cope of the Foundation is not only national, but road. It should, however, preferably not under-ake to do that which is now being done, or is likely ɔ be effectively done, by other individuals or by ther agencies. It should be its aim to take up the ırger and more difficult problems, and take them p, as far as possible, in such manner as to secure ɔ-operation and aid in their solution."

Accordingly, in paragraph A the scope has been efined as follows: "The Foundation will not attempt to relieve individual or family needs. Its function is to eradicate, so far as possible, the causes of poverty and ignorance. If the Foundation should attempt to relieve such suffering there would be nothing left with which to perform the higher function of trying to prevent its existence."

The Foundation has been true to this programme and its activities have been directed toward studying conditions with the object of finding possible solutions for existing ills. It has done much educational propaganda and extensive research work, and has published books that are of value to the working class, on subjects such as the standard of living, medical inspection in public schools, women and the trades, industrial accidents and liability laws. Among the propagandist movements to which the Foundation has contributed both direction and financial support are the prevention of tuberculosis, playground extension, care of children, and charity organization.

There are other women who share Mrs. Russell Sage's conception of dealing with problems. Two women at the head of the suffrage movement, Mrs. Clarence Mackay and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, believe that political freedom for women will result in material advantages, and that the exercise of the ballot will enhance the welfare of the sex.

Thus it happened that Mrs. Mackay, over a year ago, invited a carefully selected list of people to lunch at the Colony Club and suggested a plan for the formation of a suffrage society. On the 21st of December, 1908, the Equal Franchise Society was organized, with Mrs Mackay as president.

Mrs. Mackay has always shown an interest in public affairs and was elected to the Roslyn School Board several years ago. She is a woman of domestic habits and gives most of her time to her children and home; but she realizes that there are other children and other homes that need attention. So she gives several hours a day to the movement for woman's rights, and keeps two secretaries busy at her office in the Metropolitan building.

Miss Elizabeth Cole and Miss Elizabeth Dutcher Aiding a Labor Movement

Mrs. Belmont is the president of the Political Equality League, to which she gives her individual attention, and in whose headquarters, 505 Fifth Avenue, she spends many hours every day. For years she has been acting as banker for a number of working women, receiving their money, caring for it, and through her knowledge of finance securing the largest interest on their meager savings. She has also built the Trinity Seaside Home at Great Neck, L. I., in which sixty sick children are accommodated. Mrs. Belmont, like a number of other wealthy women, is active in other charitable societies; but she realizes that the solution of social problems is of greater importance than immediate relief in individual cases.

This is the reason why when the shirtwaist makers' strike occurred, in which thirty thousand girls stood up for the recognition of their union, Mrs. Belmont went to their assistance. She was the first of the wealthy women to lend to their cause moral and financial support, paying the expenses of a monster mass meeting held at the Hippodrome, collecting money from her friends for the aid of the strikers, and trying to bring about a settlement.

Mrs. Belmont was not alone in the good work done for the shirtwaist strikers. A number of other rich women flocked to the assistance of the girls, and even the Colony Club, the most fashionable club in the city, or perhaps the nation, opened its doors and welcomed them.

Continued on page 543

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. C. H. Parkhurst*

The Soul's Inner Chamber

TEXT: Matt. 14:23—"And when the evening was come, he was there alone."

TO be alone was one of our Lord's habits. Solitariness must, therefore, mean something. It probably means much.

To be alone with one's self is the readiest method of learning to know one's self. It is true, although hardly what we should have expected, that what is remote from us, rather than what is near to us, receives the earlier attention, and therefore excites the deeper interest.

Men commenced to study the stars thousands of years before they began seriously to explore the earth. They have for a long time been investigating the divine character and creating a theology, but only latterly have they given earnest attention to the mysteries of the human mind and spirit and produced a psychology.

It is therefore in obedience to a tendency that has been everywhere and always operative, that our thoughts incline to spread themselves over surrounding territory, rather than to gather themselves in upon ground that is more distinctly home ground; for the man himself is his one original and true home.

The Windows of the Senses

It is a feature of these migratory times that people are almost more likely to be absent from their domicile; that is to say, from the spot that rather from force of habit than from practice they call their place of residence; more likely to be absent from it than to be at home in it.

It is much the same, only more so, in this matter of a man's finding his real place of residence within the precincts of his own spirit. We have five senses; those senses are windows through which the soul gazes into the world around; and if we are not actually away from home and in that surrounding world, the likelihood is that we are at the window looking out.

And there is so much of interest to be seen through those windows that it is rather natural, perhaps, that we shall make more use of them than of the living-room, what our New England fathers used to call the "keeping-room," so-called, I suppose because that was the place where they used to "keep" themselves, instead of scattering themselves through the whole range of contiguous territory.

But if that is the case, and if there is more that is fascinating to us in the prospect than in the introspect, it must be, I suppose, because the things and people that are about us are more interesting to us than we are to ourselves. I know that we do talk about enjoying ourselves. Have you ever considered that expression carefully enough to realize how utterly it misstates the fact? Those words when used by us would seem to indicate that it is ourselves that we enjoy, that we are enjoyable to ourselves, that we find ourselves interesting.

Getting Away from Ourselves

You go off on an excursion through a charming range of country, and on returning say that you have thoroughly enjoyed yourself, whereas the fact is that you have not been enjoying yourself at all; the fascination of the excursion lay in what you saw through your soul's windows, not in anything that the soul itself contained. Probably there are not a great many people that do enjoy themselves. Breathing is difficult in a vacuum and one does not go into the desert to pluck flowers.

We would not encourage a person's confining himself within the walls of his own soul; but that is his home and he ought, therefore, to know a good deal about it, and it is most desirable that he should find in it much that is interesting, and that will pleasantly engage him when there is nothing especial to call him out. His fitness for outside work will be measured by the amount that he finds in himself that is enjoyable when he remains inside. St. Paul tells us in one place that he does not depend for satisfaction upon what is imported into him, but that he is a self-sufficing man—grew enough in the soil of his own mind and heart to supply his personal market and keep him nourished.

Not the whole, but a part of what we call the social impulse, proceeds from the poverty of one's own personal containings. If my own table is imperfectly furnished I shall feel impelled to go to a restaurant. If my own house is insufficiently warmed I shall be inclined to spend as much of my time as possible visiting such of my neighbors as have a good fire in the furnace and glowing coals in the grate.

The Social Passion

He is a happy man, she a happy woman, who finds herself to be a pleasant and satisfying companion, satisfying at any rate up to a certain point; for the world is wiser than any man and larger than any soul, and whatever the wealth of our own internal resources we are not going to forget the fountains of supply that are quite outside of us, fountains human and fountains divine, which we cannot afford to ignore. We are only thinking now of those who go away from themselves, not because they realize that there is that to be obtained outside which they do not themselves possess, but because they cannot be alone without being lonely, and because they are such poor companions to themselves that for variety's sake almost anything and anybody outside will be a relief.

That presumably is the secret of that society frenzy of which we do not all of us know anything personally perhaps, but of which we observe and hear a good deal during every social season. Society devotees may in some instances, certainly, be likened to those impecunious people who stand in the breadline, waiting to be publicly fed because having no larder of their own.

The intensity of the social passion is a kind of barometer measuring the lightness and thinness of the internal atmosphere. This, be it observed, is no plea for excluding one's self from contact with the world and human companionship any more than having a bolt on our front door is a way of indicating that our house is a hermitage. But, as said before, a man is his own home; there is where in the first instance he belongs; there is his primary point of departure. He ought, therefore, not only to be thoroughly acquainted with himself, but to be to such degree inwardly furnished as not to be obliged to run away from himself in order to be able to find reasonable and congenial companionship.

Looking into One's Own Soul

St. Paul could be in jail and still be cheerful. The fact that ports of entry were closed and all importation thereby prevented did not leave him unfurnished. When the disciples came back to Jacob's well after having been in the city to buy meat, and found, to their surprise, that Jesus had been already supplied in their absence, he explained it to them by saying: "I have meat that ye know not of." He could afford to be alone. He could be alone and still not be destitute of companionship. He could be alone without being lonely.

To this should be added that when one is exclusively by one's self the judgments formed will be most likely to be safe judgments. We are more likely to be honest with ourselves when closeted with ourselves than at any other time. One reason why we step outside of ourselves is that we are afraid of what we shall say to ourselves when we meet ourselves alone. People may often look at themselves in the glass, but I do not think that we very often look at our own eye in the glass. When we do, the sensation is a peculiar and uncomfortable one. It is a kind of approach to our personality that is something like looking at our own soul. We really are afraid of ourselves. We get out of doors not only because of what our interior domicile is not furnished with, but because of what it is furnished with. When we lie to other people they do not know it. When we lie to ourselves we do know it.

When we stand outside, in the act of shaping our judgments, forming our opinions, and determining questions of duty, we can proceed with less embarrassment, for there is an amount of fog in the general atmosphere of the world's thinkings and estimates that clothes even those things that are most real and certain with a mist of obscurity. In the natural world we do not move around as comfortably when it is hazy, but in the moral world a certain amount of haze is a relief rather than otherwise, for when we see duty with perfect clearne it is not easy not to do it, and it is never altogeth easy to do it.

When, on the contrary, we remain within, conf only with ourselves, with no one standing by throw in a confusing and unsettling word, and i terrogate ourselves simply and directly, we recei a straight answer. Whatever may be the conditi of the atmosphere outside, within the soul there always pretty clear shining. It is with us all ve much as it was with the Prodigal; when he "can to himself" he knew what to do. He would ha known as well before if he had taken himself in his confidence, instead of letting outside influen intervene.

The Innermost Sanctuary

It sometimes seems almost as though we we each of us two people; and St. Paul in one instan as good as intimates that we are. You are awa that there is something which we are accustomed call the true self, as though there were some oth kind of self that is not true self. We are not goir to involve ourselves in any nice discussion of t matter; but that which we call the true self is fe by us to be a kind of inner sanctuary. Judgir from experience and from the eighth of Roma there is also what might be called the outer cou of the sanctuary, where one can go—where we a quite apt to go—in order to escape the spell of t sanctity of the inner tabernacle, and where we ca think and feel and act as though there were nothir that is exactly serious and holy, but everything u certain, commonplace and profane.

The experience of men differ in many respect but there is pertaining to what we may call t soul's inner chamber a certain sanctity that w must all have felt. We spoke a moment ago abo being afraid of ourselves, not quite liking to loc into our own eye; edging along toward the out world, where is all the disquiet, the dazzle and t noise rather than back into our soul's interior, whe there is shadow and august stillness.

In the old Hebrew tabernacle the inner chambe the Holy of Holies, was God's peculiar abiding plac and into that chamber only the high priest entere and but once in the year. That was a tempora arrangement, but seems to me representative of permanent fact. There is a spot in our being, chamber in our experience, if you please, where Gc and self are the only visitants. Even our deare human friend never quite passes the threshold- almost, but not quite. To such friend we can repo something of what transpires there, but he or sh never quite enters in. It is a sanctuary, a person sanctuary, the original thing of its kind, antedatin every sort of humanly constructed church or templ

Some of the people who gather in a sanctuar like that in which we are worshiping this morning perhaps never quite enter into the holy of holies tha is hidden in each man's own bosom. Each one ca speak for himself as to that. Even into such a co secrated edifice as that where we are this momer assembled one can come, and remain, and participat in all the earnest services of the place an hour an still be untouched; still be unable to repeat th words of Jacob when he said: "Surely the Lord i in this place."

The Solitude of Jesus

But I doubt if it be possible for any one to com clear home to himself, to draw closely the curtai that hangs between the outer court and his hol of holies, to remain there in quietness and for little time to listen to the stillness without prett soon beginning to hear the "still small voice." Tha place is a holier place than this. It is the origina sanctuary. We can come here and only find eac other; not even find ourselves; but when we com into the innermost recesses of our own being we fin more than ourselves, and we learn to know th meaning of the Lord's word when he said: "I ar alone and yet not alone, for the Father is with me.

It was when he was alone that he most ceased t be alone and was wrapped in the arms of the Grea Companionship. It was then and there that he wo his power, that his eyes were so filled with light tha he could see, that the stillness became so intens

Continued on next page

* Pastor Madison Square Presbyterian Church, New York City.

The Soul's Inner Chamber

Continued from preceding page

that he could hear. We do not understand the Lord's life and word and work if we skip his passages of solitude—solitude in the desert, solitude in the mountains, solitude under the starlight.

And what was needful for our Lord is quite as needful for us. But the pity of it is that everything militates against experience that is solitary. Human nature resents the "still hour." Actually to come into quiet-felt touch with the presence of God imposes a strain upon our unhallowed nature that is not easily borne. We feel then the meaning of the words of Peter when he said: "Depart from me, for I am an unclean man, O God."

And there is that in the very circumstances in which we are placed, in the midst of times that are in a condition of unrest, and in the midst of a city that is filled with turbulence, that almost precludes the possibility of such isolation from disturbing contacts as shall allow to us moments separate and still enough to do for us what quiet and aloneness did for our Lord. And yet we need it as much as he needed it, and more. Even the world about us teaches us that; whose breezy days are succeeded by still nights when, as it were, nature seems communing with her own meditative self.

It is an attitude of mind in which all disguises are thrown off; in which conventional estimates are cast aside; in which the merely traditional goes for nothing; in which, for the moment, it is as though God and our own self were the only beings existent. The moment is one of profound honesty. There is in it no attempt at making the worse appear the better reason; no clothing of the spirit's nakedness with borrowed rags of self-excuse.

This is an inevitable means of soul-culture. We cannot grow without our still moments. The tender plant that you would have bud and blossom you shelter from the wind. The child that you would have develop into a condition of health and grace you do not constantly expose to the virulence and turmoil of the outside world. And the more distracting the world in which so much of our life has to be lived and the more full of humanness it is, so much the more faithful do we need to be in the observance of those times of quietness when we shall enter into the still and unpeopled precincts of our own spirit, meet ourselves face to face, and in that meeting discover not only ourselves but gain a sense of the presence with us of that divine Spirit who reveals himself not in the earthquake or the storm, but in those whispers that are almost too faint to be heard, but sufficiently clear to be felt and to be understood.

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

Anvil Sparks

..WISDOM has no bargain-days.

..FAITHFULNESS is its own fruit.

..IT takes seed as well as soil to make things grow.

..YOU cannot increase short weight with heavy words.

..THE more the pruning the greater the promise of fruit.

..HE builds well the house who lays aright the first brick.

..THE man who does not fear failure seldom has to face it.

..THE resurrection of Jesus Christ is the most proven fact in history.

..NEVER is happiness more clear than when founded on clean-heartedness.

..BETTER the hands that ache from toil than the heart that aches from trouble.

..TEMPTATIONS are sure to ring your doorbell, but it's your fault if you ask them to stay to dinner.

The Children's Pulpit

OUR FLAG DAY

By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.*

JUNE 14 is Flag Day. In the Congressional Library at Washington, D. C., the records show that on Saturday, June 14, 1777, this resolution was passed: "Resolved, That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white in blue field, representing a new constellation." We now have forty-six stars on our flag.

Some one has said: Among the special days of the year, patriotic and religious, Flag Day has a very important place. On this day the beautiful emblem of our country is unfurled to the breeze, and proudly floats not only from the flagstaffs of our public buildings and institutions, but from those of the homes of the people. It fosters greater love for the stars and stripes, and promotes, notably in the hearts of the youth of our land, the spirit of patriotism. Too much cannot be made of our country's flag, and every Junior should respect it. The custom is most fitting, to stand up, uncover and cheer whenever Old Glory is unfurled.

. . .

YOUR Children's Pulpit wants you to do more than simply take off your hat and cheer. The children should sing "The Star-spangled Banner." You have the pleasant voices and it is a very lovely song. How many of you can start the song and sing the first line? Good! good! I am glad there are so many of you who can do this. Now, how many of you can sing all the verses? Not one of you! Oh, my! my! my! Just hear the answer of those who were ready to cheer. One night at Melrose Abbey your pastor and his wife were very much ashamed of a crowd of American girls. It was moonlight and midnight and a crowd had gathered by the old abbey. The Scotch folk sang their songs and asked the American girls to sing "The Star-spangled Banner." They could not sing all of the first verse. They had pleasant voices, but did not know the very lovely song. Listen to this story:

Grandma read not long ago that out of a large class in a public school which was asked to write "The Star-spangled Banner" from memory, not one scholar wrote it correctly, and few could go further than the first verse.

Every Junior who loves the flag should be able to repeat "The Star-spangled Banner" word for word from beginning to end. You should know its history and be able to say why it was written and by whom.

. . .

"THE Star-spangled Banner" was written on August 14, 1814, by Francis Scott Key. Those of you who have studied history know of the war that was being carried on during that year. The British fleet was stationed at the mouth of the Potomac River, and Mr. Key under a flag of truce went there to try to obtain the release of a friend. It so happened that an attack was planned on Baltimore for the night of August 13, and Mr. Key and his truce boat were detained all night during the bombardment of Fort McHenry. Just before the darkness settled down Mr. Key had been watching our flag as it waved fearlessly in the face of peril and danger. All through the long hours of the gloomy night the heavy cannonading went on, but just before daylight it ceased. Mr. Key, who had been pacing the deck of his vessel anxiously, was eager for the first ray of morning which would disclose the result of the battle.

As the dawn broke the first object he saw was the dear old flag still proudly floating over the fort. We can well believe the sight was thrilling and that under its inspiration he readily composed the verses which, as soon as they were printed and circulated, became popular and were sung with enthusiasm all over the city. A bronze statue of Mr. Key, one hand outstretched as at the moment of discovering that "our flag was still there," the other waving his hat exultantly, stands over his grave in Frederick, Md., the city of his birth.

. . .

NOW, Juniors, do you not think you all should become familiar with the words of this grand anthem? How many of you will commit them to memory? You will commit "The Star-spangled Banner" to memory if I will tell you a flag story, you say? Very well.

Philip came into the primary schoolroom one morning and informed the teacher that the flag was up.

"Is it?" said she, doubtfully.

"It certainly is, and it isn't the Fourth of July, or Washington's Birthday, or Lincoln's, and I couldn't think why the flag should be up. Why is it?" The teacher could not remember any anniversary worthy of notice by a flag-raising on that especial day.

"I don't know, I am sure," she said at last. "Go and find out and tell me." Philip hurried away. In a few minutes he was back.

"It's to celebrate somebody's wedding," he reported.

. . .

"WEDDING?" repeated the mystified teacher. "There isn't any wedding on the whole list of our historical celebrations."

"That's what it says on the card, anyhow," insisted Philip. "It's something about a wedding."

The teacher decided that she would look for herself. What she saw on the card was as follows: "This day is the anniversary of the engagement of the Monitor and the Merrimac."

Do not forget your engagement to commit "The Star-spangled Banner" to memory.

* Pastor First Reformed Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. TEXT: "A very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice." Ezek. 33:32.

"Waiting for Me"

HE was a ragged little newsboy who lived with his mother. They were all in all to each other. Tenderly he cared for her, bringing home to her his small earnings, and doing his best to help her in the household tasks.

One day the tired mother, weary of her hard struggle, closed her eyes to the scenes of earth. The lad was inconsolable. How could he live without her? After a few days of giving way to the bitterness of his grief, he began to wonder what he could do to show his love for her.

The picture of the unmarked grave came before his eyes. Other graves were marked by stones; why not hers? Of course stones cost a great deal, and his earnings were small.

But love found a way. At a cutter's yard he found that even the cheaper stones were far too expensive for him. He was turning sorrowfully away when he saw a broken shaft of marble, part of the débris from an accident in the yard. Eagerly he asked the price of the irregular piece. The low figure named by the proprietor came within his means. But he knew he would be unable to pay for cutting the inscription. The brave little chap made up his mind to do his best to prepare the marble himself.

The next day he carried the stone away on a little four-wheeled cart, and managed to have it put in position. One who was curious to know the last of the stone made a visit to the cemetery one afternoon. On his return he thus described in an article what he saw and learned:

"There was our monument, at the head of one of the newer graves. I knew it at once. Just as it was when it left our yard, I was going to say, until I got a little nearer to it and saw what the little chap had done. I tell you, when I saw it there was something blurred my eyes so's I couldn't read it at first. The little man had tried to keep the lines straight, and evidently thought that capitals would make it look better and bigger, for nearly every letter was a capital. I copied it, and here it is. But you want to see it on the stone to appreciate it:

"'MY MOTHER
SHEE DIED LAST WEAK.
SHEE WAS ALL I HAD. SHEE
SED SHEAD BEE WAITING FuR—'

And here the lettering stopped. After a while I went back to the man in charge, and asked him what further he knew of the little fellow who bought the stone.

"'Not much,' he said, 'not much. Didn't you notice a fresh little grave near the one with the stone? Well, that's where he is. He came here every afternoon for some time, working away at that stone, and one day I missed him, and then for several days. Then the man came out from the church that had buried the mother, and ordered the grave dug by her side. I asked if it was for the little chap. He said it was. The boy had sold all his papers one day, and was hurrying along the street out this way. There was a runaway team just above the crossing, and—well, he was run over, and lived but a day or two. He had in his hand, when he was picked up, an old file sharpened down to a point that he did all the lettering with. They said he seemed to be thinking only of that until he died, for he kept saying, "I didn't get it done; but she'll know I meant to finish it, won't she? I'll tell her so, for she'll be waiting for me." And, boys, he died with those words on his lips.'"

When the men in the cutter's yard heard the story the next day, they clubbed together, got a good stone, inscribed upon it the name of the newsboy, and underneath it the words: "He loved his mother."

ALLAN SUTHERLAND.

NEW YORK'S NEGLECTED MILLION

W. J. Schieffelin

THE fact that somebody cares for the million or more men, women, and children in New York City, who are not associated with any church or mission, but who respond eagerly to the Gospel message when it is carried to them, is convincingly demonstrated by the crowds that attend the annual meetings of the Evangelistic Committee of New York, to inform themselves as to the progress of the work, and contribute toward its support.

Being neither a clerical conference nor distinctively a laymen's meeting, but a service in which leaders in both classes are actively represented, appealing not to one denomination only but uniting all the great evangelical forces, claiming the interests of scores of churches, young people's societies, brotherhoods, King's Daughters' Circles, indeed of all who have the good of the city at heart, probably no other religious meeting regularly attracts so large an audience as that which crowds the auditorium twice a year for the public services of the Evangelistic Committee.

In view of the unprecedented number of immigrants arriving during the past three months in New York, many of them remaining to settle in Manhattan and the Bronx, increased interest is expressed on all sides in the approaching campaign as it begins its sixth season of summer work in tents and shops and open air. Work among foreigners is one of the most important branches of the summer campaign. Services are held for Italian, German, Swedish, Finnish, Polish, Hungarian, and Bohemian-Slovak, as well as for English-speaking people. Living pictures illustrating the various types of work were presented at the great meeting in Carnegie Hall on the evening of May 16. Dr. Arthur J. Smith, superintendent, outlined plans for the season which opens June 19. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman made his first great address since his return from his world-wide evangelistic tour. Charles M. Alexander, who has sung around the world three times, led the great evangelistic chorus of 500, with Robert Harkness, the Australian pianist, as accompanist.

Dr. Chapman said that he was just home from a 60,000-mile trip, in the course of which he had preached the Gospel in eleven countries. He related various wonderful experiences in China, Japan, Korea and Australia, concluding with a graphic description of the revival in Wales.

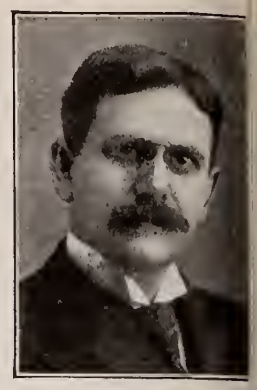
"What can be done in Australia can be done in New York," he said. "Jesus looks down on this great city and yearns for every sinful man. If we had the spirit of seeking, the spirit of compassion that Jesus had, New York City might be glowing with the power of God. Many of the people in the slums of the city are lost members of our own church household. Tens of thousands of young men in the city, if they felt the charm of a Christian personality and the loving hand on their shoulder, would be turned to the Lord. The Evangelistic Committee calls on all Christians to assist in the efforts to seek the lost men and women of the city, to turn the wanderer toward his home."

As living illustrations of the work of previous years, were introduced an Italian saloon-keeper, a Cambridge University man, an atheistic socialist, a successful business man, a longshoreman, and several reformed drunkards — types of the widely-varying classes reached by the meetings.

"I should be presented as a living picture," said R. B. Kimber, vice-chairman of the executive committee, who is acting chairman for the season in the absence of Dr. A. F. Schauffler, who is abroad. "I am a convert to the work of the Evangelistic Committee. I have been convinced that it is the one great movement in which the churches of New York have come together and presented an unbroken front. As we are one in Him we serve, we shall bring others to Him."

William Phillips Hall, president of the American Tract Society, declared that the work of the committee should enlist the support of all who value public order and political purity. He quoted former Police Commissioner McAdoo as saying: "If it were not for religion, all the policemen in New York City could not keep it a safe city."

William Jay Schieffelin, the newly-elected chairman of the general committee, said he had just returned from the Laymen's Missionary Movement meeting in Chicago. "There is widespread interest in evangelical Christianity from one end of the continent to the other," he said. "The Laymen's Movement would by no means neglect mission work at home. Here in New York we have a great opportunity for both foreign and domestic missions. We are commanded to preach the Gospel to the uttermost ends of the earth, but to begin at Jerusalem. When we are told that there are twenty times as many Jews in New York as there are in Palestine this command may well have for us a double meaning. We may feel that with St. Paul we have a special mission to the Hebrews. It is not true that the Jews of our city have a spiritual life sufficient to themselves. While it may not be wise at this time to commence an aggressive campaign for the conversion of the Jews, we may exert an influence to this end by co-operation and Christian example."



Arthur J. Smith

The meeting, which was of great interest and inspiration, was opened with prayer by Rev. William Carter, D.D., and closed by Rev. Dr. J. Wesley Hill. Carnegie Hall was crowded. Nearly four thousand people packed the auditorium and the boxes and galleries were filled. Hundreds were turned away for lack of room. The workers are enthusiastic over the bright prospect of the most successful season in the history of the movement.

A Shop Gospel Meeting among Spanish Workmen

A West Side Tent Meeting in an Italian Neighborhood

A Polish Open-Air Service

Open-Air Meeting on Broadway

AMONG THE WORKERS AT HOME AND ABROAD

—The Ministerial Association of Colorado Springs has taken a decided stand in favor of a closed postoffice on Sundays.

—Missionary Z. Charles Beals, of Wuhu, China, after a short furlough in the United States, has returned to his post. He is making a strong effort to obtain a motor boat to use in his rapidly growing work on the Yangste River.

—Missionary G. W. Verity, of Tia-Au-Fu, Northern China, writes that a crusade is now under way against the cigarette evil in China, which is doing a great deal of harm. It is estimated that cigarette consumers in China spend an aggregate of $700,000,000 per annum on this single vice.

—The American Inland Mission has now seventy workers in the Alleghany and Cumberland Mountains. Last year, they held 3,809 meetings at 134 different points. Their Bible Schools have 4,860 pupils. Under their ministrations, 772 public professions of faith were made in 1909.

—Missionary J. C. Lawson, of the Independent Evangelical Mission, India, writes that at the close of the mission's seventh year, a joyful anniversary was celebrated. A mission bakery has been established at Dehva Dun, and a dairy is under way. A great problem is: "What is to become of converts turned out from home and caste and yet untrained for making a livelihood?"

—Missionary Charles W. Posnett, of Medak, India, writes: "In one village our native evangelist has lately prepared fourteen adults for baptism. The out-caste population in two other villages have renounced their idol-worship and publicly confessed a desire to be followers of Jesus. The people of Beemanapally (a third village), though still heathen, have built a large room. Last time I went to the village they said: 'This is the room we have built and this the land we have given to the new Lord Jesus Christ, and now that we have given a house for prayer you must send us a missionary.'"

Preaching the Gospel in a Stock Exchange

EVANGELIST J. WILBUR CHAPMAN and Mr. Charles M. Alexander, the singer, with their large party of helpers, returned Friday, May 13, from a six weeks' trip to the British Isles. A revival was conducted in Cardiff, Wales, for three weeks, and this was followed by a conference in England and Scotland. At the recent meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly in Atlantic City a full report of this campaign was given. During the meetings in Cardiff, which opened April 10, services were held for men at midday on the Stock Exchange. It was a wonderful sight. The great gloomy building with its two galleries; signs of business on every hand, scraps of paper scattered everywhere, and keen, alert business men standing on the main floor, while in the balconies were massed clerks, errand boys, telegraph messengers, dock hands and porters.

Mr. Alexander stood on a table at one end of the room urging the crowd to sing "Traveling Home." They didn't know the hymn in the beginning, but soon caught the words and melody. Many a financier stood with bowed head as the clear, vibrating melody rang out through the Stock Exchange. Dr. Chapman would then step forward and give a plain, straight-pointed message. "No man in this building," he would say, "no matter what his sin may be, need turn away from God. I present him to you, God help you to take him to-day." The meetings were packed to the utmost capacity of the gigantic structure.

An afternoon was given over to a special meeting for "old folks." Cabs, traps, carriages, motors and taxicabs were readily offered, and from all over the Welsh metropolis hundreds of aged and afflicted persons were brought to the meeting. These old people, some of them ninety-seven, ninety-four and eighty-seven years old, were asked to sing in Welsh and their quavering voices rang out with the old familiar tunes. Dr. Chapman then gave a simple address.

Chapman and Alexander Preaching in the Stock Exchange, Cardiff, Wales

During one of the song services, a worker discovered one of the audience to be an American. He had been leading the life of the prodigal. He came a second time and joined in the singing. He sang with a knowledge and feeling that were remarkable. The sermon was the story of a backslider. It is the custom of the missioners to call upon any member of the audience to sing alone. They called upon the stranger. Half turning round and leaning lightly against the end of the seat he sang "Ninety and Nine," of the one who was "far away, far off from the gates of gold."

Lord, whence are thy hands so rent and torn?
They are pierced to-night by many a thorn.

The words came with an appeal that was half a sob, and big tears ran down his cheeks. His concluding notes were as tender as those of a woman. He turned to the platform and with outstretched arms exclaimed, "Doctor, I've come back."

A midnight parade was organized when scores of Cardiff prodigals sought Christ. A notable feature in the revival was the outlining of a great crusade to win one hundred thousand souls for Christ in Wales this year. The leaders of this new crusade are pastors of the different churches and chapels.

M. A. MARTIN.

An Educator of the Negro

PROFESSOR GEORGE AUGUSTUS GATES, lately chosen to be president of Fisk University, is a leader in the movement for the higher education of the colored race. He spent fully thirteen years as the head of Iowa College, and later put in some hard and effective work at Pomona College, California. At the inauguration held in Fisk University, there were present delegates from twenty-six different institutions. To have heard the music and the singing alone on that occasion would have put new life into any band of workers, students and faculty. Mr. Gates is the author of several books on pedagogy. He is still in the prime of life, full of energy and ideas, and his friends predict for him a record of usefulness and great helpfulness in his new position.

E. D. R.

RICH WOMEN WITH AN AIM

Continued from page 539

The meeting at the Colony Club last winter was the most remarkable in the history of the relations between capital and labor. The leaders of society, the richest women of the nation, among whom were present Miss Anne Morgan, Miss Elizabeth Marbury, Mrs. J. B. Harriman, Mrs. Edgerton and others of equal financial and social standing, came to listen to the story of the strike from the lips of the strikers themselves. Miss Mary Dreier, president of the Women's Trades Union League, brought with her ten of the girl strikers, who told their side of the strike in simple, but effective, words.

Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, the great financier, worked for the strikers, and spared no effort nor time in their behalf. She, together with the members of the Women's Trade Union League, have shown to what extent some women of wealth will go to assist the working women. When it was first learned that the police were intimidating the strikers, of whom ninety per cent. were "green" Jewish girls, members of the league went to watch them and to see that they were not abused.

The existence of the Women's Trade Union League proves with what alacrity some women are willing to help their less fortunate sisters. It is the expression of the intelligent woman who believes that the working woman, like the working man, must be organized for her own benefit. This organization is led by women of wealth, refinement and education. Mrs. Raymond Robins is the national president. When Mrs. Robins was Margaret Dreier, she was one of the founders and the principal officer of the New York Branch, of which her sister, Mary E. Dreier, is now president.

These young women have been noted for their great wealth and for their interest in sociological work. They still maintain their position as leaders in society, and give magnificent entertainments in their big Montague Terrace House in Brooklyn. But with all her wealth, social prestige and education, Miss Dreier is at home with the working girls and makes them feel equally at ease. She is refined, amiable and good-natured, and succeeds in gaining the confidence and love of the poor girl at once. She never tires of her work, and attends to it with the eagerness of an enthusiast.

Together with Miss Dreier in her work as officer of the Women's Trade Union League are Ida Rauh, a graduate attorney, whose financial circumstances do not make the practice of law compulsory; Elizabeth Dutcher, Elsie La Grange Cole, Viola Pike, all Vassar graduates; Gertrude Barnum, writer and lecturer; Mrs. Bertha Poole Wyle, wife of Dr. Walter Wyle, well known writer and member of the Immigration Commission; Martha Bensley Bruere, wife of Robert Bruere, general agent of the Society for

Mrs. Clarence Mackay and Her Children

Improving the Condition of the Poor, and a number of other well-known women.

These women worked day and night during the strike and are at present engaged in teaching the working women the value of organization, and trying to unite them into unions and these unions into strong labor federations. The headquarters of the Women's Trade Union League, 43 East Twenty-second Street, is supplied with an abundance of literature on trade unionism, and the entire house is given to classes where girls are taught English, domestic science, civics, and above all else, sociology and economics.

Miss Milholland is a young woman of exceptional abilities and is strikingly beautiful. She is daughter of John Milholland, head of the Batchellor Pneumatic Tube Company, and president of the Constitutional League. Miss Milholland was arrested on the 17th of January because she was protecting the strikers in their task of picketing. The police charged her with "causing an illegal assembly," a charge which she subsequently succeeded in refuting.

It was a question of rights with Miss Milholland. She knew that the rich woman has better opportunities to fight for justice, and this was the reason she undertook to test the case in her own person.

She is an ardent suffragist and had shown her interest in social and political affairs when a student at Vassar College. It was she who, with the help of a few, started the movement in Poughkeepsie for a Juvenile Probation Court. She is a skilful athlete and a powerful speaker.

Women who are sincerely interested in social work seldom have their names on committees, and it is difficult to get any personal data concerning them. The reason is obvious. They do not do their social work from a desire to receive fame, or homage, or honor. They do it from the pure motive of a great interest in social conditions and a desire to better them. Such women have given up much of their personal life to devote themselves to what they consider their cause. For instance, in the Nurses' Settlement there are women who have left their usual rounds of entertainment and pleasures to go down and take a full three years' course of training so that they themselves might do the nursing of which they knew the poor are in such terrible need.

There is at present a course given for wealthy club leaders to teach them the principles of pedagogics and to better to fit them for their work, work which many have shown by their devotion to be a cause which lies near their heart and not a fad which might have been taken up in moments of ennui. That the work is prompted by sincerity of purpose and not, as it has been charged, by the desire for publicity, is proven by the fact that the Nurses' Settlement has the largest budget of all the philanthropic institutions in the city of New York: yet it is impossible to know the names of the donors.

HYMAN STRUNSKY.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Late Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly at the Bible House, New York City. The officers of "The Christian Herald" are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, Bible House; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.
Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

When Roosevelt Comes Home

WITHIN two weeks, our worthy ex-President will turn his face homeward. He has circled more than half the globe, and made the people sit up and think. He is a little froggy from so much speechmaking to universities and other distinguished audiences, but he is otherwise all right. In his own expressive vernacular, he has had a "corking good time" and we are glad of it. He has well deserved all the honors and attentions that have been showered upon him, for is he not our "First Citizen," of whom Americans are justly proud? After all, those emperors and kings, princes and premiers with whom he hobnobbed on such familiar terms; those professors whom he lectured and the great minds of the Old World's learned societies to whom he talked philosophy and war and peace and whom he instructed in international politics are not in it with our Theodore. He stands in a class all by himself and the learned dons of Cambridge University, recognizing this, have invested him with the scarlet robe and the degree of Doctor of Laws. And now he is coming home. Let us hope that he will not appear among us in this complete disguise which Cambridge gave, else not even his own familiar friends would recognize him. We want him to be just as we knew him; a little browner, perhaps, and possibly a trifle grayer, but nothing more. And when the big flotilla of welcome goes down New York harbor to meet him, and the thousands shout themselves hoarse in tumultuous greeting, we want to be there, and to hear the voice that has thrilled Europe as it huskily ejaculates the one characteristic and expressive word "De-lighted!"

Royal Mourners

RARELY has the world seen a spectacle more imposing or impressive than the funeral ceremonies of Edward the Peacemaker. Nine kings followed the coffin and paid the last tribute of respect to one who, though his reign had been short, had rendered priceless service to the age in which he lived. Millions of spectators lined the streets and stood in silence while the cortege went slowly by. Our own ex-President Theodore Roosevelt was a sombre figure in that great pageant, being conspicuous by the plainness of his dress amid the mass of brilliant uniforms and the glitter of decorations. "His strong face," wrote Sir Conan Doyle, "was set like granite." Perhaps the most touching part of this memorable throng, however, was not the splendid array of royalties, the kings and queens and princes, nor the heroic generals and admirals in scarlet and gold, nor was it the serried lines of troops who moved slowly to solemn strains. It was a little group that followed close behind the casket—the dead king's horse, saddled but riderless, and his little white terrier dog, Cæsar, the latter led by his Highland gamekeeper. Like true mourners, with bowed heads and every aspect of dejection, they followed their master on his last earthly journey. Perhaps, amid all the recollections of that memorable day, the great multitude will longest remember the sweet, womanly white face of the bereaved queen, the riderless steed and the little terrier that trotted behind in dumb sorrow.

Strangely Defended

IN the senatorial bribery trial in Illinois, a strange and novel defense has been offered. The assertion was made that Illinois had no law on its statute books making it a crime on the part of a legislator to accept a bribe for his vote for a United States senator. There, as in other States, the election of a senator is made by the joint houses of the State legislature. It was urged by the defense that as this union of the two bodies is made possible by an act of Congress, it is therefore something beyond the cognizance of the State; so, whether money is used or not in procuring the election of a candidate, the State cannot act. It has no law on its statute books covering such a contingency. Without expressing an opinion of the charges made in this special case, it is evident that a defense based on such conclusions is immoral in the last degree. If held to be valid, it would put a premium on bribery in every State in the Union in United States senatorial elections. We do not share the opinion of those who believe that our political system is a mass of corruption, and that the Senate is the worst example of the system. That there is vote-buying and selling, however, is unquestionable. The State that deals the first effective blow at this abuse will establish a much-needed precedent and render a great public service.

Concerning "Best Sellers"

WE wonder what would happen if some of the wideawake publishing houses that are constantly keeping a vigilant eye out for "best sellers," were by any possibility to get hold of a book that would equal the old Bible in popularity. An entertaining magazinist has been industriously canvassing the trade to discover the extent of the popularity of the world's best authors. He found one extremely popular book of which a quarter of a million copies had already been sold and which gave promise of running up to nearly a million "before the demand ceased." Of another favorite writer's long list of books there had already been sold half a million copies. Contrast these figures with the actual Bible output and sales and they seem insignificant. Last year one concern, the American Bible Society, reported a total of 2,826,831 issues, of which nearly 1,500,000 came from the Bible House in New York alone. If we add the product of all the other Bible agencies in America, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD included, the Bible is incomparably the "best seller" this continent has ever known. Further, add the output of the British Bible Society and of the various Continental publishing houses and it will be seen that the Bible has a lead of millions over the next best seller. And unlike those books that rise and flicker a little and then fade into oblivion, the Bible has maintained this lead increasingly through many generations.

Greatness in the Pulpit

TRUE greatness sets a model for the world to admire and to emulate. Perhaps there is no finer quality of talent than that which is seen, but only at rare intervals, in the pulpit or lyceum. That famous prince of preachers, the Rev. Dr. Alexander McLaren, who lately passed away in England, is a case in point. Our correspondent in London, Dr. William Durban, who knew him well, gives us this felicitous portraiture of the man and his methods, which may prove helpful to others:

> Each congregation to which he ministered as pastor successively considered him incomparable in the pulpit, and whenever I had opportunities of listening to him I felt that I could comprehend their enthusiasm, for their admiration was largely shared by thousands of persons of all denominations. His steadfast faith never wavered during all the critical doubts of the age. His acknowledged keynote of success was concentration. He was a man of one book. He told me years ago, as I sat in his study at Manchester, that he never chose a text as basis of a sermon without making the original Hebrew or Greek of the whole context a careful object of study, and he also spent part of every morning in reading portions of the Hebrew and Greek Testaments, besides those on which he was next to preach. With regard to criticism he was conservative, for he said, "The Bible has been criticised enough; it wants appreciation." He was an excellent German scholar, but profoundly distrusted the tendencies and the conclusions of modern German thought. He carefully prepared his sermons by reading and thinking, but not usually by systematic writing. His habit was to jot down ideas roughly on several scraps of paper, with scarcely a single complete sentence. Then he would take these five or six pieces of paper with him to his pulpit, but they remained in his pocket. It was sufficient for him that he felt he had his notes with him. He did not need to look at them; his mind had been saturated with his subject. So cultured and finished were his discourses, thus delivered off-hand, that when reported and published they always read like spoken literature. When excited with fervor, his hands trembled, his voice quavered, his eyes moistened, his face lit up with sunny smiles. And his style grew more and more opulent as years rolled on. Music, poetry, statuary, painting all contributed to its affluence and enhanced its beauty.

With all his splendid talents, he was a man of extreme modesty, not a "social light," but rather a recluse. He kept his hearers always within sight of the Cross or the mercy seat. He was a true servant of the Master and exerted a far greater spiritual influence than many a preacher who studies posing in the spot-light more than the winning of precious souls.

An Ambitious "Son of Vulcan"

AMONG the picturesque features of American biography there are few more attractive than those that tell of men who have risen from obscurity and poverty to positions of power and influence in State and nation. We hear it said occasionally that the day of such cases is past; but we have never believed this. There are many men who have come to the front in this generation who had quite as humble beginnings as Lincoln, the rail-splitter; Grant, the tanner; Garfield, the canal-boat hand; Johnson, the tailor; Elihu Burritt, the blacksmith; or any one of the long roll of those who "hitched their wagon to a star." Apropos, we have the news from St. Joseph, Mo., that John F. Brackenbridge, a sturdy blacksmith, has rolled down his shirt sleeves over his brawny arms, put on his collar and necktie, and entered the race for the United States Senate. John was a cowboy in his younger days, then a horseshoer and he is now a son of Vulcan. By the sparkle of his forge he seems to have dreamed dreams and builded air-castles which, unlike most edifices of the kind, seem very likely to come true. He is a heroic blacksmith, too, for some ten years ago, he saved five lives in a hotel fire, and later, he rescued two men from drowning. On the whole, John the blacksmith would seem to have better stuff in him than some of the men who are merely representative moneybags in legislation nowadays. His future may be full of interest for others besides the people of Missouri.

General Notes

—THROUGH THE will of the late Isaac C. Wyman, Princeton University will receive a magnificent bequest of from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000, making it one of the richest universities in the country.

—OUR GOOD OFFICES have been again in demand as peacemaker in South America, this time by Peru and Ecuador. These republics have had a sharp controversy over a boundary line, and war seemed inevitable when our government proposed mediation by Brazil, Argentina and the United States. News lately reached Washington that the mediation had been entirely successful.

—MRS. DESMOND HUMPHREYS, a talented English authoress, visited us lately. Like most literary foreigners, this lady, who is somewhat noted for brilliant epigram, has something to say of Americans generally as a parting salute. She found American women's voices shrill and pitched too high—the result of loud talking in street cars; but "they are smart and chic," she admits. Boston women she regarded as very "refined"; those in Washington as "cultured," and the New York women "charming." She did not have the opportunity to form an opinion of the other sex as she found the men "too busy making money" to devote themselves to social duties. Our people, she says, do not eat; they gorge! We are not as polite as Europeans and we have no home life to speak of. All of which observations, made during a flying visit, will no doubt be the basis of a future book by this lady, who seems to have traveled through the Middle and Eastern States in a way that suggests a skimming dish.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 8. 1910

	PAGE
The World's Greatest Funeral Pageant	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	538
The Burial of Edward VII. (Illustrated)	538
Rich Women With an Aim (Illustrated)	539, 543
The Soul's Inner Chamber. Sermon By Rev. C. H. Parkhurst	540, 541
The Children's Pulpit. By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	541
"Waiting for Me"	541
New York's Neglected Million (Illustrated)	542
Preaching the Gospel in a Stock Exchange (Illustrated)	543
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	544
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	545
Friends of Peace at Lake Mohonk (Illustrated)	546
A Day With the President	546
A Costumed May Party (Illustrated)	546
The Home Queen's Realm (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	547
The Strawberry Handkerchief Serial Story by Amelia E. Barr	548, 549
Our Financial Department	550
Waifs Eager for Mont-Lawn	551
What Kind of Soul Is Yours? Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	552, 553
Our Country's Moral Crisis (Portrait)	554
Young People's Societies	55.

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Robert Fulton Memorial

THE long-drawn-out spectacular and expensive Hudson-Fulton celebration was participated in heartily and happily by hundreds of thousands of citizens. It is fortunate that there is a plan to have a more permanent memorial of Robert Fulton. Forty-two sets of architectural plans for such a memorial were submitted to the Fulton Monument Association, and H. Van Buren Magonigle was the successful competitor. He received a prize of $3,000 for his plans. The monument is to be a water gate, extending from the north side of One Hundred and Fourteenth Street to the north side of One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, New York City, and from the west side of Riverside Drive to the pier line in the North River; from the river, where it is designed to have a landing place in smooth water in a basin protected on both sides by piers, a huge flight of steps will rise to a crowning colonnade. In the centre of this colonnade will be a triumphal arch forming a canopy over the tomb of Fulton, while on the two wings will be two balancing buildings similar in dimensions. The north building will be a large reception hall, while the south building will be a three-story structure to be used for a naval and maritime museum. The water gate will be 563 feet wide by 750 feet long. The steps will number one hundred and sixty. Each column will be 47 feet high and 5 feet in diameter, and will number eighty in all. White marble will be used for the tomb, peristyle and buildings and granite for the balance of the work. Steel concrete will be employed in the construction. The land under the water was donated by the State of New York by special legislation, and the ground necessary in Riverside Drive was given by the city. The $3,000,000 needed for the construction of the water gate will be raised by general subscription. Illuminations, processions, floats and wagons with wax figures, costumed horses and people have had a place in celebrating the deeds of Hudson and Fulton, but it is a wonder to us that at least half of the money spent on the spectacular display was not put into a permanent foundation as a memorial to these men — some educational, scientific or charitable institution which would serve the double purpose of a memorial and a living instrumentality in promoting a better civilization. This water gate proposed by the Fulton Monument Association is in the right direction. It will grace the beautiful Hudson, become a place of interest to the foreign traveler, and be a source of pride and inspiration to the people of our country. The waters of Jordan were separated as the ark approached them, and the people went over dry shod, and in memory of that fact Joshua commanded one man from each tribe to take a stone out of the midst of the river bed and make a monument on the other side. Now the people of this nation build a monument on the Hudson River bank in commemoration of the man who made it possible to move across or up and down the stream almost as swiftly and safely as on dry land.

That this may be a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean ye by these stones? then shall ye answer them, That the waters of Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the Lord; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and these stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel forever. (Josh. 4:6, 7.)

The Beautiful "Water Gate" Memorial to Fulton, to Be Erected in New York

Congo Reforms Promised

From Brussels there is a telegram indicating that King Albert has approved the plans for reforms in the Belgian Congo, which will become effective on July 1. A large territory will be opened to free commerce on that date. The reforms include a reduction in the taxes, which will be collected in money and not paid by labor, the substitution of native for white officials, the restriction of obligatory labor by adults to works for the improvement of their own condition, and the suppression of polygamy. The cruelties of the Congo have been amongst the worst scandals of modern times. The loss of limb and life to the natives by the hand of oppression and greed has made a chapter of human crime sickening to read, and it is a fortunate thing for the native people, as well as for the credit of the race, that these abominations are to end. The promised reforms in the Congo suggest the words of the prophet:

Is not this the fast that I have chosen? To loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke? (Isa. 58:6.)

Sage Memorial Church

The Russell Sage Memorial Church given to the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church of Far Rockaway by Mrs. Sage in memory of her husband was dedicated the afternoon of May 11. The church and its buildings occupy a block. The church is cruciform in plan and is completely equipped with every modern improvement. It is said the church represents an outlay of $400,000. An endowment of $100,000 has been given by Mrs. Sage to aid in its maintenance. The organ cost $8,500 and the memorial window is one of the most beautiful in the United States. The church was dedicated by the Rev. Dr. Robert G. Leetch, the able pastor of the church, assisted by the congregation. The Rev. Charles H. Sholey offered the invocation, the Rev. Lyman D. Calkins read the Scripture lesson, the Rev. Dr. James David Burrell preached a powerful sermon, and the beautiful memorial address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Arthur T. Pearson, a relative of Mrs. Sage. Appropriate greetings from the Presbytery of Nassau were given by the Rev. Dr. Alexander G. Russell and the Rev. Dr. Frank M. Kerr. The music was most beautiful and inspiring. Dr. Pearson emphasized the fact that Mrs. Sage had built the church out of her personal love for Christ as her divine Saviour, and that all her acts in life had been and would be directed by that motive. Dr. Burrell said the church was of value because it was built on Jesus Christ as the cornerstone, and on the divine authority of the Scriptures as a foundation, and that its object was to build up character and fashion a temple for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. He took as his text:

And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit. (Eph. 2:20-22.)

King George's Beautiful Spirit

King George has captured the hearts of his subjects at the beginning of his reign by the beauty and benignity of his spirit. It would be hard to crowd much more of love for fellowmen or faith in God into the same space as is to be found in the first letter issued by him from Marlborough House to the Home Secretary for transmission to all parts of the Empire, which is as follows: "To my people: The voice of affection, of loving devotion to the memory of my dear father which has come from every part of the Empire, the outward public demonstrations, especially those in the capital during the two stages of his passing to his last resting place and the pathetic manner in which vast multitudes of his loving subjects patiently and reverently awaited opportunity to pay a last tribute to his memory, have profoundly touched me and my whole family. A sorrow so sudden and unlooked-for might well have been overwhelming, but the sentiments evoked by it have made me realize that it is a loss common to me and to my people. They share it with me. I do not stand alone. With such thoughts I take courage and look hopefully into the future, strong in my faith in God, trusting in my people, cherishing the laws and constitution of my beloved country." The tenderness of his spirit was also expressed in the many pardons he granted to prisoners in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland. Remission of sentences will be given only where the prisoners' conduct has been satisfactory. Those who have one month or more still to serve will be released in one week. Those who have a year or more to serve will be released in one month. Those who have three years or more to serve will be released in two months. Those who have five years or more will be released in three months. All persons in the navy who are under sentence of imprisonment for periods not exceeding three months for disciplinary offenses, including drunkenness and desertion, will be granted remission of the remainder of their sentences. Similar clemency is promised the soldiers. Men undergoing sentences by court-martial not exceeding fifty-six days will be released. Those under sentence of greater extent are granted a remission of half the unexpired portion. Men undergoing imprisonment in military prisons and barracks are granted a remission of half their unexpired terms. A pardon will be granted to deserters under regulations that shall be published later. When the king spoke the word pardon, the penalty of the law lost its power over them. Jesus the King has only to speak the word pardon and the fettered spirits of the children of men go free. Jesus himself said:

If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. (John 8:36.)

France Pensions the Aged

The French Senate recently concurred in a measure which some time ago passed the Chamber of Deputies, pensioning all French workmen over sixty-five years of age who have not been provided for by previous pension legislation. This will give each workingman, of the required age, about eighty dollars a year. England has taken an advance step in this regard. It is one of the best evidences of the common sense, gratitude and genuine Christian spirit of our time that the men who have worked hard, and have reached more than threescore years, should have this material help in smoothing their pathway to the tomb, illustrating the divine providence our Lord promised.

And even to your old age I am he; and even to hoar hairs will I carry you. (Isa. 46:4.)

Sows Neighbor's Field

Mr. E. W. Straley, a farmer living near Des Lacs, N. D., was sick during the winter and spring. The time for the sowing of wheat found him dangerously ill in bed. The neighbors got their heads together, set apart a day and with twenty-two outfits of plows, harrows, drills and other agricultural implements, one hundred acres were ploughed, harrowed and sowed with wheat on a single day. The women also came from their homes with baskets of lunch which was served to the men on the lawn. The ministers of that neighborhood will have to preach very eloquent sermons and the people will have to live very correct lives to do as much good in that community as that beautiful act of charity. Not a single one of those farmers who came that day will be a cent worse off at the end of the year, and the sick man will have the harvest as support for his family. In these days, when the passion seems to be to outrun and take advantage of a neighbor, it is a glorious thing to see this act of brotherly love. It certainly has in it the element of the religion of Jesus Christ.

Whoso has this world's good and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? (I. John 3:17.)

FRIENDS OF PEACE AT LAKE MOHONK

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL GATHERING OF DELEGATES TO THE PEACE CONFERENCE AT LAKE MOHONK, N. Y.

THE sixteenth annual gathering of the Lake Mohonk Conference on National Arbitration took place on May 18. It was a most representative assemblage, including diplomats, educators, jurists and leading clergymen from our own and other lands, who had met there at the invitation of Dr. A. K. Smiley, the founder of the organization and the general host of the assemblage. A number of striking addresses were delivered, dealing with the various phases of the peace and arbitration problems.

Among the leading speakers were Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, who hailed the establishment of a national Arbitration Court at The Hague as the greatest step that has yet been taken in the direction of securing the world's peace. Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood of Boston gave a review of the year's work for the peace movement. Professor John B. Clark of Columbia University spoke on "An Economic View on War and Arbitration." He said that fifteen billions of lives had been sacrificed in war during historic times, which had involved a direct expenditure of forty billions of dollars and an indirect loss of an equal amount. He believed that the evil of class antagonism, the socialistic menace, and the strife between capital and labor would be largely removed if the vast sums now expended on militarism could be used for improving natural resources, bettering education, caring for the aged and sick, fighting disease and doing other work for the general benefit of the race. Peace would thus be, to a large extent, a solution of economic evils. Other speakers were Robert L. O'Brien of Boston, Edgar E. Clark, Rev. Arthur J. Brown, and William Jennings Bryan.

On May 19, a service in memory of King Edward the Seventh was held by the conference. The hundred-dollar prize for the best student essay on arbitration was awarded to George K. Gardner of Harvard. A resolution was adopted recommending the appointment of a committee to consider the best method of giving our government the power to enforce its treaty obligations in the federal courts. Another resolution, which was also adopted, was for the appointment of a committee to co-operate with Canada in its Peace Centenary in 1914.

The platform of the Mohonk Conference congr- ulates the country on the progress of the pe: movement and especially on the proposed Inter- tional Court of Arbitral Justice. It commer s President Taft's declaration in favor of the ar- tration of international differences, and recommer s the negotiation of general treaties of arbitration s soon as possible. It reiterates its former declarat n in favor of the reduction of military and na l establishments.

Shortly after the Mohonk Conference, the Brit n Peace Society held its annual meeting in Lond . It was addressed by Mr. Carnegie, who urged wo l peace, and there were expressions of a strong h e that the new British monarch and the Gern n Emperor might join hands as the "Peace Lords" f Europe. It was announced that, since the f t Hague conference met, no less than one hund l treaties of arbitration have been ratified betw n different countries. A proposition was made Sir William Mather to inaugurate a world-w e peace movement, which met with prompt appro l from the delegates.

A DAY WITH THE PRESIDENT

FEW of the visitors to Washington who go up to the White House, shake hands, if there is a levee, with the President and then find themselves out doors again in a few minutes, have any idea of the way in which the time of the chief executive is taken up during his long and arduous day. It is not all handshaking and pleasantry as one might suppose from the smile and greeting they receive in their hurried passage through the room under the guidance of their Senator or Congressman. It is one of the busiest business offices in the world.

Mr. William Bayard Hale has written for The World's Work an interesting and comprehensive article on "The President at Work," which gives a vivid idea of the daily ordeal of Mr. Taft in his office in the White House extension. The following is from Mr. Hale's article:

The setting, writes Mr. Hale, is one of more dignity than any previous President has enjoyed. The executive offices have been generously enlarged. There are commodious waiting rooms and ample lobbies. The President's private office is now an oval chamber in olive-green and white, with some architectural grace marking the Georgian fireplace, the windows (their curtains embroidered with the national arms and crest), and four doors—which invariably puzzle callers unfamiliar with the geography of the place. On the walls are just two pictures: a photograph of Mr. Roosevelt, outraging taste in a garish gilt frame, and a painting of President Taft's father, looking like the mellow statesman that he was. Half encircling the room are set-in bookcases, the eight doors of which reflect eight images of gesticulating congressmen. An echo inhabits the chamber—as often is the case with oval rooms—frequently conveying the whispers of cautious visitors in megaphone utterance to ears thirty feet away.

The President would be satisfied to see his visitors in a public whispering gallery, but most of them think that they have private and confidential communications to make, and some now and then succeed in luring him to the adjoining cabinet room, through the open door of which the President's voice is heard speaking more loudly than ever. Mr. Taft has never learned to whisper. For the most part, he gives audience sitting at his desk or standing in the centre of the room. The expression "gives audience" may not be a republican one, but it best describes what the President does. Mr. Taft is a good listener. Mr. Roosevelt's accomplishments—lay in another direction.

The President gets up about seven o'clock. He exercises, breakfasts, reads the Washington Post and the New York Tribune and glances at the first page of the New York Times and the Sun. At 9.30 or 10 o'clock he walks by his private passage to the executive offices.

On his desk the President finds a list of his appointments for the day, the letters which demand immediate personal attention, and half a dozen more newspapers. On top always lies the Charleston News and Courier; the President is particularly fond of the pungent style of Mr. Hemphill, who is just taking charge of a Richmond paper. Mr. Taft is not a great newspaper reader, but what papers he does read he reads in their original state. No clippings are submitted to him.

The morning letters rarely number more than a dozen. He disposes of them in a few minutes. He dictates swiftly, steadily, his eyes on the floor, never changing a word. Mr. Taft used to hesitate, correct, and revise a good deal, especially when dictating speeches. He has acquired the habit of making his first dictation generally final. For one letter which has to be submitted to the President, Mr. Carpenter, the secretary to the President, answers ten. But the President signs nothing, except purely formal notes, which he has not himself composed.

The General Levee

The first appointments are fixed for ten o'clock. For a few minutes before that hour, however, the doors are opened for a general reception. At this from fifty to two hundred people pass rapidly through the office. Each has a grasp of the President's hand and a word.

It is a case of all sorts and conditions of men. They come from every State of the Union, from the ends of the earth and the islands of the sea. Most of them are conscious of an experience to be ever remembered and to talk of. Those from the South and West, in particular, are manifestly exalted with patriotic sentiments as they clasp the warm hand and look into the sunny eyes. Everybody goes off smiling.

"Not ninety, surely!" exclaimed the President as he greeted a venerable gentlew n whose son had mentioned her age.

"No, I shall be ten years younger from is hour," was the instant rejoinder.

. . .

President Taft is keenly interested in wh is going on at the other end of Pennsylvania e- nue. With senators and representative ne freely discusses the measures under consi a- tion. At this moment the Railroad Bill i he centre of legislative interest. Several sen rs call for enlightenment as to the purposes o he bill and the administration's willingness t le- cept amendments. Mr. Taft makes it clea at he is not insisting on the bill in detail. le listens carefully to criticisms; in two cas he refers senators to the attorney-general fo he draughting of proposed amendments. N he wouldn't particularly oppose a propositi to lodge in the hands of the President, inste of those of the court, the power to order pu a- tions of rates; he does insist that the class a- tion feature be retained.

One senator, suggesting an amendmen e- marks: "This could do no harm, and ld satisfy a certain public sentiment."

Mr. Taft takes fire. With immense e- mence he answers:

"I will do nothing to satisfy public senti t. The bill may be altered to make it more e- tive, but I will have none of any pro on worked in to pacify anybody. I am away st that. When I learn I've stirred up a new rt of criticism or a new set of critics, I feel rt of gleeful satisfaction!"

Confessions of a President

This is a note which you hear again nd again. We have to do with a President no has but one concern, one motive, one thou — the good of the country. He resents inst ly and angrily any suggestion that he tem ze with public sentiment. Public sentiment it reaches Washington seems to him a thin n- stable and artificial. In newspaper crit sm he takes no stock. He puts his trust i he good friends around him and the conscio ss of his own integrity. He has come—it no secret that President Taft has come—to de air of popular applause or even of popular u er- standing.

Here is a visitor who urges a campai of publicity; he tells the President that a he country needs to bring it to his side agai a knowledge of his views and his purposes. he President could if he would command ar greater volume of publicity than can his e- mies. He ought to expose the hypocrisy the insurgents, give the public the facts, beat all to arms in defense of causes which mig be lost because of the treason of the very me o are shouting loudest for them.

President Taft says in substance:

"What's the use? I have resigned mys to misunderstanding. I don't say that I'm in- different to public opinion, but I have sed to count on it or hope for it. I must wa for time and the results of my labors to vin ate me. They will do so. I have a profoun nd abiding faith in the people. Their final dg- ment will be right. But it will not be giv til the results are clear—as they will be."

A Costumed May Party of Children in Central Park, New York

THE longing for the green grass and the flowers and woods, which awakens in every heart with the coming of spring, is strongest among the children. In the cities the parks at that time are thronged. Especially is Central Park in New York the Mecca of large and eager parties. These are usually under the conduct of parents or teachers. The May parties are the gayest of all. Here is one in which fancy costumes play an important part; and the fresh air, the freedom and the joy will brighten the dull eyes and put new spirit into the lagging footsteps of these city-bound little ones.

THE HOME QUEEN'S REALM

Women in Council

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

AM glad to discover that the plaint of the discouraged husband has reached many sympathetic hearts. Some of the letters received e almost too personal and intimate for publica-n. Every one concurs in censuring the man who stes good money on tobacco, and several friends ote Mr. Andrew Carnegie with approval. That ny Scot, an eminently successful man of busi-ss, has put on record his opinion that the money sted by most smokers on tobacco would in a few ars amount to a goodly sum in hand, which they ght invest to their pecuniary profit. Here is tter number one:

. . .

Practical Suggestion "Have wife and husband apply immediately to United States Court for bankruptcy proceedings; im exemptions allowed by law for beginning of w start. With exemptions repurchase old home. art over and all the neighbors will gladly help. ultry is the greatest revenue producer in this untry for amount invested."

G. W. H.

. . .

the Discouraged Husband "Get work. There is nothing that ll help you to regain grip ile you cherish a determina-n to lose it. The man who honest, industrious and who eets reverses with a renewed termination to win out in the ruggle against misfortune is re to find people lenient with m, and willing to allow him ne to get on his feet."

J. L. P.

. . .

e mid Wife "The wife who is so timid that e shrinks from conducting mily prayers in the presence guests should remember that is they who acknowledge God all their ways who may ex-ct his blessing and direction. r. Moody used to tell a story out a man whose wife urged m to have family prayers in e kitchen when they had mpany in the house. The an's reply was: 'I honor the rd too much to ask his pres-ce in the kitchen when I have nother room where I receive mpany.'"

J. B.

The timidity of a wife who is nused to leading family pray-'s may in the absence of her usband be overcome if she ill simply hand the Bible to a guest and ask him her to read a psalm. The whole family may then nite with guests in repeating the Lord's prayer. he point of Mr. Moody's story was that the kitchen as to be regarded as a place for hiding the fact at they had family worship. This would have en cowardly. There is no reason for regarding e kitchen as an undesirable place for prayer, pro-ded every one is allowed to meet in that abode of mely comfort.

. . .

dividual ommunion Cups "Taking communion in a church where individual cups are not used is to me a dilemma. Two abbaths ago I attended services where over forty nelt at the altar, the pastor passing the wine in a ngle cup! My feelings were such as utterly to nfit me to partake worthily. Inasmuch as all are ught that it is not only unsafe, but uncleanly to se public drinking cups, what is to prevent feelings f disgust at such a service as the foregoing?"

F. S. K.

Many thoughtful people and also many members f the medical profession look upon the passing of e cup in the old-fashioned way as unhygienic and angerous, a means indeed of conveying contagious iseases. The individual communion cup has much to recommend it to universal use. This topic remains open for discussion.

. . .

Selfish Mourning "May I state a case? A year ago we lost from our family a darling little sister. Her loss left us very sad. The sight of her vacant chair and empty bed cast a shadow over the whole house. Yet we all tried to rise above our grief, my mother being the only exception. Since Amy's death mother has not been seen to smile, the piano is never opened and the shades are drawn down before the front window. No matter what the weather may be mother goes to the cemetery every day and comes home sadder than ever. The result is that my brothers, aged seventeen and nineteen, are turning away from home and getting into bad company. Do you not think there is such a thing as selfish mourning? I should not dare to consult you in this way if I did not feel sure that my mother would not even glance at the paper. She is completely absorbed in one thought, and that is the thought of the little one who is gone from her care."

ELDEST DAUGHTER.

If you possibly can do so get your mother away from home for a much needed change of scene. She will hardly be able to throw off her grief while she remains where everything reminds her of its occasion. Be patient with her. Her grief may be selfish, but she cannot pull herself out of her depression without help. Do all you can to interest those brothers and, as the eldest daughter, take on yourself the duty of drawing up the shades and letting in the sunlight.

. . .

Life's Ups and Downs Flashlights on the ups and downs of life are often thrown apparently by chance in the intercourse of social settlements. An Italian employed as a janitor in a settlement on the East Side was observed by one of the visiting managers as having a look and bearing much above the work of an ordinary laborer. His face denoted keen intelligence, his speech was refined and his hands were those of a scholar. Upon inquiry she ascertained that the man was of good birth and education, and of faultless antecedents, but a succession of misfortunes had brought him to poverty in a strange land. He was bravely and honestly and thoroughly doing the work assigned him and it proved a stepping stone to tasks for which he was better fitted.

A student at Columbia University was living with his mother at one of the large hotels in New York. When preparing for an examination he often brought his books to the table and worked at Latin and Greek between the courses of his dinner. It happened one evening that he had considerable trouble over his Greek. The man who waited on the table saw his predicament and finally said quietly: "If you will let me come to you at such a time this evening I will be glad to help you over that translation." The boy was surprised, but eagerly reached for any aid in sight. It transpired that the waiter was a graduate of a European University, abundantly able to coach the puzzled student.

. . .

The Critical Spirit Wherever else the critical spirit is in order it should withdraw into the background when one is in church. To criticise the sermon is almost wholly to lose the benefit which might be derived from it. To criticise the music, to be distressed if the soprano's voice is too thin or the contralto is out of tune, or the bass too heavy for the rest of the quartette is to drift entirely away from the realization of praise. People should attend divine worship with two objects in view: One to praise God; the other to receive instruction. Both these objects are defeated if the critical spirit is suffered to intrude.

. . .

Presence of Mind In an emergency the woman who has presence of mind acts promptly and does the best thing that she can without screaming, shrieking, or ringing her hands. Most of us have plenty of resources on which we can draw when there is no particular reason, just as there are few people who could not make a brilliant after-dinner speech were they called upon the next morning. To have presence of mind in the face of danger one must have a habit of self-restraint in the usual business of the day. Now and then a foolish young girl excuses herself for a neglect or omission on the score of absence of mind. To be absent-minded is by no means a credit to any one; rather it is a disgrace. Presence of mind may be cultivated and to cultivate it is within the power of every man and woman, if only its importance is realized.

. . .

In Packing a Trunk The proper packing of a trunk is a fine art. Garments should be folded, not rolled. The heavier articles should be at the bottom of the trunk. A generous supply of tissue paper to fill up little spaces and to puff out the sleeves of gowns and keep hats and bonnets from rolling about is a great convenience. If a trunk must be opened at intervals during a journey, the practised traveler places near the top those contents for which she will have use. A trunk may be so carefully packed that it may be opened weeks after it is locked and not a crease or wrinkle will be found in the dresses that repose in its depths.

. . .

The Oiled Feather When you are annoyed by a creaking hinge, instead of allowing the jarring noise to continue, take a feather and a drop of oil and abate the discord. Equally when there are jarring elements and contrasting temperaments in the family try what can be done by using the oiled feather of timely sympathy, cheery jest, or tactful change of subject.

German School Children Heading a Festival Procession

Beneath the burdened branches
The happy children march;
Above them lift the tree-tops
In a triumphal arch.

Their faces, sweet and rosy,
To greet their festal day;
The old who watch feel young again
And wish they, too, might play.

The Strawberry Handkerchief

A Tale of Colonial Days in Old New York

By AMELIA E. BARR

CHAPTER ELEVEN—Continued

CAPTAIN JANSEN roared with mirth; Batavius looked into the sweet, innocent face doubtfully. What did the girl mean?

"Well, I know not. If I judge correctly—and I generaly do—I believe I said just sufficient. I should have stayed and dined with the notables, but— I was not asked by any one. So here I came."

"Here thou art welcome," answered Captain Jansen heartily. "Draw thy chair to the table."

"The army like me not," continued the offended man. "I have been too kind to the naval officers, and John Benson tod me the army and navy men were always at swords' points."

"When John Benson told thee that he was not making good use of his time."

They were just seating themselves when Rose reentered the room. She gave Batavius a glance full of mischief and triumph, and then took the seat the Captain had kept for her, between himself and Virginia. Then she looked around and asked: "Has no one any remarks to make about my appearance?"

"In that fashion I like thy hair. It is the old Dutch fashion."

"The way you wear your hair is a very serious matter," said Rose. "I learned that from the Court hairdresser, and he surely ought to know. When my aunt went first to London she wore her hair as I generally do—all curls, and twirls."

"I hope," said Madame, "you got a good letter from London—full of good news."

"Upon my honor, it is full of wonderful news—romantic news—quite unexpected, too."

"Does it concern the Stamp Act?" asked Captain Jansen.

"Or his Majesty?" asked Madame.

"His Majesty has nothing to do with my news. It is about a person we all of us know much better."

"Perhaps Mr. Franklin," suggested Virginia.

"No. I will stop all your guessing and tell you plainly that the whole long eight pages of my letter was about our old friend Lieutenant Joris Artaveldt."

"Oh! oh!" cried Batavius, "has he been getting into mischief and trouble? I expected it—and my expectations are usually correct—also, he is touchy, proud, has no experience, and no self-control — a mere boy, not fit to be turned loose in London."

"You are altogether wrong, Captain. He is the very child of Good Fortune, the very hero of Romance. All London is raving about his luck—for his cousin, the eccentric Squire of Settlebourne, put fifty thousand guineas in the Bank of Engand for him on his birthday. It was an absolute gift."

"I believe nothing of such nonsense!" said Batavius with angry scorn.

"My aunt's word against your opinion, sir, every time!"

"Well, then, little lady, what says your aunt? The whole story tell to us. That will be best."

"She says the mother of this wonderful youth was a Miss Agatha Settle of Settlebourne—a great beauty, and a great horsewoman."

"That is the truth," said the Captain. "I remember when Justice Artaveldt brought her here."

"The present Squire was her cousin, and he loved her, and has remained a bachelor for her sake."

"Why the deuce should he do that?" asked Batavius. "There are women enough to have, and to spare, and—"

"There was only one Agatha Settle. Captain De Vries, if you interrupt me again I shall ask that you be put out of hearing. When Joris visited him he took an instant and passionate liking for the youth, vowed that he was the image of his adorable mother, and that he should be as his own son for her sake. In a few days Joris had set him on fire about American affairs, and as he was member of Parliament for Settlebourne, he resolved to go to London and tell the Ministry what he thought of their unconstitutional robbery. So to London they went, and the Squire suddenly appeared on the floor of the House of Commons, and thundered such a speech in the ears of its members that the House was in an uproar. Mr. Pitt thanked him, the Opposition benches cheered him."

"A fine old man," said Madame. "Very much I like him."

"I thought Joris——"

"Lieutenant Artavedlt from you, Captain De Vries."

"Well, then, I thought he was against the colonists."

"You usualy think wrong, Captain De Vries. In his father's house he put the fifth clause of the Decalogue before the Stamp Act—but as soon as he was free to make or mar his own life, he spoke his own words."

"Never mind, Batavius," said Madame. "Very interesting is the story of Joris—go on with it."

"I hardly know where to begin."

"My Lady Rose, are you telling us the truth?"

"Captain De Vries, the truth is good enough for me, who am content with my fortune. Your passion is only for money, therefore you lie and prosper—and think others as bad as yourself."

"In business, my lady——"

"Business!" she ejacuated scornfully. "Business! I roll in a higher orb!" Then turning to Madame, she continued, "I will pass by the adoration of London society for Lieutenant Artaveldt—the dinners by aristocratic clubs—and come to the lovemaking!"

"Ah! ah! I thought so!"

"Be still, Batavius."

"You must know," continued Rose, "that in all these diversions Joris and his cousin were close companions. Suddenly Lady Molly Trefuses appeared, and the Squire was eager for Joris to marry her. Lady Molly was pleased with the proposal, but my aunt says Joris would not listen to it. He vowed he would be a bachelor like his cousin, and for the same reason; so the lovely Trefuses, with her easy fortune, and her pretty Cornish castle, is disappointed and disconsolate."

During this last sentence Rose had been gently touching Virginia's foot with her own, and when Virginia looked up, it was to reveal eyes full of light, cheeks tinted like a rose, a mouth tremulous with happy smiles, words that were like spoken laughter—a girl altogether full of hope, tenderly thinking of the past love, and radiantly trusting for its future.

The Captain and Madame were equally impressed by the good fortune of Joris—but they took the facts differently. Jansen said dubiously, "A queer story Lady Rose has told us—dost thou believe it, Katrina?"

"Every word."

"The other day I met Justice Artaveldt, and I thought he walked as if he owned the earth."

"A very fine, fortunate son he owns. Virginia knew who and what she was loving. Thou hast spoiled her life, and broken her heart."

Continued on next page

HOW DO YOU WASH YOUR CURTAINS?

There are twenty wrong ways; only one right way.

The right way is easy. The wrong ways are hard; hard on the curtains; doubly hard on the temper.

This is the right way:

Shake and brush curtains to remove the dust. Mend breaks. Soak in Ivory Soap suds and cold water for two hours, or over night if that is more convenient. Work the curtains gently up and down in the water and squeeze them between the hands to get the dirt out. Put them into clean warm suds with ammonia added, and keep changing the water until the curtains are clean. Never wring curtains by hand; lay them on a strip of cloth and put carefully through the wringer. Rinse well in several waters, and put through hot, moderately thick starch. If the curtains are white, the starch should be blued; if cream colored, strong coffee should be added to it. Two or three curtains may be dried at the same time on one frame. If you have no frame, lay clean sheets over the floor of an unused room, stretch the curtains into shape and pin each point so that it will not slip. If points are out of shape when dry, they may be dampened with a cloth and ironed.

Ivory Soap . . 99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in y Church or Sunday School, and for every person when you can "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, I

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED. Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free. VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

Returnable examination copies of the great hymn HALLOWED HYMN mailed on request to churches needing new bo THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chic

If you really want to know some delightful new summer desserts—send for the book. It tells about Charlottes, Custards and Creams made with to blend with sweet and acid fruits and berries. Also fruit tarts and berry pies—excellent rules for strawberry short-cake and dainty cakes for summer evening tea. The best cooks in the land have contributed their pet recipes.

Kingsford's Corn Starch

The book is free. Send your name on a post card for Cook Book "O"—"What a Cook Ought to Know About Corn Starch"—168 of the best recipes you ever tried.

T. KINGSFORD & SON
Oswego, N.Y.
NATIONAL STARCH CO., Successors

OR REAL COMFORT
WEAR THE NEEDRAW
Boston Garter
Velvet Grip
lost comfortable
ith either knee
full length awers. You
nnot feel it.
sist on hav-
g the Needraw
Soft, non-elastic, Knit Leg Band with adjustable Pendant.
Good
ll the Year
ound.
Conforms to contour of leg perfectly. No metal touches the flesh on, Nic. Plate, 25c.
S Pd't, Gold Pl., 50c.
ed on Receipt of Price.
GEORGE FROST CO.
Makers, Boston.

WE PAY THE POSTAGE
This CORSET COVER ONLY 45¢
HANDSOMELY TRIMMED FRONT AND BACK WITH BEAUTIFUL IMPORTED EMBROIDERY SIZES 32 TO 44 BUST MEASURE
No. 638—Send only 45c
we will mail you this Handsome Corset Cover, tage prepaid. Made of good quality soft finish Nainsk; has beautiful 3¼-inch Imported Open Work Emidery Yoke; two rows handsome Val. lace; one-inch beading; edged entirely around neck and arm-holes one-inch Val. lace to match. Yoke finished with -inch pure silk ribbon draw and large bow, further med with pure silk baby ribbon draw entirely und neck, fly front, pearl buttons; all seams tape nd. Back yoke has one-inch Val. lace with one-inch lace ding. Sizes 32 to 44. Be sure to state size wanted. ce only 45c. If you don't find it worth at least 85c. rn it and we will cheerfully refund your money, also tage. This extremely low price is made to introduce Large Free Catalog of Everything to Wear for Men, men and Children, also Furniture, Stoves, Carpets, gs, Refrigerators and all kinds of Household Goods. ference: Commercial National Bank of Chicago Capital $7,000,000.00
CHICAGO MAIL ORDER CO.
INDIANA AVE. & 26 TH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL.

CALOX
THE OXYGEN TOOTH POWDER
To Whiten the Teeth
s the Oxygen (in the form of peroxide of hydrogen) in alox that renders it so perfect a cleanser and whitener o he teeth.
Dentists advise its use. Physicians prescribe it.
ALL DRUGGISTS, 25 CENTS
Sample and booklet free on request.
MCKESSON & ROBBINS, NEW YORK

AGENTS—$1.33 Per Hour
Comer made it, so can you. Swain says, "Best thing I ever struck." Easy money maker. High School boy sold 36 boxes in 2 days—profit $12.60. Agents get big repeat orders—build up steady business. Everybody wears hosiery. Guaranteed for 4 months against holes in heels and toes. Send right back to us if not perfectly satisfactory. J. R. Valentine sold 600 pairs in 50 hours—you can do as well—yes—better. Worn goods replaced free—no experience needed—we teach you everything. Here's your one big chance—don't lose it—write today. Free samples.
THOMAS MFG. CO., 1924 Wayne St., DAYTON, OHIO

Sent on Approval. Send No Money. $2.00
WE WILL TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. Hair Switch
Send a lock of your hair, and we will mail a 22 inch short stem fine human hair switch to match. If you find it a big bargain, remit $2.00 in ten days, or sell 3 and GET YOUR SWITCH FREE. Extra shades a little more. Inclose 6c postage. Free beauty book showing latest styles of hair dressing—also high grade switches, pompadours, wigs, puffs, etc. ANNA AYERS,
Dept. 84 19 Quincy St. Chicago

The Strawberry Handkerchief

Continued from preceding page

"If I was thee I would talk some common sense. All women pretend not to like the man they have to marry, and then about the same man they turn crazy. They would marry him, and no other. Virginia is like the rest. Very contented she is now with Batavius, and the wedding is all right."

"That is not my thought. Virginia hates Batavius."

"No! No!"

"Hates him worse than ever. Why she has borne him better lately, I know not—but I think she intends to kill herself."

"Hush-h, Katrina! Ashamed thou ought to be to think such things. Thou, too, wished her to marry Batavius."

"I? Never! I told thee from the first it was wrong. I never liked the man. I always liked Joris. A lovely couple Joris and Virginia would have made."

"Many times thou hast said to me, 'Batavius would make a good husband.' "

"For some women, yes. For Virginia he is the last man in the world. She hates him."

"Why?"

"Can I tell why men and women love or hate each other?"

"Lady Rose helped on the hatred."

"Perhaps."

"And now she will marry our Arent. I like not that bargain."

"Meddle not with it. Enough of sorrow has come through thy determination to marry poor Virginia as was thy will and pleasure."

"Would thou like her to go and live in England among Episcopals? As for the Court and society life in London, it is at the gates of Tophet."

"Lady Rose is sweet and good, and she was reared—as thou says—at the gates of Tophet. The King is very religious; the Queen also, and Mr. Whitfield preaches to the nobility. Virginia is good. In London she would do right, just as in this house, and it would be far better for her to be singing and having some happy hours in London than cleaning her house and cooking for that ugly Batavius De Vries in New York."

"I will go away from thy cruel words. If things are so in thy sight, why did thou not speak to me before this?"

"I did speak often. Thou would not listen."

"If harm comes to Virginia I will blame thee. I will say, 'Thou foresaw—I did not. Thou ought to have warned me.' I know what is the matter with thee. It is all because Joris has got fifty thousand guineas."

"For the money I care not. It is the men."

"Batavius is as good as the other. I stand to that. And I wish to-morrow was the wedding day."

"Perhaps there will not be any wedding day."

"Why?"

"I know not the why. But dost thou think Virginia is contented because she has begun to like Batavius? Or that she will ever be his wife?"

"I am sure she will. Next Tuesday is the set day."

"Thou art sillier to-night than is common. Go to thy bed."

"I have not had my bedtime bite."

"No more food will be brought out this night. I shall not unlock anything."

"Thou art an ill-tempered woman. To-morrow I will not speak to thee."

"Not for many days will I speak to thee—unless thou art a more reasonable man."

Then she began in a shrill tone to sing the night psalm, and Jansen, after a few moments of resentful consideration, went out of the room, clashing the door after him. And the psalm never stopped or wavered, although a smile, not exactly devotional, accompanied the last lines.

At the same hour, Batavius sat in the cabin of The Arms of Stuyvesant in a passion which forbade him to seek company of any kind. Indeed, he wished to be alone in order that he might indulge it with satisfactory freedom. Hitherto he had always asserted the world and its affairs to be well managed by the power he called Providence. Upon the whole, he had been satisfied with the amount of favor vouchsafed him by that power. If people were not happy, he was angry with their discontent. He was never discontented. If they were poor, he disliked them because he considered it their own fault. He knew Providence would never let a man be without money in his pocket, or an overcoat on his back in cold weather, if he did his duty.

But this night he felt that he must reverse his opinions, and he was morally adrift. What was he to think of a Providence that had, without reason, suddenly abandoned his just cause, and heaped favors upon his rival—an unworthy young vagabond like Joris Artaveldt?

And as for Joris being the idol of London society, and refusing the hand of Lady Molly Trefuses, he did not believe a word of such nonsense. It was unnatural, it was even wicked, to suppose a sane man would refuse a titled lady, with youth and beauty. He thumped the table as he talked, as if he wished to smash it to pieces. Every sentence was uttered with a blow.

So when he came at last by way of Joris and Virginia to his final bitter complaint—the strawberry handkerchief—his tongue was still rich in imprecations, though his hands were bleeding with the blows he had given the table, as proxy for the men and women he hated. Captain Jansen was doubtful, Katrina was false, Lady Rose was doubly false, Virginia was cruel and ungrateful, and he believed almost a witch.

"I hate her!" he growled, with a blow, "but also I love her. She tortures me, but I love her! She cowes and frightens me, but I love her! There was never a beauty like her, and by every drop of blood in my body, I swear she shall be my wife. Then I will teach her High Mightiness how to crawl on her knees to me. As for that strawberry handkerchief, my mind is made up—mine, it must be."

In such self-torture he wore the night away, and the cold gray dawn was coming through the cabin ports when he fell asleep. So it was afternoon when he opened his bloodshot eyes, and slowly became aware of an unusual noise in the city. Then he remembered that New York was going to give that day up to making a public holiday because the new Governor had come and was apparently inclined to favor the colonists.

He did not, as usual, go to the King's Arms for breakfast. He walked his own deck, or sat in his own cabin all day, trying to arrange his thoughts, and decide on his course of action. For he felt that a change was coming—that, in fact, it must come. He could not endure his present position. He must at least have his rights as a lover, and he repeated the word "rights" to loud laughter, which suddenly ceased in sullen, silent anger. He had remembered the strawberry handkerchief, and the trifle of torn cambric assumed an unreasonable importance in his eyes. That was a right he must and would have. In his cowardly, superstitious heart he took it for a manifest sign. If he succeeded in obtaining the handkerchief he would carry all before his will.

To be continued

The "STANDARD'S"
Weekly Specials
$3.48 Buys Either of These Dresses
Princess Slip Given FREE With Every Dress

346. Charming Lingerie Dress of fine soft batiste in white only. Broad front panel of beautiful raised and openwork eyelet. Swiss embroidery outlined by Val lace insertion. On either side of front panel to waist line are groups of pin tucks and inserts of Val. Collar, cuffs and belt effect show pintucks outlined by Val inserts and edgings. Three-quarter sleeves. 21 inch flounce. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Princess Slip given FREE with each Dress—an exceptional offer. $3.48

345. Low Neck Lingerie Dress of fine soft Batiste in white only. V shaped yoke and front panel of beautiful wide Venise banding outlined by edging of dainty Irish Crochet. On either side of front panel from yoke to waist line is a group of pin tucks and a lace insert of Val and Irish crochet. Belt effect and cuffs tucked and outlined with Irish crochet. 21 inch flounce. Three-quarter sleeves. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Princess Slip given FREE with each dress. $3.48

Princess Slip FREE With Every Dress

The cost of this Princess Slip is not added to the price of the dresses. We give it to you FREE—to induce you to deal at the "STANDARD." Made of Sheer Lawn in White, Blue or Pink. Trimmed with dainty Val laces and ribbon. Closes invisibly in back; fits without a wrinkle—insures the smooth fitting lines necessary for wear under your lingerie dresses.

OUR "MONEY-BACK" GUARANTEE:
If anything you buy from the "STANDARD" is not entirely satisfactory, we want you to return it and we will send your money back promptly.

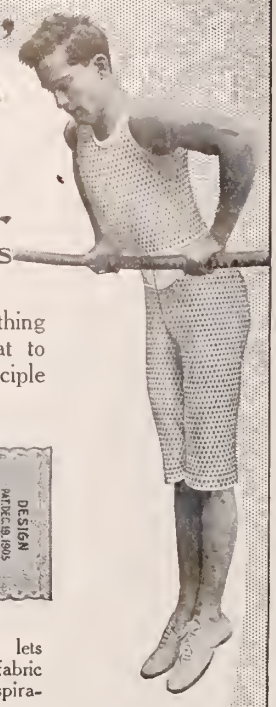
FREE Write to-day for a year's FREE subscription to the "STANDARD STYLE BULLETIN."

STANDARD MAIL ORDER CO.
161 Wooster Street, New York City

"Porosknit"

Summer Underwear

FOR MEN FOR BOYS



You wear light, cool summer clothing because it allows the body-heat to escape. Apply the same principle to summer underwear.

Buy underwear by this label

It guarantees Summer Comfort

Wear open-mesh "Porosknit" which lets your body breathe. Its soft, ventilated fabric quickly absorbs and evaporates hot perspiration. Fits faultlessly, because properly proportioned. Elastic, yet shape retaining. Easier to wash than a pocket handkerchief. Durable, because made of extra good quality yarn.

Union Suits For Men, $1.00 For Boys, 50c.

Any Style Shirts and Drawers per garment

For Men 50c For Boys 25c

Buy from Dealers

Our Handsome Illustrated Booklet Free by Mail

CHALMERS KNITTING COMPANY

30 Washington Street, Amsterdam, N. Y.

Guaranteed Mortgages

THE New York Mortgage Co's "First Mortgage Trust Bonds" will be found, upon investigation, the most solid form of investment, offering the same facilities, advantages, security and income, whether your capital amounts to $10 or $10,000. Our Bonds and Mortgages on New York City and Suburban Real Estate yield investors

5 to 5½ Per Cent. Net and have an absolute guarantee from this Company as to payment of both interest and principal when due.

These "Trust Bonds" are secured by first mortgages deposited with the Windsor Trust Co. of New York, and held by them for the protection of bond-holders.

Issued in amounts of $100 and multiples thereof. Cashable at holder's option upon short notice. Payments of $10 and upwards will be received by the company at any time to suit the convenience of investors. Interest begins at once and is payable semi-annually.

UNDER SUPERVISION OF NEW YORK BANKING DEPT.

Free Booklet giving full particulars, address

NEW YORK MORTGAGE CO.

DEPT. D 1475 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

ELECTRO-SILICON

Cleans and Polishes anything Gold, Silverware, Glass, Nickel, Copper, Brass, Tin and Steel. Removes tarnish easily and quickly and imparts an unsurpassed brilliancy. Perfectly harmless. Avoid substitutes.

Send address for

FREE SAMPLE

Full Sized Box, post-paid, 15 cts. in stamps.

The Electro Silicon Co., 30 Cliff Street, New York.

Sold by Grocers and Druggists Everywhere.

$1 GENUINE HAND WOVEN PANAMA

RARE BARGAIN IN GENUINE PANAMA HATS

Panama Hats more popular than ever—all the rage this summer. By importing large quantities we can sell direct to user for this surprisingly low price. These hats are warranted genuine all hand-woven; unblocked, and can be worn in that condition by Gentlemen, Ladies and Children. Easily blocked in any shape or style. Just as serviceable as the $10.00 kind; the difference only in fineness of weave. Assorted sizes. Weight only 2 oz. Sent prepaid, on receipt of $1.00. ORDER TO-DAY. Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Panama Hat Co., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York City

Theodore Roosevelt's

Own Account of His African Trip Now appearing in

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

is the most popular magazine contribution for years and of great interest to a LARGE NUMBER OF NEW READERS. 100,000 subscription orders already placed. Here is a Great Opportunity for Subscription Agents. Liberal cash commissions and many extra prizes are offered those who can devote even a little time to soliciting subscriptions. REPRESENTATIVES WANTED IN EVERY TOWN OF AMERICA.

For particulars, address at once Desk 3,

Scribner's Magazine, 155 Fifth Ave., N.Y.City.

In the purchase of bonds the value of a banking firm to a client depends upon the scope, character and efficiency of the service rendered.

Organization

With an experienced organization covering the bond markets of the country and the best of financial, legal, accounting and engineering connections, N.W. Halsey & Company are enabled to offer the investing public a service the keynote of which is efficiency.

Recommendations are based on expert analysis of accurate information and reflect many years of successful experience.

Bonds may be purchased through our Correspondence Department as easily and advantageously as in person.

Write to-day for latest bond circular No. B-49.

N. W. HALSEY & CO.

Bankers

Dealers in Government, Municipal, Railroad and Public Utility Bonds

New York: 49 Wall St. Philadelphia: 1429 Chestnut St.
Chicago: 152 Monroe St. San Francisco: 424 California St.

The Savings Bank Question

SOME weeks ago we called attention to the low rate of interest usually paid by savings banks in contradistinction to the higher rate which is to be obtained from security investments. We remarked that savings banks seldom pay more than 4 per cent. a year interest upon accounts and that many of them pay even less than this. It was intimated also that many banks which had been in the habit of paying 4 per cent. were considering the possibility of a reduction of the rate to 3½ per cent.

These banks have now practically decided upon this reduction measure since the annual meeting of the State Savings Banks Association of New York, which was held in the New York Chamber of Commerce on May 26. That this attitude of the New York bankers will have a depreciating effect upon the interest rate of savings banks throughout the country at large is the opinion of financiers. The attitude of the members of the State Savings Banks Association in general was summed up in the address of State Superintendent of Banks O. H. Cheney, who said in part:

An Expert's Opinion

"For the last twenty years there has been an annual decrease of savings bank surplus in relation to deposits, so that to-day the percentage is less than half of what it was in 1890. While this condition has not proved disturbing thus far I personally am convinced that the time has now arrived when steps should be taken to prevent a further reduction. There can be no doubt of the justice of the principle that every dollar of net earnings that can be distributed with prudence among the depositors should be so distributed, yet is it not time to analyze the present conditions and determine what real prudence demands?

"The first consideration which should be given to all savings funds is absolute safety. The surplus of a bank represents its margin of safety. It cannot be too strongly urged that the management of every bank whose deposits are increasing should carry sums proportionate to its surplus fund at every dividend period.

"Savings bank trustees establish their institutions through a fine sense of unselfish devotion and disinterested philanthropy, but when the bank's deposits grow some trustees are attacked with the 'grow big' fever. I believe in the call of ambition, but when men engaged in a purely philanthropic enterprise begin to scheme how to take business away from what they call rival institutions it is time to scrutinize their real motives.

"It has been stated that ninety per cent. of our savings banks wish to reduce their 4 per cent. interest rate until their surplus is properly restored, but owing to the refusal of others to adopt the same course nothing can be done. It is hard to reconcile the attitude of either side to the very evident duty of the savings bank trustees.

"It is my opinion that under present conditions only a limited number of our savings banks are in a position warranting a continuance of the 4 per cent. rate. Yet even if I were trustee of one of these institutions with sufficient surplus I would consider it my duty to the individual depositors of my bank to help strengthen the whole savings bank system by voting to reduce the prevailing rate for a time at least. Pride in one's own institution or a desire to get some one else's deposits should blind no one to the conditions which at present exist."

It was stated during the meeting that there are 2,600,000 depositors in New York State savings banks, whereas there are only 1,600,000 voters in the State. It shows, therefore, that there must be approximately one r lion women in New York State al who have deposits in savings ban The proportion would probably h good all over the United States. f the savings banks of other States low the example set by those of N York, the result will be a loss of ma millions of dollars of interest to saving population of the whole coun and the question becomes one of tional interest.

Reasons for the Decrease

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has recei many letters from subscribers c plaining of the low rate of interest p by savings banks in various Sta and asking our opinion concerning vestments which would yield them greater profit than that which can obtained from the banks. In this c nection we might quote the statem of the president of one of the la New York City banks, who insists t the action of his own bank in reduc the interest rate from 4 per cent to per cent. "is due to a depreciation value of city, State and high-class curities from the price paid for th Of course, the bank could buy a sm amount of bonds at the present time a slightly depreciated value, but int est rates must be figured on the va of bonds already in the bank's poss sion."

In other words, the bank's capac for paying interest depends upon profit from bonds which were bou some time ago when the price w much higher than it is now. The ba finds it inexpedient to get rid of th bonds since the market price has preciated, and so in order to maint as high a surplus as it formerly d the bank is compelled to reduce its terest rate. Now, it seems to us t here is an opportunity for the sm investor to take advantage of a sit tion, which the savings bank from standpoint does not feel warranted taking.

Let it be stated that the price o bond is, after all, a variable quanti The market value may be much hig at one time than at another. This l nothing, however, to do with amount of interest stated on its fa nor does it have any effect on the va of the bond at maturity. The bo being a promise to pay, secured b mortgage, will when the period of full maturity has been completed taken up at its full value as designa upon its face.

The Investors' Opportunity

In the meantime, however, if market price of the bond should dep ciate, in other words, become m lower than normal, it seems to us t this would be an important condit to be considered by an investor. G bonds never go begging, but there times when they may be bought a more advantageous price than usual

And so, in view of this reduction interest rates by the savings banks might be well for the small investor consider the advisability of good curities. True, there is nothing s posedly safer than a savings ba which is safeguarded by the law, l on the other hand, there are securit which in themselves offer a margin safety so large as to place them i class that is considered to be alm without risk.

Her First "Nice Bible"

Dear Editor: I was very glad receive the Bible you sent me as premium. This is the first nice Bi I have ever owned. THE CHRISTI HERALD has so many things in it t help me and I always pass it arou among my friends.

MRS. META GIFFORD

Pierre, S. D.

Waifs Eager for Mont-Lawn

By KATE UPSON CLARK

HERE is joy among the little children of the New York tenements. ord has gone out—as it has done ery spring for sixteen years past—at "Mont-Lawn is soon to open." ny poor little tots, ragged and dirty, e already dreaming bright dreams a happy ten days this summer in e bright precincts of our Children's me. Only those who have worked ong the poor in the congested East le of our teeming city, can understand what such a prospect means.

So thoroughly did Dr. Klopsch plan d organize this most beneficent char—the creation of the kind gifts of multitude of CHRISTIAN HERALD aders—that its conduct on the same ccessful lines is assured. The helpd at Mont-Lawn are largely those o were trained to the service. The ellent head-cook has been in his ce for fourteen years. The housekeeper and her assistant have occupied ir positions for many years also. A number of the caretakers, who, all d long, watch over the children, have ved them for several seasons. Thus may be truthfully said that the practical management of the routine of the me, its food, dormitories and playgrounds are all so thoroughly regulated that the place is governed as the late D. L. Moody would have said, by "sanctified common sense." Under the surface there is a strong current of hopful religious influence, which makes itself felt in the after-lives of the little guests.

The Children's Home is absolutely non-sectarian, opening its gates to the poor waifs of the metropolis freely and lovingly. Three thousand little ones will enjoy its privileges this summer. On June 27, the first party of children will be received there. On July 4 a patriotic celebration will, as usual, take place, and many famous men and women will speak. There will be music, marches, etc., and the spirit of true patriotism will run high.

Three dollars pays for a ten days' outing for one child. There is probably no more satisfactory way of practising philanthropy than to send some poor little boy or girl to Mont-Lawn. After you have contributed your money, come up and see how it is spent Wander over the beautiful lawn, under the protecting branches of the great trees; look off at the silver river and the shadowy hills; walk through the clean snow-white dormitories; attend a service in the Children's Temple; watch the happy children as they eat the good food, or play among the swings and toboggans, and you will rejoice as we do that this noble charity was ever inaugurated, and will pray that it may be long continued.

All contributions will be promptly acknowledged in our columns and forwarded to the Treasurer of the Children's Home Corporation.

OUR BUSY EVANGELISTS AND MISSIONARIES

EVANGELISTS HART AND MAGANN, of Fairbu, Ill., are engaged in a very successful urn tabernacle campaign at Portland, Oreg. Fcy-five churches are represented.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION of the National Fcration of Gospel Missions, which was appcked for Columbus, O., May 31, has been chged and will be held at Poughkeepsie, N., June 13-19.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, Md., Evangelistic an Bible Conference has been arranged for Ju 22 to 31. It is interdenominational and m Christian workers, evangelists, etc., have anunced their intention of associating in the untaking. Evangelist Henry Ostrom will dit the work.

MISSIONARY J. M. L. HARROW, of the Inte Mission, Barabo Station, Liberia, writes: "C work is progressing and the tribes are ca g for workers. I am about to open two ne stations. I have forty-five girls and boys he and about thirty-five up at Gropoka. God is essing us and the people are being awakened"

MISSIONARY FRANCES UNSWORTH, of the An ican Preshyterian Mission, Ratnagarri, Ind., writes: "This is a large district south of mbay, with many villages, only a few of wh can be visited yearly. We have a small chh at Ratnagarri of 110 members." There is great lack of Gospel laborers in the distric In one place called Devla, meetings are hel in the shade of the banyan trees. The wo n evince great interest in the Gospel.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNSHINE Society has grn to be an immense organization and is doi a great deal of good. One of its finest fea es is the Arthur Home at Summit, N. J., for ind babies. There are many applications for dmission. Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, the President-General of the society, writes that any assistance to the work of the Home will be greatly welcomed.

MISSIONARY WM. GREET, of the Tehri Bor Villega Mission in the Himalayas, India, wri an interesting account of a northern tou st winter. The missionaries found much dri ng among the natives. There is, however, a deep interest in spiritual things, and the outlook is promising. It is a common thi to sell the daughters of these Hindu hig nders to the people of the plains. There is gat need of funds to carry on the work of the mission.

INNIE'S "SEASIDE REST" is a summer home for red foreign missionaries of all denominat s, located at Old Orchard, Me., and open thrch July and August. The building and plan were given by a benevolent lady of Baltimor Md., and are partly endowed, so that forn missionaries at home on furlough and nee g a place of rest and quiet for the summer an have every advantage of the best seashor resort at almost nominal rates.

RS. E. F. BREWSTER, Hinghwa, China, wri that a great revival is now in progress ther with day and night meetings attended by hou nds. There are many conversions. Revival meetings have also been held on the island Nan ch and many who were pirates, gamblers nd idolators have come in. Over twenty stud ts in one school confessed Christ. Some women brought their bracelets and ornaments and laid them at the altar, and others brought idols and ancestral tablets and surrendered them.

—A NATIONAL TRAINING School and Chautauqua for the colored race has been established at Durham, N. C., with Rev. James E. Shepard as president. It is modeled after Northfield and Winona, being designed to reach the negro ministers first and through them the masses. A Summer School and Assembly will be opened July 5 to August 14.

—EVANGELIST GEORGE W. TAYLOR and his associate workers lately conducted a successful union revival campaign in Salem, Ore., at which 1,253 confessed Christ. All the evangelical churches in the city united in the revival, which was one of the most remarkable ever held in that section. Mrs. Taylor and Professor L. A. Wegner gave able assistance, the first in personal work, the other as musical director.

—ONE OF THE early missionaries to Venezuela, and the second to give up her life in that land for the Gospel, was Miss Grace B. Tarbox. She died on August 15, 1907. Dying at El Valle, near Caracas, where she had labored, she was buried in the Caracas cemetery. Her grave has been marked with a beautiful stone through the gifts of friends interested in her work. The inscription, Fiel hasta la muerte, is, translated, "Faithful unto death," and is peculiarly appropriate.

Called Higher

Mrs. A. J. Plant, of Binghamton, N. Y.

John Donaldson (74), of Fall River, Mass.

Mrs. Cinderella M. Gregory (82), at Geneva, N. Y.

James P. Holliday, of Newbern, Marion County, Ia.

Mrs. H. M. Warrant died June 16, 1909, aged seventy-nine years.

Mrs. Ellen H. Badgley, of Oakley, Mich., went to her heavenly home February 27, 1910.

Mrs. Mary A. Dillingham, of Calhan, Col., passed to her Redeemer on the 24th of December, 1909.

Mrs. Margaret Spence Purnell, January 6, 1910, in the forty-sixth year of her age, at Snow Hill, Md.

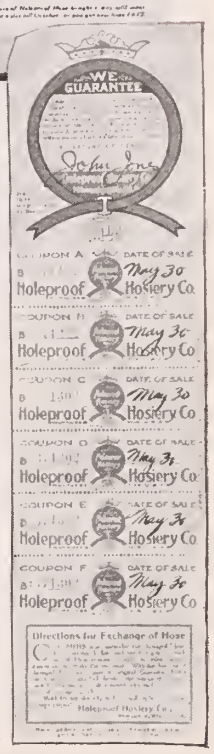
William B. Kay, born in Durham, England, 1835; died at Newton, Ia., April 23. A reader of this paper for twenty years.

Mrs. Eliza Howard Cooke, of Northampton, Mass., for over twenty-five years a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Davis died April 10, 1910, at Hamilton Square, N. J., aged eighty-two years. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church for sixty years and a constant reader of this paper.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 552, and write them for full information.

Get Holeproof Hose—



Six Pairs Guaranteed Six Months

You have made up your mind to try "Holeproof" some day—why not to-day?

Think of the trouble you save when you have six pairs of hose always whole, ready to put on when you need a whole pair right away. Hose that wear out are a bother. There is no need now for such inconvenience. Get "Holeproof" to-day.

The Softest, Finest Hose on the Market

We spend to make "Holeproof" four times what it costs to produce common hose.

Our yarn—silky—soft and pliable—costs us an average of 70c per lb. It is made from Egyptian and Sea Island Cotton. We could buy other yarns at a saving of 30c per lb.

But the hose would be bulky, heavy and hot, while "Holeproof" are trim looking, light weight and cool.

There are 32 years of hose-making experience knit into each pair of Holeproof Hose.

All the Latest Colors

"Holeproof" are made in all the most stylish colors and lightest weights for summer wear.

The colors are also guaranteed.

We spend $33,000 a year simply to see that each pair of hose we turn out is perfection.

That guarantees to you a good pair of hose every time you buy "Holeproof."

There's only one thing to look out for—see that you get the genuine.

Look for the trade-mark below—on the toe of each pair.

All imitations are sold as "Holeproof."

You don't want an inferior make—you want Holeproof Hose.

Are Your Hose Insured?

And Get This Guarantee

The genuine Holeproof Hose are sold in your town. We'll tell you the dealers' names on request, or we'll ship direct where we have no dealer, charges prepaid, on receipt of remittance.

Six pairs of men's hose sell for $1.50 ($2.00 for the extra light weights and $3.00 for the mercerized).

Six pairs of women's sell for $2.00 ($3.00 for the mercerized).

Six pairs of children's sell for $2.00. Three pairs of men's silk hose, guaranteed 3 months, $2.00.

Write for free book, "How to Make Your Feet Happy."

HOLEPROOF HOSIERY CO.,
470 Fourth Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

[54]

Reg. U. S. Pat Office, 1906

FAMOUS
Holeproof Hosiery
FOR MEN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Are you sure that your drinking-water is germ-free?

The finest filtration plant in the world can't prevent bacteria from entering your home through leaky water mains—and even the clearest well-water may contain germs.

"The Filter that Filters"

To know that your drinking-water is absolutely germ-free, filter it right in your home, through the "Fulper" Stone of the

FULPER Germ-proof Filter
and Cooler Combined

The "Fulper" Stone is a natural stone, treated by an exclusive process—germs and impurities are held on the surface—not in the pores—and are easily removed.

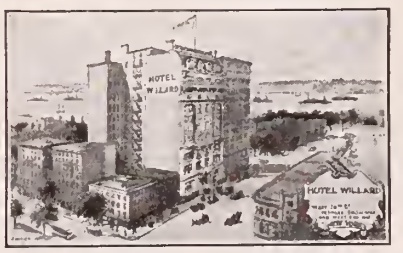
The "Fulper" is made in two parts, of glazed stoneware—sanitary, and easily kept clean. Family size, $3.85; separate ice chamber, 55 cents. If your dealer hasn't the "Fulper," send the money to us, with his name, and we will see that you are supplied.

Our Free Book, "Nature's Laboratory," containing tests by an eminent bacteriologist and demonstrating the efficiency of the "Fulper," furnished free with each filter.

FULPER POTTERY CO., 27 Main Street,
Founded 1805 Flemington, N. J.

The HOTEL WILLARD

256 West Seventy Sixth Street near Broadway and Riverside Drive



An ideal home for visitors to New York desiring the quiet of a refined neighborhood. ¶ It overlooks the beautiful Hudson, and is in the finest residential district. ¶ The dining room is conducted on both the American and European plan and there is no bar. ¶ The rooms are large, cool, airy and delightful.

Attractive special rates are made from June 1st to September 1st. Room with bath, $1.50 and up. Parlor, bedroom and bath, $2.00 and up. Literature upon request.

ARTHUR T. HARDY, Manager

The Up-to-Date Freezer
Assembled in Fifteen Seconds

The Alaska has more improvements than any other freezer made. It is the freezer you should have in your home. Its a pleasure, not a task, to make delicious ice cream with the Alaska.

A child can put it together; it is simple and easy to operate and has nothing to catch your clothing or pinch your fingers.

Then there is the wonderful dasher — a feature of the Alaska. The dasher floats are shaped like slotted mixing spoons, which beat the cream as if by hand, and make it smooth, mellow and delicious. This, too, in from two to four minutes.

The "Alaska" is durable. It won't rack itself to pieces in a season like some kinds. It is hygienic. It will not rust, as all outside metal parts are galvanized. The tub is waterproof.

If your dealer cannot sell you the Alaska we will send two-quart size, prepaid, anywhere in U. S., on receipt of $2.00, but ask your dealer first.

Send for "Alaska Frozen Desserts."

THE ALASKA FREEZER COMPANY
Dept. 4, Winchendon, Mass.
Canadian Agents, KEMP MFG. CO.
Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg

YOUR GARDEN SHOULD HAVE

Blue Roses

(Yale Blue)

$1 WE ARE introducing this beautiful color for which we have waited centuries. Healthy, living, perfectly hardy plants, grown and shipped in flower pots. Sent, prepaid, on receipt of $1.00. Will bear in abundance year after year.

$1,000 Reward for proof of fraud.

MT. AIRY ROSE CO., Established 1868
Importers and Introducers
Over 100 Acres. 20,000 feet of glass.
Send for Catalog C
MT. AIRY, - - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

WHILE WAITING

Instead of keeping unemployed the funds you expect to have use for later, let them bear earnings at 5 per cent, until such time as you are ready for them. We can handle your temporary investments as profitably for you as more permanent accounts. Your funds may be deposited or withdrawn on any date. Earnings credited for full time.

5% A YEAR

Established 17 years and conducted under N.Y. Banking Dept. Supervision. Our record is open to public examination in their files.

Assets over - $2,000,000
Surplus and Profits, 150,000

Write for Booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings and Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d St. and Broadway, New York

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

CULTURED LADY, ten years experience church kindergarten work, desires position, public or private. Miss M. C. Tripler, Bernardsville, N. J.

What Kind of a Soul is Yours?*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

THE Bible is a revelation of human nature as well as of divine nature. The parable of the sower, dividing all men into four groups, is anticipated in Genesis, where we have four grand divisions of the whole human race in Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Esau. The census men have recorded millions of our people in their recent rounds, and they seemed to be of infinite variety, differing in height, weight, color, language, intelligence, condition, character; but all of them might have been put down under four heads as Abrahams, Isaacs, Jacobs and Esaus.

In every nation there are a few heroic, aggressive Abrahams, who take the lead in all good things. They go West and build new empires. They have human faults, but good predominates. They are the good ground. Everywhere there are many more quiet Isaacs, who do little harm and little good—shallow ground. Everywhere Jacobs are also numerous, in whom thorns struggle with the wheat, greed with conscience; in whom, after much of struggle, the good triumphs. They love money, but give it away on principle, saying: "Now squirm, old nature." More numerous everywhere are the Esaus, who care only for present indulgences, and sacrifice to appetites and passions their birthright of health and self-respect. They would "sell out heaven for something warm." These are the wayside soil, where the seed of truth gets no root at all. The ravens of thoughtlessness steal it away. Let every one test his own soul with the question: "Am I in my most predominant tendencies growing into an Abraham? Or an Isaac? Or a Jacob? Or an Esau?" Thank God, our tendencies can be resisted and overcome and a Jacob, meaning "supplanter," by prayer and the vision of God, may become Israel, a prince with God.

In Christ's parable we have again the searching picture of four kinds of soils, that is, four kinds of souls, whose real nature is revealed by the way they receive any new truth that the prophets of religion and reform go forth to sow. Not only Jesus and Paul, but Luther and Wesley and Knox, all found the majority to whom they spoke indifferent, or interested only a little, and in many hearts their message was choked by devotion to fame or fashion. But they all found their good ground and realized the beatitude: "Blessed are ye that sow."

It is recorded that on one occasion a half drunken man presented himself to John Wesley and said: "I am one of your converts." "Surely you are not one of God's converts," was the substance of Wesley's reply. His soil was wayside, or shallow, or thorny soil; not the good ground described in the golden text, which "receives with meekness the implanted Word that is able to save our souls." Paul seemed to have made a convert of Simon, the sorcerer (Acts 8: 9-13, 19-24), but presently it turned out he was only seeking the Holy Spirit as a new sorcery that would fill his pocket. He was only wayside soil that had really not received the seed at all.

Dr. Joseph Parker has said: "This parable of the sower and the seed belongs to every kingdom that is true. It belongs to the kingdom of knowledge. No man ever yet went forth to teach mankind letters, philosophy, science of any sort, but came home a living exemplification of this very parable. This is not a priest's conundrum, this is not an ecclesiastical enigma to be answered only by ecclesiastical genius. This is the world's experience in all its teachers, schools, wise propagations and healthy progress. Therefore it is true at the other end, because it is true at the end with which we ourselves are minutely and practically familiar. Is there any man here who ever undertook to conduct in his country a great reform? Any man who has been interested in the education of the people from great vices, in the enlightenment and general progress of society, call himself what he pleases, I will give him his report in the very words of this parable, and he will say, reading the parable as a report: 'This exactly represents my own experience as a propagandist of wise ideas, and as an educator of the people.' There is nothing, therefore, magical here; the kingdom of heaven claims no more than any other kingdom, except in so far as itself is more. All the boats go on the same sea, but some draw more water than others. Herein no ghostly claim is set up; there is no mystery, or magic, or curious wand waving in this strong human teaching. The fate of the upper kingdom is the fate of every kingdom that is good. It goes forth with risks and experiments, and comes back with disappointments and satisfactions. Read your Bibles in the light of this suggestion and the old Book will flame with a new glory."

The Sower Goes Forth to Sow

The Oriental custom is to carry the seed in a bag on the back of a horse or mule, the bag being full of holes through which the grain is shaken out by the walking of the animal. This will account for the indiscriminate sowing on the highway, on the rocky places and in thorn patches. Those who sow the word of God must take conditions as they find them, and sow the seed on all grounds. But they must not leave the seed to itself to live or die as it may happen. It is their mission not only to sow the seed, but to modify or eliminate unfavorable conditions for growth. In this they differ from the Oriental sower of the field, for once his seed is planted there is little or nothing he can do to make a more favorable environment; he should have done that before he began his planting, as we are accustomed to see the sowers in our country do; fencing their land about, breaking up the paths that may have been made across the field, digging up the stones and casting them on one side, and burning the thorns or other noxious weeds. But Sunday School teachers may not, can not work in a similar way; it is their function to modify the soil with the seed already in.

How to Sow

Sow early. A child's heart is best for the sowing, because, like some garden spots, it has not for years been given over to wrong activity — the weeds and thorns of sin. It will, therefore, be in better condition for bearing the hundredfold. And if we sow early, there will be long years of fruitfulness with which to bless the world.

Be kind; your smile can turn to priceless gems
Sad tears that in the eyes of others start;
Sweet speech from you can make the angels sing:
Your little hand can fill an empty heart.

Be good; and the whole world shall better be
For one small goodness gladly given to God.
Be beautiful; no flower the same as you
Springs sunward from earth's breast to deck the sod.

Love all you can; for I am old and know
That love alone in all the world abides;
Song, skill, life, fail; but on the wings of God
Love through the air we breathe forever rides.

Sow late. Because of the immortal fire that burns in a human soul it is "never too late to mend." Charles

Continued on next page

* International Sunday School Lesson for June 19, 1910. The Parable of the Sower. Matt. 13: 1-9; 18-23. GOLDEN TEXT: "Wherefore putting away all filthiness and overflowing of wickedness, receive with meekness the implanted word, which is able to save your souls." James 1:21.

Sectional View Percolator Urn Style

This Percolator will make delicious hot coffee from Cold Water
in about the same time that others take with hot water.
It is a
Manning-Bowman
Circulating Coffee Percolator
(Patented)
Made in both Urn and Coffee Pot Style

Manning-Bowman Percolators make coffee quickly from cold water—quick and equally well starting with hot water—while their simple construction makes them very easily kept clean.

Pot style for use on Manning-Bowman Alcohol Gas Stove or kitchen range. Made in over a hundred designs. Sold by leading dealers.

Write for Free Recipe Book and Catalogue "F-10".
MANNING, BOWMAN & CO., MERIDEN, CONN.

Also makers of Manning-Bowman Quality Chafing Dishes, Accessories, and the "Eclipse" Bread Mixers.

No. 8392 Percolator on No. 60 Alcohol Gas Stove

CHRISTIAN HERALD BOND BOOK

WE have received so many requests for copies of the financial articles which have been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, that we have thought it wise to preserve them in pamphlet form, for the convenience of readers who may wish to secure a complete set.

Any reader may secure a copy of this useful booklet without charge, by forwarding 4c. in stamps to cover postage.

Address CHRISTIAN HERALD
Dept. 96. Bible House, New York

VACUUM WASHER 30 DAY TRIAL

To prove to every reader of this magazine that she can wash clothes with least work and wear with

Syracuse "EASY" Washer

we will ship one on 30 days' trial and pay freight both ways if you do not find it far better than any you ever tried. Easy pumping motion. Water heated in rust-proof tub. Cleanses laces, clothes, carpets. Write for free booklet, valuable recipes and trial offer.

DODGE & ZUILL
535 M Dillaye Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.
Toronto Branch, 92 Olive Ave., L. G. Beebe, Mgr.

Sweetest Music in the World

The sweetest toned self-playing instrument in the world. Not a phonograph. Sent anywhere on

10 days Free Trial MIRA MUSIC BOX

Affords an endless variety of music, popular hits, the old-time melodies and hymns. Write for free trial offer and catalog.

JACOT MUSIC BOX
24 W. 35th St., New York

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attractsandkills flies. Neat, clean, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers, or sent prepaid for 20 cts. HAROLD SOBS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, N. Y.

PATENTS that PROTECT

Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps. R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D.C., Dept. 36, Est. 1869

HOME DESIRED for obedient, willing boy, 13 years old, parents dead. Out of town preferred. Send application and references to Treas. Big Brothers Society, 1 Madison Ave., New York City

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

agner, author of The Simple Life, ys: "To grow old is to become free d large." It will renew the youth any old person to become a follower the Lord Jesus Christ. It will ake him die young at eighty, even nety years of age, while at forty, thout Christ, he might have died old. e have a cradle roll at one end of our nday Schools, why not have a class octogenarians at the other end? e believe that old people can learn e Bible better than they can learn y other book, because it is built on e immortal principle of truth. There in the Book what corresponds with e soul. It is related of George Pea-dy, the philanthropist, that when he as quite an old man, sitting in his fice in London one day, a boy brought n a New Testament. The old man, oking up, said: "My boy, you carry at book easily in your youth, but hen you are as old as I am, it must rry you." We are told that Cato gan the study of Greek at eighty ars of age. Arnauld, the theologian d sage, translated Josephus in his ghtieth year. Chevreul, the great ench scientist, was keen and busy til the time of his death at one hun-ed and three years of age. But we ed not look alone to the rolls of fame r hopeful, useful old age. "The path truth, higher living, truer develop-nt in every phase of life is never ut from the individual until he ses it for himself."

Sow ever. Use the daily Bible, not e Sunday Bible, nor the birthday ble, nor the wedding Bible, nor the neral Bible, when births, weddings funerals are to be recorded. The ble is the best kind of a home com-nion. It is the book for the bed-om, for the dining-room, for the ing-room, for the library and for the rlor, even if the only use made of it the last-named room is to have it upon a table by itself in an elegant tion. Even so it will be planted in ne hearts simply by being a re-nder of God's truth.

"If you have the blues, read the enty-seventh Psalm. If your pocket-ok is empty, read the thirty-seventh alm. If people seem unkind, read e fifteenth chapter of John. If you e discouraged about your work, read e one hundred and twenty-sixth alm. If you are 'all out of sorts,' d the twelfth chapter of Hebrews. you are losing confidence in men, d the thirteenth chapter of I. Co-nthians. If you can't have your n way in everything, read the third apter of James."

Sow the Best

It is said that when Henry M. anley started on his expedition to find Livingstone in Africa, he took in his baggage a large collection of books, but as the number of his men was lessened by death and otherwise, the books had one by one to be left by the wayside, until finally, when three hundred miles from the ocean, he had only the Bible, Shakespeare, Carlyle's Sartor Resartus, Norie's Navigation, and the Nautical Almanac. At Zinga, the Shakespeare was abandoned and afterwards Norie, then the Almanac, then Sartor Resartus, only the Bible going through to the end.

Sow in Faith

All sowing is in faith; any kind of a seed looks unpromising. It is such a mite compared with what it is expected to produce. The brilliant ruby or emerald looks a great deal more capable of doing something grand, but it is dead, and the seed is alive! We have God's promise that the seed of his Word shall not return unto him void. We have nothing to do with what it shall be, but only with the planting! Because the results are with God. We have no reason even to be discouraged in our Bible teaching. Some years ago an old man died at the age of one hundred and sixteen years. When he was about sixteen years old he heard a sermon that he never forgot. He did not think of it much at the time, and he grew up without the fear of God and lived a sinful life. But seventy-four years afterwards, when he was ninety years old, something brought to his mind the sermon he had heard in his youth. It was fresh in his memory still, and he gave his heart to God, and for the twenty-six years more that he lived he was an earnest Christian. Let us think the pastor who preached the sermon had faith to believe that the salvation of some soul would be the result of his effort. But he did not know about it until he met his convert in heaven! Dr. Bickersteth in his grand poem "Yesterday, To-day and Forever," speaks about a throng of the sanctified who gathered about a pastor who had just reached the heavenly land and they told him how they had been brought there by his words and by his unconscious influence. Heaven contains much such treasure for faithful Sunday School teachers.

Sow thou the seeds of better deed and thought—
Light other lamps while yet thy light is beaming,
The time is short.

Sunday School teachers will find in this parable much to give them a practical view of their work, because the mental and moral proclivities of their scholars correspond to the four kinds of soil. Particularly will this be found to be the case in classes of boys.

SUBSCRIBERS OF RECORD

WE have received a number of letters from subscribers who do not seem to understand the exact meaning of the words "subscriber of record" which is used in our Guarantee.

As a matter of fact it is simply the customary expression used by publishers i denominating a subscriber whose name is in good standing on the books of a blication. However, we do not want our subscribers to assume that we would ke advantage of a technicality such as might be implied from our use of this pression.

Our Guarantee is meant to protect our readers from fraud purely and mply. It is published more in the form of an assurance that we use every ssible effort to exclude fraudulent advertisers from admission to our adver-ting columns in the first place, than it is to assure them that if they are frauded, we will make good the amount. Nevertheless this is our intention, hich we will live up to not only in letter, but in spirit, and so we hope none of r readers will detect what might seem to be an ambiguous meaning in our Garantee, which is:

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, ho must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the dvertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date f the appearance of the advertisement.

The Howard Watch

WHEN you hear someone criticise the railroads, just remind him that our American roads are the best and safest in the world. They employ the most intelligent men and have them use the finest watch—the HOWARD.

What do you think, for instance, of a road that, over a period of ten years, carried nearly two hundred million passengers without a single one killed as the result of a train accident; and, that during the three worst months of last winter, had a punctuality record of 94⅞% for its inbound train service?

That road—the Lackawanna—is one of the 180 railroads that officially adopted the HOWARD Watch for their time-inspection service.

Lives depend on the accuracy of trainmen's watches, and the best is not too good for the American railroad man.

A HOWARD is always worth what you pay for it.

The price of each HOWARD is fixed at the factory and a printed ticket attached—from the 17-jewel (double-roller escapement) in a "Jas. Boss" or "Crescent" gold-filled case at $40 to the 23-jewel in a 14-k. solid gold case at $150.

Not every jeweler can sell you a HOWARD Watch. Find the HOWARD Jeweler in your town and talk to him. He is a good man to know. Drop us a postal card, Dept. W, and we will send you a HOWARD book of value to the watch buyer.

E. HOWARD WATCH WORKS
BOSTON, MASS.

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD. Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

Save Steps between kitchen and dining room. One trip with Wheel Tray sets table. Another clears it. Stands beside table for serving. Beside sink while washing dishes. Price $10, exp. paid. Circular WHEEL TRAY CO., 435C West 61st Place, Chicago, Ill.

FEED CHILDREN

On Properly Selected Food. It Pays Big Dividends.

If parents will give just a little intelligent thought to the feeding of their children, the difference in the health of the little folks will pay, many times over, for the small trouble.

A mother writes saying: "Our children are all so much better and stronger than they ever were before we made a change in the character of the food. We have quit using potatoes three times a day with coffee and so much meat.

"Now we give the little folks some fruit, either fresh, stewed, or canned, some Grape-Nuts with cream, occasionally some soft-boiled eggs, and some Postum for breakfast and supper. Then for dinner they have some meat and vegetables.

"It would be hard to realize the change in the children, they have grown so sturdy and strong, and we attribute this change to the food elements that, I understand, exist in Grape-Nuts and Postum.

"A short time ago my baby was teething and had a great deal of stomach and bowel trouble. Nothing seemed to agree with him until I tried Grape-Nuts softened and mixed with rich milk, and he improved rapidly and got sturdy and well."

Read "The Road to Wellville," found in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ENDURING
AS
THE PYRAMIDS IN MEMORIAM
TO PERPETUATE THE MEMORY OF THOSE LOVED AND HONORED, OUR EVERLASTING MONUMENTS ARE PARTICULARLY APPROPRIATE * MORE BEAUTIFUL THAN MARBLE * MODERATE IN COST * MADE IN A WIDE RANGE OF SIZES AND DESIGNS * DELIVERED ANYWHERE *
WRITE FOR DESIGNS, DESCRIPTIONS AND PRICES * STATE APPROXIMATE SIZE OR VALUE *
REPRESENTATIVES WANTED IN EVERY COMMUNITY.
MONUMENTAL BRONZE COMPANY.
355 A HOWARD AVENUE-BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

For Home Baked Beans and Boston Brown Bread, as in all cooking where sweetening is required, use—

Karo

CORN SYRUP

Karo is a pure sweet that blends naturally with other foods. A tablespoonful to every half-pint beans, poured over after cooking and before baking, gives a rich brown and a delicious flavor.

Eat it on	Use it for
Griddle Cakes	Ginger Bread
Hot Biscuit	Cookies
Waffles	Candy

Send a post card for the Karo Cook Book fifty pages including thirty perfect recipes for home candy making. Write today—the book is free.

Corn Products Refining Co.,
Dept. O. NEW YORK P. O. Box 161

"BRECO" Freight Prepaid

Rubber Roofing Don't think of using any kind of roofing till you test sample of old reliable Guaranteed "BRECO." Why pay more? Investigate, and you will order here today.

BOOK AND SAMPLE Free

Book proves and shows testimonials of Breco Service. Waterproof and fire-resisting qualities. Cement and nails free. Write today.

The Breese Bros. Co.
Roofing Dept. 77. Cincinnati, O.

Western boundary line Minn., Iowa, Missouri, north of south line of Tenn., 100 lbs. or more.

35-lb. Roll	1-Ply	$1.36
45-lb. Roll	2-Ply	1.86
55-lb. Roll	3-Ply	2.26

Each Roll 108 Sq. Feet

Hunyadi János

Natural Laxative Water

Recommended by Physicians
Refuse Substitutes
Best remedy for

CONSTIPATION

AT ALL DRUGGISTS

POST CARDS

10 Birthday, 10c. | 10 Best Wishes & Greetings, 10c.
10 Rose, 10c. | 10 Fourth of July, 10c.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

BEEKEEPING its pleasures and profits, is the theme of that excellent and handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on trial for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page book on bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name this paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, Ohio

SPEND $6.50=GET A MODERN BATHROOM!

At Last! Modern bathing facilities without running water, water works or plumbing. New invention solves problem. Costs but $6.50 complete with heater---yet actually gives bathing facilities.

EQUAL TO MOST LAVISHLY EQUIPPED BATHROOM

Sectional View

Unlike anything you've ever heard of. Used wherever water exists in any room, any part of the house. So energizes and distributes water that very little does more than tub-full old way. Combines in one bath, one operation, one cost, the properties of four baths---cleansing, friction, massage and shower, plus shampoo. Hot or cold---any temperature---any time --- any place. Adapted for all members of the family --- no difference. One Texas user writes: "Children cry for it." Makes bathing 5 minute operation---longer if preferred---every minute a pleasure. Cleanses and operates almost automatically. No tubs, bowls or buckets to fill---no washrags, cloths or sponges---no dirt, odor, splashing, or muss. Banishes drudgery before, during, and after bathing.

See how simple, easy, convenient: To bathe, just do this --- place self-heating fountain on wall---fill with water---touch a match, turn regulator---that's all. Thereafter, it energizes and works automatically. Just think! Only clean, running, energized water touches body---no immersion---no using same water twice. What a pleasure---what a bath---what a boon to humanity! All hardship, drudgery, annoyance, wiped out. Could anything be more perfect? Sounds too good to be true, yet it's no experiment. Over 100,000 sold. USED BY U. S. GOVERNMENT, famous Battle Creek Sanitarium, and other celebrated authorities. Guaranteed by a $50,000. house. Not sold in stores. Sent anywhere. Send no money, but do investigate. Let us prove these claims---refer you to nearby users. Get our personal trial offer, catalogue, testimonials---all free. Just risk 1 cent---a postal---to get acquainted.

PRAISED BY THOUSANDS OF DELIGHTED USERS

J. Phar, Mont., writes: "Makes a modern house oo the farm. Great gift to mankind." Mrs. Sutton, Ky.: "Splendid! So easy to bathe the children." G. Chase, N. Y., "After two years' use, I consider it a Godsend." Mrs. McAlpioe, N. Y., "Gives advaotage of bathroom in aoy part of house." B. Sholtns, Mich., "So simple, easy; time-saver. 5 minute bath more thorough thao half-hour old way." J. Steward, Okla., "Better than a bathroom. Can take any kind of bath." Dr. Skidmore, Miss., "Far superior to tub. Would'nt take $25 for mine." Wm. Colden, N. Y., "If I were compelled to choose between having a bathroom and the Alleo, would take the Allen Apparatus."

A WINNER FOR AGENTS Free Sample to Agents

Cashman writes: "A man who can't sell your goods couldn't sell bread in a famioe. Send 48 more. "Stoneman: "Best thing I ever sold. Not one complaint from 2,000 customers." Lodewick: It's great. Sells on sight." McDaniels: "Everybody wants one. Fastest sellers ever saw." Rogers: "Beats loaning mooey at 10% a month. Selling baths got me one piece of property." Hart: "Cao't keep from selling it if properly demonstrated. Appeals to all."

We want more sales ageots, men or women, at home or traveling, all or spare time. Let us submit our high grade offer; cash or credit plan; exclusive territory; sworn-to proofs of snccess never before equalled by ageots.

INVESTIGATE ANYWAY

THE ALLEN MFG. CO., - - 1958 ALLEN BLDG., TOLEDO, OHIO

Our Country's Moral Crisis

THERE never was a time since the dawn of history when a line of demarcation was more accurately drawn than at present, when right and wrong, virtue and immorality, truth and falsehood, love and hate are met squarely face to face, and when the church of God and the legalized liquor traffic are standing on diametrically opposite ground.

There is a prohibition wave gradually but firmly spreading over our country — an omen denoting an awakening of Christian people to crush an institution from which so much misery and sin is produced.

It is the duty of the church of the living God to annihilate this diabolic, life-destroying, crime-producing, woe-begotten liquor producing and consuming evil.

The liquor traffic is producing so much harm, corruption and suffering that it positively has no right to exist, and it is high time that we, a Christian and God-fearing people, called a halt to it.

It is a pertinent question: Is the Church right and the liquor traffic wrong? We have no right to condemn, no excuse to make, no evasion to allege, no apology to present, no compromise to enter, nor have we a right to remain silent. Vast sums of money are annually spent to pay the hordes of officers who preside over our criminal institutions, to support the criminal inmates of our prisons and our penitentiaries, resulting from our indulgence in liquor.

J. P. F. Brunner

Our "money kings" should donate large sums of money to establish a powerful crusade against this evil, tending to crowd our hospitals, our almshouses, our prisons and our asylums.

Sad it is, indeed, that those who are at the head of the national government are conniving at this awful calamity, instead of enacting laws to suppress it. It is annually licensing hundreds and thousands of saloons to foster this atrociously wicked business.

"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and maketh him drunk also." Krumsville, Pa. J. P. F. BRUNNI

TEMPERANCE NOTES

Saloons Out of Business

Grant County, Ind., went "dry" one year ago. The Muncie Star speaks loudly in favor of no saloons. The saloons in this county are now all out of business, and our justices of peace seem likely to be so too. A few years ago when saloons were so thick all over our county, there were about 3,000 arrests per year, and that for 30,000 inhabitants, according to the sheriff's books. Eighty per cent. was caused by drinking. Hope the result will be as good in other localities.

MRS. ANGELINE PEARSON.

. . .

Results of Local Option

Mrs. Ida Bucknell, Sturgis, Mich., writes: "We have enjoyed local option in this county for nearly two years. We have a 'wet' county adjoining on the north where a number of our men and boys go occasionally to get liquor. We have some 'blind pigs'—it is said by some. We have also officers who favor the liquor interest by failing to enforce the law. Yet, notwithstanding all these obstacles, the closing of the saloons has been a great benefit. The chief of these are the comfort, peace and happiness that have come to many homes, for the husbands and fathers now spend their evenings there, instead of at the open saloon, where they used to drink and play cards."

. . .

Temperance in England

Miss Helen Reed, of London, England, sends an account of a remarkable temperance movement in Heckington, Lincolnshire. The Workmen's Temperance League was started by men who pledged themselves not to touch intoxicating liquor for twelve months, in order to mark their resentment of the persecution to which they had been subjected in the recent election by the liquor element. The League soon became a spontaneous temperance revival, inspired not by political animus, but by the hope of a new way of life. One Sunday it was suggested that the League should attend divine service. The suggestion was quickly taken up. Between eighty and ninety men assembled in the afternoon on the village green and walked in procession to the parish church, where their presence was commented upon by the Rural Dean in his sermon. In the evening they went in a body to the Wesleyan chapel.

. . .

How One Town Went Dry

Mrs. P. D. Hawkins, Newburg, Mo., writes: "We have filed a number of petitions asking for State prohibition. Sentiment has changed here very much. I don't think names for a saloon could be obtained now. A number of names, not taxpayers, were taken from or crossed out of saloon petitions recently. One saloon that was open for twenty-six years was closed several weeks ago, when the man who owned it passed away. Two other parties were interested in obtaining petitions for saloons. Our W. C. T. U. circulated a paper asking assessed taxpaying citizens to sign it, thus obtaining a promise not to sign any petition for a saloon. After the two saloon petitions were filed with the County Clerk we presented remonstrances against both, and obtained names of the majority of taxpaying citizens. Last week court met. We had some good townsmen back of us, doing all they could to help—Mr. J. Sterling, Mr. J. H. Huckins, railroad roundhouse foreman, and others. Mr. F. L. Kitchell, town assessor and collector, was especially helpful. Our lawyers, Shubert, of Richland, and Jones, of Rolla, are God-fearing temperance men. Now we have a dry town, but this is only a beginning."

"SAVE-THE-HORSE" SPAVIN CURE

REG. TRADE MARK

CONSUMERS ICE AND COLD STORAGE CO.
El Paso, Texas, March 17, 1910. In regard to black mare beguided by your advice. Some time ago I tried "Save-The-Horse" on another mare with large windpuffs on hind legs just above ankle; these were hard and she was too lame to drive. One bottle fixed her alright and she worked all summer on ice wagon and never showed a sign of lameness. JOHN SCHUH.

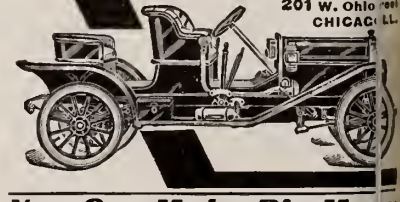
WILLOW BROOK STOCK FARM
Custar, Ohio, March 15, 1910. I take pleasure in reporting cure of Bowed Tendon on the mare. She was a confirmed cripple for nearly two years. It effected a complete cure, and the Troy Chemical Co. fulfilled every promise they made me. "Save-The-Horse" has no equal. J. F. NOBLE, Prop. Willow Brook Stock Farm.

SALIDA GRANITE COMPANY
Capital Stock, $200,000. Post Office Box 633
Salida, Colo. Jan. 10, 1910. Enclosed $5, send us another bottle of "Save-The-Horse." We used the first bottle on a horse that had a side bone, and will say that your medicine has done wonders; cannot praise it too highly. THE SALIDA GRANITE CO.

$5.00 a bottle, with legal written guarantee or contract. Send for copy, booklet and letters from business men and trainers on every kind of case. Permanently cures Spavin, Thoroughpio, Ringbone (except Low Ringbone), Curb, Splint, Capped Hock, Windpuff, Shoe Boil, Injured Tendons and all Lameness. No scar or loss of hair. Horse works as usual. Dealers or Express Paid.
Troy Chemical Co., 39 Commercial Ave., Binghamton, N. Y.

GET OUR BOOK FIRST
—then decide. Get all facts and figures. Know how all styles and prices. 6 to choose from ($900 to $3,000 (illustrated here) to $1,750. Speed, style, reliability and durability—all in each 1910 Black-Crow for price—or value. Don't only $1,000. Biggest car buy till you write us. You'll admit we offer greatest automobile value in America. Complete catalog—description sent promptly.

Black Manufacturing Co.
201 W. Ohio Street
CHICAGO, ILL.



You Can Make Big Money
We have a from-factory-to-consumer proposition for men and men agents that is high-class—interesting—easy to handle and extremely profitable. Many of our agents are making $5,000.00 per year, and only a little of their time required. We supply you with goods on consignment and full information how to make sales. We co-operate with you from start to finish. This proposition is not sold through dealers. You can undersell them and deal with better goods than the dealer handles, and make good money.
Write to-day for full information and territory.
We are allotting territories right now, so kindly write to-day before we give some one else your territory.
Tiger Knitting Mills, 524 Commerce St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The "Basket Washing Machine," Only $3.50
Weighs 17 lbs. Sanitary. Any child can operate. Will do a washing in six minutes. Guaranteed to do the work of any high priced machine. Endorsed by Mayor Tunnicliffe. Write 415 South Wood Street, Fremont, Ohio

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Christ's Yoke*

N a recent eloquent sermon, Dr. Joseph Dunn Burrell dwelt upon he penalties and wretchedness of sin. ften it cuts a man off entirely from ny friendship with his fellowmen. If e is detected in a breach of the law, e is imprisoned and is thus branded or life. If he have good relatives, he as the racking consciousness that he causing them pain, perhaps heart-reak. He is likely in any case to ffer the supreme agonies of remorse, ne of the most poignant of earth's iseries.

The yoke of sin is surely the heaviest urden that a soul can bear.

Christ came to offer to us the yoke his service — an easy yoke and a ght burden compared with that of sin. he understanding soul will accept it stantly. The dull soul, which does ot appreciate the difference between he two yokes, may wait longer—may en reject the light yoke for the eavy one.

The load of sin rested on the shoul-rs of Bunyan's Pilgrim. He "did n with great difficulty because of is load on his back."

"At length he came to a place some-hat ascending," says the quaint old ronicle, "and upon that place stood cross, and a little below, in the bot-m, a sepulchre. So I saw in my eam, that just as Christian came up ith the cross, his burden loosed from f his shoulders and began to tumble, nd so continued to do till it came to e mouth of the sepulchre, where it ll in, and I saw it no more.

"Then was Christian glad and light-me, and said with a merry heart, 'He ath given me rest by his sorrow and fe by his death.'"

Thus came to this true type of the hristian of all ages, the conscious-ss of the slight weight of Christ's ke compared with that of sin.

"It is the beautiful work of Chris-anity," says Henry Drummond, verywhere to adjust the burden of fe to those who bear it, and it to em. It has a perfectly miraculous ft of healing.

"Did you ever stop to ask what a ke is really for? Is it to be a burden the animal which wears it? It is st the opposite. It is to make its rden light. Attached to the oxen any other way than by a yoke, the ow would be intolerable. Worked means of a yoke, it is light."

Christ sends us loss—loss of friends, position, of fortune. With this mes humiliation—bitter but whole-me. How else can one, proud-hearted nd vain as we usually are, learn to be mble?

We disobey him—and then comes the ing of punishment. It is hard to ar, but the true Christian sees in it t the just penalty of wandering, and us he learns the cardinal virtue of edience.

In many cases, our affliction awakens mpathy in others. Then love and ndness warm our hearts where be-re they were cold. Thus we are ught the holy lessons of brother-od in which the great lesson of God's therhood is so fully involved.

By these methods, the yoke of Christ ads us, since it yokes us with him, to gher and higher levels of character d of spirituality.

One of our poets has voiced the me idea in another and very beauti-l figure. Christ not only turns the rden of sin into one that is light, but utterly alters the fabric of life.

> The world sits at the feet of Christ,
> Unknowing, blind and unconsoled:
> It yet shall touch His garment's fold,
> And feel the heavenly Alchemist
> Transform its very dust to gold.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 19. TEXT: Matt. 11:25-30.

The Christian's Secret*

SOMETIMES we find that though we may have lived many years with a person, thinking all the time that we understood his motives and his ideals, we really do not know him. Some sudden revelation may come to us of his character. A deep affliction, the responsibilities of a new position, the acquirement of wealth, any one of these may tear off the shell from some part of his inner nature and a trait hitherto unsuspected may be revealed.

This may surprise the man himself quite as much as others. Few of us fully know ourselves.

The character of our Lord may be outlined by any careful student of the Scriptures; but before he can fully comprehend that ineffable nobility and beauty—as far as it is given to mortals so to do—the love and reverence of the true follower must be developed in his heart. As we cannot fully understand the heart of a man until we love him, so we cannot understand the heart of God until we love him. And it would seem to be impossible to contemplate the works of God and his dealings with ourselves without feeling a spontaneous upspringing in our hearts of filial affection toward him.

Dr. Ward, in his noble address upon "The Heart of Christianity," defines the chief differences between Judaism and Christianity as depending largely upon this transcendent fact of love.

"As a theology," he says, "Christianity's first and great belief is in one God, whose primary quality is love. Judaism had discovered the oneness of God and most of his natural attributes, his power and his wisdom, and even his moral attributes of justice and holiness; but it had not discovered love as his crowning quality. It made him a jealous God, a national God. Christianity makes him the Father of all creatures. Its prayer to God is to 'Our Father.' It makes him the Father not of a family or a race, but of all men. It gives God no choice of loving. He must love. It is his essential nature.

"And Christianity puts every man under obligations to love. 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' This gives us the lesson of the brotherhood of man. If God is our Father, then we are all brethren."

So that the deep secret of the Lord is in his love. We can forever go on testing it—searching it—but never shall we come to the end of it.

"Buddhism does not teach this doctrine of love, nor did Plato or Cicero. Socrates, the best of them all, gadfly of the people, ends his life with a cock to Esculapius, thinking only of duty to the State. The advent of Christianity is the marvel and the flower of philosophy and religion. It was the awakening of both religion and philosophy."

Our God has seen fit to wrap in mystery most of his world. We do not know what is electricity. "We do not know what mind is — not even what matter is. We are learning constantly of new chemical atoms, argon, helium, crypton, and many others; of subatoms a thousand times smaller than the atoms of hydrogen; of vortices and of ether. Something we know of their properties, and we guess more, but what they are we know not. The essence of matter as of mind is beyond our ken."

In the eighteenth chapter of Ezekiel is, perhaps, the best statement of Jewish ethics to be found in the Old Testament, but it contains scanty recognition of the law of love. It is this boundless love, the love that bids us serve our fellowmen, that bids us go forth to tell all nations of Christ's light and truth, which holds the secret of "the deep things of God."

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 19. TEXTS: Ps. 25:14; I. Cor. 2:9-13.

Suppose Our Chef Came to You

Suppose a famous chef came to you on a hot day in July and made you this proposition:

I propose to prepare for you—ready to serve — a hundred summer meals. They are meals you would need sixteen hours to prepare. Mine will be ready to serve in a minute.

They will be meals fit for a king—as fresh and savory as the moment they came from the oven. I refer to Van Camp's Pork and Beans.

I will bake them in steam ovens heated to 245 degrees. So the beans will digest. They won't ferment and form gas, as do beans that are baked at home.

No beans will be crisped, no skins will be broken. The beans will be nutty, mealy and whole, because they are baked in live steam.

And the tomato sauce will be baked with the beans, forming a delicious blend.

I will use Michigan beans, picked out by hand from the choicest part of the crop.

I will use whole, vine-ripened tomatoes, so the sauce will have a superlative zest. It will cost me five times what common sauce would cost.

Suppose our chef came to you and made that proposition — just at mealtime, perhaps, when the weather was hot. Don't you think that you would accept it?

Yet that is just the proposition we are making to you again and again in these pages.

The National Dish Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE PORK AND BEANS The National Dish

It pays to have beans just as good as beans can be. They are 23 per cent. nitrogenous—84 per cent. nutriment. They are richer in food value than meat or eggs or cheese.

Others will claim to bake beans as good as Van Camp's. But the majority of people have found out the facts, and Van Camp's now outsell all other brands combined.

If you will once make a comparison you will never again accept any beans but Van Camp's.

Three sizes: 10, 15 and 20 cents per can.

Van Camp Packing Company
(Established 1861)
Indianapolis, Ind.

(86)

Floor Polish OF QUALITY

If you have never used

Butcher's Boston Polish

on your floors, you do not know what it is to have a Perfectly Finished Floor. There are imitations, but none of equal excellence.

It is the STANDARD in the different trades, throughout the UNITED STATES and CANADA

When finishing your floors use BUTCHER'S BOSTON POLISH and be convinced of its merits.

Send for our free booklet

The Butcher Polish Company
366 ATLANTIC AVENUE, BOSTON, MASS

SEND FOR FREE BOOK
COLORADO HOMESTEADS ON MOFFAT ROAD

Tells how to homestead 160 acres of rich, fertile land with pure water, good towns, fine climate on Moffat Road, (Denver, Northwestern and Pacific Ry) in Routt County, Colo. We have no land to sell—its absolutely free from the Government and now open for settlement. Law allows you to return home for 6 months after filing. Oats, 90 bushels to acre; wheat, 45; barley, 70. Get a good farm free. Fine chance for investors and business openings. Write for free book, maps, and information about how to get these farms FREE. W. F. Jones, Gen'l Traffic Manager, 745 Majestic Building, Denver, Colo.

6% NET

For 35 years we have been paying our customers the highest returns consistent with conservative methods. First mortgage loans of $200 and up which we can recommend after the most thorough personal investigation. Please ask for Loan List No. 707 $25 Certificates of Deposit also for saving investors.

PERKINS & Co. Lawrence, Kans

The Deaf Can Hear

Thirty Days' Home Trial

The Electrophone in use—almost INVISIBLE

Deaf people should send their names and addresses at once to get The Electrophone. This wonderful instrument is perfected to such a degree that most persons formerly deaf can now hear the faintest sounds, and we unhesitatingly send it to any afflicted person on thirty days' Home Trial so that they may convince themselves they can converse as those who are not afflicted. You can enjoy concerts and distinctly hear public speakers. Thousands are in use. Many users tell us it has greatly improved their hearing and has stopped their head noises. In many instances the normal hearing has been entirely restored. If you are deaf or hard of hearing, do not fail to send your name and address today, and test this wonderful instrument, and see what many responsible people who are using it say of The Electrophone. Write at once. (9)

STOLZ ELECTROPHONE CO.
354 Stewart Building, 92 State Street, Chicago

"RANGER" BICYCLES

Have imported roller chains, sprockets and pedals; New Departure Coaster Brakes and Hubs; Puncture Proof Tires; highest grade equipment and many advanced features possessed by no other wheels. Guaranteed 5 yrs.

FACTORY PRICES direct to you are less than others ask for cheap wheels. Other reliable models from $12 up. A few good second-hand machines $3 to $8.

10 DAYS' FREE TRIAL We ship on approval, freight prepaid, anywhere in U.S., without a cent in advance. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you get our big new catalog and special prices and a marvelous new offer. A postal brings everything. Write it now.

TIRES Coaster Brake Rear Wheels, lamps, parts, and sundries half usual prices.

Rider Agents everywhere are coining money selling our bicycles, tires and sundries. Write today.

MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. F-71 CHICAGO

Flavored With the Juice of the Real Mint Leaves.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, JUNE 15, 1910

VOL. 33—NO. 24. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

Photos by Pictorial News Co.

See page 575

CURTISS' WONDERFUL AEROPLANE FLIGHT FROM ALBANY TO NEW YORK

1. Glenn Curtiss in his Biplane. 2. The Aviator and his Wife. 3. Rising at Poughkeepsie. 4. Mrs. Curtiss Watching from the Special Train. 5. After the Landing at Governor's Island.

Questions and Answers

In forwarding MSS. to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, enclose stamped envelopes for return, if unavailable.

T. H., Webster, Mass. Why does one find an echo in one place and not in another?

An echo is caused by the reflection of sound from mountains, walls, clouds or any other obstacle conveniently placed. If they are turned toward the source of the sound the reflected sound is focused and produces a very loud echo, often a series of echoes. The rolls which follow a clap of thunder are echoes from heavy cloud banks. In open spaces where there is no wall-like obstacle it is impossible to produce an echo.

Geo. R. G., Vancouver, Can. 1. Explain Matt. 3: 6. 2. Is one supposed to be baptized at, or after, conversion? 3. Who is the prophet referred to in John 1: 25?

1. The passage describes them as confessing their sins, doubtless aloud, while being baptized. They had already experienced conviction of sin and repentance, and now the ordinance of baptism was a public seal or admission of their felt need of deliverance from sin. It was an open declaration of their change of heart. 2. Baptism may take place either before or after conversion, though in the case of most adults it is usually after the change. 3. The reference is to the forerunner predicted in Isa. 40: 3. They were asking John if he were neither Christ nor Elijah, whether he was really the forerunner, as he had intimated in v. 23.

W. L., Lincoln, Neb. When was Drew Theological Seminary founded, and where is it now located?

Drew Seminary was founded in 1866. It is at Madison, N. J.

G. B. S., Durbin, W. Va. Did Christ heal any one who manifested no faith in him? Did the centurion's servant have any knowledge of or faith in Christ? Who was this servant?

Probably not; at least we cannot gather from the record that he did. Even the lepers, the lame, the impotent, and those who crowded about him during his ministry, must have had a seed of faith and expectation, having heard of his wonderful miracles. In Matt. 13: 56-58 it is distinctly stated that he did no mighty works at Nazareth because of the popular unbelief. If we close our hearts against him he will not come in. The name of the centurion's servant (Matt. 8: 6) is not given; but even if he had had no faith, the great faith of his master would have sufficed (see v. 10).

E. P., Kushequa, Pa. How do they separate quicksilver from the earth?

Quicksilver is but another name for mercury. Mercury is found free in small quantities. Its chief source, however, is sulphide cinnabar. To get the mercury the cinnabar is heated in a current of air, which oxidizes the sulphur to sulphur dioxide, and the mercury is set free. The mercury vapor thus given off is cooled in pipes or chambers and filtered. In the United States, Texas and California furnish all that is produced.

Miss S. M., Wheeling, W. Va. Has the Gospel been preached throughout the whole world, in all nations?

No; there are still parts of China, the whole of Tibet, and some other remote sections of Asia, as well as parts of South America and Central Africa, yet unevangelized. Missionaries still write occasionally of finding large tribes where the Gospel has not penetrated.

S. McR. P., Lucas, Iowa. 1. Will you explain who Longfellow's three friends were, named Charles, mentioned in his poem, "To the River Charles"? 2. Explain briefly what are the requirements for gaining a Rhodes Scholarship and what is included in the prize.

1. The three friends were Charles Sumner, Charles Falsom and Charles Amory. 2. Cecil Rhodes directed in his will "that $10,000,000 should be applied to the creation of a fund for the support of a certain number of scholarships covering a three-years' course at the University of Oxford. Two were to be assigned to each State and Territory of the United States, 100 in all, 15 to Germany and from one to nine to each British colony. The scholarships were to be awarded on marks only, three-tenths whereof were to be given to a candidate for his literary and scholastic attainments, the remainder being given for his love of outdoor athletics and sports; for strong manly qualities, such as courage, generosity and kindness." In a few of the States the appointments are made in turn by the leading universities, in most of them, however, by a committee from the different colleges. The man appointed must not be over twenty-four years of age, a citizen or son of a citizen. He must have studied two years in an American college. Each scholarship amounts to $1,500 per year. Any college secretary will give you full information.

J. W. B., Newark, N. J. Is there not a fault somewhere when people look at the Scriptures differently? Christ is one, and his people should not be divided. Can they be "perfectly sincere" when they differ? Is not one or the other, or perhaps both, somewhat askew? For example, the Lord's Supper is eaten in several different ways, at widely varying times, and under diverse conditions. Is it not fair to think that if all wished to know the truth, and do what our Master wished, he would make good his promises, and tell them just what was right and wrong in their beliefs? There is a longing in my heart to do all that can be done to answer Christ's prayer in John 17: 21.

God looks at the heart and the purpose, rather than at the act itself. There always have been and always will be differences in methods among God's people; but these matter little, so long as they are sound and united on the essentials. There may be a thousand different ways of serving him, yet all acceptable. Thus all may differ as to holy days, forms of ordinances, etc.; but these are not the essentials. He has ordained infinite variety in all nature and in humanity also. There can be no uniformity save in essentials, and in the holding of vital truths. "A thousand roads," says the proverb, "lead up the sides of the holy hill, but they all meet at the top." So we may worship God and serve him in manifold ways; but if the service be sincere and the heart right, one form is as acceptable as another. We are not bound by laws and observances, but all can be one in Christ, in faith, in love (which is the fulfilling of the law), and in the liberty of the Gospel.

C. J., Clam Falls, Wis. 1. When were the Pyramids begun? 2. Where did Cain get his wife?

1. The "Great Pyramid" at Gizeh was begun some time before 2218 B.C. in the reign of Shufu I. The name of its founder has been discovered in an inscription upon a tomb near by. The second pyramid was built by Shufu II. (about 2186-2163 B.C.). There are six others at Gizeh of later date, five at Abusir, eleven at Sakkara, five at Dashur, and single pyramids at several other places. 2. The Bible narrative (see Gen. 4: 14) implies the existence of a considerable population besides those actually mentioned. These were doubtless descendants of Adam and relatives of Cain, and had probably branched out into a considerable community. His wife was, the commentators conclude, one of those related to him, but this is purely conjectural.

Miss H. M. C., West Pittston, Pa. 1. Who comprised the audience that listened to the Sermon on the Mount? What proof is there that Christ preached this sermon to the twelve disciples only? Was it preached to the "multitude?" Does not Matt. 4: 25 and 5: 1; 7: 28 and 8: 1, also Luke 6: 17 and 7: 1 prove this? 2. Why are the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount given consecutively in Matthew, scattered in the book of Luke? Is it probable that Christ repeated the teaching of the Lord's Prayer and other passages contained in this sermon on later occasions? 3. Why are the Apocryphal Books contained in the German Bible but not in ours?

1. Matt. 5: 1 states distinctly that the multitudes were present and there is nothing in the New Testament record to sustain the claim that he withdrew from the larger audience and spoke to his disciples only. He ascended the hill doubtless because there was not sufficient room for such an audience on the narrow shore of the lake. His disciples "came unto him" is interpreted as meaning that they formed an inner circle and we can picture the gathering with its outer circle reaching far across the mountain slope. 2. Some eminent critics hold that Luke's is probably the original form of the discourse, but that Matthew added a number of Jesus' sayings in order to present at one view the great outlines of his teaching. Others hold that they are two distinct discourses at different times, in one of which our Lord repeated some of his weightier sayings in slightly different forms. 3. No special reason. A few American Bible publishers include the Apocrypha.

K. D. L., Ragan, Neb. What help is there for one who believes himself a Christian, yet is continually fearing sickness or some future trouble, such as old age or perhaps loss of property? I know it is wrong, but does the Bible teach us that Christ can keep the "blues" away?

A Christian, of all men, has the least cause for giving way to sadness and depression. He has the promise of being kept by divine power, of finding joy in believing and in temporal blessings. But to make joy complete one must give loving, active service. It has been truly said that there are two things that rejoice the heart more than all else, viz., to confess Christ before men, and to do something for his sake. We believe that if you follow this rule, and engage in active, unrewarded work for others, you will have no time and no desire for morbid thoughts. The happiest man the writer ever knew was an aged city mission worker (now in heaven) who was continually spending himself for others. He trusted God for everything, laid hold of the promises of Jesus with a childlike faith and took all his cares and troubles and needs to God daily. His life was like a miracle of faith and answered prayer, and he won many to Christ by the forceful example of his own cheerful, smiling confident Christianity. He had no private income and no means of his own, but his Father, the owner of the universe, supplied all his needs.

J. S. P., Mobile, Ala. How should I begin the work to which God has called me—the work of an evangelist? Is there any correspondence school that teaches theology, and, if so, where is it?

An untrained worker is at a great disadvantage. These are the days of full equipment in all branches of service. Write to Moody Institute, Chicago, for all information as to practical evangelistic training, and also for advice as to theological studies.

M. A. H., Hillsboro, N. H. Are not "mist" and "fog" the same?

No; mist is similar to fog, but the water particles are larger and more wetting. In reality mist is a cloud suspended just above the surface of the sea or land.

L. P. R., Ottawa, Can. Of what nationality is the French Empress Eugenie? Is she still living?

The Empress Eugenie is of Spanish descent on her father's side. He was Count de Montijo of Grenada, Spain. On her mother's side she is of Scoteh descent, coming from the Kirkpatrick family. She is still living, most of the time in England, but traveling now and then to France or warmer climates.

Dedication of the Great Sun-Dial at Columbia University

IF the founders of King's College, now Columbia University, in New York City, could have looked forward through the years and caught a glimpse of the 156th commencement, they would have gasped with astonishment to see a senior class of several hundred, and spectators numbering thousands. Columbia has been fortunate in the number of gifts she has received to beautify her buildings and grounds at commencement time, and one of the most important of these is the new sun-dial presented by the class of 1885 and placed on the South Field. It was transferred to the University in the presence of a large number of students and friends on the day the class celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary.

Miscellaneous

E. E. R., Newark, N. J. Published in Philadelphia. Subscription, $1.

W. H. A., Richland Centre, Pa. We cannot undertake to discuss party politics.

Reader, Kenwood Park, Ia. Send full name and address and repeat question when you write.

J. W. H., Bartley, Neb. John the Baptist was probably baptized by some of his own disciples. This is the view of several commentators.

Th. N. T., Hutchinson, Minn., and others. We have already discussed the subject of baptism in THE MAIL-BAG and cannot now devote space to repeating the subject.

C. L. S., Cartersville, Va. There are many publications that will buy really good drawings of the kind you mention, but they are unlikely to do so from a student who has not completed his studies.

H. C., Ovett, Miss. We cannot decide—no one can—as to the accuracy of such statements. Both methods of baptism seem to have been in vogue in early Christian times. The "Christian scholarship of the world" (which you quote) is greatly divided on the subject.

D. M., Oak Park, Ill. Your questions are in the domain of speculation, in which one conjecture is usually as good as another. All that we have on these matters, that can be regarded as authoritative, is found in the Scripture record.

E. S. W., Aurora, Ind. There are domestic animals that are vicious and others that are kindly. They live under natural law and take their character—their virtues and their vices—from their surroundings. A well-trained dog will be well-behaved and an ill-trained one the reverse. They are largely what we make them, but however gentle they may be, the brute nature is there at bottom and will come to the surface when provoked and sometimes quite unexpectedly.

F. G. M., Corvallis, Ore., and A. N., Okla. The answer to which you refer may have been misunderstood. The Scriptures are explicit in the statement that one who, having heard the message of salvation, wilfully rejects it, comes under condemnation; they are also explicit in stating that we are to "judge no man." THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has never taught that anyone, under Gospel dispensation, can be saved, except through Christ. In the main, the answer related to the conditions of the unevangelized heathen.

M. T. C., Newell, W. Va. 1. Stick to your denomination, but be broad and tolerant of the views of others. God has his faithful followers in all lands, and every church that holds to the essentials of Christianity is an open door, notwithstanding minor differences, since they all hold up Jesus, who is "the Door." 2. The twelve gates in Rev. 21: 12-21 with their inscriptions are interpreted to imply that not only but the spiritual Israel, God's elect, shall enter. We are warned not to be carried away by "every wind of doctrine" (Eph. 4: 14), but to be steadfast. Your letter meets our general approval.

NEW YORK. JUNE 15. 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Future American Citizens of the Pacific Indian Tribes

Poor Groping Souls

The Loneliness of the West Coast

A STRANGE INDIAN REVIVAL

THE announcement of a new cult in these times of religious unrest may not be of great interest, but the evolution of a new religion, having its inception in a recently barbarous people, and ing an intermixture of Christianity and savagery, indeed of rare interest and importance.

It takes generations of education and Christian struction to bring the Indians into a real Chrisanity. The Pacific Coast Indians are above the verage in intelligence and adaptability for imrovement and civilization. They have had schools, nd are advanced in civilization; but they have had ew advantages for Christian instruction. The "white man's vices" have een given them, often forced upon iem, and but for the new religion, iey would have been left almost enrely to drunkenness, vice, degradaon and the diseases attendant upon iese evils of civilization. Some ibes would have been extinct but r the Shaker religion.

The Pacific Coast Indians will soon e given the rights of American citiens; shall they not be better fitted r citizenship by a knowledge of the ospel, by the saving power of Jesus hrist?

There are but few missions in Western Washington among the Inans. The Presbyterians have a urch and minister at the Puyallup eservation and a school in Tacoma, hich is now doing a good work. ut for years there has been little al spiritual work done. There is feeble mission of the same denomation at Neah Bay. The Methosts have one school, the Stickney ome, in the northern part of the tate that does good work, but not tensive. The Congregationalists ave now no missions among the Inans, but for over thirty years the ev. Myron Eells was a missionary mong the Indians of Puget Sound nd the Straits. Since his death, here has been no one to take his ork. The Catholics have several issions along the Upper Sound.

The Shaker religion originated with John Slocum nd his wife, Twana Indians, who lived on the Big kookum, near Olympia. In 1882 the man was very ck. He and his wife had heard the Gospel in ev. Myron Eells' Mission, but as they were ignoant Indians, they had little conception of it. Later, iey were baptized into the Catholic Church, though iey were not saved from their sins, being drunken nd degraded. When John Slocum thought death as near, he insisted upon calling in an Indian medicine man." His wife protested, urging him to keep faithful to the religion they had adopted, and not return to the old heathen ways; but the man could not be dissuaded, and the medicine man came and began his incantations. The poor wife, in sore distress, went away into the woods, and there prayed in agony to the "white man's God" for the salvation of her husband. She did not know how long she wrestled in prayer, but the Indians assert that she was there three days and nights. There came a vision to the poor soul that cleansed her from her sins, and filled her with strange ecstasy. She felt that God had heard her prayers, that he had saved her and would save her husband, and she believed that to them was committed a new message to the Indians. She returned home, praising God.

Bright Young Men of the Quileute Tribe

When she entered the house her husband had apparently been dead for six hours. The Indians were wailing over his body. The "medicine man" fled at her approach. The story is told that the seemingly dead man arose. John Slocum's after life, and that of his wife, was upright, clean and free from their former vices and sins. They taught a religion that could save, they were enabled to give their people a practical experience of the power of Jesus to save and keep from sin.

The "new religion" spread like wild-fire. It now reaches nearly every tribe from California to Alaska, and has gone over the mountains to the Yakimas, Spokanes, and Nez Percés. At first it went to wild extremes and all sorts of miracles were claimed. It was mixed with the old Tamahnowus, or Indian rites, and had little of Christianity except the belief in Jesus Christ. But every year it has lost something of the barbarous beliefs and worship, and taken more of Christian principles and rites.

At first only the moral class of uneducated but intelligent Indians accepted the new religion. The more superstitious and ignorant still clung to the "medicine men," the "witch doctors," with their barbaric incantations, their dances, and savage mutilations and ceremonies. But when the paternal government prohibited the old religious rites, many turned to Shakerism. Those Indians who have had Christian instruction are almost like the evangelical churches in their religion. Others are like the Catholics, and still others, who have had no missions, are practising the ancient Tamahnowus.

John Slocum, who made claims of supernatural powers, reigned supreme at first; but other leaders arose who had even greater influence. "Big Bill" and "Mowitch Man" were independent leaders, but soon merged with their following into the Shaker Church. The movement was opposed by government and missionaries, and every means was tried to check it, or stamp it out, but nothing could stop its course. Some of the leaders were arrested and punished; but nothing could quench their zeal. "Big John" was cast into prison, and his followers stood about the building, expecting to see its walls shaken, and their leader released by miraculous power. But though they were disappointed, they still kept faith in the new religion.

John Slocum lived for fourteen years after his great change, and before he died he relegated the leadership to Louis Yewalock, a good and forcible man. Slocum had a beautiful prayer, which is translated as follows: "Our God is in heaven. If we die he will take our life to heaven. Help us, O God, so that we shall not die. Wherever we are, help us not to die. Our Father, who is there, always have a good mind to us." Formerly the Indians "shook" for everything they desired; for fair

Continued on page 571

THE

American Pulpit

A TRAGEDY-SERMON BY

Bishop Wm. Alfred Quayle*

The Unearned Throne

TEXT—I. Kings 2:12
"Then sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father."

SO Solomon sat in a throne he did not build and ruled over a kingdom he did not create. That is to say that Solomon came to a kingship by inheritance, and I would fain inquire to-night as to the disposition that Solomon made of what he inherited.

There are two ways, only two, to come into possession of power. One is to earn it and one is to have it given to you. Personally I would prefer to earn it; but some people inherit power; they haven't sweat for it; they didn't fight for it; haven't suffered for it. Power has been bequeathed to them, and it is honorable to have power left to you, provided you have sense enough to make use of what is given to you. Solomon's father didn't have anything but a shepherd's crook, which wasn't much of a crook. He was a shepherd lad, red-headed and freckled-faced, strong-handed, and he could tra-la-loo like a lark and he could bound like a lamb across the yellow Bethlehem hills, and his heart had ecstasies. He was such a little laddie, such a care-free laddie, and he has a shepherd's crook and watches a shepherd's flock, and if you had seen David the laddie, you would not have thought that maybe you would bow down and kiss his sandals. You cannot count on the output of the soul. And David, the laddie, by and by found a sword, and David, the laddie, by and by found a company of troopers, and David, the laddie, by and by founded a kingdom and was chief of all the warriors Israel has ever produced. The Hebrews have been great at producing geniuses, but the greatest warrior-genius the Hebrews ever produced was David. Had nothing and went out and conquered everything, and by and by builded a palace and occupied a throne and died with a kingdom on his hands to give away, and Solomon, poor laddie, all he could do was to take what was given him. It is not an easy thing to use power you didn't create.

Solomon's Great Inheritance

When a man makes a fortune he has schooled himself to its use, while his hands are creating it, and by and by with his fortune belike he shall be able to maintain it with superiority and worth. But when a man has a fortune fall on him as if the heavens had opened and all the clouds had spilled and all the rain of the earth-clouds had poured on him like a deluge, it is not a strange thing that the hand unused to power should not know how to use it.

David had earned everything: Solomon earned nothing. David had fought for everything: Solomon fought for nothing. And I am not here to-night to arraign inheritance, but I am here to call this man Solomon to book for how he used what he inherited. He sat on a throne and he didn't build it and he ruled a kingdom and he didn't create it. I think that if I was a jocular man—and I am not, as is positively known by my acquaintances—I think this thing would amuse me more than anything I know, namely, people strutting over what they don't have any sort of power in producing. I can understand how a man that made his way could strut; he has a right to strut. There is some sense in that; he did things—but how anybody could strut from having things he never earned, that just makes me amused. I don't see how a woman can be haughty over her looks when she is pretty. I never got that into my head. Why she should be kind of tickled over it; I can see that. Why she should be glad over that I can understand, because beauty is a gift of God and a beautiful woman is the most beautiful thing God ever made. But why a beautiful woman should be haughty over her beauty strikes me as being a question to ask and not one to answer. Solomon has, besides these, certain items which I will mention here. He has his throne, which it is worth while to possess; he has his kingdom, which it is worth while to rule; he has genius, which is worth while; he has the sense of God, which is the highest possession and the highest gift—just four things: throne, kingdom, genius and sense of God. What a possession that is! What a start in life that is! How rich is the man that hath that!

To have a throne! To have the opportunity to use power! Really, that is what a throne means. To be gifted with high obligation; to stand sponsor for a great people's behavior; to be able to instruct men in the ways of life. It was his office to show that justice was better than injustice; it was his office to show that kindness was better than crudeness; it was his office to show that peace was better than war; it was his office to show, though the hands had not been schooled to rulership by initiation and had not been schooled in the hard school of adversity, that still the hands could rule, and that the sceptre need not be a sword. What a chance that was! He had a throne and a kingdom. What a thing it is to have genius! What a thing it is for the sun to have a sky! What a thing it is for the earth to have a sun! What a thing it is for a man to have a chance to get life! What a thing it is to have wide areas over which to throw one's genius out! Why, upon my heart, men and women, I think it is a glorious thing to be president of this republic now. It was a glorious thing when Washington, with hand that was timid from modesty, took the helm of the Union, but it is a greater thing now.

Masters of Ourselves

Then we fringed the eastern sea; now we take in a continent and have either sea that floats the ships. Then we had slaves. Now we are the masters of ourselves, and are the schoolmasters of liberty for the world. What a thing it is to be president of these United States now! Why? Because politicians will come and hug up to you? No. Because he is the biggest personage at the pie counter and so gets the biggest piece? No. Because we listen to him whether he has anything to say or not, because he is the president? No. Because he can travel in a private car and never pay anything for it? What is the beauty of being the president? Why, because your words swing around the continent and your word reaches across the earth. If I were president of the United States, wouldn't I have a hearing! If ex-President Roosevelt should come to town, you would listen to him an hour. Though you had read that speech five hundred times you would listen to it. Why? A good reason. Why? Because he made it himself—this most august of all Americans. There has been in the world no other nation which had in the ballot a place to vote a king into his place. A throne and a realm and a chance to be heard! Oh, that is a great, great thing, and this man Solomon has a kingdom. Then Solomon inherited—mark that—inherited the throne, and did you ever think of it, he didn't build it; and he inherited the kingdom, he didn't build it; and then he inherited genius. Oh, it must be fine to have genius to do things without sweating at it! Genius! What a thing that is to inherit! And he inherited that. Then he had what I think to be the finest—saying the word "fine" in the sense of quality—the finest possession in the universe, namely, he had the sense of God. You think that wisdom is fineness. With deference to you, it is not. What is fine sensibility? Why, you should know when you give the matter heed and will know now that the matter is given thought, that the finest sensibility to have is aptness for God. Can you feel the Invisible? Can you find God without looking? Can you feel God in your sleep? Can you reach out blindly and feel the hand of the Omnipotent? Can you do that?

Spiritual Collapse

The saddest collapse of the soul I have ever seen has been the collapse in the spiritual faculties, so that men hadn't a sense of God. They did not know when mercy was on the road; did not look. Did not know when the Omnipotent hand was in the sky; never looked. God was on his throne and they never looked. Did not know when Omnipotence was in the house of prayer; they never looked. And Solomon had what his father David was so fabulous in the possession of, namely, the sense of God nigh to him. Now, that is the inheritance of Solomon, and what did he with it? A throne inherited and a kingdom inherited and genius inherited and God-sense inherited. What did he do with the inheritance? Answer: He failed with it!

And Solomon had all this genius that I told you of. He was a scientist, and that is a great gif and he wrote about botany, and he went out nosir around out-of-doors and saw, and came back ar wrote all these things down, and it was a fine thir that he did so. Then he had a gift for hearir things. That is a great gift, though some peop haven't any gift for it—they are so everlasting wanting to say things that they never stop to he anybody else. Just talk, talk, talk, talk, talk abo anything. Then the gift of listening—that is a gre gift. I give it as my conviction that the reas why the rank and file of the giftless men and wom I have met in my life were giftless is because th haven't listened. If they listened, they would ha heard God. This man Solomon went out and he h the gift for hearing.

Do you know where people get their genius? A where did Mark Twain get his humorist stoc And where did Josh Billings get his funny old sa ings? Where did they get them? Just by listenin Do you know where Shakespeare got Macbeth? I heard the raving, one night, of a man lost to Go And this man Solomon went out and listened, a he came back and wrote proverbs by the thousan and plus. The proverbs were a few of the splinte that he broke off of the common trees of the comm roadways. And this man Solomon went out a built a house for the Lord—he sent for men to that and he looked on at it and the most he had do was to preside at the dedication. Isn't that fin To have other people to do the work and you get and have the fun of saying things. Well, he had that. Well, what else did he do? Well, he faile Failed! Didn't I show you Solomon? Didn't y hear him whimpering when he went away? "Vani of vanities, all is vanity, saith the Preacher!" that the way for a preacher to talk? Why, no! preacher is paid to tell the truth. That is the re son we preachers are so veracious. "Vanity of va ities, saith the Preacher, all is vanity." O Solomo where did you get that look? Listen! He didn inherit that look; he made that look. "King Sol mon, did you make that look? Where did you g that voice?" Made it. He didn't inherit tha

"Vanity of Vanities"

"Where did you get that shuffling walk, Solomon Made it. Got it; didn't inherit it. "Vanity vanities, saith the Preacher, all is vanity," and h hands shiver and his eyes look down and his sho ders stoop, and he said: "Bring me a mug of wir Vanity of vanities, all is vanity!" O heart! T man that had come to life with majesty and wi splendor, goes empty-handed to death. Did y see the sun go down to-night? Why, he lit t million candles in the sky to show that he was goin Did you see the sunset to-night? Never miss sunset. That is the way life ought to go out.

I came in here from the Epworth League, a there was a sweet-faced old man who to my know edge has been talking about heaven and asking fol to meet him there. That is one of the sweete messages to be dropped from the human lips: Me me in heaven. Solomon, what did your father lea you? A throne; yes. And a kingdom; yes. A the art of writing, and genius; and a sense of Go What is that? And he mumbles his words and h lips tremble and his hands shiver and he looks dow and he looks black, and the sky is black, and his fa is filled with doubt and fear.

What is that? Failed! Failed! Oh, this is wh I am going to talk about. Had everything. Had gift for life, and became a libertine; had a gift f seeing and saw lewd chances; had a gift for hea ing and failed to hear the great, sweet coronati words. What is the world for, Solomon? "Vanit vanity, all is vanity. All is vanity and vexation spirit." Failed!

Look at these times. How many women have cu ture and have refinement and have a fine sens What do they do with them? There are the inhe tances of the King Davids of the centuries. Wh are you doing with that? Nothing, nothing, nothin Solomon, gifted with sense of God, so that he mig have sung songs like rivers that empty into the se leaves this: "Vanity of vanities; vanity of vaniti all is vanity!" "Aye, aye, aye, no more of that "Solomon, where is God?" "Oh, none of that

Continued on next page

* Bishop Quayle, of Oklahoma City, Okla., is one of the most eloquent leaders of American Methodism.

The Unearned Throne

Continued from preceding page

"Solomon, where is the throne?" "Oh, none of that." "Solomon, where is the kingdom?" "Oh, none of that." Empty! Oh, men, listen; women, listen to me. Women, you have heart more than you have beauty; women, you have grace more than you have winsomeness; women, you have worth more than you have powers of suasion; women, you have powers of winning the world for goodness. Women, what are you doing with them? And they say, "Why, we are—we are mostly gadding about, going where we ought not to go." That is the thing, lots of women are doing that; gadding about, going where they ought not to go. And it makes me sick to see all the women just tramping off—not a man in the whole kit—just women, tramping off to matinées. What is life for, woman? For going to a matinée. What is life for, woman? For going to a matinée. Oh, life is for a matinée!

Now, I am not talking about theatres, understand. I could say something about them, but I am simply saying that if a woman gets to going about and forgets that there is anything else in the world to make life fair, she ought to be told pretty quick. What is that? That is playing the Solomon quite a little. Inheritance is one thing, but to go around and hunt up a job, that is another matter. Man, woman, you are gifted of God. You have the best of the earth. What are you doing with it? And the man says: "I am, I am—give me another day! Give me another day!" You will have a passion for dirt—buying lots—corner lot, middle lot. I am saying nothing against real estate, it is good if you have sense enough to buy it and retain it, and save your soul. This reaching for dirt—why don't you reach for the stars, and clutch the morning light and clutch the radiancy of the noon and clutch the splendor of eternity and clutch the beckoning hand of Christ. "Oh," he said, "busy with dirt." I call that tragedy; do you?

And this man Solomon that had a throne and a kingdom and genius and God-sense died and his son didn't get a throne; just a sixth of a throne. How much is two within twelve? I think six. About a sixth of a throne, his son got—just about a sixth, and only a sixth of a kingdom. Died, and couldn't leave his son a kingdom; died, and his son didn't have good working sense. Didn't leave him any sense, and died and didn't have himself any God-sense.

Say, Solomon, what is the big word in the Book? He said: "Vanity, vanity, vanity." "David, what is the big word in the Book?" He said: "God, God, God!" and he winds the music out as if he were playing on a thousand bugles, "God, God, God!" Didn't I read to you what David said? Listen. He said to the son Solomon to show himself a man. And what is the word, David? "God!" "Say, Solomon, what is the big word, the eternal word?" "Oh, don't bother me so, I don't want to listen to you; but you ought to know enough that the big word is vanity. Oh, yes, the big word is vexation," and he shuffles away and mumbles into a bed of death.

What a failure! Had everything, left nothing! And this is my message that people who are greatly dowered are greatly responsible, and people who, when they go to their death, have failure written on their tombstones, it were better they had never been born, or that they had been born with a millstone tied to their necks and they had been thrown in the depths of the sea. Failed! "Solomon, where is God?" "Dead!" he says; "dead, dead!"

O God, keep us from Solomon's destination and keep us from Solomon's doom and keep us from Solomon's wild expenditure of everything for that which buys no bread. O God, scare some of us away from our sins, for Christ's sake. Amen.

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

The Children's Pulpit

HANGING A PRAYER ON THE STARS

By Rev. J. M. FARRAR, D.D.

DO you pray for the sailors—"they that go down to the sea in ships"? From The Children's Pulpit you are to hear of how a brave sailor prayed for himself; how he wrote a prayer and hung it on the stars. Listen while Alexander Irvine tells you a story:

We were in a squall off the coast of Sicily, and the commander, a man of the old school, took advantage of it to give us a bit of rough-water drill. The order was to strike lower yards and topmasts and to clear the decks for action.

"Away, aloft!" he roared, as the wind soughed through the rigging; and a moment later I heard:

"Bear out on the yardarm!" Something went wrong in the foretop and the captain fell to the hatchway grating below, killing a man by his fall. I stood a few feet from the grating, and it took me the best part of a day to sponge his blood out of my clothing. We buried them both that night in an old cemetery at the base of Mount Etna.

. . .

AT noontime next day we were ordered through the same evolution aloft. A lad had been promoted to the vacancy in the foretop, and he was rather nervous. Five hundred pairs of eyes followed him as he tore aloft with the lightness of a cat.

At the crucial moment—at the sound of the order, "Bear out on the yardarm!"—he lost his nerve, dropped a hundred feet and was crushed to death on the deck.

Billy Hicks, a second-class officer, was made captain of the foretop. Billy was something of a wag. He could dance a hornpipe or sing a song and when he laughed the deck trembled.

As he stood there barefooted at the foot of the rigging awaiting the fatal order, the red blush vanished from his round face. It was ashy and pitched.

Every eye was on him, and as he sprang at the rigging, men stood from under.

There was a breathless hush as he reached the top, a full length ahead of his men. Then the order rang out over the old ship and a hundred men with the precision of a clock sprang to their places.

. . .

WE were fond of Billy, and when the crisis was passed we gulped down our lumps and secretly thanked Him in the hollow of whose hand lie the seas. No one understood how Billy Hicks had been able to obey the order without falling to the deck.

Something really did happen to the new captain of the foretop that day, though nobody knew just what it was. There was a change and we felt it. Those who stood nearest felt it most. We couldn't analyze it; he couldn't himself. I got into the secret by accident.

An officer of the Gemaraire came on board one day, a week or two later, to lunch with a friend. I served the lunch in the wardroom and overheard the following conversation:

"Have you a seaman by the name of Billy Hicks on board?"

"Yes; what about him?"

"Well," the officer said, smiling, "we were ten miles out at sea a few weeks ago when we noticed the signals flashing all over the heavens—electric signals. I was officer of the deck. It was about two bells in the first watch. I called my signal officer and told him to take down what he read. He pulled out his notebook, still smiling, and, spelling out the words, read:

. . .

" 'GOD, this is Billy Hicks! I ain't afraid of no bloomin' man nor devil; I ain't afraid of no Davy Jones' bleedin' locker, neither. I ain't like a bawling baby afussing at his dad for sweeties. I don't ask you for no favors, but just one: This is it—when I strike the foretops to-morrow let me do it with the heart of a man what iz clean. And God, dear God, from this hear day on, giv me that feeling I usto have long ago when I nelt at my mother's nee and said, "Our Father." Good night, dear God.' "

Billy knew he would be called next day to climb to the topmast. That night while in charge of the big light signal he wrote his prayer in letters of light and hung it on the stars before his God. Love is God's flashlight with which you can send your prayer beyond the stars and hang them on the great white throne of God. Ask father or mother to tell you where to find the following beautiful sailor story:

. . .

THEY that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters;

These see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep.

They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths: their soul is melted because of trouble.

They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wit's end.

Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses.

He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still.

Then are they glad because they be quiet; so he bringeth them unto their desired haven.

Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

* Pastor First Reformed Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. TEXT: "They that go down to the sea in ships." Ps. 107:23.

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR*

By HAROLD TROWBRIDGE PULSIFER

WITH a thunder-driven heart
And the shimmer of new wings,
I a worm that was, upstart,
King of kings!

I have heard the singing stars,
I have watched the sunset die
As I burst the lucent bars
Of the sky.

Lo, the argosies of Spain,
As they plowed the naked brine,
Found no heaven-girded main
Like to mine.

Soaring from the clinging sod,
First and foremost of my race,
I have met the hosts of God
Face to face.

Met the tempest and the gale
Where the white moon-riven cloud
Wrapt the splendor of my sail
In a shroud.

When the ghost of winter fled,
Swift I followed with the snow
Like a silver arrow sped
From a bow.

I have trailed the summer south
Like a flash of burnished gold
When she fled the hungry mouth
Of the wold.

I have dogged the ranging sun
Till the world became a scroll;
All the oceans one by one
Were my goal.

Oh, the winged men may come,
Pierce the heavens, chart the sky,
Sound an echo to my drum,
Ere they die.

I alone have seen the earth,
Age-old fetters swept aside
In the glory of new birth,
Deified!

*This poem won the Lloyd McKinnon Garrison prize of $100.

A Filipino Heroine

IN a letter just received from Missionary Elizabeth W. Jansen, stationed at Cebu, P. I., the writer sends most encouraging accounts of the progress of Gospel work in the Philippine Islands. She says the work has been greatly helped by the mission launch El Heraldo Cristiano, which is on regular duty around the large island of Botrol. Mrs. Jansen writes: "The evangelizing of the coast towns would be much hindered, had we not been given THE CHRISTIAN HERALD launch. We thank you all and your friends for the great help you so gladly gave the Philippines.

"Most of the mountain congregations in Cebu Island can only be reached after hours of toil. The faithful evangelists who have been working for years among the Cebu villages can scarcely be said to have a settled home. They go from congregation to congregation, sometimes making their home in one village, sometimes in another.

"There is a deep spiritual hunger for God's word which is manifested among these simple mountain people. Some had to walk many miles to our meetings. One poor woman had traveled a distance of twelve hours to the first village where we held Bible instruction. Some faithful messenger had got word to her and her husband in their far-off little village farm. This woman, who neither knows how to read nor write, but was hungry for God's word, took her baby in her arms, and with the next youngest child astride on her hip and a third walking, started. When the third one got tired the mother would change, and take her up, letting the other walk for a while. She got back home after the twelve hours' return walk, and told her husband, with glowing heart, what she had heard. She with his help got a little food together, and after a very short rest, started off again! After an eight hours' journey she reached the place where we had gone on to. She had crossed mountains, braved precipices and forded rivers for forty hours during three weeks in order to hear the word of God.

"Before this reaches you we hope to be back again working among these mountaineers, many of whom were once outlaws and revolutionists."

THE PLAGUE OF MUNICIPAL MISRULE

FOURTH ARTICLE OF THE SERIES ON OUR COUNTRY, ITS LAWS AND ITS PEOPLE

By E. R. JOHNSTONE

THE United States census of 1910 will show more than one hundred cities with over 50,000 population. The census of 1900 named the one hundred largest cities showing a range of population from the 3,437,202 of New York, the 1,698,575 of Chicago, and the 1,293,697 of Philadelphia to the thirty-eight thousand and odd of Altoona, Pa.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Mobile, Ala., and Birmingham, Ala.

The census of 1910 will show, beyond doubt, that there are one hundred cities in the United States with more than 50,000 people within their limits, and, probably, one hundred and twenty-five cities that exceed 35,000 of population.

No other land, except China, has such a show of cities—likely enough China has not, because modern authorities are more and more inclined to doubt the figures of the Flowery Kingdom, based as they are on guesswork, probabilities and salt-customs reports.

It is a gallant showing. Would that it were possible to say that the American cities compared favorably with their like in Christian powers in respect to honesty among municipal officials, or certainty of just punishment for official offenders.

In the hundred largest cities of the United States census of 1900, there are forty-one named whose fair fame has been smirched by proved dishonesty in public life, and of that forty-one only eighteen show swift justice and adequate, or even partial, punishment where it was earned. In many cases partial restitution of embezzled (stolen) funds secured immunity from indictment or from trial. In others, that noteworthy obstructor of justice, the hung jury with its consequent mistrial, served as means of escape. In still others the offenders had colleagues or sympathizers on bench or in bar whose legal services and knowledge of the law's delay secured postponement until prosecution died of weariness and starvation.

How the Public Grows Careless

In every case the public, through pulpit, press, or forum, showed high indignation when the offense was found out, stern determination to bring the offenders to justice while the crimes were fresh in the public eye, a rapidly waning eagerness as the news grew a bit stale, and a culpable indifference ere six months or a year from the discovery of the wrongdoing had elapsed. Oftentimes a mawkish and unmerited sympathy for the criminal developed and acts of so-called generosity—generally along the line of vote-getting or political favoritism—were cited as pleas in bar of judgment. "He's a good-hearted fellow, after all! And think of his temptations!"

Not only in our largest cities is the percentage of unpunished peculations lamentably large. Human nature is pretty much alike whether in rural or urban surroundings. Give a weak man or a bad man a chance to steal and a fair show to escape without loss of liberty or property and he will be apt to get busy in a bad way, whether he is a treasurer of a county with a million residents or of a township or school district with twoscore voters.

Think of the example to the young, of the encouragement to evil-doers, of unpunished crime!

I once heard Bishop Phillips Brooks say: "The escape from being jailed of every thief of the public's money breeds a half-dozen more malefactors. If the public won't punish, it deserves to be plucked."

Foreign Contempt

What American traveling in Great Britain or Europe, who, if he got into discussion at all, failed of being reproached with American laxity toward crime, lenity toward criminals? Take the hundred largest cities in Europe and over the portals of each one might write: "For it must needs be that offenses come; but woe to him by whom the offense cometh!"

In Great Britain, Germany and France the official who steals the property of State, province, county, town or city knows that if he is found out and cannot escape beyond the boundary or the encompassing seas, he is as sure of condign punishment as he is that what he has sequestrated will be returned, when found, to the public coffers. Think you such knowledge acts as a deterrent or the reverse? Foreigners—of course general terms must be used and isolated examples put aside—foreigners, I say, have little or none of that sentimental sympathy for a defaulting treasurer, cashier, auditor, or other officer to whom funds are intrusted that every reader of this page has seen evidenced in this country. They cannot understand our forgetfulness of the crime in belated pity for the thief.

Plenty of Foreign Thieves

It is not to be said that public peculation is unknown abroad. In some countries it is rife to an extent never imagined here. Russian officialdom is rotten to the core, or was at the outset of the Russo-Japanese war. Turkey has long been strangled by her robbers of rank. Spain has an appalling history of official rapine and so has Egypt, although the last-named country, under the English régime, has become more than "indifferent honest." In China, from the mandarin highest up to the petty official lowest down, there is appropriation on just as high a scale as the traffic in taxes will bear.

However, we would scarcely be willing to be placed on a plane as to civilization with Russia, Turkey or China. None the less is it true that in any one of those countries proved theft is followed by severest punishment. The official viewpoint as to what is theft and what is merely opportunity differs from ours.

It is a favorite charge among foreigners that the lynchings that have so disgraced many communities in the United States are due, directly, to public conviction that unless the mob takes into its own hands the punishment due for capital offenses the culprit is likely to find some loophole for escape.

Doubtless this very question of delay, spoken of in a former article, makes for laxity of punishment of official offenders in many States of the Union. It is discouraging to the decent citizen's hope for justice to know, for example, that there are now 10,000 cases before the courts of New York State alone; that a large percentage of these cases will not be adjudicated before three years; that, unless there is radical amendment in our practice and procedure, by the end of that three years there will be another ten thousand cases to drag their slow length along still another three years—and so on ad infinitum.

Hampering a Grand Jury

Oftentimes the offender escapes because of the expense attendant upon conviction, the carelessness or worse, of the prosecuting authorities and the difficulty in obtaining evidence that will convince the court and jury of the defendant's guilt.

Not many years ago an important city in the Central West was cursed by a municipal government that fairly reeked with wrongdoing. The mayor was a drunken sensualist, who had a large following because of a comeeasy-go-easy sort of generosity—he was liberal with his spoils. His henchmen were loyal to the limit of adherence and protection; he had the police under absolute control the city council was incompetent or timid, some of its members venal.

This mayor did not even try to pose as decent. He instituted a system of tribute from crime. He levied taxes on abandoned women and cheap gamblers. No one ever found out the total of his monthly income from illicit avenues. Probably he didn't know himself, for he was what his adherents proudly called "the freest spender ever possessed of a dollar."

This ribald, rapacious, riotous administration was attracting crooks of all sorts and conditions to the city and keeping away decent business men and women. This touched the pocketbook nerve of the commercialists and decent publicmen, and it was generally understood that the grand jury would indict the mayor, the chief of police and any others that might come within its purview. "Punish them as common felons," was the cry.

Where's Your Testimony?

The grand jury met in due course and was charged by the judge in a lot of platitudes. One thing he harped upon, however, and as a member of that jury I recall how surprised I was at the reiteration of his caution. "Be careful," he said over and over again, "not to find indictments unless you have testimony that will make conviction probable. You must not saddle the city and county with useless costs." He was a good man, that judge, but not of the sort that crime, buttressed by officialism, fears.

We met in a new courthouse that represented a theft from taxpayers of a million or more, and I am sure the twenty-one grand jurors who elected a foreman and went speedily to work were honest, earnest, upright citizens, eager to rid the city of uniformed evil.

Of course the county attorney was at once called in, and, equally of course, we urged him to set us on the mayor and his confederates as soon as possible. We assured him public opinion would back us in anything we did that was legal, no matter how strenuous. He was polite and a trifle commiserating. He knew, and we knew, that the mayor, the chief of police and other officials were scoundrels, etc. But how were we to get jury evidence of the fact? We could not get policemen or blackmailed women to testify. They were afraid of the mayor, and with reason. Crooks would not be good witnesses, even if we could get them on the stand. Besides, evidence costs money, especially when it is sought for to be used against officials who have control of much of the evidence-getting machinery. As county attorney he was bound to tell us there were no funds available for securing the evidence that would be needed—not to convince a grand jury.

Continued on page 567

Blocking the Path of Justice

"In forty-one misgoverned American cities, Justice was thwarted and defeated in all save eighteen."

How Joao Fought the Idols

Joao (seated) and Helper

Natives at Hombo Coming from Morning Prayers

Chief Hombo and the Fetich

By HERBERT C. WITHEY

ANGOLA, AFRICA

IT is always a great satisfaction to the foreign missionary to see native workers really catch the evangelical fire, and, pushing out into new egions, bring forth in their labors new demonstration of the self-propagating power of the Gospel. Such a worker is Joao Garcia Fernandes, a native reacher in the Methodist Episcopal Mission in Anola, Portuguese West Africa. In personal appearnce he is not prepossessing, being no longer young, aving a rugged, characteristically negro face, eeply pock-marked, and a somewhat blunt and forard manner; but he has proved in many tests that is heart is white, and that he has a character of terling qualities. He is an intelligent man, of conderable education, speaking and writing well his ative Kimbundu and the Portuguese language, and revious to his conversion, at adult age, had taught school of his own and held responsible commercial ositions with credit. He was drawn to the mission rst by a desire to learn English, but the "word" hich he heard there led to his conversion, and he ecame a thorough-going Christian. After serving ome years as a helper in various capacities in the ission, he started out, with no promise of support, o teach and preach among the people of his own naive district of Ambaca.

At the place where he put down upon arrival he as at first welcomed, but later was made to feel hat they would like to get rid of him. Near at and, however, was the village of the chief Hombo-Njinji, one of the few remaining native chieftainhips in the district of Ambaca, where fifty-four hiefs, or "sobas," as they are called, rebelled gainst the Portuguese government and made war 1874. The Hombo-a-Nji..ji community was noted s far back as the oldest now living can remember or shiftlessness, quarrelsomeness and poverty, in he midst of more thrifty neighbors. At this time new chief had recently been chosen, and brought o the place from a distance, but he was as yet little nown locally. Joao sent a message to him inquiring if he would be welcome to come to his village, nd the chief not only invited him to come, but sent ome of his people to bring him with his things, and laced a house at his disposal until he should be able o build one of his own.

This village to which Joao came with his family as a thoroughly heathen one, notwithstanding the act that some of the men, including the chief himelf, were civilized enough to wear European costume and could read and write to some extent. The sual heathen conditions prevailed: polygamy, of ourse, was practised, and easy divorce; drunkenness was common, and thrift discouraged. The evil pirits and fetiches were held in great awe, and the itch doctor consulted in all difficulties. Funerals nd other special celebrations were characterized by bscene and riotous revelry.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the condition f "Soba" Hombo and his people at that time, comon also to all that region, was thire superstitious ear. The chief himself had been ill a great deal ince coming to the village, and divinations were beng conducted to learn the cause, one of the old men eing suspected of witchcraft. The village was situated on the bank of a beautiful stream of water, with rich bottom land that could be easily irrigated, but it was understood that the particular genius of the woods to whom that stream was sacred would cause no end of trouble to any one who presumed to so utilize the water, and no one dared.

Anxious for health and life, the witch doctor would frequently be called in, the rites performed for the propitiation of the spirits, and the fees and offerings paid in money, cloth and rum, chickens, goats, sheep and cattle. Then, when people still got sick and died, it was said to be because there were witches among them. Suspicions and accusations would lead to protestations of innocence, and challenges to the sasswood ordeal, resulting in many deaths, the circumstances of which would be kept as quiet as possible, for drinking sasswood was known to be an offense against the government.

Once, while Joao was at Hombo, some men from another tribe came around Ambaca with a magic horn, the "kibaxi," said to be endowed with wonderful powers and able infallibly to smell out witches. These witch-hunters lived high, and "cleaned up" no small gain in fees from the different villages, all anxious to find out who the obnoxious person among them might be. Before the people all assembled, the men would go through their performances, three or four of them with their hands on a large antelope horn in an upright position, which would presently become violently agitated, requiring all their strength to hold it, and, pulling them around, would at length poke itself (?) with a thump against some one of the bystanders, who was thus shown to be a witch. This person's own family would at once turn on him, witch-hunters and villagers would join in beating him unmercifully, and to redeem his life he must pay largely in live stock and submit to whatever was said to be necessary to render his witchcraft ineffective.

Into such a community came Joao, the Christian teacher. His school teaching was appreciated, for the Ambaca people are of a studious turn of mind. But perhaps his first real hold on the people was obtained by his braving the spirit of the stream, and by his own hard work and that of his boys, for no one else would help him, digging an irrigating ditch, which enabled him to water several acres of fine land, on which he and the villagers could grow crops the year round. Then he was skilful in the use of native herbs and some foreign medicines, and by his success in this line, and by what he as one of themselves could tell them of his own experience in the follies of fetichism, he gradually began to make inroads on their superstition and to get their attention to his Gospel message. The chief himself, after some hesitation, embraced the truth and was converted, and as a consequence took the lead in bringing his people into line with Christian principles and practice. It involved much conflict with the heathen element among his relatives and people, but the irreconcilables have at length withdrawn to a separate village, and Hombo has become a Christian community.

Soba Hombo, after breaking with many lesser superstitions, came to a supreme test upon occasion of the death of the custodian of the family talisman, the great fetich Nganga Kasenda, an idol supposed to represent the most powerful of all the demon spirits known to the natives of Angola, the guardian of their lives, always mentioned with awe, and in whose propitiation they spent a large part of their substance. Few even among the natives had ever seen this idol, so carefully and secretly was it guarded, nor could a look at it have been purchased by the curious foreigner, "even for ten head of cattle." It was, therefore, a great step when the chief, in spite of the resentful opposition of some of his people and the fears of the rest, went and brought the Nganga Kasenda from the place where it was kept and gave it up. Great also was the sensation to see this object of superstitious fear carried about openly, passed from hand to hand, and subjected to indignity, as Joao and the chief have gone about the villages exhorting their fellows to "turn from these vanities to serve the living God."

A sacred tree grew near Hombo, which was held in great awe, and offerings were made to the spirit which haunted the spot. As a further means of breaking the power of superstition, Joao determined to cut this tree down, and proceeded to do so with two of his boys, braving the dire consequences which the heathen prophesied would follow. Sure enough, upon his return from the tree cutting, Joao was taken with unaccountable twitchings in various parts of the body and other symptoms of a "stroke" of some kind. Nothing daunted, however, he went to bed, committing his case to God, while the chief and one or two others came to his room and prayed earnestly, "O Lord, we know we must all die some time, yet let nothing befall our teacher now, when it will certainly mean victory for the evil spirits and heathen people; make him well this time, for thine own praise." And Joao did get well.

At Hombo now all the charms and idols have been given up and burnt, no heathenish rites are allowed, and no drunkenness; each man has but one wife, and the Sabbath is strictly observed. Early every morning the chief conducts prayers in his own large house, and all the village attend. Hymns are sung, a portion of Scripture is read and explained, and the voice of prayer and praise goes up to God. The witch doctors now, in passing Hombo, commonly cover up their trappings, and silence their gongs and bells until past the place. On Sunday anywhere from fifty to a hundred cleanly and neatly clad people assemble in the mission chapel, and there by themselves, with not a white missionary within sixty miles, the regular services are conducted with reverence and devotion. On his last visit here, the district superintendent baptized thirty-two and celebrated seven Christian marriages. One of Joao's scholars is the chief's right-hand man in conducting daily prayers, and already quite a preacher. Another has gone out and started a Christian school of his own, and is making disciples.

Thus the good work goes on, and the missionaries "thank God and take courage."

HOME AND FOREIGN TOPICS OF INTEREST

—LONDON, THE WORLD'S greatest metropolis, has now 7,537,190 f population. Forty thousand marriages are celebrated in that ity yearly. It has 148,600 paupers, and 2,151 miles of streets. t imports $1,200,000,000 in varied merchandise, and exports 370,000,000 of home products. And the big city is still rowing.

—"SHOULD A WOMAN use her own or her husband's first name?" s a question that is just now agitating New York suffragists. t a meeting of the Woman's Legislative League recently it as warmly debated, and not a few were in favor of the ladies tanding by their own first names as a measure of independence. Some of the debaters suggested using both. The sense of the majority, however, was that, for policy's sake and "to humor husbands so that they might favor giving the ballot to their wives," it would be advisable to fight under their husbands' names. "In this way," remarked one worldly-wise matron, "we will receive greater consideration from them and have a stronger influence as a sex."

—"THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH." On all sides everywhere change is the order of nature, the law of events. Within a single lifetime, one has witnessed upheavals and transformations in the social and political order of at least six of the world's great governments. In several countries the struggle between the wealthy and powerful classes and the industrials is just reaching that acute stage which preeedes an important change. In our own land, with its increasing population, its $279,000,000 annual budget for Army and Navy and its $660,000,000 regular yearly government expenditures, we are exceptionally fortunate in the vastness of our natural resources and in our capacity for quick reeuperation. But our national wealth is not inexhaustible. It would be wise statesmanship to take note of the unforeseen financial straits of other governments and be economical. Excessive liberality becomes a crime at the exact point where it ceases to be a virtue.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Late Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly at the Bible House, New York City. The officers of "The Christian Herald" are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, Bible House; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

House-Cleaning Time

IT is a good sign when the house-cleaning fever seizes a community; a better when it affects a whole State, and best of all when a nation girds itself resolutely for the task. Something of this sort is under way at the present time in many parts of the country. It is surely no common coincidence that gives birth to reform crusades in a dozen different localities simultaneously. We believe it is something that proceeds from a deeper source — the awakening of the public conscience. How else can these results be explained? In Pittsburg, we have the spectacle of a reform wave which is sweeping official grafters and business corruptionists into jail, the latest being a bank president, twenty times a millionaire, who goes to prison for using his wealth to buy legislation. In Illinois, the United States senatorial election inquiry has resulted in startling revelations, which must produce a wholesome effect in that State. Saratoga, long the gamblers' paradise, has expelled the blackleg fraternity. Race-track gambling has received its deathblow in the East, beginning with New York. As collateral evidence of the same general movement, we see the strong hand of the Federal government reaching out to check a railroad conspiracy in over thirty States to suppress competition and force higher rates. Looking westward, we note the same firm hand halting the despoilers of the national domain, regardless of their great wealth and high position. These are all cheering indications of a general moral house-cleaning. Even the lawyers themselves have taken up the broom and are proceeding to clear out the cobwebs in the Federal courts, which have too long impeded the course of justice and imposed many cruel and unnecessary delays. We would say a word of cheer to those who have been at the front in this house-cleaning movement. All honor to them and all success to their work! But more courageous men of the Heney type are needed, if the house-cleaning is to be thorough, and if grafters, corruptionists and plotters against honesty in public life and business are to receive their just due.

The Turn of the Tide in Nicaragua

A FEW months ago it looked as if the cause of the insurgents in blood-stained Nicaragua was a hopeless one and President Madriz seemed destined to remain more or less comfortably (in Latin-American countries it is usually less), for some time to come in the presidential chair. The insurgents under Estrada had little ammunition; no money to carry on the campaign, and death and desertion had weakened the ranks. Estrada, however, seems to be one of the most determined insurgents that ever tried to change the political complexion of a Spanish-American country, where bullets are votes and the gatling is substituted for the ballot box. He has kept hammering away at the party in power until, to the surprise of America and Europe, he has inflicted several stunning defeats on the government forces, and Madriz, at this writing, is making desperate efforts to save the remnant of his forces. On the east coast he has only about three hundred men, and Bluefields no longer obeys the orders of the nominal president.

Dr. Madriz is a protégé of the former bloody dictator, who was responsible for the butchery of Groce and Cannon, the two young Americans. He has carried things with a high hand, and recently his man-of-war searched an American vessel, almost an act of war. His defeat, therefore, will not cause keen regret to our government at Washington, whose patience is strained to the utmost by the frequent carnivals of blood in which Central America seems to indulge as regularly as the rest of the world takes its meals. South America has remained in a state of comparative peace for some time, though even there they are watching an international war-dance. Central America will learn, will be made to learn later, that it must have decent and stable governments. The rest of the world will demand it. In the present instance the sympathy of most thinking people is with the force of Estrada, who is endeavoring to break the tyrannical rule under which the country has so long labored. Zelaya, against whom he first directed his arms, resembled nothing so much as one of the petty rulers of the sixteenth century; his methods were merciless; he was safe only as long as he could continue his reign of terror. Estrada would make a more enlightened ruler, and good government could be looked for if the dove of peace could find a place to alight for a while between shots.

Roosevelt and the British Lion

COLONEL ROOSEVELT has not had his hunting experience in the wild African jungle for nothing. Consequently, when he faced the British Lion in the Guildhall in London, a few days ago, to be presented with the honorary freedom of the city, he showed the same fearless front that marked him at Nairobi, where they still remember him as a "mighty hunter." So, on this occasion when he let loose one of his happy little cyclonic speeches, the result was remarkable. The conservative London functionaries sat up and wondered whether they had heard aright. Never had they known the British Lion to be handled quite so familiarly. Accustomed as they are to civic oratory of the formal and conventional sort, they were naturally amazed when the Colonel unlimbered his battery of verbal artillery and told them a few things he thought they ought to know. He told them that Egypt, which he had recently visited, was totally unfit for self-government, and that the blame for the unrest and the assassination plots must be laid at the door of its British rulers, who had made the mistake of governing with too light a hand, where firmness was needed. Here he might have introduced effectively Kaiser William's "mailed fist" idea, but he refrained. He did tell them, however, that the present state of affairs in Egypt was a menace to the empire and to civilization, and he hinted that if a country does not assume its proper responsibility in such a case that country should get out. Of course, it was all said in the way of kindness, although the delivery was impulsive and strenuous. Some of the English newspapers do not seem to agree altogether with the Colonel's views as to the handling of Egyptian affairs. They apparently believe that the application of the "mailed fist" might precipitate a serious crisis, so they prefer careful diplomacy in dealing with a rather delicate situation. On the whole, however, British popular opinion is that Roosevelt, by his plain speech, has done the country a service, even if he did twist the lion's tail a trifle harder than was necessary.

Knights of the Blue

GLENN CURTISS' aeroplane flight from Albany to New York deserves to rank as an historic achievement. Three centuries ago, in 1609, the Half Moon made the same journey in eleven days; in 1807 the Clermont made the trip in thirty-two hours; the average first-class river steamboats now make it in nine and one-half hours; the Empire State Express makes its daily run in two hours and forty minutes, and Curtiss made the distance—137 miles—in 152 minutes, eight minutes faster than the express train! Deducting his short stop at Poughkeepsie, Curtiss' actual flying time was fifty-four and four-fifths miles per hour. It was not the longest trip on record, the honor of which belongs to Paulhan, who covered the 186 miles from Manchester to London in a single flight; but his speed was far slower than that of Curtiss on his little biplane. Besides, the American had to contend with a rugged country, with many hills and valleys and a variety of perplexing air currents, while the English trial was over a comparatively level area. Our splendid advance in practical aeronautics is a matter for congratulation, but we do not share the sanguine expectations of some of the "bird men" as to the value of the aeroplane in war, or commerce, in the near future. We are still a long way off from the daily aerial passenger route, the trans-Atlantic flyer, the overhead express and the devastating navies of the skies. These belong to the domain of the imaginative inventor and the literary romancer. But the day of the aeroplane is surely on the way. The tempting prizes now offered will induce the aviators to take unusual risks. For his great achievement, Curtiss won $10,000 offered by the New York World, but now premiums are announced aggregating $55,000 for flights from New York to Chicago and New York to St. Louis. These will doubtless bring out all the famous aeronauts, and we may look forward to seeing Paulhan, Latham and Bleriot the Channel flyer, as well as Rolls, the Englishman, who on June 2 crossed and recrossed the Channel without alighting. A contest between these knights of the blue will be well worth seeing.

Surprising the Railroads

IT is evident that the federal injunction, secured from Judge Dyer of the United States District Court at Hannibal, Mo., and served upon the Western Trunk lines, took the railroad magnates by surprise. They had agreed upon a general plan to force an increase of 15 to 35 per cent. in freight rates and there seemed to be plain sailing ahead and no opposition. The Eastern roads, awaiting the result of the scheme, were ready to adopt a similar policy. But somebody leaked and suddenly, like a bolt from the blue, came the injunction, blocking the entire project. This rude interruption to their efforts to force exorbitant rates on shippers without competition and in violation of the Sherman Act, affects all the roads west of the Mississippi. The Western Traffic Association claims that the proposed increase was necessitated by the condition of business and it is intimated that the failure of the plan will compel a reduction of dividends and possibly of wages also. Railroad securities on the New York Stock Exchange have already experienced a sharp decline as a result of the injunction, which Attorney-General Wickersham secured at the request of Western shippers, who made a formal petition for protection. Twenty-five roads are mentioned in the injunction as being engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy, and with having contrived to suppress all competition in respect to fares and charges and to "unjustly and oppressively increase rates" to a point greatly in excess of that which would have prevailed under normal conditions. Mr. Wickersham's move was made after consultation with the President. Unquestionably the railroads will fight the injunction, but their battle will probably be a losing one. A significant indication of the prospect may be gathered from the fact that on the same day upon which the injunction was issued, the United States Supreme Court in Washington upheld the action of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in ordering a reduction of freight rates in the Missouri River and Denver rate cases. These cases were based upon charges made by cities that other points got more favorable rates than they did, and they proved their case to the court's satisfaction. Incidentally, it is believed that the present proceedings may yet be extended to include the general concerted advance in commuters' rates among the leading Eastern railroads.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 15, 1910

	PAGE
Curtiss' Wonderful Aeroplane Flight	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	558
Columbia University's Great Sundial (Illustrated)	558
A Strange Indian Revival (Illustrated)	559, 571
The Unea ned Throne. Sermon By Bishop Wm. Alfred Quayle	560, 561
The Children's Pulpit. By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	561
A Filipino Heroine	561
The Plague of Municipal Misrule (Illus.) By E. R. Johnstone	562, 567
How Joao Fought the Idols (Illustrated) By Herbert C. Whitey	563
Our Editorial Forum	564
The Bible and Newspaper (Illustrated)	565
When George V. Was Our Guest (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	566
People Who Are Talked About (Portraits)	567
The Strawberry Handkerchief Serial Story by Amelia E. Barr	568, 569
The Passing of Halley's Comet. By Prof. Leland	570
A Great Festival of Sacred Song By Harry Chapin Plummer	571
The World Harvest Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	572, 573
Our Smallest Subscriber (Portrait)	573
Young People's Societies	574
Curtiss' "Air Line" to New York	575

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Memorial Day Parade

PERHAPS the most significant parade on Memorial Day was that of the Grand Army of the Republic in New York City. President 'aft reviewed the parade from a stand at the Sol-iers' and Sailors' Monument at Riverside Drive and ighty-ninth Street. Many distinguished officers nd civilians stood with the President as the procession passed, including two major-generals, who took art in the great review of the Union Army in Vashington directly after peace had been declared, eneral Daniel E. Sigels and General Julius H. tahl. The parade included twenty thousand vet-rans, regulars, national guardsmen, members of adet corps, and other semi-military organizations. he ranks of the veterans of the Civil War are so in that not many more than a thousand of them ppeared in the parade. The John A. Dix Post ame past in long black coats and white helmets. ne of them kept up as best he could on crutches, nd as the old fellow saluted the President, Mr. Taft imself led off the cheering. The Lafayette Post ad uniforms of black tunic and white trousers, but ey entrusted their flags to the arms of men ounger than themselves. There was in the ranks e one woman member of the G. A. R., Mrs. Katie urnell, who went all through the Civil War as the mpanion of her husband, who was in the Rhode sland Heavy Artillery. The Far-agut Post of the G. A. R. furnished wenty-two men. Two of the com-ades carried an immense wreath hich had been sent to them from e Farragut School in St. Louis, ought with the one-cent contribu-ons of 15,000 school children to be laced on the famous admiral's rave in Woodlawn Cemetery. The eaking exercises at the reviewing and were scarcely over when a arful thunderstorm drove the resident and the people to cover. he nation honors itself in remem-ering the deeds and sacrifices of s heroes and in scattering beauti-l, fragrant flowers on their raves. The custom of school chil-ren participating with the veter-ns in the memorial services is eautiful and beneficial to the sing generation. All Americans, cluding the veterans of the Civil ar on both sides, rejoice at the aternal spirit which exists be-veen the North and South. As ctions of this country, we are ound together by the bridges hich span our streams, the con-nuous steel rails that support our ains, and the wires that transmit r messages. We are bound to-ether by the very birds that ex-hange visits with us, and by the lken canopy that shuts us in nder the same roof, and we will now no North, no South, no East, West, but a common America, nd bound together by the golden rds of interest and the softer silken ties of love, e will move harmoniously upward, and receive om the hand of the future the fortune of ever-sting permanency. The first man killed in the panish-American War was the son of the first onfederate officer who fell in the war of '61. In e Spanish War, a Grant, and a Lee, and a Joe heeler, and the sons of those who wore the gray nd those who wore the blue, fought under the old ag, and the people of the Southland to-day vie with e people of the North in their loyalty to "Old lory." The eloquent voices of patriotism on Me-orial Day remind us of the saying:

He being dead yet speaketh. (Heb. 11:4.)

President Taft Reviewing the Memorial Day Parade, New York

uilt Church in a Day

The Central Christian Church of Peoria, Ill., was ilt in record-breaking time. It took just ten hours l told to complete the structure ready for occu-ncy. One hundred and ninety men, members of e congregation, started to work at eight o'clock n the morning of May 30, and at six o'clock the ening chimes on other churches throughout wn were rung to announce the completion of the ilding. The Rev. Mr. Turner, pastor of the urch, conducted memorial services in the church night. The material for the building was given various concerns in Peoria and other cities. The ason why this church was built in so short a time that there were so many persons who were en-aged in the task and so many hearts inspiring their hands. It is the many hands that make light work, and to have a complete church membership busy from the motive of love is to build up swiftly and beautifully the loveliest spiritual temples. The reason for the swift building of the church at Peoria suggests the rapidity with which Nehemiah rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem, and the many enthusiastic workmen that were engaged in the task.

So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work. (Neh. 4:6.)

Important Scientist Gone

The death of Robert Koch has removed from the world one of the most distinguished scientists and benefactors of the generation. He was born in Klausthal, Hanover, in 1843, and filled a life up full of the most tireless and intelligent investigation of the causes of disease and agencies of health. In 1885 he was appointed professor at the University of Berlin. In 1891 he was made professor of the Bacteriological Institute in Berlin. Twenty-eight years ago he discovered the bacillus of consumption, and the year following, in his investigations in Egypt and India, he found the cholera germ. Science and suffering humanity made sure that a man who could make such accurate diagnosis, and describe the color and form of the individual germs of the deadly diseases that depopulate the earth, would also be able to discover infallible remedies for them, but in this they were mistaken; yet his experiments and unquestioned data enable the whole world of medical science to set itself to the task of finding antidotes to these murderous plagues, and thousands, if not millions, of lives have already been prolonged by the remedies that have been administered by men who have been guided in their practice by the scientific information furnished by Koch, "the world-famed bacteriologist." There is beauty and real heroism in a life so completely and successfully consecrated to the health and happiness of his fellow men, and words are inadequate to express the loss the generation sustained in his removal from the scene of action. There is One who knows the germ of every moral malady, and the cure of every spiritual disease. That cure is His own life and love. The woman that touched the hem of Christ's garment with her hand and his heart with her faith felt the curative power of the Great Physician.

And she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague. (Mark 5:29.)

Death's Terrible Toll

During the session of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Atlantic City, May 22, there was a meeting held in the Assembly Hall of the million-dollar pier of 10,000 persons, who had been called together in the interest of the department of church and labor of the Presbyterian Church. Congressman Bennett, of New York City, in an address stated that the coming report of the Immigration Commission would startle the world with its figures on the killing of workmen in American factories, and especially among workers in factories which are unorganized and unable to force measures of protection. Rev. Charles H. Stelzle quoted figures showing that 30,000 industrial workers are killed every year; that the railroads alone kill 12,000 and injure 120,000 more. He said the death rate among the poor is 100 per cent. greater than among the rich, and that infant mortality in the laboring class is more than one-third greater than among the employing class. In our haste for wealth and success we are criminally careless with reference to human life, and though there seem to be improvements in laws and habits, throwing additional safeguards around the lives of the common people, still there is recklessness enough about our institutions to call down upon us the protests of the just and the anger of heaven, and provoke the awful word spoken to the first murderer:

The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground. (Gen. 4:10.)

Killed Racetrack Gambling

Racetrack gambling was running riot in New York State. Governor Hughes immediately upon his election began to plan for its overthrow. He made hostility to it the moral and even political feature of his administration, the first term. The moral conflict was one of the most severe the State has ever known, and at times the issue seemed to be in the balance, with the likelihood of failure for the Governor and the church people generally who stood behind him. The strong bills whose passage the Governor at last secured were evaded, disregarded and openly broken by the powerful lawless gang of gamblers that infested the racetrack. Bent on killing the beast, Governor Hughes secured the passage of a bill at the closing session of the legislature just adjourned, making betting a prison offense, and making directors of racing associations personally liable if betting occurs within their racing enclosures. The Jockey Clubs of the State say that this drastic bill will not only destroy racetrack gambling but will kill horse-racing itself, and that all the beautiful race-courses of the State, on which so much money has been expended, will be compelled to shut their gates. This is the square confession of the sporting fraternity, that the racetrack is not primarily for breeding good horses, or securing good speed, but for the purpose of promoting the most fascinating and perhaps dangerous type of gambling known, which has wrecked the fortunes, characters, and even lives, of some of the most promising young men of our land. Most of the States of the Union have set their faces to the destruction of this widespread evil and disgrace. The words of the Psalmist give a pretty good description of the gang of racetrack gamblers:

The bands of the wicked have robbed me. (Ps. 119:61.)

Emperor's Hand Poisoned

The German Emperor was bitten on the hand by a small insect recently, and it was so poisoned that the court physician found it necessary to cut into and cleanse the affected parts. For the time being the Emperor has delegated the signature of State documents to Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm, and all urgent decrees will appear with the double signatures of the Crown Prince and the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, preceded by the notation, "By order of the Emperor." This is the first time since Wilhelm took the throne that State documents have borne any other but his own signature. The Emperor constitutionally has clean flesh and pure blood, and it is likely that he will have no further trouble now from the insect bite. The biting of the Emperor's hand suggests how easily the soul can be infected with sin and how necessary is the divine surgery which removes the corruption and cleanses the heart with the blood of Christ. Christ refers to the cure of the body of the serpent's bite as a symbol of the cure of the soul from the poison of sin.

And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. (John 3:14, 15.)

When Edward Was Our Guest

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

An Earthly Immortality

WE have had recently what might be called an object lesson in earthly immortality. The immortality is not that of an individual, but of an office. "The king is dead. Long live the king," is a familiar phrase. We have heard it often. The breath was hardly gone from the lips of King Edward before King George the Fifth succeeded him on England's throne. While still the beloved monarch awaited burial his son was proclaimed sovereign with pomp and pageantry, and the cheers of thousands testified their sturdy loyalty to the old régime. England has been tossed on tempestuous political seas within this year, and there can be little doubt that she is on the eve of important changes which will transform ancient customs. King Edward recoiled from some of these changes, and his physical strength may very possibly have been weakened by the mental strain to which he had been subjected. Let this be as it may, the island realm has once more witnessed a ceremonial of mediæval character, in itself a proof that England may for centuries yet cling tenaciously to its present form of government. The king is dead, the king whose tact and courtesy and genial bonhomie made him conspicuous among the men of his time. Long live the new king, who may be in many ways a contrast to his father, but who is said to be scholarly, thoughtful, philosophical and to some extent modern.

Rolling back the curtain of the past, there are some of us who remember the visit to this country many years ago of the youthful Prince of Wales, Albert Edward. It is difficult to associate the slim boyish figure of the young prince, his blonde coloring and extremely modest air, with the stout, somewhat burly, king who wore royal robes with so great a dignity. One woman who met him then when he was the guest of honor at New York University can see him still in her mind's eye surrounded by courtly gentlemen who composed his suite. The chancellor of the university, Rev. Dr. Ferris, a stately and elegant looking man with white hair, was far more kingly in appearance than any one else in a brilliant group who might, as they stood there, have well formed a historic picture. Between that day and the present the years have gone on, swiftly crowded with great issues. During the long life of Queen Victoria, who was so early widowed, the Prince of Wales assumed multiform duties and was constantly in one and another way a man who worked hard and did his duty. He had a gift which is especially useful to kings and other public men. He could remember the faces and the names of the most obscure people, and although he might have met only once a visitor from the provinces or a country clergyman, he was able to greet the man as if he had been an old friend. Whether or not the new king has the same ability to recognize and remember those whom he meets is uncertain. If this gift is his by right of birth, it will aid his popularity to a wonderful extent.

Queen Mary was the pet of the English people from her lovely girlhood, and was everywhere spoken of affectionately as the Princess May. Predictions are already freely made that her court will resemble that of Queen Victoria rather than that of Queen Alexandra. Americans can wish for her nothing better than that she may be as widely honored and as truly loved as was that lamented queen.

. . .

From a Busy House-mother

"I have a son nineteen years of age, and I lost another son at the age of thirteen years. I have two little girls, one three years old and the other sixteen months. With my household duties and the care of my little girls, I am kept very busy. I would like to know what story books I could get to help entertain the child of three years, if kindergarten stories would be suitable for her, and also I would like to get her a book of Bible stories. Any reading in the line of mother's duties I greatly appreciate." MRS. J. H.

Little children are fond of rhymes and jingles. A book with that title by the late Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge would please the little girl of three. So would Songs for the Little Ones at Home, published by the American Tract Society. Mothers

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood

HOW DO YOU DO, SIR?

How do you do, sir, how do you do?
You like me, sir, and I like you.
Old Duke, it's a perfectly splendid day,
And we'll have a perfectly splendid play!

Mother won't care if we're out of sight,
When I am with you, she knows I'm all right.
The flowers are in bloom and the skies are blue,
How do you do, Duke, how do you do!

COMFORT ONE ANOTHER

COMFORT one another,
For the way is growing dreary,
And the feet are often weary,
And the heart is very sad.
There is heavy burden bearing,
When it seems that none are caring,
And we half forget that ever we were glad.

Comfort one another,
With the hand-clasp close and tender,
With the sweetness love can render,
And the looks of friendly eyes.
Do not wait with grace unspoken,
When life's daily bread is broken—
Gentle speech is oft like manna from the skies.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

are invited to send the names of any books whic they have liked and which would help this friend

. . .

A Young Housekeeper

"If I may be permitted to ex press my opinion, I think Wome in Council will greatly add to th value and charm of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. No I am a young housekeeper, married eight month and I for one would appreciate hints and sugge tions regarding cooking or anything which concern housekeeping. I would be glad to receive hel through your page for the care of the baby, even I should never need it personally. I believe man young mothers know too little about caring for thei babies." W. G.

The Mother's Manual, by Dr. Emm line L. Coolidge, is a book which man young mothers should read and ponde They would find it very helpful. Gent Measures in the Training of the Youn by Jacob Abbott, should be in evei home where there are little children.

. . .

A Lonely Life

"I have lived on a lon ranch in Montana fo twenty-seven year My surroundings have not been pleasin nor congenial to my nature. The cotto wood groves which God gave, surroun ing the log cabin in which I have live have been the only source of heaven enjoyment. Those have been sacrifice to make room for a new house, whic can never make good their loss to n in beautiful foliage and much-neede shade. The extreme hardship of m past life has made me a semi-invalid fo many years. My life has been one personal sacrifice, and what I need mo is the secret of divine happiness. any of the Women in Council feel di posed to favor me, a shut-in, with letter of cheer and loving counsel, I wi try to reward them."

MRS. FRANCES I. MCCREA.
Sheridan, Mont.

I cannot tell in a brief sentence or tw the sympathy I feel with a woman wh prefers the company of the trees, the shade and their leafy screen, even whe living in a log cabin, to the new hous to make room for which the trees ha been cleared away. The house will soo become a home and other trees ma grow. Then, too, there is a longin here for the secret we all most wish have in our hearts, the secret of restin in the Lord, and waiting patiently f Him. Here, do you not think, is th blissful heavenly secret, which mak life always worth living?

. . .

A Word from an Aged Matron

"When I heard of D Klopsch's death seemed too sad to true. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is ve dear to me. Every page is interestin and helpful. It has been a long tim eighty-four years, since I commenc life's journey, and my steps are u steady, but I am waiting the appointed time, kno ing "that all things work for good to them that lo God." N. P.

It is an honor to receive a letter of this warm an cordial tone from one whom we would like to seat our arm chair with a footstool under her feet.

. . .

A Well Wisher

"Let us indeed have Women Council providing we also ha our Family Page just as it h been. I was just wishing for something of t kind when I came upon your happy suggestion. to what part of the page I have liked best I cann say, as all of it is always so good." N. D.

. . .

Space forbids and modesty prohibits the public tion of many loving appreciations which have float in fragrant as the scent of flowers, and cheered as I sat beside my desk. Obviously, this new fe ture is receiving hearty endorsement. One and are invited to speak in meeting.

PEOPLE IN THE PUBLIC EYE

PEAKING of Judge Gray, the Del- aware man who will represent this untry at the coming fishery arbitra- on at The Hague, Grover Cleveland ce said:

"I do not believe that I have ever me across a man better fitted for gh responsibility than George Gray Delaware. If he had lived in any ate with sufficient population and ea to give it political influence, noth- g could have kept him from becoming e candidate of his party for Presi- nt, and a strong one he would have en. Well trained, of perfect temper d poise, conciliatory and yet firm th in opinion and purpose, fair to all, t especially true his friends and s principles, he uld represent the eas and traditions the republic at eir best."

Circuit Judge of e United States, r three terms nator at Wash- gton, commission- of the Federal vernment in mat- rs of delicate and ost important ne- tiation and chief bitrator in labor sputes that in the timation of many volved in a su- eme degree the ture of the indus- ial system of the untry, Judge ray has well earn- the respect and miration of the American people.

The father of Judge Gray, Andrew Gray, was one of the distinguished wyers of Delaware and stood on even rms with James F. Bayard and Sec- tary Clayton. George Gray was rn at New Castle on May 4, 1840. e was graduated at Princeton Col- ge in 1859. After graduation he udied law with his father and at arvard College and was admitted to e bar in 1863.

It was fitting in every way, when r. Bayard was appointed Secretary State by Mr. Cleveland at the be- nning of his first term, 1885, that r. Gray should be named as his suc- ssor. From his first entrance upon s duties as a Senator Mr. Gray has en recognized as a leader. He has own the same diligence in all the offices he has filled. Besides those mentioned he was appointed to the Joint High Commission to settle the differences between this country and Canada and was named by President McKinley a member of the Permanent Court of International Arbitration provided for by the treaty of The Hague. He served as arbitrator in the dispute between the United States and San Domingo, arising out of the claims of the San Domingo Improvement Company in 1903, amounting to $4,500,000. In 1902 President Roosevelt selected Judge Gray as the leading member of what has come to be known as the Anthracite Arbitration Commission. The difficulties that he overcame in this work were prodigious. It has been observed by a very eminent lawyer, opposed to him in politics, that in all probability no other man in the country could have brought peace out of the anthracite war as Judge Gray did.

No one could better represent this country at the forthcoming meeting at The Hague than such a man as this. The arbitrators will assemble some time this month. The question involved is due to the following circumstances:

American fishermen for many years have complained to the State Department of the unfriendly attitude and the restrictions of the Newfoundland authorities with respect to their rights under the original treaty negotiated between the two countries as far back as 1832. One of the general questions involved is as to whether Colonial or State laws should be permitted to interfere with the terms of the treaty. The Newfoundland government has insisted from the first that their laws and interests must be paramount to any treaty between the mother country and the United States, and holding to this view they have passed laws and promulgated regulations which have seriously interfered with American fishermen in securing bait and supplies and have embarrassed them in many ways with a view, it is believed, of discouraging them from fishing in their waters. The agreement between the United States and Great Britain to arbitrate the questions in controversy provide that both cases shall be submitted to the International Bureau at The Hague. Then the arbitrators are to meet at The Hague for a final hearing and determination. It is expected that the long drawn out dispute will be settled in time for the fishing season, which opens about August 1.

Judge Gray of Delaware

Lieutenant-Governor White

Copyright by Moffett Studio

Charles D. Norton

. . .

WHEN Governor Charles Hughes retires from office in October to take his place on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, he will be succeeded by Lieutenant-Governor Horace White, of whom it is said that the goal of his ambition has long been the governorship of the State of New York. Lieutenant-Governor White is forty-four years of age. He is a nephew of the Hon. Andrew D. White, who was for so many years a prominent figure in public life. Horace White is a lawyer by profession, but from his earliest manhood he has been taking an active interest in political affairs. He was chairman of the State convention that nominated Theodore Roosevelt for Governor in the year 1898. He was elected to the Senate from Syracuse in 1895, and he remained a member of the upper house until he was elected lieutenant-governor two years ago. It was because of the marked ability he manifested in the Senate that Horace White was made lieutenant-governor, and his name has been mentioned as a probable successor to Governor Hughes in case Governor Hughes would not stand for re-election. It is believed that Mr. White can be elected governor when he has filled out the unexpired time of the retiring Governor Hughes. The two men are not at all alike, and it is well known that Lieutenant-Governor White has not always been in harmony with Governor Hughes in some of the things he has done. Both are men of intellectual force and unblemished character and both have come in for sharp criticism on the part of those who have not liked their official acts. Lieutenant-Governor White is a man of wealth and something of an aristocrat, but he is a man of undoubted ability and one in whom it is believed the people may have confidence.

J. L. H.

. . .

CHARLES D. NORTON of Chicago, who has been Assistant-Secretary of the Treasury for some time, has been appointed to the very responsible post of Secretary to President Taft. He succeeds Mr. Carpenter, who has been appointed Minister to Morocco. The new Secretary is to have larger powers than have ever been exercised by a presidential secretary.

THE PLAGUE OF MUNICIPAL MISRULE

Continued from page 562

ut to secure conviction before a petit jury in open ourt. We fumed and stormed, wanted to know What are we coming to?" and all the rest of it, ut the cool attorney shrugged his shoulders—he as straight as a die, mind you, and later did yeo- an's service—and reminded us of the court's cau- on as to indictments that would not stick.

How a Second Daniel Came to Judgment

That grand jury honestly tried to get suitable vidence, but had to give it up, and we all felt angry nd ashamed when we indicted some poor, petty hief on the evidence of police or constable and ould not get a man to tell the truth about the big ascals who, grown hardened from immunity, openly outed the grand jury and all its works.

We were discharged when our time was up and a ew grand jury summoned. It chose as foreman business man who had made money in his city nd was jealous of its fair fame. When the story f "no funds to secure evidence" was told him he aid: "If you had the money could you get the vidence?" The county attorney thought, indeed he as sure, he could.

"Go ahead, then," said the foreman. "I'll furnish he money and I'll expect you to get the evidence. 'here'll be a plenty of cash. See to it there's a urety of conviction."

That solved the problem. The foreman was 'cclaimed a hero by citizens who never thought of oing anything themselves but talked a lot about 'hat should be done. There was more than one istrial, for the rascals fought hard. But in the end there were convictions and convicts' stripes and city cleanliness and a feeling of triumph of decency over dirt.

A Detective's Claim

Some years ago a detective in Chicago—a man of many years' experience and an almost uncanny perception of wrong-doing—said to me: "I don't believe twenty per cent. of the steals going on in the big cities of this country are made public." I suggested that many of them were not found out, but he would not hear to that, saying that not one theft in a thousand but was known by the loser at least. What he intended to impress on me was what he called "wholesale compounding of felonies."

"I know of $2,300,000 stolen in this city," he went on, "and only two of the thieves, each of whom got less than $3,000, were even arrested. The others got off by returning all, or in some cases a major percentage, of their booty."

"Are you talking about thefts from the city or county by officials?" I asked.

"No, not entirely, though there's some of that sort of stealing in the lot too," he answered. "I refer to the officials of corporations—banks, department stores, insurance companies, railways, public-service concerns, transportation or contracting companies. All the big businesses have had thieves in them at one time or another and whenever there's a big haul you'll find the directors, owners, managers, keen on getting as much of it back as possible, even if, to do so, it is necessary to enter into an arrangement with the thieves. I've about come to the conclusion that the best of men have little conscience when their cash is in danger."

In 1901 a Pacific Coast statistician claimed to have arrived, through a system of averages, at the conclusion that sixty-one per cent. of felonies in the United States were against personal property and that of the total (misdemeanors and petty police offenses were not considered) between six and seven per cent. were chargeable to officials who occupied places of trust. I do not know how accurate this computation was nor how worthy of credence was the computer, but it is good to believe that if the charges were true eight years ago they are not so now. We are on the mend. The public conscience is not nearly as pliable as it once was. It is really getting dangerous for an official in public life or private business to be caught stealing. He may go to jail.

Cleaner government in cities is resulting from closer watch on city fathers and treasurers; municipal grafters are getting more wary and defenses once admirable and useful are now liable to sudden assault and capture.

St. Louis, San Francisco, Minneapolis, even New York (the butt of the scoffer for generations), have shown a persistence after the liberties of official crooks that is highly encouraging to official genuines. Galveston suffered spoliation until it evolved a system of government by commission, and Des Moines has followed Galveston's lead. There has been a deal of muck-raking and really the manuring process promises to result in fruits meet for a long due repentance.

E. R. JOHNSTONE.

ZU ZU
GINGER SNAPS
Rain! Rain!! Rain!!! All in vain!
If you lack snap and want ginger, use the old established countersign
ZU ZU
to the grocerman
No one ever heard of a ZU ZU that wasn't good
No! Never !!
5¢
NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

CORNISH

Established Over Half A Century
A Quarter Of A Million In Use

We place a piano or organ in your home, freight paid if you wish on

A Year's Free Trial

giving you easy terms of your own choice, and two years' credit if needed. We positively save you one-half or more on a high grade, sweet toned, durable Cornish piano or organ because we sell to you

Direct From The Factory As Low As Any Dealer Can Buy

Every instrument is bonded for 25 years against defect. The new Cornish book, the most beautiful piano and organ catalog issued, shows the choicest of our 50 latest styles and explains things you ought to know whether you buy from us or elsewhere. The book is yours for the asking. Write for it now and mention the instrument you are interested in—piano or organ.

CORNISH CO. WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY
Established Over Fifty Years.

Safe Ice Cream in Crystal Glass

WITHOUT GRINDING OR CRANKING

Imagine how much more delicious is Ice Cream made in and served from Glass than from Metal. Ptomaine poisoning impossible. Neither Crank, Gear nor Dasher required. Ice Cream firm, smooth and velvety.

Buy the "Sanitary" Crystal Glass Ice Cream Freezer

Invention of a Caterer. Formulas complete with each Freezer.

Directions for Freezing: Simply fill glass Cylinder with prepared ingredients, hermetically seal and pack in any ordinary wooden pail, box or bucket, with Ice (or Snow) and salt in proportions specified and leave till desired for serving. Then take from pack, rinse under cold water faucet, uncover and eject contents by pushing from bottom, slicing in uniform portions; or eject all in an attractive cylindrical loaf.

Commended by thousands of Domestic Science Experts and Housewives. One size only, producing dessert for family of eight Sold by dealers everywhere. If yours cannot supply you, send us his name and we will ship by express upon receipt of price, $1.25. Circulars and Special Offer upon request.

THE CONSOLIDATED MFG. CO., - - 414 Asylum Street, Hartford, Conn.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL." for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Strawberry Handkerchief

A Tale of Colonial Days in Old New York

By AMELIA E. BARR

CHAPTER ELEVEN—Continued

WHEN it was nearly dark Batavius left the ship, went to Maiden Lane for a meal, and then, through crowds of men building bonfires, to the Van Vroom house.

It was darker than usual, for supper was over, Katrina busy in the spinning room, the Captain gone to the stable, and Lady Rose in her room writing a letter to Arent. She left Virginia sitting by the parlor fire, but the girl suddenly remembering a lotion her father needed for one of the horses, threw on her red riding hood and cloak, and ran to the stable with it. As it was very cold, she returned immediately, and as she opened the door at the west end of the hall, Batavius opened the one opposite it, at the east end.

In a moment her very presence changed the temper of the angry man.

"My Virginia!" he cried. "My Virginia, listen to me! Speak with me! I wish to say only what will please thee, dear one—nothing else."

"Well, then, Batavius, come into the parlor. Sit down."

"Thy hand—surely I may touch thy hand."

"No."

"But why?"

"Once you touched my lips—fraudulently and shamefully; once you grasped my arm, suddenly and cruelly. I vowed then you should never touch me again."

"But how? What mean you? On Tuesday we are to be married, three days hence."

"What will happen in three days you know not, and I know not. But though every dominie in America married me to you in three days. I should never be your wife."

"Why?"

"You will not be permitted."

"Am I so ugly in your eyes?"

"Yes."

"Ugly men are often well loved."

"From the first day of your return, I told you the whole truth."

"The whole truth? What then?"

"That I loved Joris Artaveldt, that I had promised to marry him, and would marry no one else."

"All lovers must have their rivals. That I have seen. They try to get the better of each other. Very good; there is nothing unfair in that. Joris had his chance. I had mine."

"It was all unfair. No chance at all had Joris. You had my father, and even my mother, then on your side. Joris was not allowed to see me, speak to me, or write to me."

"Wait yet—one moment. There is a question you must answer me. The strawberry handkerchief that Joris tore and threw at your feet—where is it? I want it."

"You want my handkerchief! My handkerchief! Give it to you!"

"Where is it?"

"I will not tell you."

"I want it. Have it I will."

Virginia smiled, but made no other answer.

"I wonder what you are—witch or woman?"

No answer.

"Do you hear me?—witch or woman?"

No answer.

"Do you hear me?"

"No."

"Where is my handkerchief?"

"Nothing about any handkerchief of yours is of interest to me."

"The torn handkerchief — the one Joris Artaveldt tore!"

"All the gold in the world would not buy it from me."

"Unless you give it to me I will t marry you. Then, what will pe e say?"

"Thank you! Honor your word r once. What people will say—let th n say. I care not."

"You are a bad woman."

"Captain De Vries!" cried L y Rose.

"My lady——"

"You must be drunk or mad! H w dare you?"

"My lady——"

"I heard all you said. Pray wha s the good of dressing yourself in e clothes, if you talk to women lik a blackguard?"

"I beg pardon, my lady——"

"Virginia may forgive you. I n not inclined to do so."

"My lady, you know not all. I h e been badly used. I am——"

"In faith, you have been too v l used. Virginia is an angel. W t are you?"

"A gentleman, I hope."

"Hope is lying to you."

"Upon my honor——"

"Honor is too subtle a thing for y r nature." Then turning to Virgi , she said caressingly, "Kiss me, d . Let us go upstairs. That low fello s so angry—I suppose he might eat u "

At this moment Madame, follo d by a negro carrying a box, appea . She was a little excited, and did t observe the ill-tempered moods of th e present. "Come into the parlor," e cried. "I have something to show yo Virginia and Rose followed her t once. Batavius hesitated, and Mad e added, "Come, Batavius, it conce s you a little, I think."

The parlor was almost dark, t Batavius was eager to please. e sent the negro for candles, and t n threw some logs of wood on the f . In the meantime Madame and R e unfastened the box, and in a few n utes simultaneously uttered a cry f delight. For there in a snowy r closure lay a miracle of beauty— e wedding gown and veil of which e whole town had been talking. I dame spread it over a high chair, a Rose stood entranced before it. I evident admiration quickly gave Ba vius all the courage he needed to press himself.

"I bought it in Calcutta," said tavius proudly. "A guinea a yar paid for it."

"It is lovely! It is in good tast commented Rose.

"There it is, my lady. For my g taste in stuffs and gems I am kno in all the great bazaars of India."

"The veil is quite as exquisite; wh did you get the veil, Captain?" as Rose.

"In Poonah I bought the veil. paid ten pounds for it."

"It is fit for a fairy bridal! A oh, the scent of it!"

Hitherto Virginia had not spok At length Batavius went to her si and said:

"My Virginia, you will look like angel in that dress."

"If I deserve the bad names y called me half an hour ago, no dr will make me an angel."

"I was mad—crazy with my love you—pity me!"

"Batavius," said Madame, "thr on a couple more logs. Let us ha a better light."

"Moeder," he said, "will not pearl chain and bracelets be most su able ornaments?" Then turning Rose he added, "For ten years I w buying pearls for the chain. As mu as fifty pounds I paid for some, others I won by my own——" then hesitated; he saw the question of loot and spoils of battle in Rose's eyes, and in his confusion he stooped, picked up another cedar log, and threw it on the blazing fire. A shower of living sparks flew far and near, and some fell on the wedding garments.

Continued on next page

The Strawberry Handkerchief

Continued from preceding page

In a moment they were in flames. Rose, with a piercing cry, sprang forward to save them, but Madame held her back from the mounting blaze. Batavius, stupefied for one instant, saw in the next that all was lost; and with his booted foot passionately kicked the burning refuse of the wedding splendor on to the glowing hearth. In two or three minutes a handful of blackened tinder was all that remained of the lovely frock and veil. Virginia had risen to her feet, and with a face full of solemn awe and wonder, she speechlessly watched the rapid destruction. Rose cried undisguisedly. Madame wrung her hands. Batavius looked at the débris, and then trembling and terrified, reeled silently out of the room.

As he approached the city his first intent was to go to Captain Lawson.

When he arrived at Maiden Lane he changed his mind. "I will go to my ship," he thought; and he quickened his steps, and was soon within the shelter of her locked cabin. Then he gave way to his feelings, which at this stage were more fearful than angry. He had often heard of haunted ships, and haunted captains, and a mysterious terror weighed upon his wrath. Blame? Only Batavius was to blame. Of his own will he had thrown on the fatal log. Two hours of silent misery brought him no result but a conviction that in some way or other Virginia was accountable for the tragedy. Suddenly there was a loud knocking at his cabin door, and he dared not move or answer it. How could he tell what misfortune was dogging his steps that night? It was therefore a tremendous relief when he heard Captain Lawson call: "Are you within, De Vries?"

"Yes, yes, yes!" he answered joyfully. "I will open the door. So glad am I to see you! I am at my wits' end."

"By George, you look like a man in extremities, De Vries! What mischief is to pay for now?"

Then Batavius opened his whole heart. He told Captain Lawson everything, and he told it with such vivid vehemence of love, hatred, despair, greed, and terror, that the Englishman was both amazed and appalled. Was this the phlegmatic Dutchman?—this man raging with a frenzy of every passion that can torture humanity? But he spoke no word until Batavius, in an exhaustion, full of an awful dread, had finished the story of the fatal wedding garments. Then he asked:

"Are you going to marry this girl? I have always seen that she hated you."

"What can I do? Ever since she was a baby I have intended to marry her, and I have given her a fortune in pearls, and gems, and rich stuffs of all kinds. I thought they would be safe in her keeping till she brought them to me."

"Let the gems and pearls go. I would not marry her for a diamond mine."

"She is so beautiful——"

"Yes, but she is either insane, or very near insanity. She will kill herself—or you—in some hour of trouble."

"If I only had the jewels! The beautiful jewels!"

"Are they worth more than your life?"

"What would you do?"

"Let the girl go. Let the jewels go, and save your own life. How is your business? Can you leave it?"

"Always I can leave it, or go with it, at an hour's notice—that is my way. When do you sail?"

"Sunday morning. Will you go with me?"

"Where to?"

"First to London, then to India."

"I must work. I can not be idle, when I am on a ship."

"I will now tell you something remarkable. Last night Lord Harley asked me if there was any possibility of inducing you to take charge of our transport ships bound for Calcutta. We spoke of your position, and I promised to see you to-day."

"What of my position and reward?"

"You would be Sailing Master Extraordinary; and rank as Captain with a Captain's pay."

"Where and when would I receive my commission?"

"In London. Until then, sail as my guest."

"No, I will carry The Destroyer across the Atlantic. Idle at sea I could not be."

At these words Lawson stretched out his hand to Batavius. "The King will thank you," he said; "the Admiralty Board will reward you well."

"I will go. My word is my bond. I never break it."

"Do not see that girl again."

"To speak the truth, I am afraid of her."

"That is a wise decision. Now tell me at what hour you will board The Destroyer?"

Batavius was thoughtful for a few minutes, then with a smile of malicious pleasure he said, "To-morrow at eight o'clock I will meet you at the King's Arms. At ten o'clock you will ask the landlord to send a couple of his men to The Arms of Stuyvesant with me, as you are ordered to leave by the next tide. At midnight we will lift the anchors."

To be continued

The Bible

THIS Book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners, and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decisions are immutable. Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practise it to be holy. It contains light to direct you, food to support you, and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's charter. Here Paradise is restored, heaven opened, and the gates of hell disclosed. Christ is its grand subject, our good its design, and the glory of God its end. It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and guide the feet. Read it slowly, frequently, prayerfully. It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory, and a river of pleasure. It is given you in life, will be opened in judgment, and be remembered forever. It involves the highest responsibility, will reward the greatest labor, and condemn all who trifle with its sacred contents. SELECTED.

A Pleasing Change

Dear Editor: Good, wholesome, inspiring reading is THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. I have almost forgotten The Home Herald, and I am exceedingly pleased with the change. Your paper, or rather our paper, is well named. May God continue his blessings through this channel. J. G. KEMP.

Champaign, Ill.

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

Words of Praise from Famous People

A Shield of Strength For the Nervous

Our delicately organized nervous system was never intended to combat the intense activities of modern life—the hurry and worry—the strain and drain to which we daily subject it.

Nerve disorders are almost universal. Sleeplessness—loss of appetite—indigestion—weariness—extreme fatigue, etc., are all due to nervous conditions. You need the shield of strength against nervous breakdown that Sanatogen provides.

It renews the vigor—repairs the wear—re-establishes the normal. And all in Nature's own way—not a lash to jaded nerves, but an up-builder and re-energizer.

Sanatogen combines Albumen—Nature's tissue food—with Sodium Glycero-phosphate—the most wonderful brain and nerve revitalizer known. It is easily assimilated and provides just the health-giving, strength-supplying elements your nerves and body need. It is a fine, white powder, readily soluble in water, chocolate, milk, etc.

Write for Dr. Saleeby's Book

"The Will To Do" is this internationally famed physician-author's latest contribution to medical literature. Dr. Saleeby has the knack of imparting most valuable advice in such a manner that it makes pleasant reading, and this book is no exception to his readable style. It lays down some new rules in health and hygiene and graphically explains the relation between the nervous system and our everyday life. A copy mailed with our compliments upon request.

Sanatogen is sold in three sizes $1, $1.90 and $3.60

Get it from your druggist—if not obtainable from him, write

THE BAUER CHEMICAL CO.
Everett Bldg., 4th Ave., New York

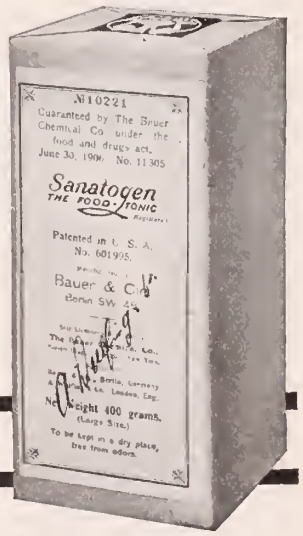
Late King Edward's Physician

Dr. Ernest Ott, Marienbad: "I have been using Sanatogen for a number of years in my practice with excellent results. These results have been notably good in the case of elderly people when it was desirable to build up the strength, to stimulate the bodily functions, and to improve the circulation of the blood."

Emperor of Austria's Private Physician

Surgeon-General Dr. Kerzl, of Vienna: "I have been using Sanatogen with splendid results and recommended it continually and everywhere because I am thoroughly convinced that it is an excellent food-tonic."

Box of Sanatogen in original wrapper as it should come to you from your druggist.



No 10221
Guaranteed by The Bauer Chemical Co. under the food and drugs act, June 30, 1906. No. 11305
Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC
Patented in U. S. A. No. 601935.
Bauer & Co.
Net Weight 400 grams. (Large Size.)

Shoe Elegance

So essential to the well gowned woman, is assured by the use of

Whittemore's Shoe Polishes

They meet every requirement for cleaning and polishing shoes of all kinds and colors.

THEY PRESERVE and BEAUTIFY

Do not soil the clothing or grow sticky.

Finest in Quality Largest in Variety

"Dandy" combination for cleansing and polishing russet or tan shoes, 25c. "Star" size, 10c.

For Women's and Children's Shoes use

"Gilt Edge"

The only black dressing that positively contains oil. Softens and preserves, and imparts a beautiful lustre. Its use saves time, labor and brushes, as it

Shines without Brushing

Always ready. Price, 25c.
"French Gloss" size, 10c.

If your dealer does not keep the kind you want send us his address and stamps for a full size package.

WHITTEMORE BROS. & CO.
20-26 Albany St., Cambridge, Mass.

The Oldest and Largest Manufacturers of Shoe Polishes in the World

The HOTEL WILLARD

256 West Seventy-Sixth Street near Broadway and Riverside Drive

An ideal home for visitors to New York desiring the quiet of a refined neighborhood. ¶ It overlooks the beautiful Hudson, and is in the finest residential district. ¶ The dining room is conducted on both the American and European plan and there is no bar. ¶ The rooms are large, cool, airy and delightful.

Attractive special rates are made from June 1st to September 1st. Room with bath, $1.50 and up. Parlor, bedroom and bath, $2.00 and up. Literature upon request.

ARTHUR T. HARDY, Manager

Shall I Send You My Book

Health, Grace, Beauty

It Tells

—an absolutely sure, scientific and pleasant way of reducing flesh, in the privacy of your own home, without drugs or appliances;

—how the thin may restore a plump, graceful figure;

—how to breathe;

—how to promote a forceful circulation;

—how to strengthen the stomach, intestines, liver, spleen, heart, lungs and nerves, so that the waste of the system is thrown off, and chronic ailments, such as indigestion, constipation, etc., disappear;

—how to keep well, without drugs or medicine, buoyant with energy and ambition;

—how to ward off signs of age—to keep the complexion clear, the eyes bright, the digestion perfect;

—how to cultivate mental and physical poise;

—how to know if you stand and walk correctly, and how to make the right position easy and natural for you;

—how improvement in walk and carriage strengthens character.

I have reduced over 25,000 women and have built up thousands of others, making the figure slender, yet plump and girlish. In all, I have helped nearly 50,000 women to be stronger, more satisfied with their lives.

Tell me in confidence your faults of health or figure. If I cannot help you, I will direct you to the help you need. I never violate a confidence.

Send for this free book to-day. It is full of information of intense interest to every woman. I want you to know of my wonderful work.

SUSANNA COCROFT

Department 18-R, 246 Michigan Blvd., Chicago

A Wardrobe in Any Corner of Your Home

Up in 10 seconds, without nails or screws; taken down as quickly

Pullman Self-Supporting Wardrobe

can be put up in any corner by simply pressing a lever. Made of steel, handsomely oxidized. Has 10 hooks and rod for suit hangers. Takes no floor space like a heavy wardrobe, but has same space for clothes. Has no base to collect dust and there is nothing to move when you sweep.

It is light, strong, durable. Will not injure wall-paper or plaster. Weighs only 4 pounds.

Just the thing to take to your summer cottage, where closets are scarce.

If your dealer cannot supply you, send $2.00 and we will ship, charges prepaid; if west of Mississippi River, add 25c. Money back if Wardrobe is not satisfactory.

Free illustrated booklet upon request

Pullman Mfg Co., 36 Allen Street, Rochester, N. Y.

Salesmen Wanted

Traveling Salesmen earn from $1,000 to $10,000 a year and expenses. Over 700,000 employed in the United States and Canada. The demand for good Salesmen always exceeds the supply. We will teach you to be an expert Salesman by mail in eight weeks and our FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU will assist you to secure a good position. We received calls for Salesmen from over 5,000 firms last year and could not fill our orders. Hundreds of our graduates who formerly earned $25 to $75 a month have since earned from $100 to $500 a month and expenses. Hundreds of good positions open for the spring rush. If you want to secure one of them or increase your earnings, our free book, "A Knight of The Grip" will show you how. Write or call for it to-day. Address nearest office.

Dept. 496, National Salesmen's Training Association,
Chicago, New York, Kansas City, Minneapolis
San Francisco, Atlanta.

You Can Make Big Money

We have a from-factory-to-consumer proposition for women and men agents that is high-class—interesting—easy to sell and extremely profitable. Many of our agents are making $300.00 per year, and only a little of their time required. We supply you with goods on consignment and full information how to make sales. We co-operate with you from start to finish. This proposition is not sold through dealers. You can undersell the dealer with better goods than the dealer handles, and make good money.

Write to-day for full information and territory.

We are allotting territories right now, so kindly write to-day before we give some one else your territory.

Tiger Knitting Mills, 524 Commerce St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Passing of Halley's Comet

By Samuel Phelps Leland, A.M., Ph.D., LL.D., Professor of Astronomy

HALLEY'S great comet has doubled the cape of the sun and has commenced its long journey through the sky. For over thirty-eight years it will rush through trackless space at a rate of speed past our comprehension. It will stop at no way stations. After this long journey it will swing about in its celestial pathway towards our sun again. Its return will consume another thirty-eight years, provided it shall return at all. Should it have attained sufficient momentum in its present visit to carry it beyond the confines of our solar system it may be seized upon by the attractive power of another sun, and may never return to us again. It is very probable that many of our comets have left our system forever, and that many comets from other systems have come to us. The journey which this comet is to make is a perilous one. It is attended with many dangers. Planets are scattered through the sky. They are sending out their attractive forces across the comet's path. They are dangerous highwaymen. They may draw the comet into themselves, or may convert it into a satellite to revolve around some primary.

Comets are common visitors to our solar system. Over eight hundred have been recorded. Only a part of this number come to our sun. Many do not come inside of the orbits of our outer planets. The inter-solar spaces are the comets' playgrounds. The great Kepler once said that comets are more numerous in the heavens than are fishes in the ocean. They are harmless wanderers in the skies. Photography and spectroscopy are now employed with profitable results in the study of these peripatetic wanderers of the sky. But, after all, this study is principally confined to the comets that visit our sun.

Until about 1680 little scientific effort had been made to determine the laws governing the movements of comets. In 1682 when the comet that is now in our sky made its appearance, Halley, a co-laborer with Sir Isaac Newton, undertook to compute the orbits of about two dozen comets. The appearance of this one in 1682 determined him to direct his attention to it. He first identified it with the one of 1531 and 1607. After much labor in a field then new, he determined its path among the constellations and computed its period and the date of its return, late in 1758, or early in 1759. He had no hope of being alive at this date, but made his computation for the benefit of men yet unborn. In honor to him his name has been given to the comet. It was a complex problem to solve. The path of the comet would be in the midst of planets whose disturbing influences would assail the traveler. It was a new field. No one had attempted its solution. Yet so accurately did he master the problem that he was only a few days from its actual appearance, seventy-seven years in the future. The comet passed its perihelion on March 25, 1759. Considering the fact that Uranus and Neptune had not then been discovered the result was wonderful. The discovery by Newton of the law, which has been formulated into the theorem, that all matter attracts in proportion to its amount and in inverse ratio to the square of its distance, enabled him to estimate the influences correctly. He determined when the comet should appear, if it met with no delay; and having ascertained that Saturn would delay it 100 days, and Jupiter 518 days, making its period 618 days longer than he had calculated, he was enabled to fix its date of coming. No scientific prediction ever excited so much curiosity and wonder. The comet came, and traversed the course among the stars mapped out by him; and reached its perihelion on March 13, 1759, only a few days from his indicated time.

This daring prophecy opened a new field in astronomy. The history of this act invests Halley's comet with an especial interest. Astronomers now calculate the movements of comets, though to the public the process has lost much of its exciting interest. From such labors and results men get a broader and clearer view of the universe. They learn that everywhere is a perfect balance; that "all are but parts of a stupendous whole," and that a law once discovered applies to all manifestations of matter regardless of time or space. The Infinite Mind that planned the universe placed all of its parts in perfect balance. Harmony prevails everywhere, and when once we see a part we can calculate all other parts, and can catch glimpses of the harmonious system in its entirety.

Seabreeze, Fla.

BE FAIR TO THE ADVERTISER

WE have received a number of letters from subscribers who claim they have written to advertisers for goods and apparatus of various kinds which the advertiser agreed to take back if they proved unsatisfactory but refused to do so when put to the test. On investigation we found in every case that the advertiser had placed a time limit on his offer, and this time limit having expired, he very naturally felt disinclined to refund the purchase price.

In such cases the advertiser can hardly be blamed for taking such a stand. There is a limit beyond which even the most liberal business man cannot afford to go. We are glad to say that in the cases above mentioned, adjustments were made, these advertisers agreeing to break their rule for the sake of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

However, it may be that we will not be always so successful. One of our advertisers may refuse to break his rule and so we would advise subscribers to be careful about entering into a contract upon which there is a time limit. If the advertiser agrees to take back goods which prove unsatisfactory within a period of, say, thirty days, then subscribers should not expect the advertiser to be willing to take them back and refund money after a year or more has passed. We have received several indignant letters from subscribers who seemed to think that the time limit was of no consequence in the matter. It is, however. The advertiser may have very good reasons for not wishing to refund money beyond a certain period. The mere fact that he is willing to refund money within any period entitles him at least to consideration on the part of our readers. His time limit, moreover, is part of his guarantee, just as our time limit of two months is part of our own guarantee, which is:

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement.

STUPENDOUS DISCOVE! FREE FUEL

Marvelous Stove. Burns r. COOL KITCHENS.

Fuel Drawn Principally from Atmosp e.

Scientific Test proves that this Stove con es 395 barrels air to one gallon commo al oil. Cheapest Fuel. Summer Comfort.

Absolute safety—not dangerous like gasoline.

This Valveless, Wickless, Automatic, Oil-Gas and Air Burner Stove economically generates gas from kerosene or common coal oil, mixing it with air.

Intensest Heat concentrated u cooking vesse Not thrown out to overheat Kitche HOUSEWIVES HAPPY. Amazing Res s.

Perfect Service—Economy—Comfort

To operate: Turn knob, touch match. as generated passes through air mixer. Cons es 395 barrels of air to every gallon o l. Gas fire—intense heat. Perfect com bustion. e- lute safety. For more or less heat simply rn knob—then it's self-regulating. Requires no re attention. No wick—not even a valve. Nothi to leak, clog or close up.

ENTHUSIASTIC PRAISE. D. CA , IND., writes: "Costs only 4½ cts. a day for f L. NORRIS, VT.: "Saves at least 50 to 7 er cent. over wood and coal." E. ARNOLD, N .: "Range cost me $5.50 per m th for fuel; Harrison $1 a month; saves $4.25 per mo " L. I. RICH, N. C.: "G est stove for summer l er saw." E. L. COOP R, TENN.: "Gives satisfa n in every respect. Cert ly housewife's fr d during hot weat " J. C. CAMPBI L, KANS.: "Fa - perior to any r oil or gasoline stove. Perfectly safe, econon cleanly. Fine baker and great comfort to THOS. VINCENT, WIS.: "Wife never had thing she enjoyed so much. It is very quic heated room or dirt. Surpasses anything we saw." MRS. F. E. FITE, O.: "Best, clea and most perfect stove we ever used. A. HOE FLA.: "Can't speak too highly in praise of th E. TUBBS, N. Y.: "Bought one of your s three years ago. It is a perfect wonder. Woul part with it for ten times its cost." J. LU KANS.: "The longer I use it, the better I lik Not like those sold in stores.

Ideal for roasting, baking, cooking, ironing, ning fruit, picnics, cottages, camping. No fiery kitchens. Absolutely safe—can't exp Not dangerous like gasoline. Simple, able—lasts for years. Housekeeper's friend. S time, labor, money. All sizes. Prices $3.25 and up. Prepare for the heated t Write today. Send no money—just your and address. We will send you full descript hundreds of testimonials. Best summer st on earth.

WHIRLWIND SUCCESS FOR AGEN

HEAD & FRAZER, TEX., write: "En $81.00; rush. Sell like hot cakes. Sold 50 in town." B. L. HUESTED, MICH.: "Ou day, sold 11." L. RUDDIMAN, MICH.: " gratulate you on your success; sold 4 one d HY. SEARLE, ARK.: "Sold 8 in 1½ hou MRS. NETTIE JENSEN: "Sold 7 after o'clock." So they go. Livest agent's proposition This patent new—nothing else like it. Not i in stores. Demand enormous. Agent's rea harvest of dollars. Every family needs and w one. Show 12—sell 10. Write today for agent's special plan. Get in early.

WORLD MFG. CO. 743 World Bldg., Cincinna

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' Oh, something new—The MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right."

The MORLEY PHONE for the DEAF

makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Invisible, comfortable weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it. Ove Hundred Thousand Sold. Write for booklet and testimo THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 702, Perry Building, Philad

YOU CAN WRITE A SHORT STO

Beginners learn so thoroughly under our p method of training that many are able t their stories before they complete the course. We als those who want a market for their stories. Write for partic School of Short Story Writing, 44 Page Building, C

Save Steps between kitchen and dining One trip with Wheel Tray set Another clears it. Stands beside table for serving, sink while washing dishes. Price $10, exp. paid. C WHEEL TRAY CO., 435C West 61st Place, Chica

PATENTS that PROTECT

Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts., st E. B. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D. C., Dept. 36, Est.

A GREAT FESTIVAL OF SACRED SONG

By HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER

T is doubtful whether, in the history of the Christian Church in this ntry, the celebration of a minister's pochial anniversary has been at- ded by so brilliant an achievement as was the Fifth Bach Festival, which u ered in the fortieth year of the R. Amory H. Bradford's pastorate ov the First Congregational Church of Montclair, N. J. It is a fact worthy of ote that the now famous movement to perpetuate in America the master- pies of Johann Sebastian Bach, by aual representation, within their pper sphere as religious music, had it inception in a festival service of B.h motets and chorales arranged by th choir of the First Congregational C rch ten years ago, to commemorate th thirtieth anniversary of Dr. Brad- fo's ministry.

Rev. Amory H. Bradford

rom this humble beginning there h developed, under the leadership of F nk Taft, the organist and choir- master of the church, the superbly marshaled and finely drilled ensemble, comprising the choir singers of the several Protestant churches of that city, now regularly incorporated as the Bach Choir of Montclair. This year, the choir, in a three days' festival, performed the "Passion Service Ac- cording to St. Matthew."

Few occasions there are of a purely ecclesiastical nature wherein the min- isters of all denominations of Protes- tant faith represented in one commu- nity meet before a single congregation. This, however, was the case at the Bach Festival. Clergy and laity and their townsfolk of Montclair have become fully alive to the beauty of the annual music festival which promises to bring the lovely highland suburb of

Clarence Dickinson

Newark into the enviable position of a New World Bayreuth.

The three-day festival was directed by Clarence Dickinson, who is the organist of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City. A corps of distinguished solo vocalists had the instrumental support of forty-five members of the Philharmonic Society of New York.

Samuel P. Warren, popularly known as "the dean of American organists," opened the festival with a "prælu- dium" or organ recital, at noon, Fri- day, May 20, and on the evening of that day, in faithful adherence to the traditions derived from the early eighteenth century, when Bach occu- pied the post of cantor at the Thomas- kirche, Leipsic, a quartet of trombones sounded from the tower of the church the initial chorale of the great Passion Service. The wondrously dramatic Narration was essayed by Nicholas Douty, a tenor endowed with a voice of very sympathetic quality, and the ut- terances of Christ were allotted to Dr. Carl E. Dufft, basso, of the Marble Collegiate Church, New York. Both of these singers were robed in black, and, with the presiding ministers, occu- pied the pulpit. Providing accompani- ment for the former was an ancient harpsichord.

A quartet of leading oratorio soloists sang the principal aria in the gallery, and immediately in the rear of these was the full chorus, divided into two sections, with the accompaniment of separate orchestral corps and harmo- niums (organs). In the organ loft, above the pulpit, was a chorale en- semble of fifty men, women and boys, consisting of the complete choir of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, led by Walter S. Young, assistant conductor of the festival.

Part II of the "St. Matthew's Pas- sion" was intoned on Saturday even- ing. The singing of soloists and choirs upon both occasions produced an impression of grandeur and lofty beauty, and the attending congrega- tions entered with reverent spirit and enthusiastic accord into the voicing of the chorales, or sacred volkslieder, which link the Gospel proper of the service.

A STRANGE INDIAN REVIVAL

Continued from Page 559

w ther and favorable winds, for su ess in hunting or fishing; for es- ca from danger and deliverance fr trouble; for healing, and in wor- sh; but now the "shaking" is con- fi d principally to deliverance from si and disease, and to exorcise evil sp ts. Now, wherever they can be co rolled by the government, their nu ber of weekly meetings is re- st ted to Sunday and one mid-week se ice, and the hours limited, so that th eetings cannot be carried on after ten o'clock at night.

e results of their new religion, ho ever, are everywhere evident. Men an women who were drunken, im- mo al, vicious, degraded, dirty and la are, by the one experience of "see- in Jesus Christ, and having their sins tak n away," changed into clean, up- ri , moral, sober, industrious, Christ- lik beings. The Indians assert very re ently that it is "the power of Go" They have a simple creed: be f in God, the Father and Creator; be f in Jesus Christ, his Son, the Sa- vi r of men, and belief in the Spirit of od, who comes to live in their he ts. They spend their lives in pr er and godly living. The effects up all the Coast Indians are plainly see Thirty years ago the Indians we threatened with extinction by the "w te man's vices." Now they are he hy, strong, upright, and their nu bers are increasing. They are re y worth saving for citizenship in ou nation.

have had no plan regarding work am g these Indians until recently; but now a system is formulated and I long to carry it out. My method is this: To visit the tribes, talk with the Shaker leaders, try to reach their con- ception of salvation, and then lead them on to a fuller knowledge. To visit every home and speak with every Indian as God opens the way. To try to encourage them to help themselves, to establish Bible classes or Sunday Schools, and if there is no white person to take charge, to induce the better educated Indians to do this themselves. To try to get hold of the young people, and instruct them in Christianity, mo- rality and temperance. This is what I have already done in two tribes. Among the Quileutes—who live on the inaccessible west coast—I spent two weeks in such work, and it was truly blessed. Even the Shakers gave up their meetings, and listened as I told them of the "Bible Jesus." The time is ripe, the harvest is ready, but where are the reapers? I turn to the Eastern friends, hoping that some may feel inclined to take part in this great work and to help with their means.

SARAH ENDICOTT OBER.

Tacoma, Wash.

CALLED HIGHER

Mrs. E. S. Murray, of Altoona, Wis.

Mrs. Anna Barker (83), of Northville, N. Y.

Mrs. S. E. Ireland (92), of Bronson, Kas.

Mrs. M. Mow Hughes (49), of Rome, N. Y.

Mrs. Henry H. West (69), of Fremont, O.

Mrs. S. P. McKenzie (65), of Lake Placid, N. Y.

W. J. McKee, of Grinnell, Ia.; subscriber for thirty years.

Rachel C. Brodhead (84), of Shokan, N. Y., April 11, 1910.

Mrs. Hannah Jenkins, of Sharon, Pa., February 21, 1910.

Mrs. Clorinda Jackson (91), of Harlan, Ind. She came to America in 1829.

Mr. Elam Bosworth Weese, of Goodwine, Ill., on June 3, 1909, aged seventy-six.

Mrs. Caroline Cord (68), of Cherokee, Okla. A subscriber for over twenty years.

Mrs. Sarah Bell Martin, of Hammond, Ill., March 8, 1910, aged eighty-seven years.

Robert Golling (65), of South Knoxville, Tenn., passed away December 11, 1909.

Mrs. Arthura E. Valentine, of Cooperstown, N. Y., January 9, aged eighty-one years.

Mrs. Sarah A. Brower (83), of Waupaca, Mich., died in the Wisconsin Veterans' Home.

Mrs. Nancy Tignos (83), of Lebanon, Va., January 17, 1910.

Mrs. Mary A. Greene, of New London, Conn., in her eighty-eighth year.

H. A. Barr (67), at Reedsville, Pa., for twenty years a reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Samuel C. Borland (59), of Bridgeville, Pa., died May 20. He was a subscriber twenty-five years.

Mrs. M. S. Ringrove, of Wheatland, Wyo., died September 25, 1909. She was born in Whitestown, Oneida County, N. Y., sixty-five years ago.

Mrs. Lucy Phillips Roane, of Sullivan, Ill., March 4, 1910. She was much interested in and often subscribed to the benevolences promoted by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mrs. Louisa Simpson Snow, of East Cleveland, O., died February 19, 1910, aged fifty-four years. She was the widow of the late Justice Snow, formerly of Hartford, Conn.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 573, and write them for full information.

The "STANDARD'S"
Biggest Weekly Bargains
Real Hand Embroidered Pure Linen Waist 98c
And $1.25 For a French Linene Wash Skirt

The Biggest Bargain of the Year
Big Value French Linene Skirt

No. 145. A Real Hand Embroidered—Pure Irish Linen Waist. The latest model with wide hand embroidered rever and groupings of pin tucks. Laundered collar and cuffs. Tie not included. Buttons invisibly in front under rever. Sizes 32 to 44 bust. Price 98c

No. 281 Eleven gored plaited skirt of good French Linene in White only. Plaits stitched down flat to below the hip line and from there fall in graceful flare. Cut generously wide and laundersnicely. Sizes 22 to 30 in. waist band. Made 40 in. long with basted hem and can be easily lengthened or shortened. Price . . . $1.25

Our "MONEY-BACK" GUARANTEE
If you are not MORE than pleased with either the waist or skirt, we will gladly send your MONEY BACK.

Cut This Out Mail to us with your name and address and we will send you the "STANDARD STYLE BULLETIN" for One Year FREE

STANDARD MAIL ORDER CO.
161 Wooster Street, New York City

This Richly Embroidered PETTICOAT

$1 Only one to a Customer. Postage Paid. Would be great value at double this price.

We want your name so that we can send you our new Summer Style Catalog No. 66 of Paris and New York Styles Free of Charge. That is why we make this great offer.

Dainty Petticoat, of fine French cambric. Wide flounce is trimmed with clusters of tucks, broad band of exquisite eyelet insertion and finished with deep ruffle of eyelet embroidery to match; underlay and dust ruffle of cambric; has drawstrings to fit any waist; front length 38 to 44 inches.

L 280.—THIS PETTICOAT IS $1.

If you do not think that this is the very finest Petticoat ever sold at this price return to us at our expense and we will at once refund your money.

Send for our great free Catalog No. 66 to-day; it is full of wonderful values like the above.

Martin's SUIT & WAIST HOUSE

Fulton St. Brooklyn NEW YORK CITY

5%

Do This To-day:

Ask us to send you our Five Per Cent. Book—we want you to know all there is to know about this Company.

The more you know the surer you are to become a customer.

This Company is strong—conservatively managed, and all its investments are in First Mortgages.

Money invested with us may be withdrawn at any time without notice and without loss of dividends.

But write for the Booklet—that tells all about it.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

After Death, What?
A Glimpse "Beyond the Veil"

THE MOST SCHOLARLY book ever written on the Great Hereafter, yet so simple in its presentation of baffling problems that all who read may understand.

"What the Heavenly Rest Means," "Occupations in Heaven," "State of the Soul Between Death and the Resurrection" and "Our Children in Heaven" are but a few quotations from a truly remarkable table of contents.

Bound in rich purple Vellum de Luxe with Gold; 400 Pages. Size when open, 8x12 inches. Special Price, to close out a limited number of copies now on hand (All Charges Prepaid) 50¢

NOTE:—Every book is guaranteed delivered in perfect condition, and should your order reach us too late, money will be promptly refunded. Address

The Christian Herald Book Dept.
BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY

That Organ—
You Should
Buy It Right
From the maker who makes organs right.

If you have the money; if you're raising it, or only planning—write for helpful suggestions.

ESTEY, Brattleboro, Vt.

THE WORLD HARVEST*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

WHAT is a parable? It is a description of something, or a story told, to make clear the meaning of some truth. Teaching by parables was a new departure in the method of Jesus, begun towards the close of the second year of his ministry. He first gave a series of eight "lake parables," so called because they were spoken on the shore of the Lake of Galilee, or as he sat beside the sea with a boat for his pulpit.

Seven of these parables are recorded in Matthew's Gospel, and one additional in Mark (4: 26-29). They are: The sower; the wheat and tares; the mustard seed; the leaven; the seed cast into the ground, growing up secretly; the hidden treasure; the pearl of great price, and the net cast into the sea. After the first one, Jesus introduced each parable, saying: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto," etc., showing that it was his purpose by means of the parables to make the people understand the nature of the kingdom of heaven.

His apostles asked him: "Why speakest thou in parables?" And he had answered: "Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given, therefore speak I to them in parables."

Last week we had the first parable in the series. This week we are to study the second. Both are about a field of grain, which was no doubt in sight. The first had to do with different kinds of soils, the second deals with kinds of seeds.

"A man sowed good seed, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat." He did it in the night, while the good man slept. Undoubtedly it was an act of revenge.

"When the blade sprang up and brought forth fruit, there appeared the tares also." The tares were something much like that which our farmers call "cheat." "Wilt thou that we go and gather them?" The servants were the first to discover the tares and they came and told their master and offered their services to destroy them.

"Let both grow together until the harvest," said the master to his servants. Why? Because in pulling up the tares, they would loosen the ground and pull up the wheat too; because the roots of the wheat and the tares were intertwined.

"Gather up first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn." This the master said he would tell the reapers to do at the time of harvest.

"Explain to us the parable of the tares," said the apostles of Jesus after he had left the shore, and they had gone with him into a house. And this is what Jesus told them:

The field is the world.
The sower is Jesus himself.
The enemy who sowed tares is the devil.
The good seed, the sons of the kingdom.
The tares, sons of the evil one.
The harvest, end of the world.
The reapers, the angels.
The end of the world, the judgment.
Punishment, a furnace of fire.
Reward, shining as the sun in the kingdom of God.

The World

The commission which Jesus gave his apostles was: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Tibet was the last corner of the earth to reach with the Gospel, and that was not done until nearly twenty centuries after the commission was given. Let that length of time be compared with the less than ten minutes that it takes to girdle the earth with a message by the electric cable! Does it not seem as if the church of God has been very slow in doing its work? And still Christ has not come into his own. "I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." (Ps. 2.) Some nations have the cross of Christ upon their flags: England, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Switzerland, Italy and Greece. Others have the "crown," but it is the pontifical crown, not the crown of Christ. The cross on the flag does not mean that every knee in the nation which has adopted it, bends to Christ. Neither can we say that the nations whose flags have not the cross do not honor Christ. A little girl once said of our Old Glory, "It has many Jesus' stars in it, even if it has no cross."

The Sower

He belongs to the whole world, for it is said of him, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3: 16.)

Professor Drummond says: "The fact that Christ led no army, that he wrote no book, built no church, spent no money, but he loved and so conquered, this is beginning to strike men." One of the classics is the story about Cyrus entering Armenia and taking the King of Armenia and all of his family prisoners. They were all ordered to come into the presence of Cyrus, who said: "Armenius, you are free, for you are sensible of your error. And what will you give me if I restore your wife to you?" "All that I am able." "What if I restore your children?" "All that I am able." "And you, Tigranes," said Cyrus, turning to the son, "What would you do to save your young wife from servitude?" "Cyrus," he replied, "to save her from servitude, I would willingly lay down my whole life." "Let each have his own again," said Cyrus, and when he departed one spoke of his clemency, another of his valor, another of his beauty and the grace of his person, upon which Tigranes asked his wife if she thought him grand looking. "Really," she said, "I did not look at him." "At whom did you look?" "At him who offered to lay down his life for me," she replied. How much greater is love for our divine Deliverer, the Lord Jesus Christ!

The Enemy

"If God is good, and loves us, and wants us to be happy, why did he make a devil to tempt us to sin?" A man made it his business to go around asking this question. He came to a man one day who asked him a question in return: "Did God make a devil?" "Of course he did," was the reply, "for God made everything." "God made him holy and good, but being a free agent, he sinned and fell, and so made himself a devil." Let me ask you: "Does God make whisky?" "No, I suppose not. He makes grain, and men turn it into whisky." "Yes, the wheat, rye and corn that are created for food are rotted and then distilled into poison. This man does, and calls whisky "a good creature of God." The man's question about "Why God made the devil" was answered, and he was never known to ask it of anybody again. But this arch-enemy of mankind is not always going to be permitted to go about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. We read in the Bible that he is to be cast

Continued on next page

*The International Sunday School Lesson for June 26, 1910. Parable of the Tares. Matt. 13:24-30; 36-43. GOLDEN TEXT: "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." Matt. 13:43.

CARTER'S UNDERWEAR

For spring and summer wear you nee Carter's Quality-Knit Underwear. Non so stylish and reliable. None so satisfac tory for all members of the family.

Elegant fabrics with fine invisible ribs Pure sterilized white garments made by n other manufacturer. Expertly designec carefully made, exquisitely finished. Gar ments which will satisfy anyone i quality and price.

"Quality-Knit and Quality Fit"

Made in union and two-piece suits for women and children. Union suits for men. Also infants' shirts and bands; silk, wool and cotton.

For sale by nearly all first-class dealers Refuse substitutes. Look for the "Carter Trade-Mark.

THE WILLIAM CARTER CO.
Sole Manufacturers
78 Main Street, Needham Heights, Mass

Note. Would you like to see how we finish our garments for women, misses and children? If so, send us the name of this magazine, and your own name and address, and we will send you some beautiful samples.

BABIES REVEL IN IT!
Mennen's Borated Talcum Toilet Powder. Soo ing. Comforting. Allays Irritation. Prevents chafing. For Mother's use also. Substitutes rob you. Insist on Mennen's. Sample box for 2c stamp.
Sold for 25c Everywhere or by Mail
Gerhard Mennen Co., Newark, N. J.

SAVE 208 SHAVES

$20.80 a year. Also save the razor our face, time and temper by using "3 in One" on the blade.

3 in One keeps the blade keen and clean, by pr nting surface rusting which is caused by m ure from the lather. Write for free sample and special "razor saver" circular. Why not know the truth?

THREE IN ONE OIL CO.,
54 Broadway, New York City.

LYON & HEALY'S GOOD CHURCH ORGANS
At Reasonable Prices

We make a specialty of large reed organs, voice closely resemble pipe organs. These church organs wi found much richer in effects than any cheap pipe orga Let us tell you what our $450 Cathedral Organ furnish in the way of musical effects.
Illustrated catalog free. Styles from $100 to $500. ments spread over 2 years when desired.
Fine Folding Organs $37.50; Fine Par Organs $45.00; Good Second-Hand Orgs at half price.
LYON & HEALY, DEPT. F5575, CHICA

BE SWIFT

E swift, dear heart, in loving,
For time is brief,
ıd thou may'st soon along life's highway
Keep step with grief.

swift, dear heart, in saying
The kindly word;
hen ears are sealed, thy passionate pleading
Will not be heard.

swift, dear heart, in doing
The gracious deed,
st soon they whom thou holdest dearest
Be past the need.

swift, dear heart, in giving
The rare, sweet flower, or wait to heap with blossoms the casket
In some sad hour.

ar heart, be swift in loving—
Time speedeth on;
ıd all thy chance of blessed service
Will soon be gone.

DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE

Medicine Not Needed in This Case.

It is hard to convince some people that offee does them an injury! They lay their ıd feelings to almost every cause but the ue and unsuspected one.

But the doctor knows. His wide experience is proven to him that, to some systems, offee is an insidious poison that undermines e health.

Ask the doctor if coffee is the cause of onstipation, stomach and nervous troubles.

"I have been a coffee drinker all my life. am now 42 years old and when taken sick o years ago with nervous prostration, the octor said that my nervous system was roken down and that I would have to give coffee.

"I got so weak and shaky I could not work. ıd reading your advertisement of Postum, I asked my grocer if he had any of it. He id 'Yes,' and that he used it in his family ıd it was all it claimed to be.

"So I quit coffee and commenced to use ostum steadily and found in about two eeks' time I could sleep soundly at night ıd get up in the morning feeling fresh. In out two months I began to gain flesh. I eighed only 146 pounds when I commenced Postum and now I weigh 167 and feel tter than I did at 20 years of age.

"I am working every day and sleep well at ght. My two children were great coffee inkers, but they have not drank any since ostum came into the house, and are far ore healthy than they were before."

Read "The Road to Wellville," found in gs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new e appears from time to time. They are enuine, true, and full of human interest.

YOUR GARDEN SHOULD HAVE

Blue Roses

(Yale Blue)

WE ARE introducing this beautiful color for which we have waited centuries. Healthy, living, perfectly hardy plants, grown and shipped in flower pots. Sent, prepaid, on receipt of $1.00. Will bear in abundance year after year.

$1,000 Reward for proof of fraud.

T. AIRY ROSE CO., Established 1868

Importers and Introducers

ver 100 Acres. 20,000 feet of glass.

Send for Catalog C

MT. AIRY, - - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

5 ROMPERS $1

Direct From Factory. All Charges Prepaid

Best, most serviceable, fast color, unshrinkable Rompers Choice of pink or blue, checked chambray with neck, collar and belt bound in white 5 for $1.00

ROMPERS of madras with yoke, rolling collar, belt and pocket piped in white choice of assorted checks and stripes. 3 for $1.00

ROMPERS of linen suiting, rolling collar, yoke, and cuffs piped in white, belt piped and faced Tan, cadet blue. 2 for $1.00

Sizes 2 to 6 yrs. Satisfaction or money returned. Specify size and color. CHARGES PREPAID

CONSUMERS' APRON CO.,
61 Clymer Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

into the abyss and that it is to be shut and sealed over him that he may not deceive the nations (Rev. 20: 2), and his power shall forever be destroyed (Rev. 20: 10).

The Good Seed

Jesus told them that the good seed was "the sons of the kingdom." We understand them to be the followers of Jesus, and we call them "Christians." Christian Endeavorers were once asked to give a definition of "What is a Christian?" Many answers were received. It was said that the test was well met, and that the answers, many of which were published in the Christian Endeavor World, would certainly be helpful to many who had not altogether clear ideas about it. Here are some of the answers:

A Christian is Christ in a man.

A Christian is a person after Christ's own heart.

A Christian is a follower of the Master, practising through the week what he professes on Sunday.

The true Christian is a hearer and doer of the Word.

A Christian is one who clearly and constantly reflects the image of Christ.

A Christian is one in whom the spirit of Christ abides. We can know them by the fruits of their lives.

A Christian is a miniature Christ.

A Christian is one who believes that Jesus Christ died on the cross to save every one who believes on him, and who has the assurance in his own heart that Christ has saved him.

The most approved reply was given as follows: A Christian is he who accepts the atonement of Jesus Christ for salvation from sin; whose life is governed by the teachings of the Bible as the revealed truth of God; whose aim is to bring the kingdom of Christ in all the world; whose hope is "an inheritance, incorruptible and undefiled, that fadeth not away."

A young minister was once staying at a gentleman's house over night. A little girl about five years old soon made friends with the stranger. He took her upon his knee and began talking to her about Jesus. "Now, my dear," said he, "I am going to tell you one thing that I hope you will never forget. Will you remember what I am going to say?" "Oh, yes," she answered, "what is it?" Then the minister put his hands gently on the little girl's head and said slowly: "My dear, if you don't love Jesus you never can be happy." He repeated the words very emphatically, and then he asked: "Will you remember that?" You will know how well she did remember it when I tell you that forty years after, when the young minister had grown to be an old man, and the little girl had grown to be a woman with little girls of her own, it happened again that the minister spent a night in her home. He had forgotten what he said to the little girl, but the lady reminded him of it, saying: "I was that little girl. Often your words came to my memory: 'If you don't love Jesus you never can be happy.' And these were the means of bringing me years ago to love my Saviour, since which time I have indeed been happy."

The Tares, Sons of the Evil One

When Christ was upon the earth, he healed many who were possessed of devils. Demonism seems now to be of a more subtle and less violent character. Now a man can smile and be a villain. But there is a vast army of these human tares. We see them on all sides of us. We are reminded of Jason, who sowed dragons' teeth. He had not long to wait for the harvest; almost immediately they began to spring up; the whole field had the appearance of being covered with drops of dew, but in reality what was seen was the steel points of lances, then polished brass helmets pushed up through the soil, then bearded faces, which looked angrily about. Then still growing upward their cuirasses appeared, then their arms and hands; in the right hand they held a sword, in the left a shield, then their legs and feet appeared as they freed themselves from the ground, and there they stood, an army ready for battle. They cried out: "Show us the enemy," and they began an attack upon Jason. But they became confused and fell to fighting and killing each other. The field from which they had sprung was covered with their dead bodies. The last one, the bravest of them all, as he fell to the earth cried out: "Victory."

The harvest is the end of the world. Until then, the evil and the good, the sons of the kingdom and the sons of the evil one, grow together, and there is a constant struggle between them for the mastery, just as there is between the wheat and the tares, with this great difference: The nature of the wheat can never be changed into a tare, neither can the tare be changed into wheat, but a human being can be changed from being a son of the evil one into being a son of the kingdom. For example, a brass worker in Tokyo, a poor and ignorant man, much given to drink, cruel to his family, and who had twice been in jail. A tract arrested his attention and two or three times going to a preaching place and standing outside he heard the Gospel, then venturing in he asked the loan of a Testament for three days, and again for three days more. The love of Christ to sinners astonished him, and led by Miss C., the missionary, he found peace in believing. His delighted wife and children followed him into the church, and trying though the circumstances have been, he has for several years been known by all as one who loves God, and is very grateful for his salvation. How beneficent then appears God's plan that both shall grow together until the harvest. There is hope for the "sons of the evil one" even until the last. The dying thief on the cross, becoming repentant, was told by Christ that the should be with him that day in Paradise!

Our Smallest Subscriber

Dear Editor: I am sending you one renewal for myself and one for my little granddaughter, Miss Dorathy Otton, and one new subscriber, a Mr. Thomas Jennison of Neche, N. D. You will please send the premiums addressed to me, and the papers with calendars and "Daughters of Dorcas" to the different subscribers. I am also sending you a photograph of your little subscriber, Miss Dorathy Otton. Her mother has a nice little box, just the size of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and each paper is laid away carefully until Dorathy is able to read them.

Miss Dorathy Otton

Neche, N. D. JAMES HYDE.

Plump rosy growth is the result when you feed your baby on fresh milk modified by Mellin's Food.

Cow's milk by itself is too strong for a baby's digestion, but prepared with Mellin's Food it is easily digested and assimilated.

Get for baby, today, a bottle of

Mellin's Food

We will be glad to send you a Trial Size Bottle of Mellin's Food with our helpful book, "The Care and Feeding of Infants," if you will write us.

Mellin's Food Co., Boston, Mass.

EARN 5%

on your savings. They should yield as large a return as consistent with safety.

Deposited with our Company, they are free from speculation while earning 5 per cent. every day left in our care. The security back of them is of the very best—Selected mortgages upon New York and Suburban Real Estate. Earnings are remitted by check quarterly, semi-annually or compounded if desired. We have never paid less than 5 per cent for 17 years.

ASSETS over - $2,000,000
SURPLUS and PROFITS, 150,000
Under Supervision of New York Banking Dept.

The Industrial is a strong, progressive, carefully managed Savings Institution that merits your investigation. Write for booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings and Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d Street and Broadway
New York

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

CHRISTIAN HERALD
BOND BOOK

WE have received so many requests for copies of the financial articles which have been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, that we have thought it wise to preserve them in pamphlet form, for the convenience of readers who may wish to secure a complete set.

Any reader may secure a copy of this useful booklet without charge, by forwarding 4c. in stamps to cover postage.

Address CHRISTIAN HERALD, Dept. 96. Bible House, New York

POST CARDS

10 Birthday, 10c. | 10 Best Wishes & Greetings, 10c.
10 Rose, 10c. | 10 Fourth of July, 10c.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

BE AN ILLUSTRATOR—Learn to Draw. We will teach you by mail how to draw for magazines and newspapers. Send for Catalog. SCHOOL OF ILLUSTRATION Office 44 Page Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Returnable examination copies of the great hymn book
HALLOWED HYMNS
mailed on request to churches needing new books.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago.

PATENTS That Protect and Pay
Advice and Books FREE. Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services.
WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D.C.

AGENTS WANTED—Agents earn $25 to $50 weekly selling our new Style Mexican and Swiss Embroidery Waist Patterns, Princess Dresses, Art Linens, and various novelties. Catalogue FREE. National Importing Co., Desk 48, 699 Broadway, N.Y.

CULTURED LADY, ten years experience church kindergarten work, desires position, public or private. Miss M. C. Tripler, Bernardsville, N. J.

STARTLES THE COUNTRY!

Marvelous Invention! Revolutionizes Wash Day!
New Ideas! New Principles! Amazing Results!

STARTLING, BUT TRUE! THERE'S NO MORE WASH DAY!

NOT A WASHING MACHINE

New Method of Cleaning Clothes. Cleans Family Wash in 30 to 50 Minutes.
No Labor. No Rubbing. No Motors. No Chemicals.

WOMAN'S HARDEST WORK MADE EASY

MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFACTORY You Decide After Using

Beautifully cleans woolens, flannels, blankets, colored clothes and white clothes, finest laces, curtains and bed clothes. Saves trouble, money, time and labor. Easy Way in 30 to 50 minutes cleans washing which before took entire day. Largest family washing seems like play. All metal. Strong, durable, sanitary, light in weight. Easily used, cleaned, handled. Always ready. Child or frail woman can use it easy.

Wash day robbed of its awful misery.

No more rubbing, sweating, stewing. Backaches banished.

EASY WAY SMASHES ALL RECORDS

Washing machines in the infant class—can't compare with it. Users delighted, enthusiastic, filled with joy. Honest-hearted, hard-working women write of their own free will. They can't help it.

Simply bubble over with praise.

Listen: J. McGee, Tenn.: "One young lady cleaned day's washing in one hour with Easy Way; another in 45 minutes." Mrs. T. Bullen, Canada: "Washed bedding, heavy quilts, curtains, etc., without rubbing." Loretta Mitchell, O.: "Did a big washing in 45 minutes. Sold 3 already." A. D. Poppleton, N.Y.: "Gives perfect satisfaction. Washed bed quilts, greasy overalls and fine clothes. Greatest thing on earth." F. E. Post, Pa.: "Did two weeks' washing in 45 minutes. Clothes cleaned without rubbing." J. H. Barrett, Ark., after ordering 38 Easy Ways, says: "You have the grandest invention I ever heard of." J. W. Meyers, Ga.: "Greatest invention to womankind, forever abolishing miserable wash day. Sells itself." Mrs. Albert Lamb, Ill.: "Have washed everything in it I could think of, from lace curtains down to dirty overalls and rag carpets. I wouldn't part with Easy Way now for any money. Wish you success."

AGENT'S FREE SAMPLE. Taking the country by storm. One thousand Easy Ways shipped to Russian agent. R. O. Cowan, N.Y., placed 13 in six hours—profit $39.00. Mrs. J. Brown sold 10 in 3 days—profit $30.00. K. J. Blevin, O., made 7 calls, sold 5 one day—profit $15.00. R. H. Latimore, Pa.: "Sold 4 this morning; never yet turned down." A. G. Witt, Pa.: "Sold 4 to-day. Not out for orders." Mrs. Gerrish, Mont., orders sample, then one dozen, then 100—profit over $300. N. Boucher, Mass., orders 75 more and says: "Everybody wants one. Best business I ever had." A. S. Verrett, La.: "Sold 8 one day"—profit $24.00. Our facilities now greatly enlarged—still enlarging. Easy Way is agent's landslide. Millions will be sold. Write quick for appointment. We want managers, agents—men or women—at home or travelling—all or spare time, to show, take orders, and appoint agents. Easy Way new article—not worked to death. Best seller out. Every family wants one. People glad to see it demonstrated—buy without being asked and throw away costly washing machines to use it. Only 2 sales a day means $36.00 a week profit. Price only $6.00, ready for use. Sent anywhere. Not sold in stores. Order one for your own use. Money back if not satisfactory. Send for free sample offer, special agent's proposition, etc. Costs nothing to investigate. Send name and address anyway. Many have done so and afterward thanked us for giving them the opportunity to get rich the easy way. Write to-day. Don't let this big money-making opportunity pass you.

HARRISON MANUFACTURING CO., 1432 HARRISON BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO

Crooked Spines Made Straight

If you are suffering from any form of spinal trouble you can be relieved in your own home without pain or discomfort. A wonderful anatomical appliance has been invented by a man who relieved himself of Spinal Curvature. Its results are marvelous. It is nature's own method. Eminent physicians are endorsing it. The Sheldon Method relieves the pressure of the affected parts of the spine, the whole spine is invigorated and strengthened, all soreness is taken out of the back, the cartilage between the vertebrae is made to expand, the contracted muscles are relaxed and the spine is straightened. There is bright hope for you, no matter how long you have suffered. We have strong testimonials from every State in the Union. Each appliance is made to order from individual measurements and fits perfectly. There is positively no inconvenience in wearing. We guarantee satisfaction and let you use it 30 days. Write for our new book, giving full information and references.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO., 207 18th ST. JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Original and unequalled. Wood or tin rollers. "Improved" requires no tacks. Inventor's signature on genuine:

Stewart Hartshorn

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES

VISIBLE WRITERS

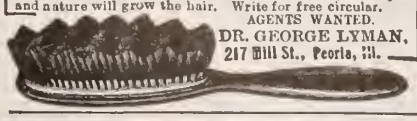
or otherwise

L. S. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.
¼ to ½ M'F'RS PRICES
Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY
PRICES $15.00 UP
First Class Machines Fresh from the Mf'rs—Write for Illustrated Catalog 71
Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

THIS NEW HAIR BRUSH COMBS AND BRUSHES THE HAIR AND MASSAGES THE SCALP.

The greatest modern invention for keeping the hair beautiful and fluffy and the scalp clean, healthful and free from dandruff or dirt. Keep the scalp clean and properly massaged and nature will grow the hair. Write for free circular.

AGENTS WANTED.



DR. GEORGE LYMAN, 217 Hill St., Peoria, Ill.

Raise Mushrooms

Big Profits! Quick Profits!

Anybody can make big income all year raising Mushrooms at home in cellars, sheds, barns, boxes, etc. Markets waiting for all you grow.

Free Illustrated Instruction Booklet.

HIRAM BARTON, Desk 9 West 48th St., New York

DIAMONDS WATCHES ON CREDIT LOFTIS SYSTEM

LET US SEND YOU A BEAUTIFUL DIAMOND RING ON APPROVAL

Write for Catalog containing over 1500 illustrations of Diamonds, Watches and Artistic Jewelry. Select any article you would like to own or present as a gift to a loved one. It will be sent on approval—all charges prepaid. If satisfactory in every way, pay one-fifth down and keep it, balance in eight equal monthly amounts. Any honest person may open a charge account with us. Write for free copy of the LOFTIS MAGAZINE.

LOFTIS BROS. & CO. THE OLD RELIABLE ORIGINAL DIAMOND AND WATCH CREDIT HOUSE Dept. F-95, 92 to 98 State St., Chicago, Ill.—Branches: Pittsburg, Pa., and St. Louis, Mo. | Write today.

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

The Christian's Victories*

LIFE holds so many defeats for us all, that Paul well knew how necessary it was that his friends should be fortified with the assurance of victory in their Christian life. They were in large part untaught and the Gospel truths were utterly foreign to all their experience. They were truly "babes in Christ," easily turned back and discouraged, and Paul gives them just what they needed when he emphasizes the triumphal note in the great Christian symphony.

Notice how it rings throughout all his letters.

The Gospel is "the power of God unto salvation." He gives "glory, honor and peace," without respect of persons, to "every man that worketh good." "The God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly." Run the race, hoping for "the prize," which shall surely come to the faithful: and shall be, not the "corruptible crown" which the earthly winner obtains, but an "incorruptible." Death shall be "swallowed up in victory."

The fine fervor of these and the scores of similar passages, shows that Paul was no less a poet than a preacher—perhaps, all in all, the most wonderful man of our era.

No more illuminative example of this great subject exists than that which Bunyan gives us in his wonderful allegory.

What a description is that of the Pilgrim's victory! Two Shining Ones came forth to meet Christian and his companion, Hopeful, and conducted them up to the city whose foundation was "higher than the clouds." As they came on, the heavenly host "gave a great shout," and the two pilgrims were at once transfigured. They put on raiment that shone like gold, harps and crowns were given to them and all the bells in the city rang for joy.

You have all read of Nauhaught, the Indian deacon, in Whittier's beautiful ballad. His wife was sick, his child was starving. He searched his traps and found therein no beast nor bird. He had dreamed that an angel had dropped into his hand a goldpiece.

"Ah!" he thought, "if my dream might but come true!"

What marvel that the poor man felt his faith
Too weak to bear its burden!

Then in the woods he finds a silken purse full of gold. The mad temptation seizes him to keep it and tell no one. Who else could need it so much as he? But

The low rebuking of the distant waves
Stole in upon him like the voice of God.

At last the good within him conquers. The battle is won. He finds the owner of the purse, receives a reward, and goes home "singing and praising God"—a noble triumph.

"There is only one picture which the child's heart can safely hold," says George Matheson. "It is the form of Jesus. Not on Cæsar, not on Alexander, not on Napoleon, let the opening eye be centred. Let it mark the heroism of that bloodiest of battlefields where Love stood dauntless to receive its mortal wound. Let it catch the light of the Dolorous Way, the sheen of Gethsemane, the glow of Calvary—till the heart of the child shall cry: 'When I grow up, I will be a Christ!' Then will the tempter vanish, then will the kingdom come; for the victory is already complete when we have imaged the beauty of holiness."

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 26. TEXTS: II. Cor. 2 : 14-17; Rom. 8 : 35-37.

Mothers, Be Cautious

In selecting a food for the baby don't experiment. Baby can't stand much experimenting. Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is acted upon by the infant stomach substantially the same as mother's milk. For 50 years it has made glad mothers and started thousands of babies on life's journey with health and happiness.

Missionary Needs*

WE are witnessing a great revi l of the missionary spirit. Thi or more years ago, there had b n a reaction. Cynical and unchrist n travelers had visited our mission fie s and had brought back unfavora e reports. These were printed and so n broadcast.

It is not strange that they cause a gradual chilling and restraint of e missionary spirit, and that these p vailed for some time. Then ot r travelers began to send back v different accounts. The missiona s themselves appeared among us w n glowing tales, backed by irrevoca e testimony, of the great work wh n had been done in China, India, Per , Japan, Turkey.

Now the feeling runs at flood t When the Student Volunteer Con ence met at Rochester last January t was repeatedly proclaimed with t dispute among them, that while rope was made Christian in 600 ye the continents of Asia, Africa Oceanica were surely to be evangeli within the next two hundred years

It is a bold prediction, but the co crated men who uttered it insist t God will make it good.

Not long ago, in Everybody's Ma zine, appeared a fine article upon missionary movement, by E. A. Pow F.R.G.S.

Mr. Powell has been in the Am can consular service in the Otto dominions and knows whereof he firms. His description of our sp did missionaries is most inspir He says:

"History shows nothing finer t the way in which these pickets of ci ization have distilled a grim hu r out of their desolate situations, t ing not only a bold but a laughing e upon the perils which their lives y bring. In all the world there is p more thrilling romance than that f these pioneers of progress, who h e carried the gospel of the clean s t side by side with the Gospel of sa tion even to the very Back of e Beyond."

Mr. Powell rehearses, in his stir g recital of the deeds of these admir e men, the last stand of Pitkin of I ting-fu, which will go down to hist y as one of the most gallant defenses r made against hopeless odds.

He and the two devoted women i sionaries of his station, Miss Go d and Miss Morrill, saw that, since l escape was cut off, their own mass e was inevitable. They bade their t verts to seek safety in immediate fli t. Then they spent the night in pra r and in writing and burying y sad farewell letters in the mis n grounds.

At daybreak came the attack. I s Gould died from heart failure s n afterward. Miss Morrill, in wh e veins ran the blood of an heroic j cestry, loaded the rifles. Pitkin, s l tered behind a mattress, fired fro a window and at every shot a Boxer l. All day long the firing contin d without a halt.

In the twilight one of the miscr nt Boxers managed to climb unseen o a tree which commanded a view f Pitkin and wounded him fat y. Then and only then did they dar o rush in and take possession. Like t fearless French chevalier of imper able fame, one man had kept for m y hours an army at bay. Miss Mo l was beheaded.

Such is the heroism of our miss r aries. Their sacrifices must not b n vain. Let us who can go, rally t l the depleted ranks; and let us n cannot go, give freely of our mo y for the great cause.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, Ju 26. TEXTS: II. Cor. 8 : 1-9; Matt. 9 : 35, 38.

CURTISS' WONDERFUL FLIGHT

AT last, after nearly a year of waiting, the great aeroplane flight from Albany to New York has been made, and America again stands first in the field of aerial navigation. Glenn Hammond Curtiss, who has already won fame by his daring flights, accomplished the trip down the Hudson in one hundred and fifty-seven minutes, the distance traveled being one hundred and thirty-seven miles. At times his small biplane shot through the air at a rate considerably over a mile a minute and left the famous express trains of the New York Central Railroad far behind. He was required to make the trip within twenty-four hours to gain the ten-thousand-dollar prize offered by the New York World, but he was allowed one stop to replenish his gasoline tank and examine his machinery. This stop was made at Poughkeepsie. From this place he continued on to Inwood, which is within the northern limits of New York City, where he dropped in a few minutes to call on a friend. This stop was not counted against him, for the prize was already won.

Several days Mr. Curtiss had been waiting at Albany hoping for a favorable day to break the monotony of wind and storm which made a start impossible. The biplane was put together on Van Rensselaer Island and several expert machinists went over the craft every day to see that everything was in readiness for an instant dash away to the south when the calm came.

It was with a thrill of joy that he heard over the telephone the voice of Mr. Ten Eyck, the official starter, saying that the morning was calm and clear. The aeronaut left his hotel at five in the morning, hurried to the island where his men were yet asleep, and rushed the preparations for the flight. He went back to put his wife on the special train waiting to follow him to New York, and the small crowd waiting thought that again he had given up starting, but he was soon back and dressed in his odd costume fitted to protect him from the cold draughts in the air above or from the still more icy waters below if he took an unexpected dive into the blue depths of the Hudson. On front was arranged a four-pound pad of cork, as it was impossible to wear the usual belt. His machine also was fitted with sponsons to keep it from sinking. His cap was worn with the visor backwards.

He took a look at the sky, shook hands with some of his friends, ducked under the steel braces and seated himself in his little swing chair. He grasped a lever, raised his right hand, the signal to let it go, and the aeroplane, now known as the Hudson Flyer, shot forwards and the great epoch-making flight had begun.

The machine moved over the grass at first, the shouting spectators running alongside; then it rose into the air a few feet; a little more distance and it shot upward at express speed to two hundred, three hundred, four hundred feet, until it was seven hundred feet above the earth. Still it kept on until it was about a thousand feet above the capital city of the Empire State. Never slackening he sped southward as if hurled from a catapult. The spectators far below ceased to cheer and watched the aeronaut in awe-struck silence until in seven minutes from the time he left the island he was apparently blotted out in the blue sky. It was estimated that the aeroplane had gone six miles in seven minutes, when it became so small as to be invisible to the naked eye. Eagerly they watched, but they saw no sign. It was as if Curtiss had started to investigate the canals of Mars or explore the shadowy mountains of the moon.

It was a wonderful ride, but Curtiss could pay little attention to the beauties of the scenery; a man in an aeroplane has about as much time to spare for other things as a man on a broncho. When he did glance down he could see the wide silvery ribbon of the river far below dotted with steamers which looked like toys. The toot of the whistles came up clear and distinct, the salute of enthusiastic pilots. Here and there a train rushing at top speed seemed to move slowly along the shore. He would catch sight of the rear car of an express and the next moment the engine was left far behind. At Rhinecliff he made a swing to the east. A few minutes later he could make out the Poughkeepsie bridge. At 8.26 he made his landing on the farm of a Mr. Gill, a mile east of the river on a spot he had selected several days before. As the great bird lit a horse and a cow until that moment calmly grazing on the sward left for parts unknown.

The gasoline had not arrived, greatly to Mr. Curtiss' disappointment. Automobiles by the dozen, however, were rushing to the scene, and from the tanks of two of them he got a supply. After a stop of a little over an hour, he again started for the last lap to New York. It was now 9.26. He shot over the river at a height of five hundred feet, his propeller sounding like some gigantic hornet. In twenty minutes he passed West Point. Officers and cadets were massed upon the parade and cheered wildly as he showed for a few minutes scudding toward Cold Spring. Here, among the mountains, the wind caused his machine to tip sharply. Once he seemed to strike a hole in the air and dropped forty feet and then went on. Out of the hills it was easy going at three hundred feet above the river. Near Nyack he caught sight of the white tower of the Metropolitan building in New York and he felt the prize was almost won. Just over the line he turned inland and dropped on the lawn of a friend. It was 10.35.

At 11.42 he decided to pass over the city. At the Battery there were 5,000. Suddenly a watcher let out a startled yell. A white object showed for a moment, wheeling around a tall building to the left, and a minute later the aeroplane dropped gently on the parade at Governor's Island.

GENERAL NOTES

—ALL LOVE AND honor and good wishes to Julia Ward Howe, our "Senior Citizeness," who has just passed her ninety-first milestone on the journey of life, a wonderful woman in perfect health and with an intellect unimpaired.

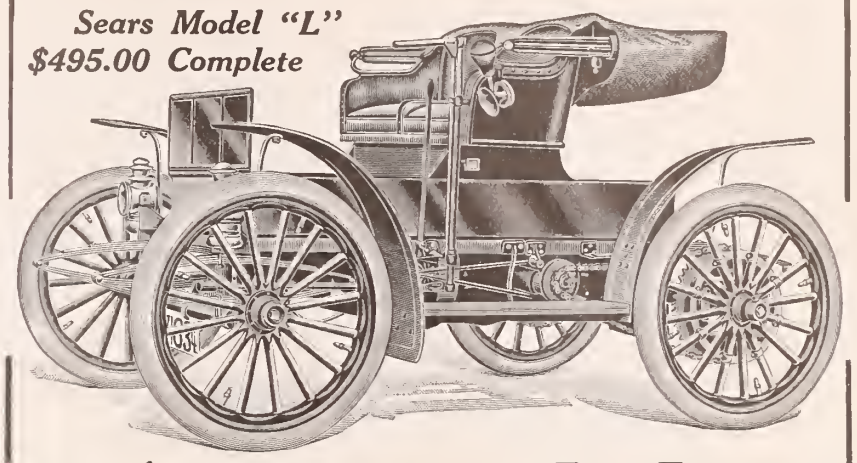
—DIRECTOR DURAND of the Census Bureau is quoted as expressing the opinion that the census now under way will show us to have a population on the neighborhood of 100,000,000. The cards now in the hands of expert enumerators would make a stack of "singles" sixteen miles high.

—A PHENOMENAL speech-making tour is planned for Mr. Roosevelt on his return. He will visit twenty-four States and speak in these on leading political questions. It is understood that he has kept himself fully informed concerning the changes which have taken place since he went abroad, and we may expect that he will come prepared to infuse a good deal of life into a rather dull political situation.

—AFTER BEING pardoned by the President, Oliver L. Spitzer, one of the men convicted of complicity in the sugar frauds in Williamsburg, N. Y., has made a very thorough exposure of the methods by which the government was defrauded of millions of dollars by a system of false weights. Spitzer's disclosure may result in the conviction of a number of his former official associates. He showed how the frauds began and disclosed the identity of the "men higher up."

—A WEALTHY JEWISH woman, Mrs. Charles H. Israels, who has been investigating the dance halls of New York City, makes a statement which may well be pondered by those who are in doubt concerning the moral danger of such places. At a public meeting, this lady quoted the superintendent of a New York Home for Women, who said that of a thousand girls who had come under her care every one, without exception, traced her first start on the downward path to a dance hall. This was in New York City, but similar places exist in almost every municipality throughout the country.

Sears Model "L"
$495.00 Complete



Automobiles

We build them We guarantee them
We sell them to you direct from our factory

Real Inside Prices

OUR new Automobile Catalog quotes THE ONLY REAL INSIDE PRICES ON AUTOMOBILES. In this catalog we show automobiles for $370.00 and up, six different models, all built by us in our own automobile factory. When you buy a SEARS you get it direct from our big Chicago factory at the factory price.

With our new Automobile Catalog we will send you our Booklet of Testimonials showing pictures of customers using Sears cars in every part of the United States, with letters from them telling their experiences.

If you are interested in an automobile of any kind, write today for our Sears Automobile Catalog No. 65C41

Sears, Roebuck & Co. Chicago

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL We will ship you a "RANGER" BICYCLE on approval, freight prepaid to any place in the United States without a cent deposit in advance, and allow ten days free trial from the day you receive it. If it does not suit you in every way and is not all or more than we claim for it and a better bicycle than you can get anywhere else regardless of price, or if for any reason whatever you do not wish to keep it, ship it back to us at our expense for freight and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We sell the highest grade bicycles direct from factory to rider at lower prices than any other house. We save you $10 to $25 middlemen's profit on every bicycle. Highest grade models with Puncture-Proof tires, Imported Roller chains, pedals, etc., at prices no higher than cheap mail order bicycles; also reliable medium grade models at unheard of low prices.

RIDER AGENTS WANTED in each town and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1910 "Ranger" Bicycle furnished by us. You will be astonished at the wonderfully low prices and the liberal propositions and special offer we will give on the first 1910 sample going to your town. Write at once for our special offer.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogue and learn our low prices and liberal terms. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. F-71, CHICAGO, ILL.

I'll Save You $26.50

on my 1910 Split Hickory Auto-Seat Buggy. Or, 25% saving guaranteed on retail price of any vehicle. Made to order. 30 days' road test—2-year guarantee.

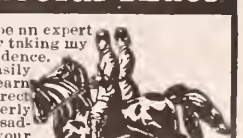
Let Me Pay the Postage on Big Free Book to You

Shows 125 styles. Also harness. Beautiful color-views. Prices astonishingly low. Write me now.

H. C. Phelps, Pres.
The Ohio Carriage Mfg. Co.
Sta. 236, Columbus, O.

Be a Graceful Rider

Learn at home to be an expert rider and trainer, by taking my lessons by correspondence. Inexpensive and easily learned. You can learn every style of correct riding, how to properly train horses for the saddle, how to teach your horse fancy gaits and tricks, and scores of secrets never before divulged.



My simple and original method of instruction teaches you everything and enables you to double your horse's value. Ironclad guarantee insures a refund of every cent if you're not satisfied. 20 years' wonderful experience. Hundreds of enthusiastic men and women graduates. Write for handsome free booklet outlining course. Special proposition if you write today.

PROF. JESSE BEERY
421 Academy Street (9) PLEASANT HILL, O.

BEEKEEPING its pleasures and profits, is the theme of that exceellent and handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on trial for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page book on bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name this paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, Ohio

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD. Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

Corns You don't need to put up with aching corns. A-Corn Salve removes them by taking them out by the roots. No pain or danger. 15c at druggists' or by mail. Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia

Life

Life from now on will be one constant effort to keep cool---to quench that summer thirst and to drive away weather weariness.

Drink

Coca-Cola

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Full of life---sparkling as wit and with not a dry touch to its wet vigorousness.

The cooling; satisfying, thirst-quenching beverage.

DELICIOUS --- REFRESHING WHOLESOME

5c Everywhere

Send for our free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola."

THE COCA-COLA COMPANY
Atlanta, Ga.

Whenever you see an Arrow think of Coca-Cola

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, June 22, 1910
COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
VOL. 33—NO. 25. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

CHRISTIAN HERALD

Drawn for The Christian Herald by George T. Tobin

A SILENT APPEAL

Questions and Answers

In forwarding MSS. to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, enclose stamped envelopes for return, if unavailable.

M. F. C., Centre Conway, N. H. I would ask your opinion about furnishing a church floor, whether it should be bare or with a carpet? Which is more generally used?

It should have either a good durable matting or a carpet of some simple, unobtrusive pattern, neither too dark nor too light. A bare floor makes a noisy church. Even the poorest meeting house nowadays contrives to get a carpet or at least strips of good cocoa matting in aisles and pews and on the platform.

Reader, Rome, O. 1. When we say the Lord's Prayer we ask him to forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us. Will he forgive us if we do not repent and ask his forgiveness for Christ's sake? 2. If any one trespasses against us without cause, as Christians, should we forgive them if they do not repent and ask our forgiveness?

1. We cannot expect the divine forgiveness unless we are willing to forgive our fellow-men. (See Matt. 18: 21; Mark 11: 25; Luke 11: 4; Luke 23: 34.) We must feel the burden of our own sin, and repent of it, before we seek forgiveness of God. 2. We should be ready to forgive, and should nurse no bitterness in our heart, no matter how unrepentant the other may be. God hates the sin even while he loves the sinner; and we, too, should be in the attitude and spirit of forgiveness, even though the one who has offended us does not care to be forgiven.

G. L., Wayland, Mo. Is it right for women to wear gloves and veils when partaking of the sacrament?

There is no general rule on the subject, and this is done by some without comment, in city churches. It is not very prevalent, however. The veil seems out of place on such an occasion.

M. R. L., Providence, R. I. Was the devil once an angel?

The personal existence of the Spirit of Evil is quite clearly set forth in Scripture, but as to his history there is much obscurity. That he was an angel of high estate who fell through ambition, leading to rebellion, is the concrete form of a history which is a combination of Scripture and tradition. See John 8: 44; Matt. 4: 1-11; Matt. 25: 41; Luke 8: 12; Luke 10: 18; Acts 13: 10; Eph. 6: 11; I. Pet. 5: 8; I. John 3: 8; Rev. 12: 9, and other passages. In Job he is the adversary and the tempter. See also I. Chron. 21: 1. Milton the poet described him as "the prince or ruler of the demons." See Dan. 7: 10; II. Pet. 2: 4, and Jude 6. These passages leave much unexplained and conjecture here is useless. His final overthrow and punishment are predicted in Rev. 20.

J. E. O., Hickman, Neb. Was not Jesus a carpenter when he was working for Joseph? To the question put by our pastor what was the work of Jesus at home when a boy, I said he was a carpenter. Our pastor did not quite agree with me.

The Gospel narrative gives us very little light concerning Jesus' life from infancy to manhood. See Luke 2: 40. We learn that "he was subject to his parents." We may infer from Mark 6: 3, though not with absolute certainty, that he adopted the trade of Joseph, according to the Jewish custom. See also Matt. 13: 35. The early church had several traditionary incidents of his experiences in Joseph's workshop, but they are wholly unauthentic.

M. F. S., Polk, Neb. 1. Will you please publish a little sketch of King George and his wife? 2. What is his consanguinity to the Emperor of Germany? 3. Who was his wife before her marriage? 4. Tell something about her early life and training.

1. An article on the personal side of King George appeared in our issue of May 25. 2. He is a cousin of the German Emperor, the Kaiser's mother being a sister of the late King Edward. 3. Queen Mary was formerly Princess Victoria Mary of Teck, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Teck. 4. She is of German descent, but her upbringing has been wholly English. Her family was not rich and it is said she made some of her own dresses. She is very religious and interested in everything which pertains to the uplift and welfare of her people. She is a devoted mother, and King George spends as much time as possible in her company and that of her children. The new King and Queen will probably receive the same amount as King Edward and his consort—$2,350,000. He also receives the revenues of the Duchy of Lancaster, amounting to about $500,000. Both the King and Queen have a large salary list, as well as a long list of pensions which they pay from the foregoing, and many expenses called for by their official position, but in which they have little personal interest.

K. V. W., New York. How long did Christ keep John's two disciples with him that they might see and hear for themselves of his many miracles? Was it possible or probable that all the miracles recorded were performed in that same hour or even that same day?

Although it is not stated how long they were detained, it is a fair presumption that they spent at least a day if not more, witnessing the work of Jesus. (See answers to E. H. C. and J. A. H. in MAIL-BAG, June 1.)

R. B. F., Lakeside, Calif. 1. Do you believe it is right under any circumstances to tell a lie? 2. Is it well for a Christian to ask a blessing at each meal?

1. This question was the subject of a memorable discussion in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD several years ago. Both sides were fully represented and many able opinions were given. The general conclusion of the majority was that, however one might look at the question from the ordinary standpoint of human logic, if one had faith in God, such a one would never regard a lie as justifiable under any circumstances. (See Rev. 21: 8.) 2. Yes, but one's Christianity need not be obtrusive at the wrong time. There are times when a silent prayer or a silent blessing are the best.

H. S. F., Lakeside, Calif. 1. Please explain John 5: 39. 2. Is a person ever justified in a lie?

1. Some able commentators read: "Ye search," instead of the imperative, "Search." The first is regarded as the best translation and is adopted in the American Revised as being more consistent with the general character of our Lord's statement. He was explaining their method of life, which took note of the things apparent on the surface, yet wholly omitted the deep, underlying things of the Spirit. They did indeed search most diligently, but although they were convinced that they had this redemption there set forth in the Scriptures, they were not willing to come to Him or to receive it at his hands, or to believe in his mission. 2. See answer to R. B. F., in this issue.

E. C., Herkimer, N. Y. What men were called the seven champions of Christendom?

The seven champions were St. George of England, St. Denis of France, St. James of Spain, St. Andrew of Scotland, St. David of Wales, St. Patrick of Ireland and St. Anthony of Italy.

F. A. M., Altoona, Pa. 1. How is Dr. Wilfred Grenfell supported, and to what denomination does he belong? 2. Were the sparrows to which Christ referred the same as ours? 3. Has there ever, in the history of the Church, been such a wave of evangelism as is sweeping over the whole world at the present day?

1. By voluntary contributions from individuals, legacies and church offerings. His Labrador Mission is an interdenominational organization. 2. Presumably the same species. 3. Never to so vast an extent. The work of world evangelization has been increasing in scope and volume with every passing year. The great revivals of the last century have been overshadowed by those of our own times, and those of the early Church were small in comparison with the simultaneous campaign of our great army of foreign and domestic spiritual workers.

F. F. F., Oshkosh, Wis. 1. How shall I understand I. Tim. 4: 10? 2. What is meant by "Whosoever keepeth the whole law, and yet offendeth in one point, is guilty of all"? 3. Why are not the Scriptures written grammatically? 4. Should we believe the redemptive work of Christ a greater work than the creation of the world? 5. Please say if the word "meat" means animal food.

1. It means that he is a Saviour who has made his redemptive plan for the good of all mankind, but most of all for the believers, whom he has especially called for this end. 2. The meaning is that the law is a complete thing, which, if broken even in part, is no longer whole. In thus breaking the wholeness of the law, though you may not break every commandment, you offend against love, which is the fulfilling of the law. 3. Many of the old forms and idioms that were in use at the time the Authorized Version was made have been retained largely as a matter of reverence. Many of these are modernized in the R. V. 4. There is not a proper basis for comparison. To us the scheme of redemption is the greatest and most wonderful of all works. 5. "Meat," in the Biblical sense, does not necessarily mean flesh. There are exceptions, however. (See Gen. 27: 4 and Gen. 45: 23.) In Dan. 4: 12, 21, the meat spoken of is furnished by a tree. The "meat offering" consisted of flour, corn and oil, whereas flesh was included in the burnt-offering and the peace-offering. In other cases, as in the New Testament, "meat" means food in general—anything that is to be eaten. No one can base a vegetarian argument on these passages.

E. A. G., Locust Valley, N. Y. Will you kindly tell me how to pronounce Sorbonne, Paris? Is it a building or a literary society?

It is pronounced Sor-bon, accent evenly divided. It is a college in Paris founded in 1253 by Robert de Sorbon, chaplain of Louis IX. It has about one hundred professors and several thousand students.

H. H. C., Newton, Mass. Has South Dakota any popular name, such as the Granite State for New Hampshire?

South Dakota is popularly known as the "Coyote State."

R. O. D., Portland, Me. Is the shepherd's tartan in Scotland like that of one of the clan tartans?

No; the shepherd tartan or plaid is made in black and white checks. It is worn in the Scotch lowlands.

J. M. B., Two Harbors, Minn. Does the Bible teach that the saloon business will send a man to hell or banish him from God?

The Bible says nothing about the saloon business, but it denounces those who give their neighbor strong drink. It is filled with warnings against the sin of intemperance. See Eph. 5: 18; Luke 21: 34; Gal. 5: 21; Isa. 28: 7; Hos. 4: 11; Prov. 21: 17, 23: 21, and 23: 29, 30; Rom. 13: 13; Dan. 5: 1-4; Prov. 20: 1; Isa. 5: 11; I. Cor. 6: 10; and many other passages.

An Open-Air Pulpit, Just Off Broadway, New York

ON the north side of Tenth Street and Broadway, New York, there is a large open grass plot belonging to Grace Episcopal Church. In this plot, and close up against the church building proper, there has lately been constructed an open-air pulpit, the only one of its kind in the United States. It is a beautiful structure of white marble, and includes, besides the pulpit of graceful Gothic form, a chantry porch and Gothic doorway leading to the choir-room in the church. The south wall of the church alongside of the open-air pulpit is beautifully covered with a continuation of the same Gothic architecture as the pulpit itself in white marble. The whole improvement represents an outlay of nearly $500,000, including the cost of the land. The doorway is a gift and so are the chantry porch and the pulpit. The first service was held in the open-air pulpit on June 8, when a considerable gathering assembled to listen. The service included hymns, prayers and selections from the Scripture, the whole being conducted by Rev. Dr. Slattery, rector of the church. Services will be held regularly at half-past twelve on Wednesdays during suitable weather, the clergy of Grace Church alternating in conducting the same.

Miscellaneous

J. M., Crary, N. D. We have seen the statement that he had contracted an earlier marriage (morganatic) which was set aside.

G. M. J., Rochester, N. Y. Write to Mrs. Gilbert Colgate, 306 West Seventy-sixth Street, New York City, for information in regard to the Waldensians.

Miss A. L. Marsh, Underhill, Vt., writes: "Will some of your readers please send me the proportions each of lime and salt to make a brine to keep eggs in? Also how much water?"

W. H. H., Hartford, Ala. It is our duty to make reasonable provision for those who are dependent upon us for support. See I. Tim. 5: 8. From this point of view, the evangelist is right.

C. M. Y., Wellington, N. Y. We cannot advise you, but would suggest that you write to the general land office, Washington, D. C. In any event you would not be justified in sacrificing the health, if not the lives of your wife and children, as well as the children's education, for the sake of the land.

Mrs. F. B. C., San Jose, Cal. We are not familiar with the controversy between Mrs. Eddy and her son. We have read that the young man does not believe in her doctrine. Christian Science is said to have originated with Dr. Phineas Parkhurst Quimby, of Portland, Me. To the best of our information, Mrs. Eddy is still living.

R. B., Nashville, Tenn., writes: "In answer to J. L. G., Forge, Tenn., in THE MAIL-BAG, I wish to state that according to the Bible there is now no such affliction in the human family as demoniac possession—such cases as those in which Christ drove out the devils and they went into a herd of swine, etc., are things of the past. The death of Christ on the cross stopped such afflictions. He has broken the power of Satan over mankind. We find no cases of that kind in the lives of the apostles."

Evilo N., Port Perry, Can. You have touched upon the great mystery of the ages—the mystery of the life hereafter. All we know of it is what is revealed in Scripture, which gives us the assurance of continued personality, recognition of friends. The "many mansions" of which Jesus spoke would imply a wide range of activities and large possibilities of progress. To know the thought of the world's leading minds on the subject read After Death—What? or the Great Hereafter, either of which may be obtained through this paper.

NEW YORK, JUNE 22, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Where Bad Boys Are Made Over

Wonderful Story of the Rauhe Haus, Which Reclaimed Thousands Who Were Seemingly Incorrigible

By C. T. WETTSTEIN

The Kitchen Garden

The "Green Pine House"

The Chapel

The "Anchor House"

I WENT to Europe by authority of the School Board of our city (Milwaukee), to visit the principal schools and institutions for defective children; to study their methods and to bring back a report of my experiences and investigations. My information was gained not only by visiting schools for the deaf, but by inspecting all kinds of schools and institutions, both public and private, that dealt with the solving of social and economic questions.

Among these are two in particular that attracted my attention and interest, namely, the Rauhe Haus ("Rough House") in Hamburg and the Barnardo Homes in London, the two largest institutions in the world of their kind, and the most successful in results for the rescue and education of unfortunate children.

It was natural, therefore, that my first visit after my arrival in Hamburg should be to the Rauhe Haus. It is known all over the world as one of the best and richest in results of all charitable institutions. Here I saw much of unusual interest and much which is of incalculable value. It is a school for bad and unmanageable children—a grand institution which has saved thousands of unhappy children from ruin and made them happy, intelligent men and women who are a blessing to the community.

The institution was founded in 1833 by Johann Heinrich Wichern. After studying theology at Goettingen and Berlin, he returned to his mother at Hamburg. Here Pastor Rautenberg had opened a Sunday School for poor children. These children—there being no school laws—were compelled to work, and were thus prevented from getting an education. In Pastor Rautenberg's school they received instruction in reading, writing, arithmetic and religion. Rautenberg requested Wichern to become his assistant and Wichern assented willingly, soon afterwards being appointed superintendent of the school in St. George.

Then Rautenberg, hearing of a so-called visiting society in New York, whose members visited the poor and made a study of their conditions, founded a similar association and Wichern became one of its most enthusiastic members. What he saw during his visits to the poor was often painful and heart-breaking. Here were children who knew nothing of reading, writing, arithmetic, nor of God and the Saviour. What would become of them? Wichern often asked himself the question.

As a result of these experiences, the members, at a meeting on October 8, 1832, decided that there must be a "Rettungshaus" (rescue home) for such neglected children. Such a project, however, took money, but Wichern and his associates had faith and determination. Unexpectedly, they received a legacy from a wealthy man. A committee was appointed, a public meeting was called, and before the citizens of Hamburg Wichern disclosed his plans. He wanted a home to which homeless waifs should find admission. Not more than twelve children should be admitted to one house, as under this plan the children could be kept in control and each individual character studied. Each class of twelve should have one "workman."

On November 1, 1833, Wichern moved his mother and sister into a small building in Horn, a suburb of Hamburg. They called it Rauhe Haus (Rough House). Why, I don't know; but probably because it was such a rough-looking building. Wichern had to pay a small rent. Within two months he had twelve boys, enough to fill the house. They came from the slums—the deepest misery. The oldest was hardly able to speak. A dirty paper in his pocket told of his descent. One, at the age of twelve years, had ninety-two thefts on his record. The youngest was five, the eldest eighteen. And the neighbors, looking on in wonder, shook their heads.

Continued on page 589

The Agricultural School

The "Adler (Eagle) House"

The "Oak House"

The "Johannesburg House"

THE AMERICAN PULPIT

A Sermon by

Rev. John Balcom Shaw, D.D.*

A New Name for the Church

TEXT: I. Cor. 12:12—"So also is Christ."

THESE four words are golden, standing out before you as if they had been embossed instead of printed upon the sacred page. One has to read the verse at the close of which they stand again and again before he can catch their meaning, and even then he is a bit hesitant about it. As you come down through the verse you are expecting it to end with the word "Church," and to your surprise you confront instead the word "Christ." Did not the apostle's pen slip at this point? If good Homer nods, why should not even Paul sometimes blunder?

Quite the opposite of that! Paul never made a more carefully guided stroke of his pen than when he wrote down these words. It is the only time in all the Bible that the Church is called Christ, but it was plainly intentional and the intention is significant.

The two were so closely associated in Paul's mind as to be to him synonyms. Not that the one merely suggested the other or stood intimately related to the other—that is not it; but that the two were counterparts and to all outward appearances one and the same thing. To him the risen Christ was so much a part of the life of the Church and the Church so much a part of Christ's post-resurrection life that the two were interchangeable.

The Church a Scene of Action

What a conception of the Church? There is nothing nobler or truer anywhere, and that, I am aware, is saying much. There are several beautiful representations of the Church in the New Testament. For example, she is spoken of repeatedly as the Bride of Christ; and how winsome the figure! She has been chosen of Jesus to be the special object of his love, to which he has plighted his troth, and which he has promised openly to own and crown in the great day of his consummation.

The Church is also referred to as his purchased possession, which he loved so supremely as to give his life therefor, and over which he claims absolute ownership and control.

More unique and striking than either of these is Paul's representation of the Church as a theatre. "For we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels and to men." The word which he originally used was not spectacle but theatre, and the translators have accordingly placed it on the margin of the epistle. That is to say, Paul conceived of the Church as a kind of a stage where Christ is being impersonated, where the principles of his teaching are being acted forth in the presence of the inhabitants of both worlds. You may go elsewhere to see others act, is his thought, but others come here to see you act.

Far more significant and inspiring than any of these, however, is the representation of the Church, here implied, as Christ's counterpart, his manifestation, his embodiment and reflection, the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person. Jesus said to his disciples that night in the Upper Room: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." The Church, according to Paul, should be saying to the world with equal confidence: "He that hath seen me hath seen Jesus Christ." In other words, before his resurrection, Jesus was known to the world through the person and life of one man; now he is known through the persons and lives of a company of men. The incarnation has not terminated; it still continues, only now he tenants several bodies instead of one.

The Church the Body of Christ

Of course, one recognizes this at once as an indirect, one might almost say an incidental, statement of the truth, peculiar to Paul, that the Church is the Body of Christ. A noble, yet a solemn figure, when you stop to contemplate it. Going back to glory, Jesus took his human body with him—the same and yet not the same, but spiritualized and glorified. Returning to the earth in the Spirit and naturally seeking another body, he conferred that honor upon the Church, being born in that body on the Day of Pentecost, as truly as he had been born in the other at the Advent. Through this body, therefore, his spirit now finds its expression and manifestation. The Church is Christ's face, emitting the light of his glorious presence into the world. His mind graciously expressing his thought concerning us. His heart still beating in sympathy and love for our race. His hand outstretched in helpfulness to man. His voice calling the world to repentance—"the Spirit and the Bride say, Come." His feet swift with messages, bent upon loving errands from him.

All this Paul epitomizes and emphasizes by substituting the name of Christ for that of the Church, and speaking of the Church as if it were the only Christ now known or knowable to men. "In thy face," said Bunsen to his wife when dying, "I have seen Eternity." Whenever the world looks upon the Church it ought to behold even more of such a reflection and be able to say: In thy face I have seen the Eternal One.

The Sin of the Modern Church

Does the Church of to-day need anything so much as a realization of this its duty and mission? What in all her history is more pitiful than her recent sale of her birthright? Shall I thus describe it, or shall I call it a loss of her true self-consciousness? Name it as you may, two things have come to pass as the result of it. Within her walls, there is a lessening deference for her authority, a weakening attachment to her institutions and a less and less positive response to her claims. Without, there is waning prestige and influence, and waxing criticism and opposition. How different from the universal attitude these days to Jesus Christ! Everywhere men honor his character and bow to his authority. He has a firmer hold upon the admiration and affection of our age than all other leaders of men combined. But his Church, that ought to be his representative and counterpart, is being everywhere aspersed and rejected. Never was there a more religious age than ours. Men think and talk more about immortality than ever before. Atheism is well-nigh unheard of among us. But, while it is essentially a religious age, it is far from being an ecclesiastical age. That word is now an offense to most people. Modern ministers shrink from being styled ecclesiastics, there being a smack of cant and hypocrisy about it. It was not originally so. As first used, the title bore the highest and noblest meaning. "Ecclesia"—the called out; called out by Christ, with Christ, for Christ. What distinction could be more honorable? Had the Church merited the distinction, the name would not have taken on its present stigma. It is her members who have dragged that name down into the dust. The sin of the modern Church is an objective instead of a subjective consciousness. She is the body of Christ only theoretically. She conceives of herself as an institution rather than an incarnation—an organized body of believers and not, as she should regard herself, the mystical, visible Body of Christ. Only let her get back to Paul's idea and climb up to Paul's ideal, and she will instantly resume her native attractiveness and regain her former influence.

What the Church Needs To-day

What is involved in this task? What is incumbent upon the Church if she would make herself the reminder, the reflection, the reincarnation of Jesus Christ?

I. She must better reproduce the character of her Founder and Head. This she cannot do perfectly; it could not be expected, for her members are as yet fallibly human; but to them this is possible at least approximately and, within their native limits, creditably. A great European writer recently gave to the public this sweeping arraignment of the Church: "The Christianity of to-day is a misrepresentation and misinterpretation of its Founder." None of us would applaud so wholesale a condemnation as that, but, in all honesty, we must confess that it utters more truth than falsehood. Is the character of the average churchman radically different from that met with out in the world? No one will question that it ought to be, and no one can affirm that it was not such in the early days of Christianity. That was the chief credential of the primiti Church. Is it so now? In exceptional cases, pe haps, but far from generally, and the Church h lost proportionately in prestige and power.

Dr. W. J. Dawson in his last book tells in an i teresting way how, dissatisfied with his ministr realizing deeply the failure of his Church to rea the community about it, day after day upon h knees he asked God to show him what to do, a finally came the message direct and clear, "Live t life! Live the life!" The Church is now aski God what it can do to win back its old position respect and command, and the answer she receiv is unequivocal: "When you live a more winsome li before the world, you will begin to do a more wi some work in the world." Would that I had Hen Martyn's power!" exclaimed an English prelate, a his companion replied: "Live Henry Martyn's li and you shall have Henry Martyn's power." O brethren of the ministry who hear me, when m can say of us what Pitman of Durham said of h old vicar: "You can't shake hands with that m without feeling he is filled with the Holy Ghost oh! my brethren of the laity when people testify you as did the young woman of one of our mode American saints: "Jesus is more real, more attra tive, and more irresistible to me every time th man comes to our home"—then this substitution Christ's name for that of the Church, instead seeming an awkward and perhaps an unintention slip, will be a thing so truthful and natural tha mingling with us, people of the world will be r minded of Jesus, attracted to Jesus, and broug into love with Jesus.

> Christ's, I am Christ's, and let the name suffice you,
> Ah! for me, too, He greatly has sufficed.
> Lo! with no winsome words would I entice you,
> Paul has no honor and no friend but Christ.

II. The second part of this great task given t Church to fulfil is the fuller manifestation of t Spirit of Christ. What was that Spirit? One wo will describe it—love, a love which had been b little among men before and then only as "the Lig that lighteth every man that cometh into the worl had penetrated its darkness.

It Must Love Humanity More

Reading over the Gospels the other day for a ne and massed impression, I was struck with the fr quent recurrence of the word "compassion" in t record of Christ's life. It is a rich, strong wor expressing far more than we ordinarily recogni Read it, "Jesus suffered with the multitude," a you will get some faint idea of its meaning. N what Mrs. Humphry Ward calls the "horrible pa of sympathy," but a passion so delicious and relis able that bearing another's burdens was like recre tion and doing good a luxury. How little of su "suffering with" mankind is in the modern Churc We may occasionally suffer in thought with the si in the hospital ward or with little children born live in squalor and poverty, but actual sufferin suffering in spirit and body with the poor, with m out of work, with the fallen and vicious, with t submerged and unlovable, is the rarest possib thing in any of our churches. "When I am in di tress," said a man to me the other day, "my lod sends some one to see me, but the church is whol indifferent to my condition. The minister may ca but no one else does, and my first impulse, if needed relief, would be to apply to my order a not to the church." Contrast that with the comm people's feeling toward Jesus when he was on eart The troubled and needy ran to him as their be friend. As Professor Peabody has said: "He la ished his care on single, obscure and unresponsi lives." No one has better expressed it than the o divine who declared: "God had but one Son and made him a minister." And what a ministry love and tenderness did he exercise! What was sa under human limitations of John Howe upon h death could be affirmed of Jesus without qualific tion: "He was a mighty lover of God and man."

Not until the Church is such a lover of humani will it creditably represent its Founder, or justi its right to the title of the Body of Christ.

Continued on next page

* Pastor, Second Presbyterian Church, Chicago, Ill.

New Name for the Church

Continued from preceding page

III. And this third duty is laid upon he Church: If she would prove herself he incarnation of Christ, she must hare more fully and truly his purpose nd passion. That purpose he himself lefined: "The Son of man is come to eek and to save that which was lost." Searching for souls was his supreme nission and the motive that prompted t a passion for men's spiritual, eternal vell-being. To what extent, think you, loes the Church share its Founder's oul-saving purpose? There is a great leal of talk everywhere these days bout soul-winning, but is not the najor part of it theoretical and nega- ive? The indifference of the Church o the unsaved that live about it is he most contradictory, the most un- Christlike thing about it.

I heard a Southern minister say re- ently that the difference between the North's interest in the negro and that f the South could be stated about hus: "The North loves the negro as race and cares little for him as an ndividual; while the South loves the egro as an individual and gives him n affectionate place in the life of the ome, but despises him as a race, fear- ng nothing so much as his amalgama- ion with the white man." Something f the same distinction marks the Church's present attitude toward the nsaved. It is tremendously inter- sted in the millions of China and ndia and Africa, and has much to say bout them; whereas a servant in the ome, a neighbor on the same street, a lerk down in the office is neglected, if ot overlooked. Not until our evan- elistic attitude ceases to be theoretic, eneral, remote, and becomes practical, ersonal and individual, can the Church be said to share its Founder's urpose or to have become its Found- r's worthy representative.

Now and then you find one who has he true passion unrestrained, like the rilliant lawyer who, converted in one f our recent revivals, refused to go ack to his profession, but asked, in- tead, to be sent up into the logging amps of Northern Wisconsin, and is here devoting his life to the evange- zation of that neglected class; or like he man from the lodging house quar- er who was born again in our own Church and began at once a mission to en in the lodging houses; or like that weet little woman who, pitying her allen sisters, stands night after night pon a soap box in the red light dis- rict preaching Jesus Christ to the vic- ims of lust that congregate there, not nfrequently taking a repentant girl to er home and patiently winning her ack to purity and womanhood. Yes, here are a few such, thank God! But ost church members are not saying a ord, doing a deed, taking a step, or ifting a finger to redeem a friend, a eighbor or even a stranger. Only the ther day I received a letter from the ife of a college professor who, hav- ng heard me plead with the students or more personal work, resolved to egin it and was used of God that very ight to bring one of the students to Christ. She then sat down and wrote e saying: "I have been a Christian or years, but this was my first at- empt at personal work and my success hows me how much of my duty has one undone and how large an oppor- unity been hitherto unused." Thou- ands must make the same confession nd, in making it, they will confess the hief reason why the Church and Christ are not to the modern world ynonyms and counterparts.

God help all our churches to set this hreefold ideal before them and to ecome in very truth Jesus Christ's eflection and reincarnation in the odern world.

Oh, make Thy Church, dear Saviour,
A lamp of burnished gold,
To bear before the nations
Thy true light as of old.
Oh, teach Thy wandering pilgrims
By this their path to trace,
Till, clouds and darkness ended,
They see Thee face to face.

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

The Children's Pulpit

The Cross on the Arm

By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D. *

DID you all enjoy the sailor story in the last sermon? Did any of you think while reading about Billy Hicks climbing the mast that he was climbing a cross? The mast of a ship with its yardarm is really a great cross uplifted from the deck. This cross was lifting Billy Hicks up toward the stars on which he had hung his prayer. Every telegraph pole is a cross over which silent and unseen messages are carried to the ends of the world. Each telegraph pole is a cross and millions of them are in line across our continent. In May, 1844, the telegraph, now so common, was used for the first time. One of the first messages ever flashed over a wire was, "What hath God wrought?" The world's great history of civilization starts at the Cross on Calvary. Have you ever thought of the unseen crosses, hundreds of them, along your pathway? Every time God's plan crosses your plan there is a cross over which God sends a message to your soul. You plan an outing for Saturday. On Friday night father or mother tells you some work you are to do on Saturday. The two plans are in opposite directions and your parents' plan crosses your plan near the top. Here is a cross! Our text reads: "Take up his cross daily." Are you willing to bear it cheerfully on Saturday? Do not forget that "daily" means Saturday as well as Sunday. God sees your unseen cross. Your plan is to have a good time. God says, Make some sacrifice for the benefit of others. Here is a cross you can take up daily and follow Christ.

* * *

THE world honors the cross. Would you believe that even cannibals honor the cross? Here is a story that was telegraphed, sent over thousands of crosses, from Richmond, Va., to one of our New York daily papers:

The Rev. Thomas Needham, following a sermon on "Deliverance," related a remarkable story of kidnapping and adventure among cannibals in a foreign land and exhibited a tattooed cross on his arm as having been the means of his deliverance.

As a lad he was stolen and carried aboard a ship bound for a South American port. Among others he had tattooed on his arm the figure of a cross. After a long voyage and before reaching port the captain decided to put him ashore and leave him to his fate. If they had taken him to shore he would have told of how he had been stolen and made to work like a slave. Left on the shore of Patagonia, he was soon captured by the cannibals who lived on that coast.

* * *

ON being stripped in preparation for a feast of the tribe, the attention of his would-be murderers was attracted to the cross tattooed on his arm. They carried him before the chief and showed him the cross on the boy's arm. He ordered that the boy be not killed, and he was afterward treated with every mark of courtesy, and the boy soon became a member of the chief's household. He remained among them for several years and learned their language and told them of Christ and his Cross. When he learned their language he found that a tradition existed among the tribesmen that a strange cross having mystic qualities had been used by the Jesuits who had once preached Christ to them. They had forgotten the message, but remembered the cross.

Finally Mr. Needham made his escape and journeyed to Boston, where some of his relatives lived. They failed to recognize in the tanned man the boy who had disappeared years before. A cross had saved him and he decided to hold up the cross of Christ for the salvation of the world.

* * *

MANY years afterward he was preaching in one of the lower British provinces and happened to relate this incident of how a cross had saved his life. A man came to him after the service saying that he wanted to talk to him privately. The man took the minister to his home and there on the wall showed him a picture of the very boat in which he as a boy had been carried away from home to a far-off land and left among the cannibals. The man also informed him that he was the captain of the boat which had cast him adrift. The captain stated, however, that the trip was his last; that he had become converted and that he was repentant for what he had done. The cross saved the captain.

* * *

DO the Juniors see how God's plan and the boy's plan had crossed? The boy had gone out to play; this was his plan. He was stolen, put on board a ship, and made to work as a slave; this was God's plan. The two plans formed a cross. You say, "How disappointed that boy must have been!" Look at your word "disappointed" and change the first letter, "d," to "h" and you have "His appointed." His appointed way. God's ways are not always our ways. When the boy grew to be a man he saw how God's way was the better way. On this cross, like the mast of the ship, the boy climbed close to God. Over this cross, like a telegraph pole, God sent a message to the cannibals, and by the cross laid upon the boy the captain had been saved, and by the cross the boy became a captain of Salvation.

* * *

THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT tells the Juniors round the world about the cross. On Sunday morning, June 26, we want you all to sing:

In the cross of Christ I glory.
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime.

* Pastor First Ref'd Ch., Brooklyn, N.Y. TEXT: "Take up His cross daily." Luke 9:23.

Mark Twain's Good-by

His last words were: "There isn't any one for me to play with any more."

THE glow is fading from the Western sky,
And one by one my comrades, as of yore,
Have given up their play and said good-by;
There isn't any one for me to play with any more!

Don't cry, dear heart! for I am worn and old;
No longer have I largess in my store;
E'en love's best gifts to me I could not hold;
There isn't any one for me to play with any more!

I miss the tender handclasp of old friends—
The kisses of the loved ones gone before;
'Tis lonely when the heart first comprehends,
There isn't any one for me to play with any more!

I need these loving hearts, so fond and leal;
I want them in my arms, as heretofore;
When they are reached, I shall no longer feel
There isn't any one for me to play with any more!

JAMES TERRY WHITE.

A Beautiful Gift

A FRIEND of this journal in San Diego, Calif., who wishes to remain unknown, sends a gift of $100 with this note: "I have at my disposal $100 of the Lord's money and I want it to go where it will do the most good. I would like to endow a bed at Mont-Lawn (THE CHRISTIAN HERALD CHILDREN'S HOME) and the balance to be sent to orphan homes in India and Africa. Or, if you know of missionaries or their families in want, use part of it in that way. Yours for Christ and humanity."

In response, we have sent these sums to the missionaries named:

AFRICA

Rev. W. H. Greeley, Methodist Mission, Rhodesia, Africa	$14.00
Miss Anna E. Hall, Garraway Training School, Liberia, Africa	10.00
Rev. Chas. H. Schreider, Angola Mission, Angola, Africa	10.00
	$34.00

INDIA

Rev. and Mrs. D. H. Lee, 19 Wellington Square, Calcutta, India	$15.00
Mrs. Mary Winsor, Congregational Mission, Sirur, India	10.00
Dr. R. A. Hume, Congregational Mission, Ahmednagar, India	10.00
Rev. Henry G. Howard, Presbyterian Mission, Kodoli, Kolhapur, India	10.00
	$45.00

CHILDREN'S HOME

One cot at Mont-Lawn	$21.00
Total	$100.00

Checks for the above amount have been forwarded to the various missionaries named. Such generous reminders are a great encouragement and aid to the workers in the field and bring blessing both to giver and receiver.

Anvil Sparks

..WORRY gives the doctor half his work.

..WEEDS are commonly rich in seeds.

..GOLD always lies under rough rocks.

..WANDERING minds make small wages.

..No harvest is reaped without hardness.

..No solid work was ever done by a man looking for a soft place.

..MOST men are repentant soon after the green apples are eaten.

..STOLEN fruit may be sweet, but there is sorrow in its assimilation.

..THERE is no better way of saving your meal than sharing your cake.

..A CHANGE of character accomplishes more than a change of climate.

..HE gives the world no kindling who always carries a chip on his shoulder.

..PARENTS need to remember that children learn twice as much with their eyes as with their ears.

..THE strange thing is that a man who is satisfied with so little in himself demands so much in others.

..MANY men are trying to straighten the universe with fingers that have done nothing else but get things into a tangle.

COLORADO GREETS THE MOTHERS

Mrs. J. H. McGill, Washington, D. C.

Mrs. C. W. McCleery, Lancaster, O.

Mrs. Warwick Downing, Denver, Col.

Mrs. Geo. Marshall, Pres't, Delaware

SEVERAL new and able workers were brought to the front at the Conference of the National Congress of Mothers, which assembled at Denver, Col., June 10 to 15. Among these was Mrs. George Marshall of Milford, Del., president of the State Congress of Mothers. Mrs. Marshall is well known as an active charity worker, having been appointed by the superior court of Delaware as one of the six members of the State Blind Commission; and by Governor Simeon Pennewill, as one of the nine members of the State Tuberculosis Commission. She is, besides, a member of the executive committee of the Women's National River and Harbor Congress; vice-president for Delaware of a chapter of the American Red Cross Society, and president of the board of managers of the Milford Emergency Hospital. She has also served as president of the New Century Club of Milford, and the Delaware State Federation of Women's Clubs. As leader of the State Congress of Mothers, Mrs. Marshall has promoted the organization of parent-teacher associations for the study of child-training.

Another church and charitable worker is the new State president for Idaho, Mrs. C. A. Southwell of Boisé, whose varied endeavors have covered a wide field of activity in work for Sunday Schools, for Y. M. C. A., day nurseries, and the like. Mrs. Southwell is a native of Philadelphia.

Mrs. C. W. McCleery of Lancaster, O., mother of nine children, all grown, is peculiarly fitted by home experience to lead as president of the State Congress of Mothers. She has made a special study of child-training, and in all her undertakings in behalf of a happier childhood and a trained parenthood she is heartily supported by her husband, Judg McCleery.

The Colorado Congress of Mothers has long ha great prestige because of its thoughtful and publi spirited constituency of mothers. Among the grou of active hostesses for the 1910 National Congres is Mrs. Warwick M. Downing of Denver. Wasl ington, D. C., has been headquarters for the Na tional Congress of Mothers during the past yea The national leader resident there is Mrs. Jame McGill, the new national corresponding secretar whose keen interest has done much for the preve tion of infant mortality, helping erring boys an girls, training for home-making, citizenship, etc.

The National Congress of Mothers is now makin plans for the reception and entertainment of th International Congress on the calendar in Wasl ington, D. C., in 1911. J. A. S.

ITALY AGAIN SHAKEN BY EARTHQUAKE

IT is one of the legends of old Japan that Nippon rests upon the back of a huge fish whose endeavors to free itself from the unwelcome load upon its spine are the cause of the frequent earthquakes. It would seem, however, as if the legend could be transplanted to Italy with more appropriateness, for that long peninsula has again been shaken from its centre to the extreme south, and that by an earthquake which made the frequent surface ripples of Japan seem very tame affairs. Although all of central and southern Italy were affected the worst shocks were felt in the Avellino district off to the east of Mount Vesuvius. Vesuvius has shown more than its usual activity during the last few weeks, and there is no doubt of some connection with the disaster. It is probable that the mountain may burst forth again with the result that the pressure within the earth will be relieved, but with untold damage to the towns which cluster still at the foot of the treacherous and death-dealing peak.

There was much loss of life and the villages and large towns throughout the province were badly wrecked. Almost without warning the first shock came just before the first streaks of dawn had begun to touch with light the dark purple of the mountains which here run north and south and which hold on their sides and foothills the picturesque mediæval towns of Calitri, San Fele di Valetta, Castlebaronia and many others well known to the traveler who wishes to get away from the more modern life of Naples and Rome and to see Italian life as it is lived in the smaller communities.

At Calitri the shock was the most severe and the greatest damage was done. The people were sound asleep when the first tremor came to waken them to the horror of rocking walls and the indescribable roar and murmur as of a thousand voices which so often accompanies the earthquake in a hill district. Then came a heave of the earth which shook down the stone buildings and left the picturesque castle on the hill a mass of ruins. The severity of the shock may be easily gauged by the damage done to this ancient structure. Its stout walls were several feet thick, but they were cracked and broken off in some places almost to the foundations.

In the lower town a fearful panic occurred. The falling houses killed fifty or more and several hundred were injured. The people, with recollections of the horrible disaster at Reggio, in Calabria, and at Messina, in Sicily, still fresh in mind, poured into the streets and rushed for the squares and for the suburbs, all filled with the impulse to get into the open country away from the falling and swayin walls which the half-light of morning made eve more appalling to their overwrought senses.

When relief parties arrived from Naples the found that practically every building in Calitri, town of eight thousand inhabitants, had been d stroyed. It is a miracle that thousands of liv were not lost and it is probable that the first est mate of the loss of life has been greatly unde estimated.

Italy's King and Queen again showed their lo for their people and that fearlessness in the fa of danger which has so endeared them to all class of their subjects. They at once took the train fro Rome on getting news of t disaster and once on the grou they were untiring in the efforts to aid the work of t searchers and to relieve t wounded and suffering. N for thirty-six hours did the Majesties stop a moment f rest. The King went abo among the tottering wal personally superintending t working parties and he has ha experience in directing work this kind before. He visit every spot where help w needed and inspired peop and searchers with hope a zeal. The Queen paid speci attention to the needs of t women and children. For ea of the former she had a co forting word and a caress f the little ones and she promis that every orphan would tenderly cared for. She se her own physician to overs the medical work being carri on by volunteer physicia from several nearby plac which had suffered less. T officers of the American cruis New York, which was lying o the coast, offered their assis ance at once.

Other towns affected we San Fele di Valetta, whe several were killed; Cianc Accadia and a score of sma villages. The Chamber Deputies voted 200,000 lire f the benefit of the sufferers.

The "Circle of Seniors" Around the Class Tree at Vassar

THE colleges for women vie with each other in endeavors to render their public exercises picturesque and interesting. As a result, it is an æsthetic luxury to witness them, especially their celebrations of the commencement season. None are more beautiful than those of Vassar, where twenty-five of the most comely graduates carry a daisy chain in the commencement procession, and the "pyramid" of the whole class, as in the above picture, gathers beneath one of the spreading trees upon the lawn. Under the lead of its class marshal, each class falls into line. The marshal is always a tall girl of fine carriage. She sets the pace, as it were, and gives "tone" to the whole line. The impression made upon the beholder of these very effective ceremonies is not only one of delight in their beauty, but of a sense of the freedom, dignity and high intelligence of the modern college girl—who, in her mature womanhood, is gradually coming to wield an ennobling influence upon our national life—its art, literature, politics and philanthropy.

RUSSIAN IMMIGRANTS POURING IN

IN recent years, Russians have been pouring into the United States as immigrants. This immigration from Russia, consisting mostly of Jews, was not of much moment until 1887, when it reached 30,766. In 1892 it was over 100,000, and from 1900 to 1905 the total arrivals from Russia were 748,520. These immigrants flock to our cities, so we see the necessity of their evangelization. Good authorities say that there are 1,500,000 Russian Jews in this country, and over 400,000 Russian Greek Catholics.

Pittsburg has recently undertaken to evangelize these people, and a good beginning has been made. The Presbyterians have a missionary working among the Russians as a colporteur; Bibles are distributed, and the Gospel is given to these people in its purity. Other denominations are trying to reach some of the people, but the work is in its infancy. The most important work of a practical kind was the opening of Immanuel House, a few months ago, by the Baptists. This new departure has been very successful, and all denominations are watching the movement with deep interest.

Immanuel House is located at 2013 Fifth Avenue, in the downtown section of Pittsburg, near the Russian settlements. Rev. Michael Levine, a converted Russian Jew, is the superintendent and missionary. This work is institutional in character. It is very practical and abounds in kindness and neighborliness. Its keynote is sympathy and helpfulness. There are classes and meetings every day of the week. The House is open day and night. There are classes to teach the English language, to teach temperance and good citizenship, and also an employment bureau. Many friendless Russians, out of work in a strange land, are given employment by this agency. This makes a point of contact, so that the immigrant can be reached with the Gospel. On Sundays there is Bible study at 9.30 A.M., and Sunday School at 2.30 P.M. There is preaching in Russian at 3.30 P.M., and prayer meeting every Friday evening. There is also an industrial school for girls every Wednesday evening. The adults and children are also taught the English language.

Immanuel House Russian Sunday School, Pittsburg, Pa.

Superintendent Michael Levine was born in Sebastopol, Russia, and is the son of a Jewish rabbi. He speaks seven languages and was a teacher in a public school in Russia when only nineteen years of age. He was converted to Christianity by the Stundists, and he had to be baptized at night for fear of persecution. He did missionary work in Russia for about two years. He was mobbed several times, and arrested for preaching on the streets, and his friends advised him to leave the country.

The Russians offer a fine missionary field in Pittsburg, for there are 22,000 Russian Greek Catholics in Allegheny County, and 45,000 Russian Jews. Twenty-six Russians so far have been won to Christianity. One convert has returned to Russia to carry on missionary work there; two have gone as workers to Canada, and another is a student, preparing for the ministry.

Russian converts are often persecuted by their own countrymen here. Recently, a young Russian became a convert and when he confessed his faith in his boarding house in the Russian colony, his countrymen forcibly ejected him, hurled his trunk out into the street, tore his hymn-book to pieces, and threw the fragments after his trunk. The young Russian was not daunted by persecution, but appeared at the Mission at the evening service with a smiling face.

There is much persecution in the world to-day for the disciples of Christ, and these Russian converts need the Saviour's promise: "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

WARREN G. PARTRIDGE, D.D.

CARRYING OUT "THE LORD'S BUSINESS"

By HARRIET FERRILL

"IT is not enough to give money to the poor," says James W. Gossard, millionaire manufacturer of Chicago, "one must give one's self as well."

Arriving at this conclusion a decade ago, Mr. Gossard set apart one day in the week, Thursday, for personal contact with the "meek and lowly," no matter where he happened to be on that day. So every Thursday for ten years, the Chicago bachelor's business desk has remained locked while the vice-president of the concern has been off on what he terms the "Lord's business." With his pockets full of fifty-cent pieces, medicine bottles, raisins, and other needful articles, he starts out to meet, advise, and help the "submerged tenth" in his "poor" office in a dingy church, where all day Thursday he keeps open house to the outcast, regardless of creed, sex, or color.

J. W. Gossard

As early as 7.30 in the morning Billy, Paddy, Uncle John, and all the other friends from Hoboland begin to arrive in order to read the magazines on the long tables and the religious mottoes on the walls; to receive instruction as to diet, bath, and piety; to report their progress in a better life; to present their board bills, which the benefactor often pays weekly for them; and lastly to go out, marching two and two, to dine at a fashionable restaurant with "J. W.," as all the down-hearted ones lovingly call Mr. Gossard. In a businesslike way each unfortunate walks in turn to the desk for aid. The charity worker writes a number of individual "don'ts" for each one, such as "Avoid red meats," if the person is rheumatic, or "Watch seasonal changes," if he is intemperate.

"You must study this list every morning," directs the benefactor, "and, above all—pray!"

An absolute rule for the unfortunate is that he must cultivate godliness, or nothing is promised; no encouragement is given, as Mr. Gossard has no faith in any one making a permanent reform except through the Christian life. He thinks little temporal helps count. A money loan after the promissory form is passed, with the understanding that the beneficiary is to repay the money when he is rich enough "not to feel it." Many refund the money; but more do not. The philanthropist, however, keeps on throwing Christian influences about his downhearted ones for the development of their souls, and buying food and clothing for the good of their bodies.

"Some decline to surrender," says Mr. Gossard; "others are in such a state from intemperate and vicious lives that they cannot even try to accept the better way."

When in doubt as to what course to take, he goes to a corner and prays, "Lord, I desire some help in this," and lets his Bible open where it will. If his eyes first fall upon the line running "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these," a jingle of silver is sure to follow. He keeps a little book jotted with incidents which, as he thinks, show the guidance of God. "I try to make this work God's business. I believe he knows his own business, therefore I believe in divine direction in the work," declares Mr. Gossard, searching the "Want Ad" columns or writing recommendations in order to help his downhearted ones to employment as soon as possible.

"Friends, are you willing to take this oath with me?" asks the business man, pointing to "We, the undersigned, solemnly swear that we will try not to take the first drink of alcoholic liquor or commit other individual besetting sins within one year from date. So help us God." Usually the men are eager to sign as they form in a circle, laying their hands one upon the other. Then the manufacturer clasps hands with the first man to sign, and prays that each may take his promise seriously. Often rescued fathers, who have been restored to their families, sons to parents, mothers to children, come to express their gratitude to their benefactor. "Don't thank me," says Mr. Gossard. "All thanks are due at the head office above."

As Mr. Gossard considers a lazy, drinking, vicious man a sick man, he has tried many remedies. Once he rented a large apartment house, where he might send all unfortunates who wished to reform. Soon the building swarmed with pilferers who appropriated the queensware, the carpet sweepers, and even the bath tubs, with all their brass fixtures, to pawn for drink. With better success, he worked out a farming remedy, where the dependents tilled the soil and recuperated from intemperance.

He believes in prevention, too. Many times he orders an uplifting magazine sent to a youth or a girl who is on the downward path. The magazine enters the home or the boarding-house of the weak one, leaving a helpful thought at each visit. "Finally, some paragraph makes a strong impression," says Mr. Gossard, "and the person turns to a better life." He speaks before clubs, warning young men and boys especially against immorality and intemperance. He is fond of pulling a handful of raisins from his pocket and using them as an object lesson to the drunkard, whom he begs not to let the brewers rob him of his birthright, but to use the grape as it is in its native cask.

Not only does he make visits to those on the verge of downfall, but he visits those who are down as well. With Don, his greyhound, running on before, he goes at midnight and in the early dawn through the reeling, boisterous "red-light" districts, watching a chance to do rescue work. Often he leaves his comfortable suite of rooms in the Auditorium Hotel for a room costing six dollars a month, in order to be near some unfortunate whom he is seeking to help liberate from sin.

Mr. Gossard's recreations are simple. He likes nothing better than to walk across the State, stopping at farmhouses and offering the housewives good round sums for a meal of friend chicken, hot biscuits, and honey. He does not use tobacco in any form. A smoke with him is a religious song. Sitting at the piano or the organ, he calls "Have a smoke?" and begins to sing in high tenor tones. Patronizing ten-cent restaurants and eating houses in which the price of no dish is over a cent is almost a mania with him. Thus lives one rich man, who spends a working day each week in the "highways and the hedges" for the Lord.

Among the Workers

—COMMENCEMENT WEEK at Taylor University, Upland, Ind., was a memorable occasion. Wednesday and Thursday, May 25 and 26, were devoted to final examinations; Friday was the field day of the oratory and vocal departments; Saturday was devoted to spiritual exercises, morning, afternoon and evening. On Sunday the Baccalaureate sermon was preached by President Vayhinger. At the meeting of the board the next day a plan was inaugurated to raise $50,000 for debt, improvement and endowment. Nine thousand dollars have already been secured.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Late Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N. Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N. Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Welcome Back, Theodore!

MR. ROOSEVELT has bidden farewell to Europe. When this paper reaches our readers, he will probably be once more with us on his native soil, amid the booming of big guns, the dipping of flags and the flowery oratory that are the inevitable accompaniments of a public welcome to one so distinguished. We are proud as a nation of Theodore. He is a Colossus among little men and few will begrudge him the glowing tribute paid by Lord Curzon, when the big American was introduced to the faculty at Oxford and admitted to the degree of Doctor of Civil Law: "Most strenuous of men, most distinguished of the citizens who to-day are playing a part on the stage of the world; peer of the most august kings!" There may have been just a suggestion of bombast in this high-sounding eulogy, but it was sincere, nevertheless, and it is, after all, no more than was conveyed in the appreciation extended to him in other lands, although differently phrased. Now that his foreign tour is at an end, Mr. Roosevelt can look back with satisfaction at the outcome of it all. Even for his Cairo and Guildhall speeches there has been more of praise than censure, and the British are now thanking him for pointing out what he conceived to be a vulnerable point in their scheme of colonial rule. He is not a diplomatist, nor has he ever claimed to be an orator; but what his addresses may lack in tact and elegance, is more than offset by their buoyant frankness and vigor of expression. When he speaks, nobody can deny him the attributes of moral courage, transparent honesty and truthfulness. These are qualities which the whole world loves to find in a public man and their possession furnishes the real key to Roosevelt's popularity.

Two Kinds of Evangelists

TWO distinct kinds of evangelism, which stand out in marked contrast, are described by a writer in Hampton's Magazine. The first he denominates as "vaudeville evangelism." It is of the sort that undertakes, by a variety of eccentricities and sensational acts, to command the attention of the audience and thus promote religion. He instances some of their odd ways: two twin brothers shave, dress and talk alike, so as to confuse the congregation as to their identity. Another, a woman, lets down her long hair in her enthusiasm, and does it up again in full view of the audience. Still another —a man—has his hair long and wears a flannel shirt. A fourth rushes to and fro with a drummer's case in one hand and a Bible in the other. A fifth is the precocious "child evangelist" with parrotlike declamation. Turning to the other class, we have the trained and often eloquent speaker, with his musical associate, both of whom carry into their calling marked ability and a fine spiritual enthusiasm which works its way with an audience by methods that are decorous and reverent.

We have seen both kinds. Unquestionably, there are opportunities for every shade and degree of talent in the spiritual vineyard; but we have never been able to appreciate the need or understand the advantage of eccentricity or exaggeration. However, the Lord has many different kinds of instrumentalities through which he works upon the hearts and consciences of men. What may seem outré and even reprehensible to some communities, may be acceptable and effective in others. We are forced to this conclusion by witnessing the remarkable results that frequently follow evangelism of the distinctly spectacular order; yet we would that all such work might be reverent and in harmony with the high and dignified calling of the evangelist. The winning of souls is surely the most consecrated work upon which any man can enter, and one that should call forth his best talents and his noblest efforts.

As to the value of the evangelist's work there can be little doubt. He is probably the only reliable factor who can stir up a spiritually dead community, and who by his direct and sometimes painfully personal methods, can bring conviction to those who seem to be impervious to the ordinary style of pulpit persuasion. In this sense he is certainly a valuable adjunct to the efforts of the regular preacher, who may have been laboring earnestly and conscientiously for years, without effecting what the evangelist can bring to pass in a week of concentrated ministration. Besides, the latter reaches a very large class over which the pulpit has apparently no influence—the unchurched and indifferent. He can puncture the hard armor of the gambler, the profligate, the professional criminal, and the rowdy, and can strike his darts deep in the heart of the profane and the blasphemer. It is the true role of the evangelist to be "all things to all men," no matter how the world looks at it, if by any means he may save some and bring souls to Christ. Let us give him his just due, then. If he is sometimes grotesque even to the verge of vaudeville, employing tactics of which we do not personally approve, let us remember that there are multitudes who can probably be influenced by the very appeals we may despise.

The Destiny of the Sunday School

SIX thousand men and women representing over thirty nationalities; red ribbons and blue fluttering in picturesque confusion throughout the vast hall—the red for North America, the blue for all other lands; unbounded enthusiasm and the splendid, indomitable spirit which is the accompaniment of a movement that is making irresistible headway; a black pyramid of Bibles in many tongues; a platform filled with men and women notable in every field of religious effort—this was the picture that presented itself at the recent World's Sunday School Convention in Washington. Old and young were there, white, brown, red, yellow and black, all inspired with a single desire; to advance the banner of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It was a most convincing object-lesson demonstrating the universality of the Christian faith. In this great gathering, representing 285,842 Protestant Sunday Schools, with a total enrolment of nearly 28,000,000—being three millions more than at the last convention—the one dominant note was that of confidence. Larger than the combined armies of the globe, the Sunday Schools of the four continents have become the centre of the great army of the Christian faith and the church's finest auxiliary. In a few more years, they will be the advance guard, leading in the conquering march for world-evangelization.

A New Office Suggested

OUR legal machinery has as one of its essential parts a prosecutor who presents the State's side of a case and endeavors to secure the conviction of those accused of crime. Usually these prosecuting attorneys are among the most clever and brilliant of their profession, accepting the office for the prominence it gives; a prominence invaluable to them after they leave their position, provided they have been fairly successful while in office. Men of attainments accept the position and are willing often to sacrifice for the time being the financial gains which would come to them in regular practice.

It has now been suggested that the post of public defender be created, a post of equal dignity with that of the prosecuting attorney and as attractive to an equal grade of legal talent. Where the accused is a man of means he has always been able to secure brilliant lawyers to defend him, men of even greater ability than the prosecuting attorney; but even here a public defender to take up his case would not be out of place. Many a man of ample means has been financially ruined in the effort to prove his innocence. Where he is guilty and fined or imprisoned he is doubly punished by the great amount he must pay for legal services. Where he is innocent and acquitted he is punished for a crime he never committed by paying for legal services to save his name and honor.

When a man is poor the judge has always appointed a lawyer to defend him, the costs being paid by the county. Usually young lawyers striving for a reputation are appointed for this service. They do their best, but their lack of long experience often puts them at a disadvantage when measured against the skill of the prosecuting attorney. Sometimes men of experience are appointed, but they do not desire such assignments and one cannot blame them, as it takes time from a far more remunerative practice. In case a public defender were made a permanent part of our legal machinery the hardship involved in both cases would be avoided.

An Unfailing Consolation

CHRISTIANITY both levels and uplifts. It brings the proud and the mighty down to the same plane as the humblest artisan, since God is no respector of persons, and all who truly seek him are equally his children. It lifts up the lowly and the weak to the high dignity of the sons and daughters of God and heirs of the blessed promises. Thus Christianity is the most democratic influence on which the world knows.

"I often read the Bible," said Emperor William of Germany to his friend Pastor Itolte, recently, when he was in a communicative mood; and he added:

> It is a pleasure to read it every night. A Bible lies on my table at my bedside. I cannot understand how so many people exist who do not attend God's Word. It is the source from which I draw strength and light. I seek consolation therein in the hour of sorrow and depression, and find comfort. I am convinced that many who have neglected religion and have fallen from God will regain their faith and feel the need of communion with the Almighty. Periods of dangerous doubt have always been followed by periods of enthusiastic religious feeling. All of us must go through Gethsemane for hours and hours in which our pride is humbled. It is difficult to be humble, for each of us wants to be his own master.

This, from one of the world's most powerful rulers, is a most striking testimony to the influence of the Bible in leveling distinctions of rank and station, and drawing all men to seek the same unfailing source of spiritual strength and consolation.

Unfortunate Italy

SHAKEN again by earthquake, the Southern Italian provinces seem marked for physical misfortune. Although the visitation of June 7 was a slight one in comparison with the appalling disaster that swept thousands to death in Sicily and Calabria two years ago, it has already cost over one hundred lives. Everybody must honor the King and Queen for the promptness with which they took up the burden of personally succoring the sufferers. Their action recalls the royal visit to Reggio where they both risked their lives in rendering service to the afflicted, setting a noble example to other rulers. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who contributed to Italy's relief at that trying time remember the kind-hearted and gracious Queen Helena, who personally superintended the distribution of their gifts through the Mothers' and Babies' Fund which did splendid work in saving life and alleviating misery. Fortunately, the present relief work following this latest earthquake is not so extensive as to demand outside aid, the government having made generous provision for the sufferers.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 22, 1910

	PAGE
The Silent Appeal	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	578
An Open-Air Pulpit (Illustrated)	578
Where Bad Boys Are Made Over (Illustrated) By C. J. Wettstein	579, 589
A New Name for the Church. Sermon By Rev. John Balcom Shaw, D.D.	580, 581
The Children's Pulpit. By Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D.	581
Mark Twain's Good-by. Poem	581
Colorado Greets the Mothers (Portraits)	582
Italy Again Shaken by Earthquake	582
Vassar's "Circle of Seniors" (Illustrated)	582
Russian Immigrants Pouring In (Illustrated)	583
Carrying Out the Lord's Business (Portrait)	583
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	584
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	585
People in the Public Eye (Portrait)	586
World's Sunday School Convention	586
That "Discouraged Husband" (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	587
Young Citizens in the Making Illustrated)	588
Building Up a Kentucky College	588
Our Financial Department	590
Young People's Societies	591
The Strawberry Handkerchief Serial Story by Amelia E. Barr	592, 593
Jesus Explaining the Kingdom Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	594, 595

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Honors to Roosevelt

THE honors to Theodore Roosevelt conferred upon him by the various nations of Europe reached their climax in the ones given to him n England. At Cambridge he received his degree t the hand of Canon Mason. The students lined p on either side of the road leading to the hall in hich the official ceremonies were held and cheered nthusiastically, all lifting their hats. Mr. and rs. Roosevelt while in London made a sentimental isit to St. George's, Hanover Square, to inspect the ntry on the register which they signed on the occaon of their marriage, twenty-three years ago. hey were accompanied by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, ritish Minister to Sweden, who was one of the itnesses at the marriage ceremony at St. George's, ecember 2, 1886. Mr. Maisey, the clerk of the hurch, held the same position as when he made the ntry in the register that "Theodore Roosevelt, nchman, married Edith Kermit Carow, spinster." he clerk said that it was the only entry of a ranchan that they had ever had in t. George's. He presented Mrs. oosevelt with a silver memorial poon. The City of London gave to heodore Roosevelt the keys of the ty and presented the freedom of e city in a solid gold casket in ost beautiful design. The honors nferred by the kings and courts Europe are gratifying to him d to his countrymen at home, but e greatest honor allowed him in e providence of God was the fact at he was born an American, a tizen of this great Republic. We ce heard him say that he was ne-fourth Scotch, one-fourth ish, one-fourth German, and fourths American." To be a native rn Roman in olden times was conidered a greater honor than to be king. He had the keys that gave m the freedom of the whole comonwealth. When they bound Paul d were about to scourge him he otested that such treatment of m was illegal and outrageous, as was a Roman citizen. The chief ptain who had him in custody ked him whether he was a Roman tizen, and he said that he was. e captain replied that it had cost m a great deal of money to purase Roman citizenship. But ul's answer was that he was alien and did not have to purchase his citizenship th money, for he had secured the freedom of the oman empire when he was born.

And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I s freedom. And Paul said, But I was free born. (Acts 22:28.)

dest Immigrant

It was a great-great-grandfather sure enough who nded at the Battery in New York among the imgrants the other day. He was a white-haired, thery-complexioned little man, 107 years old, who t the ship with his son George, aged seventy, his andson, Frederick, aged fifty, and his two greatandsons, under twenty-one years. The patriarch the tribe is named Peter Bekel. The Ellis Island spectors were inclined to stop Frederick to know ether his company would be a burden on the untry, but the grandfather referred him to his ther, and he in turn referred him to the little old thery-faced grandfather, more than a hundred ars old. The centenarian drew from his pocketok a lot of money and securities whose total value s $4,500, and with a smile the inspector passed e family as not likely to be returned as indigents. e great-great-grandfather was a farmer in south- Russia, his son George's son had gone away to rth Dakota many years ago, and had reared chilen and grandchildren. George, the son of seventy ars, persuaded his father to go out to North kota with him and see the children and grandldren and make his home with them, and so old ter, with the enterprise of a young man of twenty-e, was on his way to Dakota to make his fortune d grow up with the country. He said he had seen lley's comet as he came over on the ship, but that did not make as great an impression upon him it did when he saw it seventy-five years ago. has not yet learned to speak the English language, but says he will try and learn it well enough to communicate with his great-great-grandsons, farmers of North Dakota. The authorities say that he is the oldest immigrant that ever came to our shores. The prosperous condition of this self-reliant, independent old man, who insists on remaining the active head of three generations, is described by the Psalmist:

They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing. (Ps. 92:14.)

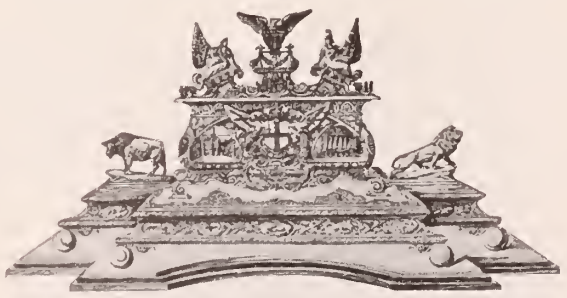
Poet's Singular Suicide

Pericles Ianopoulos, the famous Greek poet, whose personal beauty was so marked that Madame Leblanc-Maeterlinck compared him to Hermes, recently took his life under most peculiar circumstances. He was successful in his profession and beloved by his countrymen, but had spells of deep despondency. At a banquet he showed his friends a trunk full of manuscripts that he said he intended to destroy. As the guests were about leaving he said to them, "To-morrow I am going on a journey." Next morning each one of them received an exquisite statuette of the author. At the same time Ianopoulos had ridden out of the city of Athens to Mount Aegaleos. On the throne of Xerxes he gathered some wild flowers, out of which he made a crown. Then he mounted his horse and with a revolver in his hand he rode toward the sea, which was being swept by a violent storm. The horse hesitated to enter the water, but the poet sank both spurs into the flanks of the steed, which sprang out into the waters of the bay, as the man shot himself through the heart and fell dead among the waves. In a letter to a relative the poet said: "I am giving my dead body to the sea to cleanse. If the sea gives me up fling me back again." There is often the narrowest boundary line between genius and insanity, and it is more than likely that this brilliant poet had lost his reason from some cause or other—maybe from too much study or from some disappointment or another—or he may have had a trifling estimate of this earthly life and a feeble faith in the one which is to come. What a pitiful thing it is that a man of such intellectual ability and tender sentiment should not have had an experimental knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who could have cured every sorrow, quieted every discontent, and prolonged his life to happiness and usefulness! The poor disappointed, weary, sin-sick soul can find rest not in the bullet, nor in the waves of the sea that have no power to purify, but in the wounds and bosom of Jesus Christ.

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. (Matt. 11:28.)

Ex-President Roosevelt's Visit to Cambridge University

The Vice-Chancellor Mr Roosevelt Mrs. Roosevelt Mrs. Longworth Wife of the Vice-Chancellor



The Gold Casket Presented to Mr. Roosevelt at Guildhall

Stole a Cornerstone

A thief broke open the cornerstone of the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Chicago and instead of finding gold and silver coins deposited there, as he had reason to expect, he found only newspapers and cards. It served him right, for of all the devices suggested by avarice the one selected by this thief was the most unique and ridiculous. What little success after all does the ordinary thief have! Now and then some of the wholesale robbers hoard their accumulations, but the petty thieves almost never get ahead in money matters. In the long run the plunderers find the papers and cards in the cornerstone box instead of the golden coin.

Become not vain in robbery. (Ps. 62:10.)

Portable Gas

A new invention promises to sell portable gas by the foot or pound. There is so much faith in the practical working of the discovery that a gas plant has been built in Long Island City for the manufacture of this new illuminant, called Blau gas. It is promised that a man can take home in a steel vessel the size of a milk-bottle at a trifling cost, enough of this gas to furnish a considerable amount of heat and light for the home. The promoters of this new venture claim that the new gas has three distinctive characteristics: that in color and brilliancy it is the nearest approach to sunlight; that it is transportable in bottles, and is absolutely non-poisonous. Blau gas was invented by Herman Blau, a well-known German chemist, and is used extensively in Germany. There is a spiritual light which is portable, which each person possesses for the illumination of the mind and the heart, and which Christians are expected to carry about with them to throw brightness on the pathway and into the lives of others. The Saviour in his Sermon on the Mount refers to this privilege and duty:

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. (Matt. 5:16.)

Saved a Boy

H. M. Miller was returning to his work, riding in his buggy, at Fairfield, Ia., when he paused at the Court Street crossing on account of a freight train standing on the south track. While waiting there, he noticed a little boy, seven years of age, up the track a little distance, looking intently at the engine, entranced apparently at the wonder of the mechanism. Mr. Miller, who had been watching the boy, and noticing his intense interest, turned his eye away from the little fellow for a moment, and to his horror saw a west-bound passenger train bearing down upon him. The engineer and fireman had already seen the boy, and the fireman was crawling out of his engine ready to snatch him from the path of the train. Mr. Miller ran to the scene of danger, grabbed the lad by the arm and pulled him from the track, just as the train rushed by. The engine touched the shoes of the child, and came within a hair's breadth of cutting down the rescuer and the child. The train stopped and the fireman and engineer congratulated Mr. Miller, who, in his excitement, had failed even to get the name of the little boy whose life he had saved. This act of heroism on the part of Miller was beautiful, and illustrates the many true men and women who are trying to save the children who are standing in the way of danger and death, and also suggests the hand of the Heavenly Father that rescues his children from trouble, danger and death.

Thy right hand shall save me. (Ps. 138:7.)

PEOPLE IN THE PUBLIC EYE

DR. GOLDWIN SMITH, who passed away in Toronto, aged eighty-seven, was one of the best known men in the Dominion. English by birth, a ripe scholar, and distinguished as lawyer, author, lecturer, publicist, and metaphysician, he was respected on two continents for his high abilities and his public services. He was for many years an ardent advocate of union with the United States. He came to this country shortly after the war, and in 1868 accepted a chair in Cornell University. He afterward went to Toronto, where he lived during the last forty years. There were many who differed with his views on public questions, but his sincerity never failed to win respect. He was a link between the old-line statesmanship and the new, broad rather than conservative in his theology, a consistent humanitarian and a strong friend of peace and arbitration.

. . .

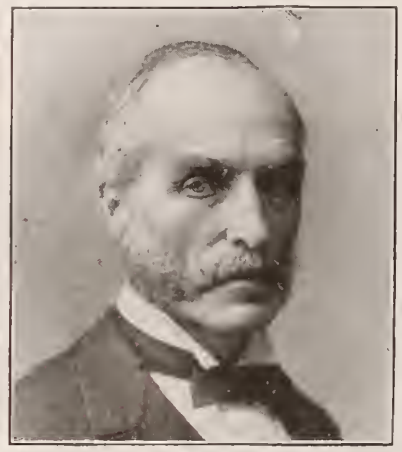
For several weeks every dispatch from the scene of the fighting in war-torn Nicaragua mentioned the reliance placed by General Estrada, the insurgent leader, on the skill of a young American volunteer named William P. Pittman, who had placed mines in the line of march of Madriz's forces and who is an expert on fortifications. During one of the desperate encounters near Bluefields, the young officer was taken prisoner and his many friends in Estrada's army and in Bluefields were much concerned for his safety, as it was feared he would be shot at once. However, Madriz sent an order which saved his life. At this writing he is still a prisoner of war and his ultimate fate is uncertain. Young Pittman seemed to have been born with a love of adventure. He had the ambition to become engineer of a great ocean liner at first. He left home and his people did not hear from him for six years. He tried sheep raising in Australia, and also followed the beat of the drum into the campaigns in the war in South Africa in 1900. Later he went to Panama. It is said that Estrada secured him in New Orleans to aid him in his efforts to change the party in power in Nicaragua.

Central and South America have for centuries been strong in the call to men who loved the clash of arms and the smell of burning powder. Some of the names of these daring soldiers, adventurers if you will, have been written large in history. Morgan fought his way from coast to coast in the seventeenth century, later in the nineteenth century the gallant Scotch admiral, the Earl of Dundonald, stopped his scientific studies long enough to command a South American fleet. Many Spaniards, Portuguese, gallant Frenchmen, and stout English and Scotch men of musket and pike, and Americans have all played the war game in Central America, and apparently the end is not yet. Your Pittman's home is in Cambridge, Mas

. . .

All through the Middle Ages me of learning dreamed of the possibili of transmuting metals. Dozens early chemists sacrificed their fo tunes and lives in the search, but vain. Then the idea was regarded hopeless and placed in the class wi the perpetual motion machine. In th age, however, the impossible seems be possible, and the most startli claims of scientific discovery are longer laughed at. Dr. F. W. Lang a physician of Scranton, Pa., has a parently discovered a process by whi a small amount of silver may be trar formed into a larger amount. T process is his secret, but the wonderf results attained have caused much d cussion. He co bines evidently certain amount silver with certa fluxes and has mo silver. It was t idea of the old chemists that silv would breed silv The doctor start to work with met as a helper in tinsmith's shop Scranton when was fifteen years o He was a hard s dent and prepa himself for colle He went to Wesley University at M dletown, Conn. Th he studied medic in Philadelph where he now pr tises his professi

William P. Pittman



Prof. Goldwin Smith

Dr. Frederick W. Lange

THE WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

THE World's Sunday School Convention, which held its session in Washington, D. C., last month, was a great success in point of numbers, enthusiasm and important results. President and Mrs. Taft were among those in attendance. Among the picturesque features of the convention was a mammoth public Bible class parade down Pennsylvania Avenue, which was the occasion of a great public demonstration.

On May 21, a movement was begun in the convention which produced most unexpected results. A Canadian delegate started the enthusiasm by nominating President Taft for a life membership and pledging in behalf of Canada $100 toward the $1,000 fee required for every life member. The remaining $900 was subscribed with a suddenness that surprised everybody. Mrs. Taft was next nominated as a life member and the same amount was again subscribed by the different States in a twinkling.

By way of returning Canada's compliment, a South Carolina delegate proposed King George V. as a life member. There was a heated competition between the two countries as to which should make up the $1,000 first. Next followed in rapid succession the life nominations of Theodore Roosevelt, President Diaz of Mexico, William Jennings Bryan and a number of others, all of whom were fully subscribed in short order and amid great enthusiasm. May 21 was Mission Day and pleas were made for missions in foreign lands, among the speakers being Rev. S. M. Zwemer, Dr. Robert E. Speer and others. Dr. Speer made a special plea for the evangelization of South America—"a continent of sixty million souls to which the Bible had been denied."

Sunday, May 22, was World's Sunday School Day, on which every Sunday School in the world, associated with the Sunday School Union, was reciting the same order of service as the Sunday School children in Washington. The executive committee of the convention attached great importance to this observance as a means of focusing universal attention upon the Sunday School as a most important agent in world evangelization.

At the time of the Bible class parade, Congress paid the convention the distinguished compliment of adjourning in honor of the event, and extended a welcome to the convention to Washington. This was acknowledged by a resolution of thanks addressed to Congress by the convention.

A dramatic episode on Saturday occurred when Marion Lawrence, of the North American section of the executive committee, and the Rev. Carey Bonner, representing the British section, met on the platform, clasped hands and pledged the United States and Great Britain to lead in the evangelization the dark corners of the earth. Some one threw American flag across the shoulder of Mr. Lawre and another person seized a Union Jack among decorations and draped Rev. Mr. Bonner with The enthusiasm which greeted the demonstrat lasted several minutes, and many delegates, ov come with emotion, wept.

The closing day of the convention witnes several interesting events. A grand tableau seventy-five children representing "The Twenti Century Crusaders," was shown, which inclu children of many nations. Delegates from a sc of different countries gathered on the platform sang a hymn all to the same tune, but each in own native tongue.

The statistics of the convention were inspiri It was stated that the world's total Protestant S day School scholarship was now 27,888,479, whom over 16,000,000 are in the United States Canada. There are 2,500,000 officers and teache and 285,842 schools. The "cradle roll" runs up the millions.

Among the leading speakers were President T Dr. F. B. Meyer, Hon. John Wanamaker, Rev. S. Cadman, Rev. E. K. Warren and others. Dr. Geo W. Bailey of Philadelphia is the new president the association.

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—THE POSTAL Savings Bank Bill has passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 195 to 101.

—"EXTRAVAGANCE" is announced as the new issue in the struggle between the regulars and "insurgents" in Congress, which many think must be fought out before adjournment. The appropriations are much larger than those of the last Congress and the administration's recommendations for economy have not been heeded to an extent that is satisfactory to the country.

—CHANCELLOR DAY, of Syracuse University, has ideas and is not afraid to express them. He attributes the declining marriage rate to lack of self-denial on the part of men and women. No woman, he says, ought to be the wife of a man who can't support her. If the wife cannot earn as much as the husband, she ought to be able to save more than he can, otherwise they are mismated.

—UP TO JUNE 5, over 30,000 Jews had been expelled from forbidden territory by the Russian government. Seven thousand of the victims resided in Kiev. In a majority of cases, no preliminary notice was given and they were obliged to leave immediately, abandoning their shops, homes and belongings. Many of them are coming to the United States and Canada, but the majority are turning towards Oriental Turkey.

—ORIENTAL CHARACTER is a puzzle to the Occidental. It is full of surprises. One of these came to the surface at a dinner given by the Japan Society of New York to Prince Fushimi, a distinguished representative of the Mikado, now visiting us. The Prince, in all his conversation with Americans, spoke through his interpreter; hut at the dinner in question, to the astonishment of the entire company, he made a neat little diplomatic speech in faultless English!

—RUDOLPH SPRECKELS, the San Francisco millionaire who financed the recent prosecution against the grafters in that city, predicts a campaign against political and business corruption that will shortly affect the entire country. He declares that such a campaign is rendered necessary, not only by politics, but by business and labor conditions. Great evils exist and the trend is in the wrong direction. He has conferred with many men of influence, who are earnestly seeking the light and are eager to hetter conditions, with the view of bringing about honest methods in the conduct of government and business.

—THE LONDON SKETCH in a recent issue gives this description of the latest edict of fashion in women's attire: "The arbiters of feminine fashions must possess a pretty sense of humor. They seem to take an impish delight in making their devotees uncomfortable and ridiculous. The latest fashion prescribes a skirt so restricted in its lower portion as to render the unfortunate wearer unable to sit, walk, stoop, or climb—much less run—with any comfort. They are reduced to a sort of Chinese toddle, and some of them resemble nothing so much as competitors in a sack race, who, having once fallen down, are unable to get up. The Parisians appropriately call the wearers of the new sk les entravees—"the trammeled ones."

—THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Jr., and Miss Eleanor Butler A ander visited the City Hall, New York, Saturday, June 4, took out a license from Manager Scully of the Marriage Lic Bureau. The prospective bridegroom when questioned by registrar described himself as an American citizen; age twe two; business, manufacturer; parents, Theodore Roose former President of the United States, and Edith Carow. Alexander gave her age as twenty-two, parents, Henry A son Alexander and Grace Green. They gave the date of t prospective marriage as June 20, before which time Col Roosevelt is expected to return from abroad.

—AS WAS INTIMATED last week, the Western railroad p dents have made a formal protest against the government to enjoin them from increasing freight rates. They had a hours' conference on June 6 at which President Taft stated the purpose of the suit was to prevent the proposed increas as to preserve the status until the new law could be passed the commission should have the power to investigate rate vances as soon as announced and before becoming effective. companies were asked to withdraw their new tariff and not any until the new law should be passed, which it was beli would be done at the present session. The companies ag and the object of the injunction suit having thus been ac plished, it will now probably be withdrawn.

That "Discouraged Husband"

Women in Council

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

EVER since, a few weeks ago, I appealed to the women and men who read this page of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, asking them to send me ters and bits of counsel in which they might help e another, replies have been pouring in. Nat-ally the case of a husband and wife, who have nown trial and disappointment of no ordinary nd, has touched the sympathies of many readers. o letter which I have received has been at once so ractical and so remarkable in the story it tells id the hope it extends to hundreds of discouraged eople as a letter received from a minis-r of the Gospel and inserted as follows:

n Opening Into Life

"I have read the letter entitled 'A Discouraged Husband' in our issue of the 11th inst. I am in a osition to give this discouraged man dvice. I have helped two thousand scouraged men with families to help emselves. I have been engaged in is work for ten years. Ten years ago e first woman to appeal to me was in ew York State. Her husband was in identical condition. Her question as, 'What can you do for my husband your Christian Colony?' My advice her was, 'Send him to me and I will elp him.'

"That man came to me. He remained ere alone for one year; then he sent for is family. He is worth $10,000 to-day. en years ago I resigned from one of e most elegant churches in Canada, mply to get down among the poor peo-le and direct them how to help them-elves. I first secured a grant of 20,000 cres of virgin land from the Ontario overnment. I asked to have it surveyed. hen I called for poor family men, enant farmers and others, people who ere religious or religiously inclined. I ave each family 160 acres. There were fty families in my first contingent from eventeen States in the United States. n the first year I suffered all kinds of rivation. I had no money and very ttle influence, but I secured $2,500 for oads. Organized a church in twenty-our hours after the contingent arrived, nd took up a collection for foreign mis-ions. During the year built a school-ouse, secured a sawmill, post-office and tore. These little children could go to unday School in their little print resses and barefooted. These men were o longer discouraged; they were work-ng for themselves instead of the land-ord. They became officers in the church, nd trustees in the schools. Within ten ears three hundred thousand acres ave been taken by discouraged people. ixty-seven new rural school districts ave been formed.

"This is the counsel I have to offer his wife and husband. Come to me. I will give ou a temporary home to stop in. Free fuel, water nd electric lights, cooking stove and utensils. Then will give you a home covered with valuable timber. ree fuel, timber for house and out-buildings and or market, a visible means of support. My advice s to leave the old dead mill. It is only a millstone round the neck, which will ultimately sink you into bject poverty. Get out of the grave, be resur-ected and leave the monument of your folly behind.

"Yours very truly,
"R. A. BURRISS.

"Port Arthur, Ontario, Canada."

. . .

Two Voices in Defense of the Dog

"I have handled dogs for over twenty years, and neither the highest bred ones nor the poor little curs of the street have ever shown anything but the kindliest feeling toward me; nay, more, I have picked up sick dogs from the wayside and have tended them until they were well or death ended their weary little lives, and no human being could have shown more gratitude for my care. A child who does not have a dog for a companion misses half the pleasures of life, and a man or woman who cannot gain a dog's love I could never trust.

MRS. W. P."

"Some one has said that the world may be divided into two classes—people who love dogs and those who do not. I have just read the 'Dissenting Voice' on your page of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and I want you to know that I have read what you have said in defense of the dog from time to time, and always my heart has gone out to you in love for the trouble you take to defend one who cannot speak for himself. For my part, I pity the boy who cannot have a dog for a comrade. When your correspondent classes dogs with saloons I am sure that all of 'my class' will feel like rising in indignation. L. S. E."

. . .

Children's Bedtime

"I am most interested in the management of children. At what time should my two little girls, Eunice and Dorothy, aged five and three, be put to bed? My younger child when excited repeats the same word over and over several times before she gets it right, although she talks plainly and sings very sweetly. Can anything be done to correct this habit?

"MRS. M. T."

What pretty names your children have! I always think it a pity when names are bestowed upon children which they may later dislike. For little girls of five and three the usual bedtime hour should never be later than eight o'clock. Seven would be better. The younger child, of course, has her nap in the daytime still. Children at this early age should have their heartiest meal at noon, and their supper should be light, usually of bread and milk, with perhaps a baked apple. The last half hour with the mother is a precious one to the babies, for then she can hear them repeat their little prayers, tell them a story and tuck them up for the night, after giving them the good-night kiss. Take no notice of the little one's repetition of a word. She will drop this habit when she is older. The best remedy for many such things is tranquillity on your part and a little wholesome neglect.

. . .

A Reader's Request

"What I much want to see is now and then a poem of yours that I may cut out and keep for my own. I wish you would publish one called 'The Old Sampler.' I had a copy of it once.

"A SUBSCRIBER."

Thank you, dear friend, for saying that you like my verses. The poem you refer to was christened by me, "Elizabeth, Aged Nine." Some time when there is room you shall have a copy of it on this page, but I am afraid you will have to wait until there is a lull in my correspondence.

. . .

The Mother-in-Law

A woman who knows whereof she speaks writes very truly that there are two sides to the much vexed question of the mother-in-law. She thinks that when sons marry or daughters do so, the newcomers in the family should behave with tact and consideration to the woman growing old who has brought up her own family and who sees her children forming new ties. No friends should be closer and more intimate than mothers-in-law, sons-in-law and daughters-in-law.

. . .

Keeping Independence Day

A movement has been started in the right direction in regard to the celebration of Independence Day. Persuade your children that they may have a happy time without endangering their own lives and those of others by the use of toy pistols and other perilous explosives. Hitherto, the Fourth of July has been literally pandemonium in many places, and the comfort of the sick as well as their safety from collapse has been menaced by the incessant noise prevalent from dawn until midnight. We may be patriotic and enjoy ourselves without the risk to health and property entailed in the old-fashioned way of keeping the Fourth.

THE GOSSIPS

Here are Miranda and Mary Ann
Talking just as fast as they can;
Busily working as you see,
Just as happy as they can be.

The skies are bright and the world is fair,
Fragrance floats on the summer air,
Friendly gossip is not so bad
When everything helps to make us glad.

THE AVERAGE MAN

WHEN it comes to a question of trusting
Yourself to the risks of the road,
When the thing is the sharing of burdens,
The lifting the heft of a load,
In the hour of peril or trial,
In the hour you meet as you can,
You may safely depend on the wisdom
And skill of the average man.

'Tis the average man, and no other,
Who does his plain duty each day,
The small thing his wage is for doing,
On the commonplace bit of the way.
'Tis the average man, may God bless him,
Who pilots us still in the van,
Over land, over sea, as we travel,
Just the plain, hardy, average man.

So, on through the days of existence,
All mingling in shadow and shine,
We may count on the every-day hero,
Whom haply the gods may divine,
But who wears the swart grime of his calling,
And labors and earns as he can,
And stands at the last with the noblest,
The commonplace, average man.

—MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

—NOVICE. You are going as a bride to live in a city far away from your present home. I note that you will live among plain people, some of whom are probably illiterate. Make friends of them. You will find kind hearts and helpful hands even where visiting cards are of little use and afternoon teas unheard of.

YOUNG CITIZENS IN THE MAKING

THE School Republic, in its many forms of State, county, city, etc., is not altogether unknown to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Ordinarily, a school which is using this method of moral and civic practice, is organized as a State, with its governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of State, chief justice and such other officers as may be wanted, all elected by the pupils of the whole school. Each room is organized as a city, and the pupils elect a mayor, president of the city council, judge, members of the State legislature and such other officers as may be wanted. All the pupils in a schoolroom are members of the city council and can pass ordinances, which, when approved by the teacher, will be in force for the government of their School City.

In the same way the State legislature may enact laws for the governing of the pupils of the whole school, which become operative as soon as signed by the principal of the school.

In the above picture, the boy standing at the left is opposing the bill before the legislature to give the two thousand girls of the school the right to vote. He is just in the act of saying: "I am opposed to this bill. Our country has not seen fit to allow our mothers to vote. Unless our country has some good reason for this, the right to vote would have been given to the women of our land. I think it would be an act of disrespect and insolence on our part to take any such action. I am opposed to the passing of this bill."

A Legislative Session in a Public School Debating the Suffrage

One of the boys on the right got the floor and replied: "I understand that in some of the States in the Western part of our country, the women have the same political rights as the men. I understand that in those States, practically all the men vote and attend to all their political duties much more faithfully than do the men in the Eastern part of our country. I understand also, that the women attend to their political duties as intelligently and faithfully as the men do. If that is true, and I believe it is true, then certainly, after a while the right to vote will be given to the women of our whole country. If in eight years from now (the boy was thirteen years old) the women of the State of New York have the right to vote and the two thousand women who are now girls in this school, and the thousands of girls who will follow them, do not understand their duties as citizens and voters, who will be to blame, except myself and you, the other members of this legislature? I say that I shall vote for this bill!" The boy who had spoken against the bill was eager to show his conversion and it was carried unanimously.

The girls eagerly took up their citizenship, w most excellent moral, civic and pedagogical resu

Mr. Charles Edward Stowe writes to THE CHR TIAN HERALD this interesting letter on child citiz ship:

"To our shores are flocking the people of ev clime, nationality, religion and spoken tongue. attempt to teach religion to these, after the dogn of any particular sect or creed, is only to make confusion worse confound But we can teach the princip and practices of citizenship, a sound ethical basis, and make one the Greek, the J the Protestant, the Roman the Parsee, the Buddhist i common effort to build up social state in which all, r and poor, high and low, learn and unlearned, shall be able dwell together as brothers, crushing one another to earth, but in mutual co-ope tion and common helpfuln woven together in the bonds equity and love.

"If this dream of the ki dom of God on earth is to realized, and it can be realiz we must begin with the b and girls. But how shall begin? There is no practi way except Mr. Gill's plan child citizenship. I am gra ful for the advent of Mr. Gi most excellent little book, C Problems. It should be used a text-book in every fou year and grammar school the land, and I wish it mig be placed in the hands of eve teacher, pastor, Sunday School worker and missi ary in our great and small cities.

"True religion means service. Not only is he w ministers greatest, but ministering is the end religion, and is not merely, as some might suppo a manifestation of it. But we must know how minister, and to do it intelligently, so that our effo may produce the best results."

BUILDING UP A KENTUCKY COLLEGE

IN the year 1790, plans were laid by Bishop Asbury and other pioneer preachers for the first Methodist school in Kentucky. It was named Bethel Academy, and was built on the banks of the Kentucky River about twenty miles south of Lexington. Financial and other troubles set in and the venture failed; and Francis Poythress, its chief promoter, died with a broken heart.

In 1890, just a century later, Rev. J. W. Hughes, of the Kentucky Conference, founded Asbury College, at the village of Wilmore, four miles from the site of Bethel Academy. It began in a little frame building of four rooms, with two teachers and eleven students. From this small beginning it grew to a faculty of fifteen and a student body of two hundred and fifty from twenty States and some foreign countries.

It was founded as an undenominational but strictly Christian school, and has always maintained that standard. It is a very common custom for teachers to open their classes with prayer, and scarcely a term goes by without a revival. Last term a very gracious outpouring of God's Spirit fell upon us. More than forty of the students were converted, reclaimed, or brought into a definite experience of full salvation.

Hundreds of our students are in distinctly Christian and evangelistic work, and nearly fifty now in attendance are preparing for the ministry of the mission field. Our missionaries are in every quarter of the globe and our students are winning thousands of souls every year. But Asbury is not a theological seminary or a missionary training school. A regular college curriculum is pursued, and most efficient work is done in academy and preparatory grades. The courses have been strengthened, and, in the near future, with improved equipment, our work will reach the very highest standards, and a diploma from Asbury will be equal to that of any college in the land.

The material equipment has improved until, instead of one little frame building, there will soon be four commodious and substantial brick and cement structures. The beautiful new administration building will be completed this spring, and will furnish ample room for the many new students that will come to us as soon as we can accommodate them.

On the 18th of March, 1909, the old administration building and one of the smaller buildings were destroyed by fire; but the two now being pushed toward completion will more than replace the ones we lost. In order to rebuild, the citizens of Wilmore, which is but a small village, have lifted with all their might, and with their limited means have subscribed $15,000. This, with the insurance on the old buildings, is not sufficient to complete the buildings free of debt; but it is truly the Lord's work, and he will not let us fail.

The new buildings are being erected on the Bellevue Campus, which has been enlarged to thirteen acres. The new campus is beautifully situated, the buildings being visible for miles across the hills and valleys.

Professor H. P. Carpenter

President A. S. Watkins

Our students are of the "common people" who heard the Master so gladly, and have in all ages upheld his cause, but their limitations and needs are made a means of wholesome discipline through their faith in Him who watches the sparrows and knows us altogether. To many worthy young men and women self-denial comes as regularly as their daily recitations; but with sweet cheerfulness they go on, with the ring of victory in their testimonies and "the substance of things hoped for" in their prayers. The "Boys' Conference," modeled after a real annual conference, meets four evenings a wee The faculty has been greatly strengthened th year by the employment of some additional teache and a new president, Dr. A. S. Watkins, of Oh The friends of the college everywhere are rejoici that they have been able to secure this earne consecrated, scholarly man to take charge in th crucial period when the old Asbury is passing aw and the new and better time is dawning.

Plans are now being matured to establish industrial plant which will give industrial trainin and provide employment for many who have money to pay expenses. Pleading appeals by t score are coming to the president from earne Spirit-filled young men who are willing to do a honest work to pay their way, or at least part of Some have been converted after reaching manhoo and at once a desire was awakened, which th never felt before, for an education. They felt th they must atone for the wasted opportunities youth by a double industry for a few years in c lege and by a consecrated life afterward; but t lack of means presents a serious obstacle. Son have had the care of helpless and dependent paren or friends, and have no money laid up. To all thes the opportunity of work means the practical sol tion of the problem. When this feature is adde an increase of fifty per cent. in attendance will only the natural result. Some of the friends of t college have offered to start a loan fund for gir as soon as the new buildings are completed. T immediate and pressing need is for additional fun to complete the buildings. These are none too lar for the needs of the near future. More dormitori will be needed as soon as the industrial work is operation. The attendance next year will probab far exceed that of any previous year. There is place, at home or abroad, where dollars and praye combined will do more to honor the Master and ble his "little ones" than in Asbury. Many implorin hands are stretched toward this seat of learning an religion. Many longing hearts are anxiously wai ing for a wider door of opportunity to train min and heart for the greatest earthly vocation—livin a devoted, fruitful, deep and abounding Christia life. Any one wishing further information or desi ing to send a contribution to help this worthy caus should communicate with Rev. L. L. Pickett, finar cial agent of Asbury College, or Professor H. Carpenter, business manager, Wilmore, Ky.

Where Bad Boys Are Made Over

Continued from page 579

The twelve boys kept Wichern busy m morning till night. He taught m the three fundamental studies, d joined them in the work which he set for them to do. When spring came, the boys were set at work to make a garden. The days were filled with work, but in the evening, after supper, when tired out, they sat in the shade of a large chestnut tree. Wichern taught them to sing and told them stories of German history and of d and the Saviour. Thus he tactfly drove all thought of obstinacy d opposition from their hearts. Often tears came into their eyes when minded of some wrong which they d committed.

J. H. Wichern

Admission for more boys was soon manded from Hamburg, and there s no room. But money came to proe for the need. Then they dug a ep cellar and built a two-story house i Swiss style, because the man who s to have charge of it was a young iss. In his honor it was called the iss House, and the first cottage
s now called the Old House.

Wichern was fond of music. Sometes, when the fathers or mothers of t boys or other guests came, there uld be no boys to be seen. Then, ddenly, at a sign from Wichern, the ys, hiding in the branches of a ge chestnut tree, would surprise the itors with a merry song. These ys, who came from the slums, rned to love the beautiful garden in ich each one of them had a flower d to himself; they sang and laughed their work; and proud and happy y were when they could give to the itor a bouquet of their own gardenig. By such methods as gardening, usic and story-telling Wichern deoped in them a longing for someng good, refined and beautiful.

With the growth of the institution, re young brothers were needed to e for the classes. They came from parts of Germany, inspired by the orts that came from the colony, and ed with sympathy and love for the or, helpless and degenerate children.
ey offered their services to Wichern, o, in return, instructed them in his thods. The volunteer worker gradlly became a "housefather" and, er on, was sent out into the large ies to work among the poor and lpless. The demand for admission o the colony continued to increase m year to year. Another house was
ded. It was called the "Mutterhaus" Mother House), because it had a rge assembly-room and a tower, and cause in it was room for all the usefathers to live. Then Wichern ok Amanda Boehme as his wife and sistant. She had been a teacher in e Sunday School; now she would e with him and work with him for e children.

I cannot write in detail of how the ony grew from year to year—how use after house had to be built—re the "Work House," in which all e tailors, shoemakers, brushmakers, ttmakers, bookbinders, printers, and rpenters worked and lived; there the "Beehive," because the brother and e boys had built it all alone, as the es build their own houses. There e "Fish Hut," named from its locaon near the little pond; the "Schoenrg," named in honor of Count von hoenburg; the "Sparrow's Nest," in d out of which the many little sparws, happy girls, fly. The "Chestt," because it is near a chestnut tree.
e "Johannesburg," in honor of the usefather, Johannes, who superinded its erection, and many others.
very year the colony receives thouands of letters from former inmates who now occupy responsible positions. And each letter is signed not only with the name of the writer, but with the name of the house in which they found their happiness, such as George V. O. (Beehive). Theodore S. (Fish Hut). Frederick A. (Old House), or George K. (Chestnut).

Wichern was asked to lecture on his work before the Protestant Assembly at Wittenberg, in 1848. He electrified the meeting by his enthusiastic description of his work. He went into the large cities and spoke before crowded houses, so inspiring the people to active work that within six years over one hundred homes for neglected and incorrigible children were opened. In addition, many homes for young men, "Martha Societies" for poor girls, public libraries, and other institutions were founded.

Then the Wittenberg Assembly placed Wichern at the head of the committee for the propagation of his ideas. The Prussian government appointed him superintendent of its penal and correctional institutions. To-day his name is honored all over Germany as that of a noble man and a great philanthropist.

The Rauhe Haus is now a small city, with gardens, parks, gymnasium, natatorium, library, chapel, and many houses, some of them two and three stories high, with towers and verandas, all neat and clean, and all built by the boys and the "brothers." And it is not a home for the children of the poor alone. Here we find sons of counts, barons and millionaires working in a separate building, the Weinberg (vineyard). But only the unmanageable, criminally inclined, evil-minded, such as we in America place in the industrial and reform schools, are admitted. Those who can afford it must pay for their maintenance, but there is no charge for the poor. They are permitted to stay in the institution until their twenty-first year, when they are expected to be able to make an honorable living.

The principle on which the colony works is this: Keep the boys busy with hard, physical work from morning until night so that they have no time for bad thoughts. Tire them out so that they are glad to go to sleep early in the evening. Treat them with firmness, but in all things, remember that love is the predominant spirit which rules the entire colony.

The Defense of the Bible

IT is now seven years since the Bible League of North America was organized in New York City for the purpose of defending the old Book against the attacks of infidels, atheists and skeptics generally. During these years, the League has done a splendid work in meeting and overcoming the insidious assaults of the "higher critics," and other enemies of God's Word. Its publications now find their way to readers in every part of this continent and in other lands. Among its conductors are many of the most distinguished orthodox theologians and Bible scholars of our day—men who stand for a whole Bible and who are able to counteract the influences that are spreading unbelief in the form of agnosticism, pantheism and materialism in our colleges and universities. The Bible League offers a plan whereby all true Christians may have a part in the campaign against these evil influences and in defense of the old Book. It invites the co-operation of God's people in this work. All who are interested in the great battle now waging for Bible defense and who desire full information should write to The Bible League of North America, 96 Bible House, New York City.

Mrs. B.: See, Helen. Here is a pretty pattern. (To the Salesman) But won't the colors fade when the goods are washed?

Salesman: Not if you use Ivory Soap and lukewarm water.

Mrs. B.: Why do you say "Ivory Soap?" Will nothing else do?

Salesman: Possibly—I am not sure. But I am sure of Ivory Soap. That is why I recommend it.

There is no "free" (uncombined) alkali in Ivory Soap. That is why it will not injure the finest fabric or the most delicate skin.

Ivory Soap . . . 99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure.

HOUSEWORK HALVED

By Syracuse "EASY" Utilities

SOLD ON TRIAL

We are specialists in labor-saving utilities for the home. Our Syracuse "EASY" Vacuum Washer and "EASY" Ball-bearing Wringer have lightened the burdens of thousands of women, and are known by them to be the best made for their purpose.

The latest addition to our line is the "EASY" Vacuum Cleaner, hand or electric, which is positively the easiest operated and most efficient cleaner made. Gets ALL the dirt, without raising dust. Cleans carpets, rugs, furniture, draperies, floors and walls right in the room. Once tried, you will not be without it. Write for Trial Offer, Easy Terms, and testimonials from our customers.

DODGE & ZUILL

535-N Dillaye Building. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Toronto Branch: 92 Olive Avenue, L. G. Beebe, Manager

CALOX

THE OXYGEN TOOTH POWDER

It's the Oxygen

in Calox (Peroxide of Hydrogen) that renders it so efficient as a cleanser of the mouth and whitener of the teeth.

Dentists advise its use. Physicians prescribe it.

All Druggists, 25 cents.

Sample and booklet free on request.

McKESSON & ROBBINS, NEW YORK

$1 GENUINE HAND WOVEN PANAMA

RARE BARGAIN IN GENUINE PANAMA HATS

Panama Hats more popular than ever—all the rage this summer. By importing large quantities we can sell direct to user for this surprisingly low price. These hats are warranted genuine all hand-woven; unblocked, and can be worn in that condition by Gentlemen, Ladies and Children. Easily blocked in any shape or style. Just as serviceable as the $10.00 kind; the difference only in fineness of weave. Assorted sizes. Weight only 2 oz. Sent prepaid, on receipt of $1.00. ORDER TO-DAY. Satisfaction Guaranteed. SEND FOR BOOKLET.

Panama Hat Co., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York City

Extra Fine Post Cards Free

Send 2c stamp for five samples of our very best Gold Embossed Friendship, Flower and Motto Post Cards; beautiful colors and loveliest designs.

Art Post Card Club, 885 Jackson St., Topeka, Kan.

5 Fine POST CARDS FREE

Send only 2c stamp and receive 5 colored Gold and Embossed Cards FREE to introduce post card offer.

CAPITAL CARD CO., Dept. 132, Topeka, Kan.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

6% Gold Bonds

Your Money is Worth 6%

¶ Is yours earning that much for you? If not, you are losing on every dollar just so much as your interest-return falls short of 6%

¶ To make your money earn 6% is no departure from conservatism; it is simply to have your savings earn business profits---profits resulting from investment in the safe and profitable business of New York real estate ownership and operation.

¶ Starting 22 years ago with a Capital of $100,000, the American Real Estate Company not only has paid 6% unfailingly on every bond issued, but has accumulated a Surplus of $1,751,154.38 and Assets of $15,536,199.47. The bonds are issued in these forms:

6% COUPON BONDS

For those who wish to invest $100 or more. For Income Earning, paying interest semi-annually by coupons.

6% ACCUMULATIVE BONDS

For those who wish to save $25 or more a year. For Income Saving, purchasable by instalments.

¶ Before investing your July dividends or savings, let us explain the advantages of A-R-E 6% Gold Bonds---for income earning or saving. We shall be glad to send you detailed information, illustrated booklets and comprehensive map of New York City. Write to-day.

American Real Estate Company

Founded 1888 :: Assets, $15,536,199.47
Capital and Surplus - - $1,851,154.38

Room 534 527 Fifth Avenue, New York

A BOOK ABOUT Mortgages and Trust Bonds

Yielding 5 to 5½% Net

SENT FREE

Write to-day for our book describing these Guaranteed First Mortgage Trust Bonds and our plan whereby payments of $10 to $100 and upwards at your convenience secures at once ownership and income

BONDS Secured by First Mortgages on New York and Suburban Real Estate

UNDER SUPERVISION OF NEW YORK BANKING DEPT.

NEW YORK MORTGAGE CO.

DEPT. D 1475 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

THE history of bonds a banking firm has sold during its business life is the best possible evidence as to the integrity and efficiency underlying the firm's offerings. We submit the record of our offerings over a period of many years as an indication of our ability and an earnest of our purpose to supply you with dependable investments.

Write for pamphlet No. B 50 entitled "A Bond Dealer's Circular."

N. W. HALSEY & CO.,

New York: 49 Wall St. Philadelphia: 1421 Chestnut St.
Chicago: 152 Monroe St. San Francisco: 424 California St.

COMMON SENSE INVESTMENTS

WE have received many letters from subscribers asking our advice concerning financial propositions which have been offered them; propositions of which we have never heard.

Now we are glad at all times to furnish any information concerning investments with which we are acquainted. If a subscriber writes and wishes to know about an investment proposition and we happen to know that it is all right, we shall at all times be glad to say so, but we cannot engage to carry on a long series of investigations concerning particular enterprises which are located far from this office. In judging an investment proposition, one's own common sense applied in conjunction with certain simple rules, which indeed have been outlined in these columns, is generally all that is necessary in forming an opinion. The series of articles on investments which has been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has been collected in pamphlet form under title of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD BOND BOOK and we usually refer our readers to it.

Promoters' Arguments

Having done this on several occasions, however, readers have remonstrated with us for dismissing their particular questions in what apparently they considered to be an offhand manner, enumerating the while the seductive arguments which the promoters of the enterprises had submitted to them. One lady wrote to the effect that she had applied every argument of common sense to a certain proposition, but added plaintively that this seemed to be a special case, for while the proposition did not seem to stand some of the tests which we had suggested, on the other hand the promoter flatly declared that the price of the stock which he wanted to sell her would positively be raised ten dollars a share after the first of the ensuing month. She wanted to know why that did not prove the stock to be a good investment since the price was going to be advanced in so short a time? "You know," she said, "I couldn't lose if I bought the stock now, because if I wanted to, I could sell it after the first of the month, at a profit of ten dollars."

Of course she could, provided she could find a purchaser. We hardly think, however, that the promoter of the enterprise would be one of the first to buy it at the advanced price, inasmuch as the arbitrary raising of that price was merely a matter of his own volition. In the first place, this is a favorite scheme of the promoter of wild-cat stocks to induce the guileless purchaser to send his money at once. In the next place, if ready purchasers could be found for the stock at the advanced rate, the promoter would naturally hold all the stock in his possession until after the first of the month and realize on it at an advance of ten dollars a share. It is very evident that the lady in question does not understand the difference between stock speculation and investment. The one is gambling, pure and simple; the other is a perfectly legitimate business enterprise, the profits from which are based upon such earnings as may accrue in the course of ordinary business.

Dealing in Stocks

We have constantly advised our readers against dealing in stocks, because the purchase of most stocks is a matter of speculation. A concern may wish to increase its business and desires the use of money to do so. It issues a certain amount of stock and asks the public to buy the shares on the assurance that the business will be profitable. If the business does prove profitable, other things being equal, the shareholder may receive a dividend; but it all depends on that probability. The shareholder is practically wagering his money on the good management of the business, the honesty of its conductors, good times, large sales, what not.

There are, to be sure, some gilt-edged stocks of railroads which after long years of constantly recurring dividends are popularly considered to have risen above the speculative class. The small investor, however, is not likely to be bothered by promoters of such stocks as these. It is the stocks which have not yet made good the promises of their promoters that the small investor is usually asked to purchase. It is here that the difference between speculation and investment is most sharply defined.

On the other hand, a bond should offer very little of the speculative element. As we have so often explained, the investor's security for it depends upon a definite promise made by the company in the name of which it is issued. If it is a good bond, there must be a definite amount of property upon which a mortgage has been placed for the benefit of the bondholders, and upon which the bondholders may rely to at least repay them for the face of the bond. Of course, there are bad bonds. That is to say, bonds have been issued at various times upon properties which in the end proved to be worthless.

Reliable Bond Houses

The best bond houses, however, try to avoid such securities by most rigid investigations of the various aspects of the property offered as security for bond issues. Most of these reputable houses guarantee the bonds offered by them for sale, and we have known of instances where, after having guaranteed an issue of bonds and then having come across some weakness in the properties, the bond house was willing to recall the entire issue and refund the money which had been received for the securities, rather than have the integrity of the house questioned in the slightest degree.

All of this we have explained in detail in former articles. And again we say that the surest way for the prospective investor to insure the safety of his money is to deal only with bankers of the first class.

WRITE YOUR NAME PLAINLY

IN writing to advertisers, please write your name and address plainly and you will save yourselves and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD much trouble in correcting mistakes due to this cause. We have received several complaints lately from subscribers who have claimed that they have sent money to advertisers and have received no reply. When we asked these advertisers to investigate these cases, we found that the goods had been shipped but in each case had gone astray because the advertiser had deciphered the name and address incorrectly.

In one case when a second shipment was being made to one lady, she wrote again to the advertiser and took him to task for his inability to decipher her name "which was plainly" (here followed the name.) And even then it was so illegibly written that we had to consult our subscription list to find out what it was.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement.

Earning Power & Security Alone Not the Only Essentials of an Investment

In selecting your Investment Banker demand a house with experience and reputation—an organization that can intelligently handle your investment interests—one that will see you get ALL THE ESSENTIALS OF A SECURITY.

Twenty-eight years in business without the loss of a dollar to any client speaks plainly of our ability to intelligently handle YOUR investment interests.

We deal only in high grade securities—First Real Estate Mortgages and Bonds that net from FIVE to SIX per cent.

As an investor you need our assistance—our help and counsel—our experience—in looking after your investment interests.

Then Send To-day for Our Semi-Monthly Magazine—FREE.

In the "Investor's Magazine" are not only listed high grade securities, but priceless, unbiased investment information, points and suggestions that as an investor you need. Your name on a postal will bring this interesting little magazine three months FREE! Why not write now?

S. W. Straus & Co.
INCORPORATED
Established 1882
Dept. 0-2, Chicago, Ill.

REVERSIBLE "Linene" COLLARS CUFFS AND BOSOMS

TRADE MARK

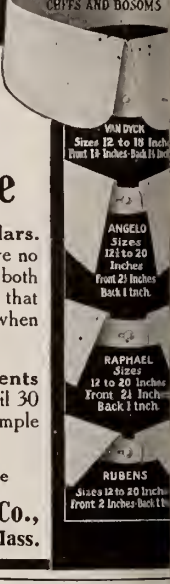
Save Money and be Comfortable

by wearing Linene Collars. They fit perfectly, require no laundering, can be worn both sides, and cost so little that they may be discarded when soiled.

10 collars for 25 cents at the stores, or by mail 30 cents in U. S. stamps. Sample by mail for 6 cents.

State Size and Style

Reversible Collar Co.,
Dept. T. Boston, Mass.



You Can Make Big Mone

We have a from-factory-to-consumer proposition for wo and men agents that is high-class—interesting—easy to sell extremely profitable. Many of our agents are making $30 per year, and only a little of their time required. We supply with goods on consignment and full information how to m sales. We co-operate with you from start to finish. This pr sition is not sold through dealers. You can undersell the de with better goods than the dealer handles, and make good mo

Write to-day for full information and territory.

We are allotting territories right now, so kindly write to- before we give some one else your territory.
Tiger Knitting Mills, 524 Commerce St., Philadelphia,

Mend the Leaks in You granite, tin, aluminum and ir dishes, kettles, pans, etc., wi

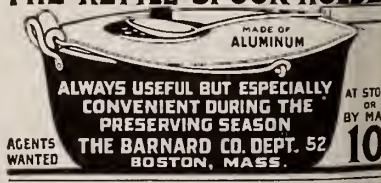
PECK'S Soft Metal RIVET

Anyone can do it. Quick a easy. No solder, cement or bo Fit any surface. Send for sa ple box of 25 assorted sizes, 10 postpaid. Regular package 25 Special inducements for Chur Sales, Societies, etc.

Agents Wanted

PECK & CO., 226 Main Street, Batavia, N.Y

THE KETTLE SPOON HOLDE



ALWAYS USEFUL BUT ESPECIALLY CONVENIENT DURING THE PRESERVING SEASON

AGENTS WANTED

THE BARNARD CO. DEPT. 52 BOSTON, MASS.

AT STO OR BY MA 10

6% NET

For 35 years we have been paying our custo the highest returns consistent with conserv methods. First mortgage loans of $200 and which we can recommend after the most thor personal investigation. Please ask for Loan List No. $25 Certificates of Deposit also for saving inves

PERKINS & CO. Lawrence, K

PATENTS that PROTECT

Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamp
E. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D.C., Dept. 36, Est. 18

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Christian Citizenship*

ITIZENSHIP in the old days was a very different thing from what now is.

Then all that a man had to do was obey his king and the satraps and oys whom he gave authority. The izen had no voice in the making of laws. War or peace was declared hout any word of his. He was a re pawn, of no account save to form in an army to march at the word command. Often he knew not why was fighting. Surely men in those s were merely "dumb, driven cat-"

But, little by little, the spirit of free-n awoke. In all the ancient nations had now and then raised its head, its life had been brief. The brute d of absolute power soon crushed and it slept, apparently in death.

Out of the North the final awaken-seemed to come, and it was the Aglo-Saxon blood which stirred most ently in response to the inner cry.

As the hunted Jews rallied to the port of brave Judas Maccabæus, he barons rallied to the support of Bhop Langton at Runnymede and ob-ned Magna Charta, "the keystone English liberty," as Hallam calls it from cruel King John. At that mo-nt, the seeds of our own splendid erty were sown.

That was the time when the major e of joy, such as comes only with edom, began to ring out in the lish glees, supplanting the minor rds which always accompany ery and wretchedness.

igorous and enduring Freedom h been born, and our own great ernment is its product—a product ch, broadening "from precedent to edent," shall, by virtue of "the mon sense of most," evolve the ennial democracy.

or no government was ever de-d upon so lofty a plane as ours. group of men ever so nobly ap-ised humanity as did the brave e band that gave us our constitu-. God was with them. Let us er prove false to the high ideal y set for us.

Sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great!
Humanity, with all its fears,
With all its hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate.

r. Jefferson calls the Epistle to the Galatians, of all Paul's letters, pre-minently the letter of freedom, and one of the mightiest ones ever uttered on behalf of liberty—"the declaration of independence of the human soul."

The gist of the entire letter is summed up in the words with which the fifth chapter opens: "Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free."

Martin Luther came to this letter for weapons in his desperate combat. John Wesley caught from it his sacred fire, and from it we may well forge the armor for the fight which is upon us for the purity of our own government.

For to be a good Christian is to be a good citizen. If every man and woman in our nation were a faithful Christian, living up to the noble law of Christ, we should have few problems before us.

The moral is plain: Lead all that you can to the altar of our God. Pray for the evangelization of our people. No more patriotic duty confronts you. Men and angels unite in praising the ways of our Lord. They are ways of peace and pleasantness, and his righteousness is that which exalteth a nation.

As in the old proverb we were bidden to look after the pence and the pounds would take care of themselves, so let each individual man do his duty and the nation will be safe.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 3. TEXTS: Ps. 124: 1-8; Rev. 21: 1-3.

Our Government*

PAUL was proud that he was "a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city."

When he made this statement to the "chief captain" in that "uproar" at Jerusalem, he at once gave the apostle leave to speak; for to be "a Jew of Tarsus" was a fact of weight.

But if it was a great thing to be a citizen of Tarsus, and a Roman citizen, as Paul was, how much greater an honor is it to be a citizen of a country freer than Paul ever dreamed of; and with a government in which nearly every man has a voice!

Paul would have thought such a government preposterous. Even when our forefathers formed themselves into a nation and drew up that wonderful document called "The Declaration of Independence," all Europe scoffed, and prophesied that these silly republican ideas would be short-lived and disastrous. They thought that there could be no stability of government without a king.

In spite of the fact that we have somehow managed to sail the ship of State for 134 years, yet there are still plenty of people to foretell our ultimate and speedy destruction. They say that men cannot possibly be unselfish enough to govern for the good of all; that it is in human nature to look out for self first and foremost, and that bribery and corruption must inevitably honeycomb our whole system until it falls into a heap of ruins.

It is true that sometimes it must have seemed to all of us that these predictions were likely to be fulfilled. Surely sin in high places has been common among us; but, one by one, God has raised up great leaders—a Moses here, a Joshua there, a Nehemiah yonder—until the outlook was never so bright as now that we might become a nation doing justly, loving mercy and walking humbly with our God.

In State after State, the rings formed by political rascals have been unmasked. A busy and lighthearted people have not looked closely enough after the long and serious concerns of government. But they wake up at the trumpet-call of some stern Isaiah, like Hughes in New York, and Folk in Missouri, and then they lay their hands to the scythe or the fining-pot, and the evil is cut down; or the dross is purged away.

This sort of "government house-cleaning" is going to become more and more common. We are the Lord's people, a Christian nation, in spite of our failures and our sins; and he will not let "government of the people, by the people, for the people" perish from the earth.

As for our lacks and faults, they are such as are common to all men. What government has ever been without them? In England, though it is now as free from political scandal as, perhaps, any other, great frauds have been unearthed from time to time during the last half century. Its older history was full of them.

We have a magnificent country. The eyes of foreigners may be fixed upon its shortcomings, but to us who know and love it, those faults, bitterly as we regret them, are but as spots upon the sun. We must to our critics honestly acknowledge them with shame. We must bestir ourselves right briskly and heartily to cure them; but we know how loyal are our citizens; how sincerely the vast majority of them strive to be worthy of the great inheritance our ancestors have left us; and how faithfully parents and teachers are instructing the rising generation in the principles of true patriotism; and we swell with justifiable pride as we think of it.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 3. TEXTS: Acts 21: 39.

CHICAGO INVESTMENTS

NETTING FROM 5 TO 6%

First Mortgage Bonds secured by downtown office buildings, manufacturing plants and apartment buildings in Chicago and First Mortgage Loans on Chicago business and residence property, when conservatively issued and properly safeguarded, are among the soundest and most desirable of all classes of investments, combining as they do the following excellent characteristics.

First—They are the simplest of all forms of securities, involving no complex questions of legality of issue, priority of lien, franchises or legislation.

Second—The security is definite, tangible property, with a value that is readily ascertainable and is always open to the personal inspection of the investor.

Third—The income for the protection of interest and principal is definitely known and uniformly maintained.

Fourth—The majority of these investments are issued under our plan of serial payments, which provides for a rapid reduction in the amount of principal and a corresponding increase in the margin of security.

Fifth—Our experience in handling Chicago investments has been derived from forty-five years of constant and successful operations in this field and the bonds and mortgages offered by us have been subject to the most rigid investigation as to value of security, location, titles and responsibility of borrower.

The Real Estate Bonds are in $500 and $1,000 denominations and in convenient maturities of from one to twelve years. The mortgages are in amounts of $10,000 and upwards and usually run for three or five years.

ASK FOR CIRCULAR No. 703 P

Peabody, Houghteling & Co.

(Established 1865)

181 La Salle Street, Chicago

(50)

Eat Junket Ice Cream

Everyone loves good Ice Cream. Best of all is Ice Cream made with Hansen's Junket Tablets. More palatable, easier to digest and more nutritious; also cheaper and smoother than ordinary Ice Cream.

10 JUNKET TABLETS for 10 Quarts of ICE CREAM—10 CENTS

Buy at your grocer's or druggist's. Send for our Booklet of Recipes—it's free.

CHR. HANSEN'S LABORATORY
200 Hansen Ave., Little Falls, N.Y.

This CORSET COVER ONLY 45¢

HANDSOMELY TRIMMED FRONT AND BACK WITH BEAUTIFUL IMPORTED EMBROIDERY SIZES 32 TO 44 BUST MEASURE

No. 638—Send only 45c

and we will mail you this Handsome Corset Cover, postage prepaid. Made of good quality soft finish Nainsook; has beautiful 3¼-inch Imported Open Work Embroidery Yoke; two rows handsome Val. lace; one-inch lace beading; edged entirely around neck and arm-holes with one-inch Val. lace to match. Yoke finished with one-inch pure silk ribbon draw and large bow, further trimmed with pure silk baby ribbon draw entirely around neck, fly front, pearl buttons; all seams tape bound. Back yoke has one-inch Val. lace with one-inch lace beading. Sizes 32 to 44. Be sure to state size wanted. Price only 45c. If you don't find it worth at least 85c. return it and we will cheerfully refund your money, also postage. This extremely low price is made to introduce our Large Free Catalog of Everything to Wear for Men, Women and Children, also Furniture, Stoves, Carpets, Rugs, Refrigerators and all kinds of Household Goods.

Reference: Commercial National Bank of Chicago
Capital $7,000,000.00

CHICAGO MAIL ORDER CO.
INDIANA AVE. & 26TH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Newest Embroidery

A Dutch Collar or a beautiful set of 24 Initials for stamping with large illustrated catalog of EMBROIDERY DESIGNS.

KAUMAGRAPH TRADE MARK

Sent for 10 Cents. Clean, beautiful impressions instantly on any material. No messy inks or powders. Hundreds of new patterns for neckwear, waists, lingerie, table-linen, etc. Address Dept. H. Specify initial.
KAUMAGRAPH CO., 114 West 32d St., New York

Sweetest Music in the World

The sweetest toned self-playing instrument in the world. Not a phonograph. Sent anywhere on 10 days Free Trial MIRA MUSIC BOX
Affords an endless variety of music, popular hits, the old-time melodies and hymns. Write for free trial offer and catalog.
JACOT MUSIC BOX CO.
24 W. 35th St., New York.

DAISY FLY KILLER

placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20 cents.
HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Get Book on "BRECO"

Write Now—Samples Free—Book Free. Direct from factory—$1.36—$1.86—$2.26 per Roll. Freight paid to west boundary line Minn., Iowa, Mo. and north of south line Tenn. Reliable high quality. Guaranteed waterproof; fire-resisting; durable.

Rubber Roofing Freight Prepaid

The Breese Bros. Co.
Roofing Dept. 77, Cincinnati, Ohio

Poor Teeth Cause Poor Health!

A Small Pamphlet, Entitled

HUMAN PEARLS Third Edition

A practical treatise on causes and the remedy for loose teeth, receding and bleeding gums, ulcers, etc., prepared by a practical dentist of 20 years' experience. Sent for 2-cent stamp to cover cost of mailing.
C. H. FRASIER, Suite B-40 North 8th Street, Philadelphia.

IF YOU STAMMER

I will send you my 84-page book "Advice to Stammerers" Free. It explains how I quickly and permanently cured myself. Profit by my experience and write for free book and advice.

BENJ. N. BOGUE
1506 NORTH ILLINOIS STREET, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

"GAUZRIB"
THE UNDERWEAR SENSATION

MOST underwear for women is pretty rather than practical. The fabric is faulty, the finish unreliable, and the laundry plays havoc with it in a short time.

"Gauzrib" Underwear is sheer, dainty and attractive, very elastic and glove-fitting—yet durable and satisfactory in every way. The fabric is in itself the result of a mechanical triumph, made from expensive yarns on perfected "spring needle" machines. No other underwear like it is made any where, at any price.

The "Gauzrib" Silk Lisle Vest, here illustrated, is a garment worth going far to see. It is as soft as silk, more elastic and more durable than (pure) silk, and it will not turn yellow like silk. It is finished with genuine hand-crocheted lace, and we guarantee it to give perfect satisfaction.

These garments are not for sale at your dealers yet, but if you will write direct to us we will see that you are supplied. Beautifully illustrated "GAUZRIB" booklet and sample of fabric on request.

COOPER MANUFACTURING CO.,
Dept. G. BENNINGTON, VERMONT

Is more than soap but costs no more

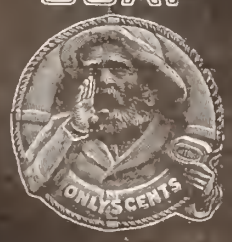
LIFEBUOY is the sensible soap for the skin because it cleans and disinfects at the same time. Its use gives sterilized clean-ness; the only perfect clean-ness. LIFEBUOY is the best soap made for

Toilet, Bath and Shampoo

It destroys the germs which you can't see while removing the dirt that you can see. LIFEBUOY is a carbolated soap and has "that clean smell" which distinguishes it from ordinary soaps.

5c at All Grocers and Druggists

LIFEBUOY
SOAP



Lever Bros. Co. CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

POST CARDS

10 Birthday, 10c. | 10 Best Wishes & Greetings, 10c.
10 Rose, 10c. | 10 Fourth of July, 10c.
Any three packages mailed for 25 cents.
80 cents per 100 cards—assorted designs.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

STAMPS 100 different, foreign, FREE. Postage 2c Good only to those mentioning CHRISTIAN HERALD. Quaker Stamp Co., Toledo, O.

The Strawberry Handkerchief

A Tale of Colonial Days in Old New York

By AMELIA E. BARR

CHAPTER ELEVEN—Continued

IN the meantime, consternation filled the Van Vroom household. Madame wept freely, and Rose was much troubled.

The next day Madame watched continually for the prospective bridegroom. She thought he would come early in the morning, to talk over the best wedding dress now possible. But he did not come.

There was no sleep that night for either Jansen or Katrina, but Jansen was sure Batavius would be in the kirk. He was not there. The Captain walked to The Arms of Stuyvesant, but her Captain was not on board. The watch said "he had not seen him."

"What time did you return this morning?"

"Half-past eight, Captain."

"Was Captain De Vries here then?"

"No. He had gone to the King's Arms for breakfast."

Then Jansen went to the King's Arms. The landlord told him that Captain Lawson and Captain De Vries had been together in the house until ten o'clock. He had sent two of his tapsters with De Vries to the ship.

Jansen then interviewed the two men. They declared they had taken Captain De Vries as directed, to his own ship.

With these particulars Jansen went home. Katrina looked with pitiful anxiety into his face. "He has either run away with Lawson, or in his sleep got up to find Lawson, stepped overboard. My good sense is leaving me."

"Think once how much worse things might have been."

"There is no worse, Katrina."

"Very much mistaken art thou. It would have been worse if Virginia had run away — or killed herself — and Batavius remained here. If he is drowned, is he not better drowned than our Virginia? And only think how fortunate it is that he was last seen at the King's Arms? If all trace of Batavius had stopped with thee, and me, and Virginia, what might people have thought, and said, and done? Begin to search for the cowardly scoundrel."

In accord with this advice, the city was startled soon after daylight by the bellman calling through all its streets and public places, "The Disappearance of Captain Batavius De Vries." Some of Katrina's familiar acquaintances hastened at once to the Van Vroom house to give her their sympathy and advice, and Katrina was hard set to keep her senses and her temper.

"He was here on Friday evening, and helped to unpack the wedding dress and veil," she explained, "and he wanted more light, and threw a fresh log on the fire, and there flew out a shower of sparks and set the dress in a blaze. Without a word he went away immediately."

This explanation was all that she would give. If any one expressed pity, she looked her dissent; or, if she thought their expression ill-natured, she added in unmistakable terms her satisfaction in the man's flight or disappearance.

About noon, Rose received the token from her father which assured her that Batavius was far out at sea; with the further instruction that she must be ready to sail early on the following morning. She looked thoughtfully at Virginia. "Would it please you to know certainly that Batavius is alive and happy?" she asked.

"I do know it, Rose. If I might go now, and tell my fader and moeder the truth, that would please me."

"As soon as I am on my father's ship, tell them everything. Come, let us talk about Arent."

"I do not think Arent was very brotherly to me. He ought to have seen how wretched I was, and helped me. Harry Rutgers saw it."

"Arent did offer to help you."

"He offered me six minutes' time."

So the day went wearily past, and Jansen returned in the evening much depressed. He had been wounded on every side, and perhaps self-wounded worst of all. The Sheriff had politely intimated "that, as a matter of form, he would call on Madame and Miss Van Vroom, and take down the peculiar events of the last visit of Batavius De Vries at their house."

It was a cheerless evening. The Captain scarcely spoke. Katrina was almost equally silent.

"To-morrow was to have been your wedding day, Virginia," said Rose, "but thank goodness, that terror is now past! I will see Joris as soon as I reach London, and when he hears the whole truth."

"Also, you must tell me the whole truth. If Joris has ceased to love me, do not try to spare me."

"If I was you, I would not distrust Joris. I believe, in my soul, he is truer to you than you are to him."

Early next morning the eventful visitor departed. And yet all were sensible of some relief when the little lady turned her head at the corner, and threw back a last sweet resonant "Good-by!"

The Captain did not return home until evening. He had spent part of the day in the Dominie's study, relating to him and three of the elders all the incidents which he believed had influenced Batavius. They all fully exonerated him, but the mere fact of having to make explanations about anything relating to himself or his family cut him to the heart.

But when he reached his home, Katrina was shocked at his appearance. For Jansen had really been assaulted in the very citadel of his nature.

"There is a lump in my throat, I can neither eat nor drink, Katrina," he said, "and where then is Virginia?"

"She asked to stay alone in her room and be quiet."

"But in such trouble, a girl should want her moeder and her fader. When you can not talk about your trouble, it kills you. I understand not her way."

"Well, then, she gets comfort. I know not how."

She had found out

That to be alone with Silence
Is to be alone with God.

And at the same hour, Batavius and Captain Lawson were chatting and laughing in the cabin of The Destroyer.

CHAPTER TWELVE

LIBERTY AND LOVE

FORTUNATELY this intense strain was lightened on the third day, for as young Peter DeLancey was talking to General Gage about the affair, Governor Moore interrupted the conversation:

"Gentlemen," he said, "De Vries did not disappear. He went away freely with his friend, Captain Lawson. Lord Harley told me he was to have a naval commission extraordinary, in order to take the transport fleet to India. He sailed The Destroyer himself out to sea, about midnight of Saturday last."

These decisive words from Sir Henry—turning a supposed tragedy

Continued on next page

Do You Need Another Waist this Summer?

Something dainty, filmy, sheer, stylish, but above all, comfortable when the warm weather strikes

Something that will make you look cool and make you feel cool when the thermometer sizzles? Actual weight of waist 3½

Beautifully Embroidered Lace & Linen Waist

$1.50 Postpaid

This Waist is worth double the price asked; a bewitching combination of sheer cotton India Lawn, dainty linen lace and pretty raised floral and eyelet embroidery, low V neck with 2 fancy crochet buttons in front, and ¾ sleeves.

A 104
Sizes 32 to 46

THIS EXQUISITE WAIST IS $1.50

Send for our great free Catalog No. 66 to-day it is full of wonderful values like the above

Money returned at once if not satisfactory

Martin's
SUIT & WAIST HOUSE

Fulton Street
Brooklyn
NEW YORK CITY

5% 17 YEARS

If your savings have been earning less than 5% let us show you how we are able to pay this rate on deposits entrusted to our care. Established 17 years during which time we have never paid less than 5% while growing stronger each year. Your funds are safeguarded by the best of securities — selected mortgages on New York and Suburban Real Estate.

UNDER SUPERVISION OF NEW YORK BANKING DEPT.
ASSETS OVER $2,000,000

Your funds may be deposited or withdrawn on any date. Earnings credited for full time.

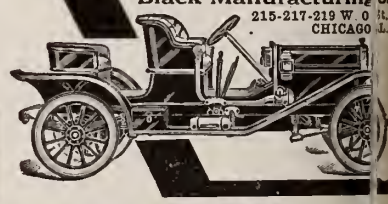
Write for booklet, which contains many interesting facts.

Industrial Savings and Loan Co.
2 Times Building
42d St. and B'way, New York

GET OUR BOOK FIRST

—then decide. Get all facts and figures, all styles and prices. 6 to choose from—(illustrated here) to $1,750. Speed, style, ability and durability—all in each 1910 Black-Crow for price—or value. Biggest only $1,000. You'll buy till you write us. We offer greatest automobile value in America. Complete catalog No. 10 detailed description sent promptly.

Black Manufacturing Co.
215-217-219 W. 0
CHICAGO



FREE LAND

AND FREE WATER RIGHTS IN NORTHWESTERN COLORADO

Write to-day for map and booklet telling how to get 160 or 320 acres of government land. Deep, Rich Soil in River Valley. Land and irrigation water absolutely free. Railroad now being built through a million acres of free land. Fine crops of grain and vegetables; good local market. Best grass country in the west. We have no land and no water rights to sell. They are free. W. F. JONES,
Gen. Traf. Mgr., D. N. W. & P. Ry.
Room 745 Majestic Bldg. Denver, Colo.

ELECTRO-SILICON

the perfect Silver Polish cleans and imparts Exquisite Brilliancy to SILVERWARE and all fine metals, with little labor and expense. Over 30 years in household use. Absolutely harmless. Send address for

FREE SAMPLE

Full Sized Box, post-paid, 15 cts. In stamps. The Electro Silicon Co., 30 Cliff St., New York
Sold by Grocers and Druggists Everywhere

The Strawberry Handkerchief

Continued from preceding page

i) an ordinary business engagement –uickly settled the public interest in tl fate of Batavius.

n a few days Peter Dieterich, the l:yer in whom Batavius put his trust, a ertised The Arms of Stuyvesant f sale.

n the Van Vroom household the o vion to which he was consigned w; still more marked. His memory w; buried, his name forgotten witho a single regret, and Katrina and Vginia put out of sight everything tlt could recall a man so cruel, cowa ly and ungrateful.

t was not a difficult task, for public e nts were as exciting as ever, and J sen sunk his private wrongs in his p tical enthusiasm.

)ne night, in the heart of winter, J sen came home much excited. "hat is the matter with thee?" asked K rina, for the old man was whistling li a boy, and stamping his feet to h own music as he came up the frozen g den path.

"I will tell thee very soon. My slipps I want, and my long waistcoat." B: when all his wants had been atded to, he said with chuckling laghter:

"Now listen! Last night, when the sw fell so softly, and the clocks stuck midnight, the Boys boarded the sh Minerva, just from London. They fnd nothing on the Minerva, Katna, but as soon as they touched the wurf they found a man waiting with scret advices. From Philadelphia he h come, as fast as horses could carry h), and these were the words he bught—'The Stamps have been removed from the Minerva to a brig, nhe unknown, but she may be in Nv York any hour.' This afternoon, Krina, the brig came into harbor. Vy merchantlike and innocent she loked, but the Boys boarded her, and fnd the Stamps!"

Well then, Jan? What did they d with them?"

Took them on shore, and burned tlm!"

uch events as these distinguished d from day, and made what little e itement there was to lighten the gat gloom that pervaded the city. De poverty was on every hand, trade w almost dead, ships had to steal in a out by night, or they were stopped b men-of-war; paper money had been s pressed, as well as the courts of a iralty, appeals, internal taxes, e , and the people generally were so pir, cross, and desperate, that the n al commander, terrified by the pispect of general riots, opened the rd to the ocean once more. Yet the fling against the Stamp Act was stonger than ever, and the vow with wch America rang out 1765 and rang in 1766 was—"if England does not reeal the Stamp Act, we will repeal it o selves."

The hearts of the bravest must often h e failed them, but, if so, they sl wed no signs of weakness.

So to every household the days were lg weary days, full of hard work and aiety; and the nights were long nhts, long, and dark, and cruelly cold.

One morning at the end of February, Jsen went into his garden, and lo! the was a flock of robins on a bare ale tree, picking the seeds from the whered fruit left from autumn's ghering. He cried out joyfully, and bssed the birds, talking and twitterin so gayly over their frozen breakft. Then he went to Katrina for a hidful of bread crumbs, and his face s ne, and his eyes were full of happy tors as he cried out, "Katrina! The rins are here! The spring is not f behind them!"

This little incident made him very c erful, and he walked down to the warf, where an English ship was exp ted that day. She was just casting anchor, and Jansen waited among the crowd for the news. As he did so, a sailor with a letter in his hand approached, and Jan noticed that he scanned the faces of those he passed, as if looking for some one. Attracted perhaps by Jansen's curiosity, the sailor came to him, and asked to be shown the way to Captain Van Vroom's shop.

"'I am Captain Van Vroom," was the answer.

"Then, Captain, this letter is for you. As we came out of Falmouth, we passed a man-of-war lying off the land, and an officer on board asked my Captain to deliver this letter for him."

Jansen smiled, put a couple of shillings into the outstretched hand. Then he went at once to 14 Wall Street; for he was sure the writing was the writing of Batavius.

The big, sprawling red seal bore the name of the ship, but its unnecessary size and weight was the sign manual of Batavius. He straightened out the large square sheets, which had occupied Batavius many hours while crossing the Atlantic, and read as follows:

MY CAPTAIN:

No doubt you have been thinking many bad things of me, and so it will be better if I clear myself, and my way. It was doubtless said I ran away from your daughter. Generally speaking, that is true. I saw plainly that Virginia hated me, and that her hatred—being exceedingly wicked and unjust—was making her insane—or worse. She made me, against my will, do things I did not wish to do. For instance, she ordered me to throw on that log that burned up the wedding gown and veil. Though she never spoke, I know she ordered me to do it. It was then I asked myself, what must be the end of all this? And I knew it was insanity. I thought it time to run away. Then I went away to consider how to go, and where to go, and while I was yet in doubt, Captain Lawson came to me with an urgent request from the English government—a special commission with honors and money, more than I ever expected. So out of this great difficulty I came victorious—as I generally do.

So then, I want no favor from your daughter, but I want my rights. It is not my way to give up my rights for any one, and you know that for many years I have been giving her gems, pearls, fine goods, shawls, rugs, and other rich things; that is, they were given her provisionally—she was to be my wife—then they would have come back to me. I request all these gifts, of whatever kind, be sent to the care of Peter Dieterich, with inventory of the same. Yours with great respect,

BATAVIUS DE VRIES, R. N.

P. S.—I forgot to name the bit of land you gave me to build the house for Virginia on. As I was at great expense in draining and fencing, etc., I do not expect you to take it back or charge me with it. On the contrary, I think it might be given me as a kind of "Damages" for Virginia's Breach of Promise. B. D. V., R. N.

For a minute or two Jansen was about laughing, but his anger got the mastery. And as he walked home, he wondered at a hate so deep and scornful that his eyes, and his fingers, and his whole body was conscious of it.

Word by word he read it to Katrina, and her face flushed angrily, but she made no interruptions. But, when the flimsy, insulting messenger had had its say, and Jansen was about to burn it, she interfered. "Burn it not," she said. "See now, it is thy authority for getting him out of the business."

"No, I will publish the letter in the Gazette. If I do not, it will get out bit by bit, and be made worse than it is. It is a wicked letter, and will condemn him in the sight of all good men."

"And the good women? What about them? And how many dost thou know, who will utterly refute his wicked assertions? Jansen, thou must give the letter to Harry. He will get for thee every halfpenny that is thine, and not one halfpenny more. And safely we may leave Virginia's good name in his care."

When daylight came, Jansen saw that his wife's advice was self-respecting and good; and he went to Harry Rutgers, and left the settlement of all to his integrity and judgment.

To be continued

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 592, and write them for full information.

COLUMBIA

Grand Opera Records by LINA CAVALIERI

AS THE forerunners of a magnificent new series of Columbia Double-Disc Grand Opera Records, we are here announcing the first records Cavalieri has ever been persuaded to sing,—and they are ready for you at the nearest Columbia dealer's:

A 5178 { (Front) La Boheme, "Mi chiamano Mimi" (Back) Mefistofele, "L'altra notte in fondo al mare."
A 5179 { Maria! Mari! (Neapolitan). Carmen, "Habanera."
A 5172 { Manon Lescaut, "In quelle trine morbide." La Tosca, "Preghiera."

As above, in 12 inch double-disc form, a selection on each side of the disc—$3.00.
Each selection is also issued as a single disc at $2.00

THE COLUMBIA GRAFONOLA "Regent"—$200

Columbia Phonograph Co., Gen'l, Dept. U, Tribune Bldg. New York
Prices in Canada plus duty. Headquarters for Canada—704 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont. Dealers Wanted—Exclusive selling rights given where we are not properly represented.

COPYRIGHT DAVIS & ECKEMEYER

"SAVE-THE-HORSE" SPAVIN CURE.

REG. TRADE MARK

Shiloh, O., March 1, 1910:—I cured a ringbone with one bottle of "Save-The-Horse." C. D. HAMMON, R. D. 3.
Jackson, Mich., March 17, 1910:—Please send C. O. D. another bottle "Save-The-Horse." I wish to have a bottle on hand. It is the greatest medicine I ever used. A. D. GODFREY, Route 8

$5.00 a bottle, with legal written guarantee or contract. Send for copy, booklet and letters from business men and trainers on every kind of case. Permanently cures Spavin, Thoroughpin, Ringbone (except low), Curb, Splint, Capped Hock, Windpuff, Shoe Boil, Injured Tendons and all Lameness. No scar or loss of hair. Horse works as usual. Dealers or Express Paid.
Troy Chemical Co., 39 Commercial Ave., Binghamton, N.Y.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.
Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

A DETERMINED WOMAN

Finally Found a Food that Cured Her

"When I first read of the remarkable effects of Grape-Nuts food, I determined to secure some," says a woman of Salisbury, Mo. "At that time there was none kept in this town, but my husband ordered some from a Chicago traveler.

"I had been greatly afflicted with sudden attacks of cramps, nausea, and vomiting. Tried all sorts of remedies and physicians, but obtained only temporary relief. As soon as I began to use the new food the cramps disappeared and have never returned.

"My old attacks of sick stomach were a little slower to yield, but by continuing the food, that trouble had disappeared entirely. I am today perfectly well, can eat anything and everything I wish, without paying the penalty that I used to. We would not keep house without Grape-Nuts.

"My husband was so delighted with the benefits I received that he has been recommending Grape-Nuts to his customers and has built up a very large trade on the food. He sells them by the case to many of the leading physicians of the county, who recommend Grape-Nuts very generally. There is some satisfaction in using a really scientifically prepared food."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

CHRISTIAN HERALD BOND BOOK

WE have received so many requests for copies of the financial articles which have been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, that we have thought it wise to preserve them in pamphlet form, for the convenience of readers who may wish to secure a complete set.

Any reader may secure a copy of this useful booklet without charge, by forwarding 4c. in stamps to cover postage.

Address CHRISTIAN HERALD, Dept. 96. Bible House, New York

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL without a cent deposit, prepay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL.
IT ONLY COSTS one cent to learn our unheard of prices and marvelous offers on highest grade 1910 model bicycles.
FACTORY PRICES Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you write for our large Art Catalog and learn our wonderful proposition on first sample bicycle going to your town.
RIDER AGENTS everywhere are making big money exhibiting and selling our bicycles.
We Sell cheaper than any other factory.
TIRES, Coaster-Brake rear wheels, lamps, repairs and all sundries at half usual prices.
Do Not Wait; write today for our special offer
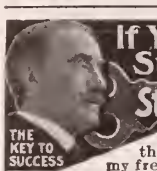
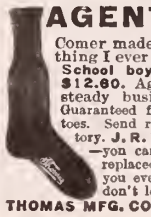
MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. F-71 CHICAGO



If YOU Would Be Successful Stop Forgetting
MEMORY the BASIS of All Knowledge
THE KEY TO SUCCESS
You are no greater intellectually than your memory. Send today for my free book "How to Remember"—Faces, Names, Studies—Develops Will, Concentration, Self-Confidence, Conversation, Public Speaking. Address
DICKSON MEMORY SCHOOL, 701 Aud't'm Bldg., Chicago



AGENTS—$1.33 Per Hour
Comer made it, so can you. Swain says, "Best thing I ever struck." Easy money maker. High School boy sold 36 boxes in 2 days—profit $12.60. Agents get big repeat orders—build up steady business. Everybody wears hosiery. Guaranteed for 4 months against holes in heels and toes. Send right back to us if not perfectly satisfactory. J. R. Valentine sold 600 pairs in 50 hours—you can do as well—yes—better. Worn goods replaced free—no experience needed—we teach you everything. Here's your one big chance—don't lose it—write today. Free samples.
THOMAS MFG. CO., 1924 Wayne St., DAYTON, OHIO

Dustless Housecleaning

Terrific Air Suction. Rushing, whirling, sucking air cleans carpets, rugs, mattings on floor, without sweeping or dusting. No motors, no electricity. Constant suction. New Home Vacuum Cleaner. New principle. One person operates. Weighs nine pounds. Simple—powerful—effective. It's the constant suction that does it—terrific, irresistible, sure. Sucking, drawing—gathering up into itself dirt—dust—grit—germs and grime from the very warp and fibre of carpets, rugs, mattings. Does same kind of work as higher priced machines. Price so low all may enjoy its benefits. Unlike anything you've seen or heard of. Makes carpets look like new. Better than if taken up and beaten. Raises no dust, so no dusting required. Does what days of sweeping and pounding could never do. Mrs. Jane Shully, Neb., writes. "You don't claim half enough. I wouldn't part with my cleaner for any price, if I couldn't get another. My ten year old girl operates mine easily and enjoys it." SAVES MONEY, STRENGTH, HEALTH and TIME. YOU NEED IT.

MAKES DUSTLESS HOMES

You Can Abandon Brooms, Brushes and Dust Cloths.

They don't clean your rugs and carpets. Brooms and sweepers fill the air with clouds of unhealthy disease-laden dust and germs and remove only surface dirt. New Home Vacuum Cleaner sucks up not only surface dirt, but all dirt, dust, grit and germs from very warp and fibre. Disturbance and upheaval of housecleaning unnecessary. Stop short! Put drudgery behind you—leisure and health before. In New Home Vacuum Cleaner lies your salvation from household slavery. Adopt the new—easy—modern—sanitary—scientific way of cleaning.

Price $8.50. Sent Anywhere.
Not Sold in Stores.

Think of it! Not $100, $50, nor even $25—only $8.50. Think! what a small price for such a wonderful invention. What's $8.50 compared to a neat, clean home; when you can banish forever the drudgery of sweeping—cleaning—dusting; when there will be no more carpets and rugs to take up and beat. We guarantee New Home Vacuum Cleaner to be just as represented or your money back. Comes set up ready for use. You will be delighted—enraptured with it. Mrs. Henry Deller, R. I. "I must thank you for telling me of your wonderful cleaner. What a blessing it is to women. I have not felt so rested in years. Work now easy. Plenty of spare time. Don't see how you can sell it so cheap." Don't wait; don't hesitate. Order now. You risk nothing. To try a New Home Cleaner means to want it—then to keep it. Every cleaner tested before shipping—guaranteed as represented or money refunded. Send for a cleaner now

$8.50 Sent Anywhere

Agents are Making Big Profits.

Women excited—eager to buy as soon as they see how beautifully it works. No trouble to make sales—no experience required. Just demonstrate—that's all. Shown in three minutes—sold in five. C. E. Goff, Mo., says: "Sold five cleaners last Saturday; my first attempt. W. H. Morgan, Pa., "Sold 45 cleaners in 25 hours." It's immense. So simple—so cheap. Yet so good, all buy. YOU make money. YOU get these big profits. Write a card now Get our liberal proposition.
Address R. ARMSTRONG MFG. CO. 1111 Alms Bldg. Cincinnati, Ohio

After Death, What?

A Glimpse "Beyond the Veil"

THE MOST SCHOLARLY book ever written on the Great Hereafter, yet so simple in its presentation of baffling problems that all who read may understand.

"What the Heavenly Rest Means," "Occupations in Heaven," "State of the Soul Between Death and the Resurrection" and "Our Children in Heaven" are but a few quotations from a truly remarkable table of contents.

Bound in rich purple Vellum de Luxe with Gold; 400 Pages. Size when open, 8x12 inches. Special Price, to close out a limited number of copies now on hand (All Charges Prepaid) 50¢

NOTE:—Every book is guaranteed delivered in perfect condition, and should your order reach us too late, money will be promptly refunded. Address

The Christian Herald Book Dept.
BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY

Hunyadi János

Natural Laxative Water

Quickly Relieves:
Biliousness,
Sick Headache,
Stomach Disorders,
and
CONSTIPATION
AT ALL DRUGGISTS

$4.00 RAZOR for $1.40 PREPAID

FREE TRIAL

An old-fashioned Razor made the old-fashioned way; hand-forged from razor steel, oil-tempered; ⅝-in. blade, extra hollow ground, double shoulder; finely balanced black handle; every blade special tested—a razor your grandson will be proud to own.

SEND NO MONEY—just send name and address; we will send razor to you. Use it FREE TEN DAYS—then, if you want to own it, send us factory price, $1.40. If not the best razor bargain you ever saw, return it and you'll owe us nothing. Carroll Cutler & CO., 192 Manhattan Bldg., Chicago

BEEKEEPING its pleasures and profits, is the theme of that excellent and handsomely illustrated magazine, GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE. We send it for six months on trial for twenty-five cents, and also send free a 64-page book on bees and our bee supply catalog to all who name this paper. THE A. I. ROOT CO., Box 70, Medina, Ohio

MEMORIALS & MONUMENTS
FOR CEMETERIES SCHOOLS & PARKS
LARGE VARIETY OF DESIGNS FOR EVERY PURPOSE
DELIVERED ANYWHERE · SEND FOR CATALOGS
STATE REQUIREMENTS AGENTS WANTED
MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.
355-B HOWARD AVE., BRIDGEPORT CONN.

WE HAVE "TOO MUCH GOLD."

That's the Reason for the High Cost of Living, so Says a Committee of Massachusetts Legislators—Doesn't that Settle It?

At last we have the reason for the high cost of living. Congress has tackled the question and so have many states and commercial bodies. It remained for a committee of solons from the Massachusetts State Legislature, however, to give us the real reason for the increased cost of food stuffs. They have given us the result of their investigations in a ponderous report of seven hundred pages, in which they finally declare that the primary cause of high prices is the increase in the gold supply.

You never would have believed it, would you? Of course you naturally feel in your pockets to discover the increased supply of gold, and you soon make up your mind that the other fellow has it. You will also conclude after mature deliberation that it is a far cry from the conclusions of political economists to the real causes that lie behind the increased cost of living. One does not need to be a great political economist to see that the real cause may be found in decreased supply and increased demand. If there are not enough apples to go 'round, those who want them will have to pay more for them. The same principle applies to all food products.

As Secretary Wilson has said, the remedy is in "a return to the farm and the simple life." We cannot all go back to the farm. Most of us wouldn't know what to do if we did go back to the farm. But we can all go back to the simple life. Fortunately it is the time of the year when we can cut out heavy meats and rich pastries without suffering any hardship. Green vegetables, fresh fruits and Shredded Wheat furnish a simple and inexpensive diet that is more healthful and more nourishing than meat or eggs. Take a Shredded Wheat Biscuit (which contains all the body-building elements in the whole wheat), heat it in the oven to restore crispness and then cover with strawberries. Serve it with milk or cream and you have a dish that is not only appetizingly delicious, but actually contains more digestible nutriment than meat or eggs. The Biscuit is equally wholesome and palatable when combined with other berries, fresh fruits, sliced bananas or stewed prunes. Such a diet, combined with fresh green vegetables from the garden, is an ideal summer diet for all kinds of people and represents an investment of only a few cents for a nourishing, strengthening meal. The richest man in America couldn't buy anything better.

Jesus Explaining the Kingdom*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

THE way of a man when he is about to begin a great work is to make a flourish of trumpets. But that is not God's way. He begins things small and lets them grow. Look at the tiny acorn, and then at the great spreading oak. Look at the little babe and then at a strong man. Among the Jews in Palestine, the mustard was called the smallest of all seeds. Undoubtedly there were smaller seeds, but none that grew to the treelike proportions of the mustard bush, which sometimes attained a height of twelve feet.

Like a Mustard Seed

When Jesus sat beside the sea, and taught the people in parables, he spoke of a grain of mustard seed, and with it he compared the kingdom of heaven. Undoubtedly mustard bushes were in sight when Jesus made the comparison, and he well knew that the people would quickly understand what he wished to teach them, if he connected his instruction with something already familiar to them. One of the foundation stones of good teaching is "lead from the known to the unknown." It is quite likely that some of his hearers had themselves sowed mustard seeds in their own door yards and had watched them grow. Jesus said: "It is greater than the herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the heaven come and lodge in the branches thereof." And the people knew why the birds came, not so much for the shade, as for the mustard seeds which were food for them. They remembered how they themselves gathered mustard seed and mixed it with the food of their pigeons.

We believe that Jesus had in his thoughts the time when the seed of the kingdom was planted, when he was born a little babe in Bethlehem, "conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary." Or he may have been thinking of John the Baptist, who prepared the soil for the seed of the kingdom; and then he may have thought of Andrew and John, who were his first disciples, or he may have thought of his small company of apostles as the seed of the kingdom. He did not tell them how great the "tree" would become; that a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations and kindreds and peoples and tongues, should stand before the throne of God in heaven—redeemed, wearing white robes, with palms of victory in their hands. He did not even tell them that on the day of Pentecost three thousand souls should be added to the Church, and after that daily such as should be saved. He did not tell them all of these things, because they were beyond their comprehension.

If we watch a tree day by day we do not see that it is growing larger; hardly in a year can we notice much, if any, growth in a tree, particularly if we are accustomed to see it every day. But let five, ten, fifteen years pass, and then if we will look at a tree, we will see that it has grown a great deal. A few days ago we were reading in a United States census report how much the great church tree in the United States had grown during sixteen years between 1890 and 1906. In 1906 the Protestant bodies reported the number of members to be 20,287,742; in 1890 the Protestant bodies reported 14,007,187; showing an increase of 44.8 per cent., or 6,280,555. The number of church edifices was 192,795, an increase since 1890 of 50,308, or 35.3 per cent. This represents approximately sixty new church edifices each week, or eight each day, for the sixteen-year period. These were built by all denominations, Protestants, Roman Catholics, Jews, etc. Church membership has increased more rapidly than the population. would hardly believe this, if it had been stated in a United States cen report: In 1890, 32.7 per cent. w reported as church members; in 19 39.1 per cent. were church member

There is something quite differ from all others about this church t We look at trees and we say: "Tha an elm; that a maple; that an oak, e The whole tree has one name, but ev limb in the church tree has a differ name—and there are one hundred eighty-six limbs in all. We call th limbs "denominations." It is only the United States that the church has this strange way of growing. T are proposing to have in Japan one name for the whole tree—Christian Church in Japan.

The Sunday School is a great l to make the church tree—the king of God—grow.

Like the Leaven

We should say like yeast, but lea instead of being liquid like yeast, a batch of fermented dough for rising. There were women in Je audience as he taught beside the He wished that they, as well as men, should understand him, so said: "The kingdom of heaven is unto leaven, which a woman took, hid in three measures of meal [ab one peck and a half] till all was l ened." The women knew so well process of leavening that it was plain to them that the truth preached by Jesus Christ would spread abroad in the earth. But could hardly have grasped it as as we now know it, and yet there the thought that truth was mighty would prevail.

Jesus may have had in mind the Gospel would do to bless wo and children. Before Christia the woman had no power over

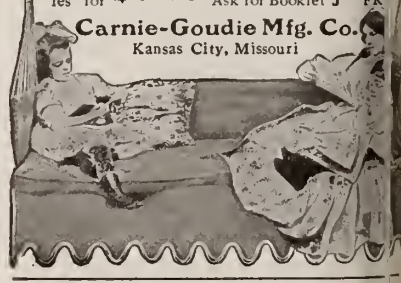
Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for July 3, 1910. Pictures of the Kingdom. Matt. 13:31-33; 44-52. GOLDEN TEXT: "The kingdom of God is not eating and drinking; but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit." Rom. 14:17.

Hammo-port
TRADE C/G QUALITY MARK

No need to pay the high price couch or bed hammocks. The ir proved 1910 Hammo-port is be ter in every way—less expensive. Back rest justable to any position, use as a wind shield back rest. The patent spring cannot sag and w support 450 lbs. Use as a hammock or bed outdoor sleeping. Solid colors and handso stripes, positively fast colors. Guaranteed sat factory or money back. Buy from your dealer we will ies for $9.75 ship complete, east of Ro Ask for Booklet J FR

Carnie-Goudie Mfg. Co.
Kansas City, Missouri



Sent on Approval. Send No Money. WE WILL TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. Send a lock of your hair, and we 22 inch short stem fine human hair match. If you find it a big bargain, r in ten days, or sell 3 and GET YOUR FREE. Extra shades a little more, postage. Free beauty book showing late hair dressing—also high grade switches dours, wigs, puffs, etc. ANNA
Dept. 84 19 Quincy St. Chicago

20 Beautiful Post Cards 1¢
No Two Alike—Latest Designs

Lovely assortment of 20 Artistic Birthday, Frie Good Luck, Roses and Flowers in exquisite col for only 10 cents, if you answer this ad. immed J. H. Seymour, 255 W. Eighth St., Topeka.

Returnable examination copies of the great hym
HALLOWED HYM
mailed on request to churches needing new
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Ch

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

ch ldren. As a wife the husband had th power of life and death over her, a absolute control of her property. T law considered her as the sister of h own children, and all her property be me that of her husband; all her ea ings were his. The Roman father h absolute authority over his son; h could chastise him, put him in el ns, exile him; he had the power of life and death over him. And da ghters were under the same rule. C stantine, called the "first Christian E peror," ventured to punish as a pa icide a father killing his son. M ters grew still better under Justi an; he gave full control to the son of his own property. The difference be ween the father's power under the ol Roman law and that under Justi an measures the difference between th old and the new world. As to wo an, the absolute power of the husb d ceased under Justinian's laws, co lensed from Gesta Christi. And th Christianity began to care for un ortunate women and children by th formation of charities. The Jewish wo en who heard Jesus compare the ki dom of heaven with leavening m t have had many thoughts of ho t as they were engaged in their ta of bread-making, but it was too gr t for them to know it all at once. Al yet the little they could compre hd was an uplift to them. The wo en of our day should think more ab t what Christianity has done and is oing for them and for their chil dn. They have become so accus toed to the freedom and happiness of fa ily life that they are in danger of fo getting the source of it.

here probably were many poor peo pl and some beggars in Jesus' audi en by the sea, but Jesus probably re ognized some men of means there to or he would not have compared the ki dom of heaven with "treasure."

/e must understand what "treas u hid in the field" meant to an O ental. They had no banks in which to eposit their surplus wealth, so they se etly hid it by digging a hole in the g nd. Circumstances of death or re oval might cause the hidden treas u to be forgotten; the secret was qu e likely to die with a man. "If a m in plowing should unexpectedly tu up such treasure, he was quite li ly to hide it again until such a time as he could become the owner of the fi ld. It was according to Jewish law tl t the treasure belonged to him, if he could claim ownership of the soil, an even if the field were not his own, u ess others could prove their right to it. If the treasure was in loose co s, he might claim it, if he bought tl corn. The law went so far as to a udge to the purchaser of fruits a thing found among those fruits."—(Condensed from Edersheim.) n the minds of the "capitalists" of tl t day the kingdom of heaven would ta e on a new value as Jesus compared it with treasure hid in the field, and in a probability some who heard Jesus b ame desirous to have some owner sh in the kingdom of heaven.

ome years ago a great discovery of g l was made in Michigan. It was n in a mine, but on the copper plates o t tumble-down mill. A certain firm h paid $2,600 for the plant, expect in to use the machinery elsewhere. T purchasers put an expert in to a ertain the value of the property. H was acquainted with the substitu ti of gold for copper on battery pl es, and the absorbent qualities o copper for some ores of gold, and he tr d the plates before testing the ta ings. From the first plate a brick v ued at $1,300 was taken. About si y thousand tons of tailings were o ained, and under cyanide treatment y ded a profit of $1.50 per ton. It is s d that miners living in that neigh b hood had intended using the plates to roof their cottages, but found them to heavy! Many who read this story wl wish they might have such "a find." But the treasure to be found in the kingdom of heaven is far more to be desired. There can be no contest at law over its possession; no fluctuation in value; no slump; no giving up when death comes. If it could be bought with a price, one might well sell all that he has to obtain it. But it is not purchasable; it is the gift of God.

"If you could prove to me that Christianity is all a delusion, I would go home whistling," said a young man to me as we walked together on the street after the close of a church meeting, where had been discussed the story of Christ and the rich young ruler. I was stunned into silence by such words from such a source. He continued: "If that lesson we have just studied is really the teaching of Christ, and if Christ is our Lord and Master, what business have I hustling for the million I hope to make? A Christian has no right to devote his chief energies to making his fortune, and that is the very thing I want to do." He paused, expecting my rebuke or consolation. I gave neither, but looked with awe at this battle between the new St. George and his dragon. The amazing part of it all was that the young man was at that very time the teacher of a Sunday School class of young men. He had in previous years been a physical director in the Y. M. C. A. The members of his class were the more ready to accept his opinions when he outplayed them all in the gymnasium and the ball field. If he had been convinced that Christianity was a delusion, I doubt if he could have done much whistling, or if there would have been much ring in his whistling. But before the long walk was ended, he had settled the question right.

O Master, let me walk with Thee
In lowly paths of service free;
Tell me Thy secret; help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care.

Teach me Thy patience; still with Thee
In closer, dearer company,
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong,
In trust that triumphs over wrong;

In hope that sends a shining ray
Far down the future's broadening way,
In peace that only Thou canst give,
With Thee, O Master, let me live.

Like a Merchant Seeking Goodly Pearls

As Palestine was on the highway between Persia, Arabia and Egypt, and merchantmen carried pearls among their treasures, it is not unlikely that Jesus saw some man or men of that character in his audience; also the people generally knew something about pearls because of the caravans carrying them, else he would not have said: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant seeking goodly pearls. And having found one pearl of great price, he went and sold all that he had and bought it." Jesus must have had in mind a very large pearl or an exceedingly fine one. The most perfect pearl in existence is "La Pellegrina" in the museum at Moscow; it weighs twenty-eight carats.

On our voyage to Australia, our first landing place was at Thursday Island. In the harbor, floating on turquoise-blue water, was a fleet of small pearling vessels. After we had landed and were passing through the one long street lined with cocoanut palms we observed very small shops, but the windows were filled with magnificent pearls. As we walked through the town we noticed the miserable huts in which the people lived, hardly more than shacks, and we came to the conclusion that after all the pearl industry did not greatly increase the wealth of the people. We purchased a small pearl spoon as a souvenir. It is very pretty to look at, but it does not add an additional flavor to anything we have eaten with it.

But how different is the kingdom of heaven to which Jesus likened a pearl of great price! Every one who has it in his heart is enriched by it for time and eternity.

Universal Intercommunication

AMERICAN TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH CO. AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES — LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE — BELL SYSTEM

Universal service as typified by the Bell System today is the result of thirty years of unceasing endeavor.

The equipment for this service includes ten million miles of wire, more than twenty-five thousand miles of underground conduit, buildings enough to house a city of people, thousands of switchboards with millions of tiny electric lights and billions of miles of fine copper threads — over five million telephones in daily use.

This great development has been made possible only by sound financing and proper provision for maintenance and reconstruction; while fair profits and substantial security have won the confidence of conservative investors. Especially when considered with the fact that the value of Bell properties exceeds the outstanding capital.

The Bell System was so wisely planned and soundly constructed that it has kept pace with the constantly increasing demands of a Nation.

Twenty million connections made daily show the usefulness of the Bell service.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY
AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

One Policy, One System, Universal Service.

The HOTEL WILLARD

256 West Seventy-Sixth Street near Broadway and Riverside Drive

An ideal home for visitors to New York desiring the quiet of a refined neighborhood. ¶ It overlooks the beautiful Hudson, and is in the finest residential district. ¶ The dining room is conducted on both the American and European plan and there is no bar. ¶ The rooms are large, cool, airy and delightful.

Attractive special rates are made from June 1st to September 1st. Room with bath, $1.50 and up. Parlor, bedroom and bath, $2.00 and up. Literature upon request.

ARTHUR T. HARDY, Manager

The Deaf Can Hear

Thirty Days' Home Trial

The Electrophone in use—almost INVISIBLE

Deaf people should send their names and addresses at once to get The Electrophone. This wonderful instrument is perfected to such a degree that many persons formerly deaf can now hear the faintest sounds, and we unhesitatingly send it to any afflicted person on thirty days' Home Trial so that they may convince themselves they can converse as those who are not afflicted. You can enjoy concerts and distinctly hear public speakers. Thousands are in use. Many users tell us it has greatly improved their hearing and has stopped their head noises. In many instances the normal hearing has been entirely restored. If you are deaf or hard of hearing, do not fail to send your name and address today, and test this wonderful instrument, and see what many responsible people who are using it say of The Electrophone. Write at once. (9)

STOLZ ELECTROPHONE CO.
355 Stewart Building, 92 State Street, Chicago

"You see, Ma, when I got to the store I forgot what you sent for, so I just got a package of

Post Toasties

We always want them"

"The Memory Lingers"

Postum Cereal Company, Limited, Battle Creek, Michigan, U. S. A.

Christian Herald

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

New York, June 29, 1910
1.50 a Year. 5 Cents Per Copy.

VOLUME 33. - NUMBER 26
Offices: Bible House, New York

Mending the Old Flag

Drawn by A. Mar

THIS AMERICAN FLAG FREE

WOULDN'T you like to own a large American Flag like the one shown in the frontispiece of The Christian Herald, if you could get it for nothing?

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Not a little hand flag, understand, but a man-size "Old Glory," 6 feet long by 4 feet wide, bigger than the top of your dining room table.

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Not a pitiful wisp of color, mind you, but real red, white and blue, right from the factory of the Government flag-maker, and guaranteed not to fade, run or shrink, no matter what the weather.

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Here is an opportunity to keep faith with your patriotism, for you will have use for a flag, not only on every holiday for many years to come, but you can also use it constantly for decorative purposes in public and private sociables, in the schoolhouse, in the church, and, best of all, in the Home. Imagine being able to celebrate Fourth of July with a flag as big as this. Wouldn't it be better than fire-crackers for the children? You may have it for nothing.

HOW?

At this time of the year The Christian Herald usually puts forth an extraordinary effort to increase the number of members of the great Christian Herald Family. We can only do this with the help of the present members. You are one of these and we know you will help us. But we have no right to accept your good offices for nothing and so we make you the following proposition.

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

The regular annual subscription price of The Christian Herald, as you know, is $1.50.

Compare Size of Flag with Height of Children

TIME LIMIT! This Offer will positively close Monday, July 18. So ACT at ONCE, as we have but a limited number of these premiums. DO IT TO-DAY.

P.S.—Of course you may send as many subscriptions as you like.

Isn't there some one among your relatives, friend or acquaintances who you know would be benefited by reading The Christian Herald? You can probably think of several in a few minutes and it would be comparatively easy for you to get them to subscribe for a short trial period, say six months.

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

If you will send us 75 cents, we will mail the Christian Herald for six months (July 1 to January twenty-six numbers), to any address in the United States or Canada, and for your trouble we will send absolutely free, to any address you may designate, the beautiful American Flag like the one shown in the illustration.

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

And in addition to this we will also send you a beautiful double tone picture showing portraits of all the Presidents of the United States from Washington to Taft. Think of it: a veritable gallery of Statesmen who have helped to make this country what it is!

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

This beautiful picture is printed on India coated paper measuring 18 x 21 inches, suitable for framing. It should be in every patriotic home, and it may be yours, free of charge, if you take advantage of our offer.

Send Us 75 Cents

And we will mail to any address, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for Six Months. In addition to this we will send to any address designated by you Our Beautiful Double Tone Picture of the Presidents and Our Beautiful American Flag, Absolutely FREE of all expense to you.

Address: THE CHRISTIAN HERALD SPECIAL FLAG OFFER, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

OUR MAIL-BAG

Questions and Answers

R. M., Pittsfield. Is the "Gift of Tongues" a real or an imaginary one in modern times? We hear a great deal about it in certain religious sects.

The "Gift of Tongues" at Pentecost was given because of an urgent need. It was speaking not in unknown tongues, but in the current languages represented in that great throng of different nationalities. There was no confusion, no misunderstanding, no Babel of uncouth or unintelligible sounds. It was the method chosen by the Holy Spirit to bring into the Gospel fold the strangers from other lands, who were soon to depart. That the gift may still be bestowed in modern times is not questioned; but that it has been bestowed in some instances where emotional and uninstructed persons are concerned, is questionable. We should "try the spirits" to see whether they be of God or otherwise. He is not the author of confusion and he gives no message to his children that is wholly lost through being unintelligible.

J. D., Xenia, O. I lately heard a sermon on the future life, but it was, to me at least, disappointing. It was too much of a material picture. What is THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S view?

The veil has been lifted by no human hand, but revelation has given us glimpses of the nature of the place of which Jesus spoke in John 14: 2-3. Heaven has been described as a kingdom, a country, a city, a home—the place of purity and unclouding happiness, where life will be free from the limitations we now experience and filled with larger and higher possibilities. Here, we cannot realize our ideals; human life is a training-school for the larger life. Here there can be no spiritual fruition; it must be over yonder. Here, we sometimes have dim foreshadowings of the great joy that is to be ours, but the problem can only be worked out on the other side, where higher responsibilities and more abundant joy await him who has been faithful in this life. (See Matt. 25th chapter; Rev. 3: 21.)

Marie B., Pittsburg, Pa. Is the desire for immortality a universal one or must we regard it as one that appeals only to the enlightened and spiritualized heart?

The belief in immortality and the desire of it are world-wide. Yet when we look around us and see the vast majority of the human race with their affections strongly concentrated on material things, we may well doubt whether the problem of a future life is receiving the supreme attention it merits. There are three classes, i. e.: 1. Those who really desire immortality and who try, with divine help, to mould their lives accordingly; 2, those who shrink back from the great question, and 3, those who apparently never think of it. This last is a very large class. What they hear on the subject seems to make no impression. Christ came to bring life and immortality to light, but there is no outward evidence that these darkened minds have ever heard and understood the message. The pursuit of riches, of pleasure, of luxury, of sinful indulgence, and of the prizes the world offers is fatal to spiritual development. Yet even such persons, once thoroughly awakened, often become the most zealous of Christians and the world's allurements seem to them a very little thing in comparison with the life to come.

E. S., St. Elmo, Ill. For the benefit of a young men's Bible class please state what are the arguments that the Christian life is easier or harder than the non-Christian life.

Christ himself has told us in Matt. 11: 30 that his yoke is "easy." He keeps those who trust in him (John 17: 15; Phil. 4: 7; Jude 24; Rev. 3: 10; Ps. 121: 5). In trials and temptations, he gives us strength and courage; he gives peace to the mind and rest to the heart. (Phil. 4: 7.) It is well to begin to serve God in youth (Lam. 3: 27). Those who serve him are assured of every good gift. (Rom. 8: 28.) He makes our lives full of blessing; he hears and answers prayers, and delivers us, for his Son's sake, out of all our troubles (See Ps. 34). The non-Christian life has no assurance of any of these blessings.

B. G., Stanley, Wis. 1. We read of Prince Albert, Queen Victoria, King Edward, and King George. What are their surnames? 2. How many veterans of the Mexican War are there now living? I am one of them.

1. Queen Victoria and King Edward did not have surnames in the way one has the name of Smith or Jones, neither has King George, for the reason that their ancestors were rulers long before surnames came into use, and they used only given names, followed by the name of the countship, principality, or kingdom over which they ruled at the time. Some of the modern ruling families who attained the royal station since the Middle Ages have surnames, such as the Bonapartes, the Bernadottes of Sweden, etc. The British papers at the time of King Edward's death spoke with pride of the fact that their royal line was so old that it had no family surname. Sometimes Victoria was spoken of as having the name of Guelph, but that was incorrect usage, as Guelph was a designation always preceded by the word "of": in other words, a title of place and not a name. Prince Albert, the Consort, was descended from the Dukes of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha; here again was a title and not a surname. The same rule applies to the German Emperor and some others. 2. All survivors of the Mexican War are on the pension rolls. They number 2,459.

Mrs. M. G., Lynn, Mass. Hearing an evangelist make the statement that Elijah is to come back to earth again at the last days, and is to be killed in the streets of Jerusalem, I should like to ask whether this is any tradition of anything in the Scriptures relating to this?

There are several Elijah legends in the Talmud and among the Mohammedan, Greek and Latin churches, but none of the character you mention. The Jews had for many centuries a fixed belief that he would again appear for the relief and restoration of his country.

A. L'Ep., New Rochelle, N. Y. 1. What is the proper way to spell chantieleer? Is it a French word, and what is the translation or meaning of it? 2. Is there a republic older than Switzerland? If so, what is the name and situation of it?

1. Chantecler is the spelling adopted in this country for the chief character, the cock, in Rostand's famous drama. It is a French word and is spelled there chanteclair. It was the name of the cock in the old story of Reynard the Fox and for years has been used practically to designate the ruler of the barnyard, the "rooster." 2. The little republic of San Marino not only claims to be the oldest existing republic, but also the oldest State in Europe with a continuous existence. It is in northeast Italy among the Apenines and has an area of thirty-three square miles. It is governed by a council, has an army of nearly a thousand men and an order of knighthood. It has been independent since the early Middle Ages. In 1631 the Pope confirmed its independence, and in 1897 a treaty was signed with the Italian government. The population is a little over 11,000.

Miscellaneous

Subscriber, Millgrove, Ont. See answer J. F. C., Boone, Ia., in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD issue of April 27, 1910.

A. S. G., Pioneer, O. 1. The millennium generally regarded by Christian millennarians an earthly kingdom, limited in its duration as "introductory to a spiritual and eternal state of being." 2. See note on "Paradise" in MAIL BAG of recent date.

J. M., New York. The contention that it not necessary to read the Bible is altogether wrong. It can only be used successfully Catholics in countries where the people are illiterate and where the Bible is denied the Stick to your Bible and let the false friends

W., Massachusetts. Dr. Talmage's impressions of a Christmas Eve visit in Bethlehem described in a sermon entitled "The Sky Above them," which appeared in this paper many years ago. It is now only to be had in the published collection of his sermons in book form

C. M. B., Millwood, Ga. You have apparently been reading an old Jewish legend which says that Adam had two wives, Eve and Lilith the latter first. Her name means "screech-owl" and she is described as a frightener of children. The legend is purely fanciful, like many others of the same sort.

Blanche E. W., Barre, Mass. An Evangelical Church is a body of Christians, who open the door to all who admit the fundamental doctrines of Christianity without inquiring into the minutiæ of their particular confessions. In this country, the term "evangelical" is applied practically to all churches that believe in the divinity and the atonement to distinguish them from those who do not.

S. C. H., Mahtomedi, Minn. 1. The story that Ingersoll recanted before his death has been denied. 2. Blaine's mother was a Catholic and his father a Presbyterian. It is said that he was baptized as a Catholic child, but afterward took his father's faith and joined the Congregational Church. His funeral was held in a Protestant Church—the Church of the Covenant—in Washington.

Our "Children's Pulpit" has many readers big and little. Here is a quaint note from a little miss in Orange County, N. Y., to Dr. Farrar, which deserves to find a place in THE MAIL-BAG.

"I am a little girl about three and a half years old. My grandmother reads your sermons to little children every week to me, and like them very much. I shall always remember what you said about "Palm Sunday." It was so good. I think you are very good to talk so much to little children like me. My father preaches every Sunday to big folk. When I grow bigger, I hope I shall understand him better. I wonder if you have a little girl like me. My name is

"ELIZABETH SCOTT KIRKWOOD."

NEW YORK, JUNE 29, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Jewish Farmer Threshing Wheat

A Street Seller in Nazareth

Harvesting in Galilee's Fields

FLOCKING BACK TO PALESTINE

Jws Gathering There From Many Lands and the Old Hebrew Tongue Leaping into Living Speech Again

Churning Butter

By WILLIAM DURBAN

ONLY those who have given real attention to the subject can form anything like an idea of the stupendous change that is coming over the Holy Land. The land, the people and all the conditions of life are undergoing a strange transformation. One fact alone might convince a doubter as to the metamorphosis of Palestine. In the year 1827, when the late Sir Moses Montefiore vited that country, there were only about five hund d Jews in all Palestine! Even that number was sposed to be wonderful.

here are now over fifty thousand Jews in and und Jerusalem alone. The little red houses that ve sprung up by hundreds without the city present ingular contrast to the ancient gray lls. A marvelous revival of industry ione of the causes of this wonderful ux. Another is to be found in the ies of pogroms, or ruthless massa- s in Russia. Roumanian oppres- n of Jews has swelled the stream of grants. Of late years the old and ayed towns of Galilee and Judea, h as Tiberias, Hebron, Safed, etc., ve become seats of industry such as eneration ago would not have been amed of. Who ever expected to modern workshops in these sleepy l stagnant old cities, which seemed med to be for all time but a mock- e of their own hoary antiquity? It ly makes an extraordinary impres- n on one to see cabinet-makers, iths, tailors, and other artisans—all Jvs—toiling in such surroundings.

here is one splendid innovation, vever, which has already begun to tore the beauty of Palestine. The stine loveliness of Canaan must ve been almost matchless. The ap- ling desolation that followed the udation of the superb woodlands, ether with the crumbling away of terraces which formed the basis o the grand system of vine and fi culture, must have saddened the hearts of spectators for many centuries. Within the last two decades, a new era has been inaugurated. Baron Edmond de Rothschild of Paris and a few other philanthropic and wealthy leaders of the Jewish community, conceived the idea of planting a number of scattered agricultural colonies. The plan materialized marvelously. Palestine is already dotted with these settlements. The originators may well be proud of their enterprise. There are now between thirty and forty vigorous and flourishing young colonies west of the Jordan, distributed up and down Palestine between Philistia in the south and Lebanon in the north. The work done has been astonishing. Millions of vines and fig trees, olive trees, citron trees, and orange trees have been planted, while vast numbers of young mulberry trees are now feeding silkworms.

First of these beautiful plantations is Rischon-le-Zion (First in Zion), two hours' carriage ride from Jaffa. This may be reckoned the premier settlement. It was founded in 1882 by Russian exiles and is now a lovely garden city. The colony covers 1,200 acres, and is inhabited by 900 persons, with many neat little homes. It is a wonderful colony. Fully half a million vines have been planted. Rischon has been a mother to many younger settlements, and has supplied them with young trees in vast numbers. It has 200,000 mulberry trees and many fruit trees in great variety, especially fig and almond. Two large steam presses produce a fine olive oil. The peasants here are a splendid community, intelligent, prosperous and happy, their condition presenting a contrast to the misery they endured in Russia. This colony was started by a loan from Baron Edmond Rothschild, which was steadily paid off.

One hour's journey from Rischon you come to the Rehoboth Colony, which is still larger, so far as land goes, for it owns 1,600 acres. There are about forty houses here, accommodating over three hundred persons in about seventy families. Each neat dwelling has its garden and stables, with horses, cows, and fowls, and some sheep.

The biggest of all these colonies is Zichron, with its 2,400 acres and a population of 1,100. This is a settlement of Roumanian Hebrews. It is a sort of miniature Palestinian Paris, for the people here live somewhat luxuriously. This is truly a garden city, for it has a magnificent garden in the centre. The Zichronites are a musical community. Near their splendid synagogue is their music hall. This is a great silk-producing spot. An hour from Zichron are the two smaller and younger colonies of Em-el-Dschmal and Schweiah, both famous for the energy of their little communities in their vineyards and plantations. These three settlements are in a region about five hours from Haifa.

To the south, at Ekron in Philistia, is a cluster of Russian exiles with a young settlement, on which they raise fine crops of wheat, barley, and many fruits, while they possess valuable stock in the shape of horses, cattle, sheep and fowls. At Gederah is a colony of student exiles from Russia, with 200,000 vines and a manufactory.

Strangest of all is the resurrection of the dead language, for in many of these colonies is spoken the tongue of Moses and David, just as it was current in Bible times. This revival, which is a fulfilment of prophetic expectation, was derided at first; but it is already an accomplished success.

Jewish Women at the "Virgin's Fountain," Nazareth

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. A. H. C. Morse, D.D.*

God and the Commonplace

TEXT: Isa. 28:29—"This also cometh forth from the Lord of hosts, who is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working."

THE prophet was watching the farmer. He saw him break the clod, and harrow the ground, and make mellow the fertile fields. Then he saw him scatter the fitches, and sow the cummin, and plant the corn in rows, and put the barley in its appointed place, and fringe the borders with spelt. "Here," said the prophet, "is system and method. How does this farmer know?" But the farmer replied that "the Lord doth instruct him aright and doth teach him." Then, when the great wheel of the seasons had turned, and the autumn had come, the prophet noticed that the fitches were beaten out with one kind of instrument and the cummin with another. The implements which the man used were suited to the task which he had in hand. He saw the adaptation of means to ends, the relation of thought to action. Again he said: "How does this man know? Who teaches him wisdom and method?"

The Original Intelligence

What is the source of invention? Back of our thinking and wisdom and device there must be an original intelligence. "This also cometh forth from the Lord of Hosts, who is wonderful in counsel and excellent in effectual working." And from the observation of the farmer using different instruments for different work, he argues from the workman to God, from the creation to the Creator, and takes us straight from ourselves to the great Central Sun, of which we all are rays. This is Isaiah's argument for the existence of God, and he has redeemed the argument from the province of cold theology to that of practical experience. That, after all, is the safest sphere. Not every one can be satisfied with the conclusions derived by purely mental processes. But conclusions drawn from personal experiences are beyond doubt. And though we may not be able to explain them to our neighbors, yet we are unable to withstand those things which experience has taught. So there are two things that I wish to set before you this morning. First I shall study Isaiah's argument for the existence of God, "who is wonderful in counsel and excellent in working"; and then I shall bring before you three simple pictures of God's wonderful workings in creation, providence, and redemption. First, will you notice how the prophet arrives at his idea of God?

In the prophecy of Jeremiah we find that God is spoken of as "great in counsel, and mighty in work." That is, his thought and his act are in perfect accord. His act is as large as his thought. Now, the prophet Isaiah noticed, as we all have done, that this is a combination that is never found in man. A man's thought and ideal and desire are so much larger than his greatest achievement. There is no correspondence between what a man hopes to do and the things he can actually accomplish. Some months ago the papers recorded the death of a man whose name for years had been on every tongue. His inventive mind had seen an ingenious machine that promised relief to the toiling masses. Men applauded his idea, they waited impatiently for its perfection. By and by it was finished; it was magnificent as a work of genius and invention. There was only one thing to disappoint—there was no power to drive it. It remains to this day only as a monument to the inventor's failure. It was wonderful in counsel, but it was weak in effectual working.

The Dreams of Invention

There are men to-day who in fancy, at least, are navigating the air, and the most ingenious machines have been built. That dream will be realized, and the air will be filled with human birds. What lacks to-day is not counsel, but only sufficient power. There is now only disparity between what we think and what we are able to do. And by proverb at least we have tried to join youth with old age, strength with wisdom, and we recommend "old men for counsel and young men for war."

Go into the schools of the city, and you will see there two classes of boys. There is the long-headed boy, who gives promise of thought and invention. He sits long over his books, and in moments of reflection his eye has a far-away look. He is the seer. And by his side there sits the round-headed boy. Pick him out for action. He is into all kinds of mischief, and cares less for books than for play. But he will grow up to be the executive of his country. He will be the soldier. He may not be the statesman, but he can be the politician, and will bring things to pass. This same difference may be found among the girls, for every home has its Mary, who sits and learns, and its Martha, who is "cumbered with much serving."

Giants in Thought and Action

This condition is essentially human. Some are giants in thought, and others are giants in action. But why cannot we do all that we plan? Why cannot the musician bring from his instrument all the melodies which he hears in his soul? the painter throw upon the canvas his most perfect conceptions of beauty? the sculptor bring from the marble his finest visions of art? Why cannot the inventor perfect his plan, and the statesman and the philanthropist and the legislator? Why cannot I do all that I wish? We feel the finest impulses, we are prompted to the noblest things, and if they could only be accomplished, why, the very trees of the wood would clap their hands for joy.

Well, we are feeble in action because of the uncertainty of human life. This little moment of threescore-and-ten is not long enough to do very much. No man can do much who has to keep his eye on the clock. I was interested last evening in reviewing the life of Macaulay. Encouraged by fame and fortune, he began a history of England. He said in the opening sentence that he meant to write such a history from the accession of James II. down to the time of men then living. But while he was penning that sentence, grim death looked over his shoulder and smiled, and, reaching out a long and bony finger, divorced the thought from the act, and the history was never finished. How many a statesman, how many a philanthropist has contrived plans for the world's betterment, only to enrich his time with thought but never with action! How many a boy has looked far into the future and seen castles in which he meant to dwell! The sun sparkled in their glassy fronts, and their domes glistened in the open sky, but the boy has never reached those castles; for men may be great in thought, but they are likewise feeble in effectual working.

Then action is often defeated by the changeableness of human opinion. Men vacillate in their plans. They swing round and round like the weather vane in the wind. Foundations laid by one generation are not always builded upon by the next. I know a river which man planned to bridge. Piers were built, and then the project was abandoned, and now the river as it swells and surges about those piers laughs at the plans of mortals, and seems to say in defiant glee, "Men may come and men may go, but I go on forever."

Lack of Moral Earnestness

Sometimes our plans fail from sheer inability. Let me illustrate from the sphere of State. Read the laws of this commonwealth for the past fifty years and you will think you must be in heaven. Every evil is extirpated so far as legislation goes. Surely if these laws express the wish of this people they must be perfect. But turning to look at things as they are, we exclaim with Hamlet: "There is something rotten in the State." Legislation fails, not because the vision is lacking, but because of the lack of moral earnestness. But if men violate the laws, make more laws. That is like saying, if a man is not hungry bring him more dinners. It is not more food the man wants, it is more appetite. It is not more laws we want, but more morals. Religiously we want a tonic. Dr. Watson uttered a truth when he said: "Man does not hate the good, he simply lets it alone. He does not love the evil, he simply does it."

Oftentimes failure with man is due to the absence of harmony between the plans which he forms and the material with which he must work. The plan is larger than the opportunity. A block of marble is still in existence with which the inspired Angelo attempted to embody one of his visions. But it was too small, and had to be cast aside. The experience is often repeated. "Men have too much steam for their machinery, or too much machinery for the steam." And as they struggle to embody their hopes they seem to be like the man who envies the ocean as it leaps and billows on the rocky coast.

> Break, break, break,
> On thy cold gray stones, O sea!
> And I would that my tongue could utter
> The thoughts that arise in me.

And then the lack of coincidence between plan and accomplishment is due to the result of growth. We begin as children. Have you watched the child with his blocks and toys? As he rocks his hobby horse he thinks he is scouring the plain, and he encourages his toy with his infant chirrup. He plays at soldier with his little gun, and as he builds his blocks into a house, he fancies himself a master architect. But if you see that child in thirty years and he still plays with the same toys, your heart is sad. We expect the child to grow. We grow ourselves, and the plans of the youth have no place in the thought of the man. The boy smiles at the whim of the child, the young man smiles at the boy, maturity smiles at the young man, and old age smiles at us all. Walk down the street with your child and observe the objects which attract his fancy. Walk down with him thirty years after, and see how different are his tastes. And so we walk down life's highway and could now doubtless buy all that we once wished, but they have no charm for us now. And the plans that once we formed are to-day only matters of amusement.

The prophet's argument then is this: When we find a being in whom this is not true, where means are always adapted to ends, where action is commensurate with plan, that being is God; he is not far from any of us, and if we will we may see him as he walks with stately step down all the ages. Listen! Do you hear his footfalls?

Notice what we have said. Failure in man is due to uncertainty of life, to changeableness of opinion, to inability, to absence of harmony between plan and material, and to the effects of growth. None of these things can be said of God. No uncertainty of life, for he is eternal; no change of opinion, for he is immutable; no inability, for he is omnipotent; no absence of harmony, for he is wise and has an eternal plan; no change due to growth, for he is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. This being, says the prophet, is God, "who is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in effectual working."

God's Wonderful Working

Now, I want to bring before you three pictures of the wonderful working of the Lord of Hosts. The first is that of creation. This world, and the systems of worlds constituting the universe, are the thought of God flung into being. As we utter our thoughts, so the Lord spake and the worlds were. He uttered his voice, and lo! his words are frail dust into stars and glittering constellations. Nor has he changed his thoughts concerning the worlds since the morning stars sang together at creation's morn.

The geologist digs in the dirt and finds a spear-head cut from flint. He says this is of such an age and represents all that the human hand could then do. But look what that hand has since achieved. It has harnessed the thunderbolt and drives it through our city streets, and has given us the same forked lightnings to read our evening papers by. It has given us the phonograph so that we can speak into a tube and wind the sound in sheets. It has given us the prism through which we can pass the light from yonder star and tell what kind of fuel is burning in those distant regions. But it is the same hand. This is the hand of Adam in the garden, and of Noah in the ark, and of Fulton in his little steamer, and of Raphael with his brush. Men tell us that a new set of muscles were recently brought into play by the introduction of the bicycle. But it is the same hand. This hand is equal to anything, and it denotes the forethought of God. God smiled when the savage made his arrowhead and thought that was all. "He had given him a hand to hold the impetuous years of the centuries." Hencefor when you look at your hand, know this: That it "cometh forth from the Lord of Hosts, who is wonderful in counsel and excellent in effectual working."

Continued on next page

* Pastor Strong Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

od and the Commonplace

Continued from preceding page

he second picture that I submit to y of God's wisdom and working is to be found in his providence. By this he ca es all his creation to accomplish hi purpose which inheres therein. Th is seen not only in the great move- m ts of history, but in the least things as well. "Are not two sparrows sold fo a farthing? Yet I say unto you th not one of them falleth to the gr nd without your heavenly Father." Wit did Jesus mean by this? Simply th God is in everything and that ev rything is according to his will. G is in the spring lily, and in the fe ing of the sparrow; in the circling of he seasons, and in the rumble of the th der. "And if he thunder by law, ye s the thunder his voice." There is no se for luck in this universe of God. T re is no such thing as chance. We do not understand all the providences of ur lives, and still every man's life is plan of God. He is the architect w draws the plan, and he flings about us he circumstances which will best br g out his work.

ou have seen an orchestra and he d its music. You may stand so ne r that all its sounds will seem like hi ous noises. You marvel that it is ca d music. But at the proper dis- ta e its harmony is perfect, and it fa s upon you like a spell. You have se the dome of the building which is be g frescoed, and as the painter dips the colors on the wall all is con- fu on worse confounded. And even w n it is completed, you may stand so ne r as to reduce its beauty to deform- it But seen from the proper distance th beauty of the work "rushes out like an nfranchised slave." So the day is co ing when we shall all stand at such a stance from the turmoil and con- fu on of the present that there will be no discord, no mystery. Then we shall kn w that "all things work together fo good to those who love God."

he last picture that I submit this m ning is that furnished in redemp- ti . The cross of Christ, like provi- de e, is an eternal thought of him who is onderful in counsel and excellent in ef tual working. To the Jews it is a st mbling-block, and to the Greeks it is oolishness. But to those who dis- ce n, it is the power of God, and the w lom of God. Men object to the cr s of Christ, and intimate that it de acts from the majesty of God. T y say it is unheroic. When the fa er is walking along the street with hi little child, is it unheroic for him to graduate his step to that of the ch ld? Is it unheroic for him to hold th child by the hand and steady his in nt tread? When it is unheroic for th mother to love the sick and fevered ch ld, then it will be inglorious for our G to lavish love upon a sinful man.

he Cross represents the fore- th ght of God. It is not a scheme im rovised to meet an emergency. It ha always been in the mind of God, an the Lamb was slain from before th foundations of the world. While yet th re was no world, even then there w a cross. And when the world was m le and the morning stars sang to- ge er for joy, it was with an eye to th cross of Christ. You wear the cr ss upon your necks, and emblazoned on your bosoms. Know you that it re resents three things, "Sin and its ho ousness, man and his pre ciousness, an God and his faithfulness."

We are still in the battle, too near to se the triumph, for the smoke hides th vision. Too near the music to ca h its harmony, too near the paint- in to perceive its beauty. But there ca be no failure in God's plan. This ea th is to be replaced by a new heaven an a new earth wherein dwelleth ri teousness. This hand is to wave a alm, or bear a crown, and lay it at h feet, and we shall hear a shout like th sound of many waters, saying, "W orthy is the Lamb that was slain," an then others shall come up singing p ise to God, "who is wonderful in c nsel, and excellent in working."

[See "THE CHILDREN'S PULPIT" in Adjoining Column]

The Children's Pulpit

THE COMING FOURTH OF JULY

By Rev. J. M. FARRAR, D.D.*

SUNDAY, July third, which is near at hand, is a good time to begin to plan for Monday, July fourth. A good Christian Junior asks: "Is Sunday the time to plan for fire-crackers, sky-rockets, base-ball and boat rides?" Certainly not! The Fourth of July was never intended as a day for sports, but as a day for making a new start as good Americans. It is the day to read and recite the Declaration of Independence, to hear of noble deeds and great achievements. A time to learn about the men who gave us freedom and created for us a Republic.

. . .

IT is one hundred and thirty-four years since the Declaration of Independence was signed. Great men made this as a valuable offering to their country. In one hundred and thirty-four years from this time, A.D. 2044, will the Juniors of that time be able to look back with pride to what you did for them? If not, why not? There is certainly some offering you can make to your country.

. . .

JULY FOURTH, 1776! Does July 4 of any other year tell us of offerings made to the world? Ask your teacher to tell you about July 4, 1097, when the Crusaders gained a victory for the Cross over the Crescent, and of July 4, 1215, when King John was made to sign the Magna Charta, the English forerunner of our Declaration.

